The President's New Year message

EDIFIED AND MULTIPLIED

Acts 9:31

THESE two words in our text bring us an immediate feeling of pleasure. The reason for this is fairly obvious; they both mean increase in one way or another. "Edified" speaks of increase in size, "multiplied" speaks of increase in numbers. May 1972 prove to be the year when every church will increase in edification and so be multiplied!

The word "edified" comes from a word which speaks of a building. A building is an edifice; stone laid upon stone, brick upon brick, produce an edifice. The progress of a building from foundation to the finished structure is a picture of being edified. Stage by stage the building increases in size and proportion.

We get a similar thought in the growth of the body. It increases in size according to the proportion of food it assimilates. Ephesians 4:16 speaks of this: "From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth . . . maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

Christian edification is not a mere accumulation of Bible knowledge. This is very important, but if that be true then all you need is a good, retentive memory and you will be an excellent Christian. The Scripture itself condemns this kind of thing as knowledge that puffs up.

The Word tells us clearly in 1 Corinthians 8:1 that "charity edifieth." Love is a measure that God uses to determine increase or not. Development in knowledge, good and useful though it is, especially when in its rightful place, is not God's estimate of growth, but rather the increase of His love in our hearts. In almost every Book in the New Testament we are encouraged to be vessels filled with the love of Jesus.

There is an exception in John's third Epistle. We read there of that precocious character, Diotrophes, "who loveth to have the pre-eminence" (v. 9). Here was a man whose love was misplaced and dreadfully immature, so that, instead of bringing an increase, he brought a decrease. Divine love has the blessed quality of faithfulness. It is not sickly or sentimental, agreeing with everybody and everything ; it takes a stand for the truth.

Love is the measure of a Christian. The whole thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians is devoted to it. It is well to note that this chapter is sandwiched between two chapters, the preceding one dealing with the place and activities of the gifts of the Spirit in the Church, and the succeeding chapter dealing with the application of love to the ministry of the gifts of the Spirit. The importance of love to the gifts is emphasised by the use of the word "edification" in the whole of the fourteenth chapter. Let us strive continually for edification, which is the increase of His love in our hearts continually.

The order is right: "edified" first and

"multiplied" afterwards. That is the Divine order. Are we multiplying? We may be told that no importance should be attached to numbers. That kind of statement is often a cover for lack of zeal and weak prayer effort. Take note of the following: Acts 4:32; 5:14; 6:2; 14:1; 16:5; 17:4. In all these references we have the thought of increase and we do well to be exercised about it.

We must love the souls of men enough to make us come out of the prayer meeting and talk to them in the streets. If we are truly edified, built up in His love, then we shall surely be "multiplied" in our numerical strength. Put this to the test in 1972. You will come rejoicing, bringing the sheaves with you!
ARCHIE A. BIDDLE.

Building a better World

WHAT a wonderful world it would be if sin could be eliminated! The rich would never again oppress the poor. Every man would be employed; there would be none idle. The labourer would receive a just and adequate wage. Everyone would have all he or she needed. There would be abundance and no one would go hungry. Poverty would be unknown.

There would be no drunkard anywhere in the world, for men would bring home their wages and spend their money on food and clothing. The appetite for strong drink would be gone. There would be no drunken drivers and none of the appalling loss of life that happens because of them.

Not a single harlot would be found anywhere. All suggestive pictures and plays would be gone. Nothing unclean would remain. Never again would adultery be committed. Prostitution and white slavery would be things of the past.

There would be no thieves, no bandits, no hi-jackers. Banks and homes would be safe. Keys and locks would never again be needed. There would be no jails, reformatories, poorhouses, gambling. Pools and one-arm bandits would be no longer with us.

Never again would we hear men and women cursing, swearing and blaspheming. God's name would never again be taken in vain. None would be angry. Jealousy would be unknown. Never would anyone pay the supreme penalty for murder. Crime would be banished, for love would rule every action. There would be no hate, no selfishness.

Sickness would be gone and death as we know it would be no more. There would be no black worn, no funerals. No more would there be deceit or lies. Every man's word would be his bond. No dope fiends or drug addicts would exist. War would be no more; it would be a relic of a darker age. Never again would nation fight nation. Battlefields, armies, navies, air forces would be unknown. Peace would reign supreme. Men would live as brothers all over the world and each would vie with the other in deeds of kindness and generosity. What a vision this is! It can be fulfilled in your own life. DR. J. OSWALD SMITH

Two followers

Goodness and mercy—how can it be
That always and ever they follow me?
Day after day and year after year,
The tread of their footsteps sounding near.
I, so unworthy, so poor and bereft,
Yet my two followers never have left.
Oft-times I've wandered far out in the cold,
Quickly they've ushered me back to the fold,
Guiding me safe when my feet touched the brink,
Lifting me up when it seemed I would sink.
How could I merit this kind, loving care?
No good have I—but a secret I'll share,
The Lord is my Shepherd who watches to see
That goodness and mercy are following me.

PARKSTONE

Pastor : S. Hilliard

Our church bade farewell to their pastor, Ian Davis, after nearly seventeen years in the pastorate. He left to take up an appointment in Australia. Pastor J. Osman, the South of England Presbytery Superintendent, convened the service, which was attended by a large congregation from many local churches and by pastors from the presbytery. Messages from those present and by letter paid tribute to the faithful and God-blessed ministry of Pastor and Mrs. Davis and also to the loyal service to the Lord of the other members of his family who have accompanied him, his father, Mr. W. S. Davis (a deacon and past treasurer), his mother-in-law, Mrs. M. Holliday, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Page (immediate past treasurer) and their young son, Gary.

Public tributes and best wishes were conveyed by Mr. E. Kingswell on behalf of the elders, by Mr. G. Russell-Smith on behalf of the deacons and by the church secretary, Mr. J. B. Wellstead, for the church members. The secretary made the presentation of a silver tea-service to Pastor and Mrs. Davis and a clock to Mr. and Mrs. Page. Pastor Davis was the preacher and the moving service was followed by a buffet supper.

Only five days later many of the same people gathered again, this time at the induction service of the new pastor, Stephen Hilliard, who for the last two years has been assistant pastor of Bristol City Temple. Many messages both oral and by letter poured in, including one telegram from the new minister's parents, Pastor and Mrs. W. J. Hilliard, who some years previously had pastored the nearby Springbourne, Bournemouth, assembly.

The well-attended service was conducted by Pastor Osman and the charge given by Pastor H. W. Greenway.

WEYMOUTH

Pastor : T. P. Mullen

During the week prior to our crusade 5,000 leaflets were distributed door-to-door. Posters were erected and the parents of Sunday school and Junior Crusader children were visited. Local estates and the crowded town centre were canvassed using loudspeaker equipment, a regular feature of our church outreach. God blessed our efforts on the very first night of the crusade with the salvation of a young lad. A middle-aged lady accepted Christ on the Monday evening, and a young lady professed conversion on the Thursday evening. The final night of the crusade saw the church almost full with young and old, and during the appeal quite a number of hands were raised. Other highlights of the week were to see old friends joining us and to hear them say that they were glad to be back. To see Christians from other local churches with us night after night really enjoying the services was good. Nearly every evening unsaved people were in the meetings, and some have expressed a desire to come again. A sad occasion was the funeral of a Christian sister, the service being taken by our minister. Many unsaved people were present and were really moved by the service. This event could have had a dampening effect on the crusade, but God really used this occasion to His glory. Gospel solos were rendered at most meetings by our own minister. We take this opportunity of thanking him for all his hard work. We express our appreciation to Pastor D. E. Edmonds also.

We cannot say that revival hit Weymouth during this crusade, but we can say that God moved. We believe that this was only just the beginning.

J. A. NEWBLE.

SCARBOROUGH

Pastor : J. Hyde

We have just concluded a series of special events in our church commencing with the "Scarborough for God Crusade," conducted by A. Wilson. We were conscious of the anointing of the Holy Spirit upon the ministry of God's Word and several decisions for Christ were made. Paul Epton, song leader, and Mrs. O. Richardson, of Drifffield, the crusade pianist, brought much blessing by their ministry in song. Splendid support was given from churches in the N.E. Presbytery. At the after-crusade weekend A. Brooks, of York, was the preacher. This ministry was an inspiration to us all.

The harvest thanksgiving services and gift day were well attended. Sunday school scholars rendered an appropriate harvest programme. Mr. J. D. J. Elliott, of Brighthouse, was our speaker and his messages were well received by young and old alike.

Pastor and Mrs. D. Fenton conducted a series of meetings for a fortnight, when the blessing of God was realised.

We next had a visit from T. W. Walker, Vice-President. The Sunday evening service was followed by a baptismal service, when six adults followed the Lord through the waters of baptism.

A number of students from the local teacher training college were present and were impressed by what they heard and saw.

We have also held our annual fellowship meeting and students of the college Christian Union have conducted a Sunday evening service. We are planning visits to the hospitals for carol singing in all the wards. Our prayers are now directed to our 1972 outreach venture.

CREWE

Pastor : M. J. Epton

The West Midlands Presbytery was well represented when Michael Epton was inducted into the pastorate at Crewe. The opening hymn set the tone of a service which was alive throughout with the breath of God.

Pastor A. D. Leitch, the convener, welcomed Mr. Epton to the presbytery, and gave a summary of the latter's previous service for the Master. It was a particular joy to welcome to the platform Pastor B. J. Epton (Liverpool) and Pastor P. Epton (Cannock), the father and brother of the new minister. Pastor F. J. Day brought the charge to the minister from Deuteronomy 31 : 6, 7. Then followed the solemn moment as the brethren of the presbytery laid hands upon the new pastor. Pastor B. J. Epton prayed that the Lord would prosper His work at Crewe and bless and empower His servant there.

Pastor Michael Epton introduced his wife and their children, Jonathan, Sharon and Paul. He led the congregation in the singing of a hymn. On behalf of the church Mr. Hari welcomed the new pastor and his family, and expressed the belief that God would do great things as the church gave its minister faithful support.

Pastor A. R. Thomas brought the charge to the church from Ephesians 4 : 11, 12. The ministry of both messengers was excellent.

At the conclusion of the service refreshments were kindly provided and the congregation was able to meet the pastor and get to know him at a more personal level.

A. D. LEITCH.

(Presbytery Secretary).

LLANTRISANT

Pastor : J. T. Glass

A recent Sunday proved to be a red-letter day in the lives of four of our Senior Crusaders. This was the day that they followed their Lord through the waters of baptism. The service, held in the local Baptist church, was ably convened by our pastor. Friends from both churches gathered to see the four candidates follow this path of obedience.

The meeting was opened with prayer by the minister of the Baptist church. Passages of Scripture relating to water baptism were read by Pastor Glass. Pastor K. Lannon, of Trealew, gave a very apt message. After each candidate had given a short testimony they were given a Bible promise by our pastor. They were then baptised according to Matthew 28 : 19, 20.

We are grateful to God for these young lives and their unashamed desire to follow their Lord.

(MISS) E. E. WILLIAMS.

YORK

Pastor : A. Brooks

For the first time since its commencement our branch Sunday school at Acomb was invited to have its anniversary in the church. During the afternoon some sixty children worked hard practising for the evening service. I noticed how hard the teachers worked as they prompted, reminded, and encouraged.

In the evening we were delighted with the programme given by the children. Who would think of asking a policeman the way of salvation? Can one imagine a policeman declaring "Now is the time to be saved"? This happened in part of the programme!

Thank you, Acomb Sunday school, for the presentation of the Gospel. The hard work put into the preparation for the service was evident as we listened to the children. We were pleased to have many parents in the service and we trust that the message of the Gospel reached many hearts.

ALEX LAWRENCE.

BELFAST, Apsley Street Pastor: D. M. Provan

During our children's mission the meetings were wonderfully attended. Each night the children were at the doors long before the time of commencement. Our pastor and his helpers devised many interesting subjects for them. A coffee bar evangelistic outreach followed. It was presented in a most happy Christian atmosphere. The Word of God was proclaimed, testimonies were given and items of music and song were rendered by a Gospel group. We praise God for ten decisions in these two efforts.

Despite uncertainty due to transport problems in Belfast, we believed God and decided to go ahead with our "Healing for the whole man" crusade. Pastor A. R. T. Whittall, of Armagh, was the campaigner. God richly blessed his ministry as he sounded forth the full Gospel. Many were delivered from physical and mental oppressions. Two families were united by the conversion of individual members—the wife in one family and the husband in another. The highlight was the decisions made by children of eight and nine years and four others aged from ten to twelve who received the baptism in the Holy Spirit. Said Pastor Provan: "It was a tremendous thrill to experience the power of God falling on these little ones." The church treasurer had the joy of seeing his son, aged four and a half, signal to the preacher that he wanted to accept Jesus. It is a real blessing to see these youngsters attending our church each Lord's Day morning and joining in the worship.

In numerous home visitations the Lord used Pastor Whittall in praying for the sick. One man came out for healing for his wife, who had been in hospital with bronchial asthma, but was now home, unable to go about freely. When her husband laid hands on her in the name of Jesus there was a change in her condition. She has stopped using cortisone tablets and inhalants, and is able to attend meetings and do her own shopping. She still occasionally uses her oxygen mask. Please pray that this Christian lady will be completely delivered.

With sixteen souls saved and twelve baptised in the Spirit we felt that the almighty Lord had made our church an oasis in this dry, thirsty, restless city. "They came and they were blessed"!

DAVID ANDERSON.

CANNING TOWN

Pastor: J. C. Ritter

Blessings continue since George Canty's campaign. We had a visit from Pastor G. W. Gilpin and students from Elim Bible College, who shared their experiences of the Lord in word and song.

Over 130 people, mostly new contacts, attended a "follow-up" tea. We were all blessed by the testimony and song items of Len Magee and the encouraging talk by Pastor F. H. Coleman.

We praise God that the weekly attendance has risen from four to thirty and, through the follow-up work, we hope to strengthen numbers immensely as the new contacts learn of the continued programme of events, which include coach trips, film nights and rallies led by local Elim churches. Please pray for us as Pastor Ritter and Keith Salter seek to challenge the 320 contacts from the campaign.

LONDON CRUSADER CHOIR TO BE ON TELEVISION

Songs of Praise will be televised in colour on B.B.C.1 from Broadmoor Hospital Chapel, Crowthorne, Berkshire, on Sunday, January 23rd, 1972. Taking part will be the hospital patients' chapel choir, the patients' choral society and the London Crusader Choir and their soloists.

Soul-winning success

by J. Nelson Parr

His life and pour out His sinless blood for a world of ruined hell-bound sinners.

10. The Saviour's triumphant success

THE Lord Jesus came to do the will of God, as it is written, "I come to do Thy will, O God." The Saviour knew that He would meet with triumphant success, for on several occasions He told His disciples that He would rise on the third day. Hence we read "The God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus . . . through the blood of the everlasting covenant" (Hebrews 13 : 20). Jesus definitely knew that there could never be defeat or failure if He executed the will of the Father. Calvary was not a failure or defeat; it was the pathway to the most triumphant success the world has ever known.

All soul-winners will know what it is to travail and go forth weeping, bearing precious seed, but they will doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them (Psalm 126 : 6). When Jesus shouted with a loud voice, as He hung on the cruel gibbet, "It is finished," it was the shout of a mighty Conqueror. Though He was broken, bleeding and battered, He definitely knew the way was now opened for millions to be ransomed, redeemed and delivered from perishing in everlasting hell and from the thralldom of sin and the Devil, and brought into the glorious blood-bought liberty of the sons of God. The pathway to success will not be easy. It may be the way of the cross, but God has not made any provision for failure, defeat and decadence. The Lord Jesus knew what lay beyond the old rugged cross and set His face as a flint towards the final triumphant victory over sin, death, the grave, hell and devils and the ultimate moment of universal triumph when all His enemies shall be His footstool.

The flame of fire soul-winners will be slandered, vilified, criticised, condemned and pilloried just as Jesus was, but though He was treated in this manner He never flinched, though deserted and forsaken by all, He was determined to lay down

11. Boys and girls

In 1940 the Lord opened my eyes to behold multitudes of boys, girls and teenagers who were being blighted, blasted and ruined by the Devil. Very little was being done to deliver them from going down to the pit. We adopted many plans to win them for Christ. We gave them the Gospel by ventriloquism, conjuring, tambourine band, piano-accordion band and other methods, including the hire of the largest theatre annually for a youth festival. This caused uproar among the sophisticated, hidebound, medieval parsons, pastors and others who were doing nothing or very little to win the lost multitudes of young people. We went round the district with loudspeakers and distributed free tickets in the streets and at school gates. We packed the place with over 2,000 young people. We had the joy of ultimately seeing over 1,000 saved by the grace of God and attending our various youth centres. We had to wade not through a sea of blood but through a sea of anti-Christian obloquy and ostracism. We were dubbed renegades, carnal and worldly.

It was in about 1940 that we started our own youth movement and called it "Y.E.S.," the "Youth Evangelistic Society." The blessing of God has been on that work ever since. The Lord be magnified !

Samuel Chadwick was right when he said, "Adapt your methods to the task. Men do not go fishing with a frying pan, or shooting with broomsticks. . . . Methods are expedients chosen for their effectiveness and their only justification is their success."

In one fairly large town (population 70,000) the minister of a denominational church came to see me. We discussed evangelism. I asked him if he knew of any church in the town which had a definite plan for winning the lost souls of the irreligious. He replied, "No, but there is one woman in my church who goes out witnessing for Christ." This is, unfortunately, not an isolated case. Very few churches have a group of consecrated Christians going out for the sole purpose of personal soul-winning. Is it any wonder that they are not having success in bringing the lost to know Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour?

A questionnaire was sent to forty-nine churches of twenty different denominations. Replies showed that not one had a personal soul-winning programme. What about your pastor? When did he last preach about personal soul-winning? Does he preach on personal soul-winning very often? Does your pastor furnish any literature on this very important subject? The Early Church did not bring the people to the sanctuary to hear the Gospel, they took the message of salvation to the people in their houses, in the market-places. The Bible says that they "went everywhere preaching the word" (Acts 8:4). The Early Church had no nice sanctuaries or buildings of any kind, but they turned the world upside-down in about twenty-five years.

Well over 8,000,000 boys and girls in the British Isles never go to Sunday school. What are the churches, missions, gospel halls and other places of worship doing to bring those lost millions to know Christ as their personal Saviour? Attendances at Sunday schools is dwindling and the churches are not meeting with success because they are not on fire with a blazing love for the lost souls of boys and girls.

The Lord taught our fingers to fight the Satanic thieves who were blighting the lives of boys and girls. We were not satisfied just to open the church doors and, if the boys and girls did not come to Sunday school or youth meetings, merely fold our arms and think in smug complacency, "Well, we have done our best. The parents won't send them. What more can we do?" We opened branch youth centres and branch Sunday schools and held youth festivals in any hall we could hire in the districts surrounding the church. We were determined in the name of our glorious, all-powerful Saviour to have success in this phase of Gospel work.

When Jesus gave such a graphic picture of the man lying bleeding by the wayside after being robbed, battered and bruised by thieves, He did not say, "The good Samaritan knelt down and prayed for him and left him where he was." He did something for the victim. Jesus said, "Go and do likewise," but Christians and churches are not going after boys and girls. Prayer is important, essential. Holy Ghost praying will put compassion, power and conviction into our words, but we must go.

We had the joy of opening ten branch youth centres and branch Sunday schools and ultimately had nearly 1,100 young people under thirty-five years of age attending our youth activities. There are too many Christian "sitters" and very few "Holy Ghost goers." Multitudes of Christians will smack their lips after listening to a sweet,

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

The Holy Spirit and prayer

IT is possible that many who read this column will have been filled with the Holy Spirit for years and yet know little of the Spirit and His working.

Jesus has given His disciples instruction in prayer and we have that remarkable verse, Luke 11:13. Please read it over and over again. He will give us the greatest gift, the Holy Spirit, for in this gift are all the other gifts.

In the many gifts which the Holy Spirit has to give is the gift of faith. When the Spirit gives us faith there is no struggle to believe. We repeat over and over again, "I believe, therefore God must give!" Peace floods the soul and praise follows, because we know that God has granted what we asked for and that the answer will surely come.

We had a building project going on in our church. Suddenly the builder asked for hundreds of pounds in advance. We did not have that amount of money in our funds. I was walking along one morning thinking about this need. God dropped His faith into my heart. I asked for the money and had the assurance that God would answer. I went along my way praising the Lord. A few days later a member of the church told me that she had inherited quite a sum of money from her sister's estate and she was giving to the church the very sum of money we needed!

God knows how to give good gifts to His children. Thank God for the gift of the Holy Spirit! Have you this gift of gifts? If not, ask God for the Holy Spirit. If you have this gift, ask God to reveal to you more and more the person and work of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is indispensable in the work of prayer.

WE wish you a very happy New Year!

We have been greatly struck by Hebrews 13:8: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever." The interpositions of time and eternity factors are stimulating and challenging.

"Yesterday" recalls both the day just gone, and, figuratively, the whole of eternity past. Through all the yesterdays that ever were, He was the same. Recall 1971 with its national and international headaches. Think back over the years of recorded history. Try to envisage the period which we call prehistory. Through all the changing scenes, Jesus Christ remained the same. Taking from Him in no wise diminished or impoverished Him. Withholding in no way increased Him. Involved, but unalterable, He remained.

"For ever" brings conceptions beyond natural reasoning.
To encompass eternity in our thoughts would demand that we be eternal ourselves. We can think only of repeated periods of time, elongated centuries. Eternity is the ever, the always, never a circumscribed time-space relationship. God is—that is eternity, unbounded, altogether, complete, unaffected by time, for He both intervenes in it and yet is beyond it. "From everlasting . . . Thou art God." Nothing will ever take Jehovah by surprise. Nothing will ever overwhelm Him. He will never need to have any after-thoughts. Jesus Christ is the same for ever; He must be Divine. He is!

"To day" is the centre of the text and of a splendid revelation. "Yesterday" implies ages past. "For ever" presumes aeons to come. "To day" is the only limited expression of the three, a period of twenty-four hours, a factor of immediacy, a cameo of the common round. It is now; it can be measured.
In the known, Jesus Christ is the same. He comes to us, for "the Lord knoweth them that are His" in the wonder of His condescension now, today!

Add to it the superb verse in 2 Peter 3:8: "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." We have seen the unlimited, the everlasting aspect of deity; we believe that with the Lord a thousand years is as one day. Examine the other statement, however; "one day
. . . as a thousand years." Among many glorious things we find the underlining of the care of the sparrow-keeping God.
He is, He knows, He cares as much in a moment as in a millennium!

Letter to the Editor

DEAR SIR,

It is with pleasure that I have read the various references to Ulster in the EVANGEL. As an Irish student at Elim Bible College I have been greatly concerned not only about my beloved country but sometimes by the apparent lack of interest by many of our members here in England. This I well understand. It is due mainly to the failure of the national press and television to present a balanced picture of events in our province.

Until four days before coming to college I was a member of the British Army stationed in Northern Ireland. I know the dangers involved and feel them very deeply.

Ulster is in a crucial situation. We are at war with the powers of Satan but, praise God, the victory is ours through the blood of the Lamb.

Visitors have commented that our churches are flourishing and we believe that God can do great things for us—and we know that He will.

The only answer to Ulster's problem is a heaven-sent, Holy Ghost revival, so that men's hearts are changed and born anew by the Holy Spirit. In times past God has snatched our province from the brink of disaster and our cry is "LORD, DO IT AGAIN!"

I would also ask you to remember Pastor T. G. Hills in Dublin at this time. The situation in Northern Ireland is affecting the evangelical witness in the south of Ireland, a country where ninety-seven per cent of the population is Roman Catholic and in heathen darkness.

Our cry at this time is "Brethren, pray for us." God still answers prayer.

Yours in the Master's service,

R. HARVEY.

THE recent phenomenal growth of interest in Pentecostal truth and the widespread outpouring of the Spirit in many parts of the world call for constant reassessment of the basic reasons for the gift of the Holy Spirit.

That the Early Church received the Spirit and that this was evidenced by speaking with tongues is clearly stated in the Bible. The experience of the day of Pentecost was not an end in itself, however, but the beginning of an anointed ministry that must continue to this day. In Pentecostal circles we often hear the expression "the anointing"—that indefinable enhancing of a ministry that turns fearful men into stalwarts of the faith. Stumbling, ineloquent lips become charged with the dynamic of God and powerless people are transformed into those whose norm of life is the supernatural by the anointing of the Spirit. The basic reasons for Pentecost are "ye shall receive power . . . ye shall be witnesses." These two statements are inseparable.

The definition of an anointed life and experience is set out in Acts 10 : 38 : "God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power ; who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil, for God was with Him." Jesus of Nazareth was given the title "Christ"—the Anointed—relating to His person as the Son of God. His earthly ministry revealed the purpose of that anointing. Following His baptism in Jordan and His temptation in the wilderness, Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit to Galilee (Luke 4 : 14) to begin His earthly ministry.

Three characteristics of an anointed ministry are given in Acts 10 : 38. First, Christ went about "doing good." His every word was truth spoken in love. There was no ambiguity, no shade of dishonesty in His words, no ulterior motive in any action. His life was crystal clear in its total honesty. Every act of Christ expressed the inner holiness of His being. There was no action in any part of His ministry that did not have stamped upon it the hallmark of the goodness of God. This is the pattern of an anointed ministry and life. God will only bless truth. He grants the anointing of His Spirit to the life that reflects something of His own goodness. The governing principle of Christ's life is in His own statements that He came to do the will of Him that sent Him. The sacred motive of the will of God is an essential for knowing the power of the Spirit. God will not grant such a privilege as the anointing of the Spirit to feed the ego or self-esteem, however talented the individual may be.

Secondly, the Scripture states that the Lord "healed all that were oppressed of the devil." The all-embracing purpose of Christ's coming was to destroy the works of the devil (1 John 3 : 8). This is not limited to sickness, but takes in every impact of sin. "Oppressed" can be translated "harassed."

In beginning the ministry that ultimately led to the cross and the final defeat of the devil, Jesus stated His manifesto in Luke 4 : 18 : "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me because He hath anointed me to preach the Gospel"—a message of release, comfort, strength, healing, salvation. Anointed lives and ministry today can proclaim nothing less than this. The Pentecostal truth is not a message of individual blessing only, but the power to set men free from the oppression of that malevolent being whose drink is human tears, whose delight is human anguish and whose desire is human damnation. We must always know the anointing of the Spirit in order to fulfil the command of Christ to His disciples. "Preach . . . heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils" (Matthew 10 : 7, 8). We cannot claim to have the anointing of God and live in defeat, think with pessimism and minimise the miraculous. The power of Pentecost is the answer to the twentieth-century situation. Not new methods or experimental techniques, but a new anointing that retrieves the supernatural power of God from the shelves of memory and puts it where it belongs—in everyday experience—THAT'S PENTECOST !

The third characteristic is that "God was with Him." Wherever the Lord went there was the aura of the presence of God. In His presence men confessed their sin, evil powers reeled in anguish from Him, leaving the men and women whom they had tormented for so long. Scholars mar-velled at the gracious words that fell from His lips. God was with Him. It was obvious that God was with the men in the early Church, for "they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus" (Acts 4 : 13). Moses' face shone with holy radiance.

AN OINTING OF THE SPIRIT

ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, THE CITY TEMPLE, CARDIFF

The anointing of the Spirit is the evidence that God is with us. Spiritual power is not received by an occasional prayer or by lip service to the principles of consecration but by the practice of the presence of God. Personal communion with God lights up a human life with the glow of the divine. The anointing of the Spirit cannot be manufactured or brought into being by emotional ecstasies or peculiar practices. This empowering of God is the revelation of His presence with men. These days reflect a desperate need for this kind of life and ministry.

The anointing of the Spirit continues because of the relationship existing between Christ and His Church. The Christian believer is linked with Christ in the new birth. Christ the Lord, given the Biblical titles of prophet, priest and king, a combination unknown in Old Testament practice, has made His Church "a royal priesthood" (1 Peter 2 : 9), a kingdom of priests. Such a spiritual lineage demands similar spiritual anointing.

The Church is the continuation and extension of the earthly ministry of Christ. From its inception the Early Church declared that the earthly ministry of Jesus was the prelude to a continuing ministry that would span the world and envelop the centuries. Jesus said "Preach the Gospel to all nations." The Church narrative begins with the statement that Jesus was commencing an irresistible tide of spiritual blessing : "all that Jesus began both to do and teach" (Acts 1 : 1).

Forgiveness is directly related to the cross and has been experienced by all who have turned to Christ and justification is directly linked to Christ's resurrection. The Pentecostal outpouring is related to Christ's ascension. Jesus said that, if He went away, He would send another Comforter. The outpouring of the Spirit is God's sign that Christ is in the Glory at His own right hand. After the disciples watched their Lord go through the clouds and heard the angelic messengers on the mount of ascension, they went to Jerusalem to wait for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. During those intervening days there was no sign in the sky, no audible voice, no visible presence to endorse the statement of Christ that He had gone to His Father. They waited in prayer. Suddenly there was a sound from heaven—the Spirit of God was upon them ! Wonderful worship fell from divinely inspired lips as they spoke with tongues. They knew that their Lord was there at God's right hand. Peter said : "He hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear" (Acts 2 : 33). A life that is anointed by God and that carries with it the aura of the divine presence is the mightiest proof of a living Christ at God's right hand. The ministry of the miraculous, anointed witness and supernatural gifts must always echo Peter's words : "He hath shed forth this."

The anointing of the Spirit upon an individual gives a Christ-centred consciousness. Every part of such a life knows the reality of Christ, and revolves around His will and purposes and is geared to His service and feels His divine nearness. The anointing strengthens a Christ-inspired courage. The Christians in the Acts were not all giants of bravery. They were ordinary folk, who, like us, could know the cold sweat of fear, or the flush of embarrassment when facing the opposition, but they knew God ! Trembling lips prayed, "Grant unto Thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak Thy word" (Acts 4 : 29).

We need men and women who are full of the Holy Spirit, revealing a living Christ without fear or compromise. There are many claims upon our time and our allegiance and it can be difficult to decide upon the correct course of action, but by the anointing of the Spirit true spiritual discernment is given that endorses a Christ-directed allegiance. We are called to serve Christ, not a cause, however noble the cause may be.

Horizons of life, faith and service of which we have never conceived, are opened by the anointing of the Spirit. The Christian begins to live in an ever-expanding world where faith grows and deepens, reaching out ever farther to believe for the impossible—a faith that neither knows nor sets limits on its own impact, an anointed, God-

A great start

AFTER tea the villagers began arriving at the church. They walked slowly through the doors, admired the building and sat down on the seats and benches, ready for Mr. English to hold his first service in the church. Banto handed round the hymn books and Bibles, which the men and women had to share because they were not enough to go round.

Mr. English welcomed everyone to the new building and thanked them for their work. They bowed their heads and gave thanks to God. Mr. English asked God to bless the new church and the people in it and that soon other churches would be built that other people would soon hear the Gospel.

Mrs. English read the story of the good Samaritan from her Bible and explained that all should be good Samaritans, helping and loving one another.

Banto's mother sang a solo, "God make my life a little light, within the world to glow," and then the people sang "Tell me the stories of Jesus."

Banto's father told the story of the fishermen, Peter and Andrew. They were having difficulty with their nets, when Jesus told them to follow Him and He would make them fishers of men. Peter and Andrew were the first disciples whom Jesus called to help Him in His work. Banto's father explained that every Christian was a disciple of Jesus and that we all have some work, some talent that we should use for Him.

At the end of the service all the village children sang the hymns and choruses they had been learning in Sunday school. Banto sang at the top of his voice. He could have gone on singing about Jesus for hours and hours, but Mr. English closed the meeting so that they would all have enough light to see to go home.

Banto stayed behind for a few minutes to help Mr. English by collecting the Bibles and hymn books. He collected all the Bibles from the seats and benches and as he put them on to the shelves he counted them . . . one, two, three, four, five, six—only six Bibles to share between all those people!

"I'll never have one of my own," said Banto to himself. "I wish I had a Bible of my very own, then I could read all those stories for myself. It will be ages before I can save up enough money and send to England for a Bible!"

Banto could borrow one of the Bibles, but it wasn't the same to Banto somehow. Sometimes he had to lend the Bible to someone else before he had finished a story and it would be ages before it was his turn to borrow the Bible again.

When Banto went to bed that night he knelt at the bottom of his bed to say his prayers.

"Dear Lord Jesus," he said, "I have had such a happy day. The church is finished and it looks so very nice. We all had a wonderful service and we will do our best to be worthy of Your House, Jesus. Thank You for our Sunday school room and for sending Mr. and Mrs. English here to tell us all about You and what You have done for us. There is one thing though, Jesus. I would dearly love to have a Bible of my own. Please help me to get my very own Bible, Jesus, so that I can keep it with me always and read about You every day. Please bless all the boys and girls all over the world. I hope they all get to hear about You and love You as much as I do. Amen."

nice, sugar-coated sermon, but they never go to the lost millions and the parsons and preachers never seek to put any go into them. We must have success. We have been promised success. The men of God who carried out the Divine plans had glorious success. Marcus Bach, writing in The Christian Century, gives an account of one infamous sect which is meeting with success. He says, "In fifteen years it has tripled its membership. . . . Every member is a house-to-house visitor and every member is trained." It makes you think!

The blood of Jesus is more precious than silver or gold. To God the blood of His only Son is more precious than we can conceive. In Genesis we read that Cain killed Abel and God came down from heaven and spoke to Cain. Cain retorted : "Am I my brother's keeper ?" God said "What have you done ? The voice of your brother's blood is crying to me from the ground." If Abel's blood crying from the ground brought God down from heaven to pronounce a curse on Cain how fearful will be His vengeance upon those who, when Jesus' blood cries from the ground, trample that blood of the Covenant under-foot !

If you belong to a Pentecostal church but do not have the baptism in the Holy Spirit you are like a carpenter who has a certificate in wood-work but no wood to work on. It is fine in theory, but it does not accomplish much. You can't make anything with a certificate.

Receiving a letter from a member that he could not quite understand, the pastor put his own interpretation upon it and informed the congregation of the "contents" of the letter. After the meeting the writer challenged the pastor about his interpretation. The pastor began to reply, "I thought . . ." The writer, a district magistrate, pounced on the unfortunate pastor, saying, "You can't think for me !" We must study to show ourselves approved unto God, for we cannot think for each other—and we certainly cannot think for God.

CHANGE

The evening now is melting into night,
The length'ning ghostly shadows have spread

Stretched out until they meet in double depth

Of darkness. Now in the dusk it seems
That shadows frail, intangible as dreams,
When morning comes, have now grown firm and real

As any nightmare that, with fright'ning powers,

Impounds its victims in the darkest hours
Within a prison of strange sights and sounds.
Now unreality is true, and prowls in monstrous strength

Between the nearer shadows, whose spreading width and length

Seem to release new dwellers of the dusk.
The day has gone and every trace of light
And nothing is as it had seemed before ;
Yet God remains, unchanging mid the clouds

Of growing darkness and the shades of night.

Only He is as He always was
And always will be, who was God before
The earth was made, ere time and space began,

Before all change, and so it passes on
And cannot touch Him. The Eternal One
Is Ruler of all movement, Lord of time.
Now, in the darkness, He alone is sure,
A mighty Rock that stands more firm and strong

Than any shadow fantasy of night.
He cannot be mistaken or confused
With any image that, with morning, pales
To nothingness ; this is He who at the end
Shall still endure, though darkness fails.

RENE.

A NEW GRACE for boys and girls

For all good gifts which You have given,
For this our daily bread,
We thank You, precious Lord in Heaven,
For by Your hand we're fed.

Amen.

W. G. MULLAN.

From T. H. Stevenson

FOR an issue of THE ELIM EVANGEL dated New Year's Day there should seemingly be a wide range of topics to write about. This would be so if I were asked to write a sermon. For reasons that present difficulty to the printer and the editor I must write this in advance, which places me at a great disadvantage, since my comments may become dated or even may be contradicted by events which I would seek to anticipate. I certainly would not attempt in this page to compete with Old Moore's Almanac!

I am left with a feeling of having nothing particular to write about other than about writing. It is some fourteen years since I first began a fortnightly feature in the EVANGEL. This has been broken only by necessary, comparatively brief spells. To be truthful, many times I have drawn a bow at a venture and wondered sometimes whether my intended arrow would be changed into a boomerang!

I have been privileged to receive quite a range of correspondence which has been favourable and only two letters of a critical note. At least I know that THE ELIM EVANGEL reaches as far as Australia and the American continent, is read by many in other denominations, and is quoted in other magazines. If I have been inexact, on only one occasion have I been corrected. I had made a brief reference (at a time when the Labour Government passed very controversial bills by the means of Private Members' motions and through open votes) to the effect that even attempted suicide was an indictable offence. A faithful Elim member who is a court official corrected me, pointing out that such law had been made invalid a short time before. I was pleased to be corrected and glad that I was wrong!

Having made that observation on such a morose subject, may I encourage the most dejected soul who may be looking back on 1971 with its considerable gloom and contemplating 1972 with apprehension or fear, that God is still on the throne. None of us can clearly portray future details or assure the continuity or change of prevailing trends. Whatever your thoughts or desires may be, have faith in God that the last verse of Psalm 23 is a true summary and testimony not only of David of old but of all who can say "The Lord is my Shepherd."

EAST MIDLANDS PRESBYTERY

An inspiring and memorable "teach-in" was held in Rugby. About seventy Sunday school teachers and youth workers gathered from Coventry, Leicester, Northampton, Nuneaton, the newly formed church at Peterborough and Rugby. There were three sessions. Pastor D. J. Green explained how an all-age Christian education programme can work in a church, with Jesus Christ and the Word of God as the foundation, all ages taking part in the building of the church and the Lord adding daily. Sunday school under this scheme is attended by children, teenagers, adults—everybody—and is usually held on Sunday morning before the worship service.

A discussion on youth activities, led by Pastor J. M. Cuthbert, produced a helpful, challenging exchange of experiences. Emphasis was laid on the necessity for first-rate programmes and adequate, well-planned church premises and explaining the need for repentance and getting right with God.

A very practical session on "Preparing a Sunday school lesson" was taken by Pastor Green. His varied methods for holding his audience in rapt attention were examples of how to teach effectively in Sunday school. It was suggested that the children be given "carry-over activity" to put into practice what they had learned from their Sunday school lesson.

inspired faith. The Pentecostal believer's experience should not depend on the blessings of yesterday as the inspiration for today's situation; it must have the freshness of present anointing and the impact of present power. The anointing of the Spirit is for today—it must be so, else what hope is there? An experience that is ablaze with the flame of Pentecost will not bow to the pessimistic, passive platitudes that mourn the status quo of our society, but will change that society. THAT'S PENTECOST!

Retrospect and Prospect

"The angel of His presence . . . carried them all the days of old" (Isaiah 63 : 9).

The old year's blessing

I am fading from you,
But one draweth near,
Called the Angel-guardian
Of the coming year.

If my gifts and graces
Coldly you forget,
Let the New Year's Angel
Bless and crown them yet.

For we work together ;
He and I are one :
Let him end and perfect
All I leave undone.

I brought good desires,
Though as yet but seeds ;
Let the New Year make them
Blossom into deeds.

I brought joy to brighten
Many happy days ;
Let the New Year's Angel
Turn it into praise.

If I gave you sickness,
If I brought you care,
Let him make one patience,
And the other prayer.

Where I brought you sorrow,
Through his care, at length,
It may rise triumphant
Into future strength.

If I brought you plenty,
All wealth's bounteous charms,
Shall not the new Angel
Turn them into alms ?

I gave health and leisure,
Skill to dream and plan,
Let him make them nobler—
Work for God and man.

If I broke your idols,
Showed you they were dust,
Let him turn the knowledge
Into heavenly trust.

If I brought temptation,
Let sin die away
Into boundless pity
For all hearts that stray.

If your list of errors
Dark and long appears,
Let this newborn monarch
Melt them into tears.

May you hold this Angel
Dearer than the last.
So I bless his future,
While he crowns my past.

ADELAIDE ANNE PROCTOR.

AS we step into 1972 may I wish all my readers the customary greeting, "A happy New Year !"

To round off my page I bring you a comforting thought. In 1 Peter 1 : 6 we read of Christians suffering "manifold" trials and in 4 : 10 of the "manifold" grace of God. In both instances the word translated "manifold" means "variegated, having many colours." We have the picture of the trials of men and the grace of God side by side. God is able to supply His grace for every situation in life. Every shade of human trial is thus matched by the many-coloured grace of God. In Ephesians 3 : 10 mention is made of the "manifold" wisdom of God. The same word is used in the Greek, with the addition of a prefix, suggesting the amazingly varied wisdom which is operative.

We can be comforted and confident that in 1972, though we may face manifold trials, manifold grace will be given and manifold wisdom will control and guide us all the way.

The challenge of the New Year

by Alexander Tee

AS a young Pentecostal believer entering a new year, why not take time and challenge yourself with some very frank questions? Have a good look at your Christian life. Sit down alone somewhere and evaluate what you have accomplished during 1971. Every successful businessman knows that if he wants to make money he must take stock. A frank reappraisal of our weaknesses and areas of failure as witnessing disciples will soon drive us to our knees if we still believe that the thousands of unsaved people in our community are ALL going to a terrible eternity.

Investigate

How many Gospel tracts have you wisely distributed during the past year? What conversations do you engage in with the various people you regularly contact? What realm of Christian service absorbs your God-given talents? How do you use the time you have after your studies or employment? Does your employment provide opportunities for helping a bewildered, bored modern generation? What definite Bible study are you currently enjoying? Does boredom ever come your way? Do you enjoy hanging around listening to modern pop music more than being actively engaged in helping young or old people?

The easy, penny-in-the-slot way of life might take you on a musical jaunt but, ultimately, it will be found to be as aimless and as sickening as the hurdy-gurdies at the local fair—and remember, excuses act like tranquillisers, they cure nothing.

Invest

Christians have exciting prospects, but it is vital to know the art of true Christian living. Basically, this involves investing our every talent in the right realm of Christian service. Bad investment leads to bankruptcy and spiritual bankruptcy is disastrous. We must have a continuing willingness to sacrifice if we are to enjoy a daily sense of fulfilment. Blessing on the cheap is not known in the New Testament. Alas, this is the order of the day in the lives of too many Christians who are bored and disillusioned. Study, plan, prepare, pray, practise and proceed are words in the vocabulary of the successful Christian. When we have found exactly what talents we have, be they many or few, weak or brilliant, we must ask ourselves how they can be developed until they are a real force for God. This involves buying the right kind of books and going to the right places, such as to the weekly Bible study. Then we must ask in which realms of service this and that talent will be used to the best advantage. This is much wiser than using a bent hairpin in a promise box to pull out what you hope will be a Scripture revealing the will of God for your future.

Involved

After setting our sights and preparing in every possible way, we do well to come to Romans 12:1. Read it afresh and ask the Holy Spirit to baptise us with His power as we step out. The hour must dawn when we take the first step. There is something or someone waiting for your dedication to spring into action. A Christianity that does little, gives little and suffers little is certainly worth VERY little. What will you do in '72?

Joshua 1:1-18

"Moses my servant is dead" (v. 22).

Joshua knew that the conquest of Canaan could not take place until Moses died (Numbers 20:12) and that he had been chosen as leader of God's people after Moses died (Numbers 27:18-23). God informed Joshua of the death of Moses, the signal that a new era had dawned for the people of God and in the life of Joshua. The years of apprenticeship as the servant of Moses had prepared Joshua to be the servant of God. The Divine commission had the promise of Divine assistance and the assurance of success as long as Joshua remained true to the leading of God's Word (vv. 3-9). When God calls He empowers. We are not expected to tackle the commission He offers us alone. He has promised to go with us always (Matthew 28:19, 20).

Tuesday, January 4th

Joshua 2:1-24

"Truly the Lord has given all the land into our hands" (v. 24, R.S.V.).

Compare the report brought back by the spies sent into Canaan by Moses (Numbers 13:26-31) with the one produced by the two spies in this chapter. The majority in the former incident had seen the grapes of Eshcol and the giants in the land. Not one mention of the Lord can be found in their report. The spies sent by Joshua mentioned the Lord first of all. Difficulties always look less forbidding if we see the Lord and realise that He is greater than the problems. Perhaps Joshua's spies were well acquainted with the promises in the Word of God (Deuteronomy 1:29-31). It is certain that a knowledge of God's promises stimulates our faith in God to do His command even in the most difficult circumstances.

Wednesday, January 5th

Joshua 3:1-17

"When you see the ark . . . you shall set out . . . follow it . . . that ye may know the way" (vv. 3, 4, R.S.V.).

When Israel had to cross Jordan the river was in flood (v. 15). It could have been a raging torrent up to a mile wide. The general area where they crossed the river was a deep trench filled with jungle growth. Both river and jungle were difficult to cross. The ark of the covenant led the way. It was carried by the priests, whose feet dipped into the water coincident with God's miracle of stopping the waters some sixteen miles upstream (v. 16). Israel was instructed to watch and follow the ark to know the way.

The Lord Jesus goes before us. As we keep our eyes on Him and follow Him, He reveals the path we should take.

Thursday, January 6th

Joshua 4:1-24

"What do these stones mean?" (v. 21, R.S.V.).

From the Egyptian side of Jordan twelve stones were carried into the river bed and erected on the spot where the priests' feet stood while Israel passed over (v. 9). From the same place twelve stones were taken and erected at Gilgal (v. 19).

Jordan is a type of death. The stones buried in the waters of Jordan represent the old life. The testimony following the death of our old life, i.e. the new life, is represented by the stones at Gilgal (compare Romans 6:4). Let us walk in newness of life "considering ourselves dead to sin and alive to God in Christ Jesus" (Romans 6:11, R.S.V.).

Friday, January 7th

Joshua 5:1-15

"This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you" (v. 9).

Circumcision was part of the covenant God made with Abraham in which God promised the land of Canaan to Abraham and his descendants. Failure to observe this rite negated the covenant (Genesis 17:8, 10, 14).

On this memorable day in the history of Israel they stood on the Jordan shore of their promised land, renewed the covenant (v. 3), partook of the produce of the land for the first time, God's temporary provisions ceasing (v. 12), and Joshua had a vision of the Captain of the Lord's army who had come prepared for battle to lead the people to victory (v. 14).

God rewards those who diligently seek Him and obey His Word. Take courage! Be strong! We do not fight alone. The Captain of our salvation is with us to lead us to victory.

Saturday, January 8th

Joshua 6:1-27

"Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive" (v. 25).

Many of the residents of Jericho may have considered that they merited more than others being saved from the terrible destruction that followed the capture of the city, but Rahab was not saved because of any merit of her own. She was saved by explicitly obeying the command of the spies. She and her family gathered into the house on the wall with the scarlet cord bound in the window.

No one can merit salvation by personal endeavour or holiness. God has provided a way whereby all men can be saved. All that we must do is accept what God has provided. To reject the offer of mercy is certainly followed by destruction and wrath (John 3:18).

Stand and speak

"Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life" is the command in Acts 5:20.

CENTURIES ago in South America the Spaniards used to take Inca Indians and put them on trial before a cross on which was hung a flesh-coloured wooden Christ with a movable head. The idea was for God to be judge; if the head moved up and down the accused was guilty, if it moved sideways he was innocent.

What the accused did not know was that there was a person hidden inside who, by manipulating strings attached to the head, could produce a preplanned verdict.

Are we guilty of presenting to the world the same sort of Christ—a lifeless form which conveniently agrees with our own lethargic ideas, theories and weighty doctrine, or are we presenting a living Christ who is continually in our lives, faces and words?

Peter's commission was to give to the people "words of this life." His subject was LIFE and his words sprang from the source of life which bubbled up from within him. Our words should never be separated from the LIFE. When they are, we become, as someone recently said about the sound of bells pealing from a rather dead church, like sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

The "Jesus People" simply present a living Jesus, not only in words and elegant, applause-winning sermons, but in person. When someone with a bubbling, overflowing heart and a glowing hot face says "Jesus is alive," who can help but believe it when you can actually see it? Does your face shine when you speak of Jesus?

Paul said: "Christ liveth in me." John Wesley's diary emphasises in regard to his preaching, "I offered the people Christ." We are not only supposed to point to life—it is our duty to offer it. Someone said, "We do not stand in the world bearing witness to Christ. We stand in Christ bearing witness to the world." People are hungry, not just for brilliant exegesis or ear-tingling, precise oratory, but for personal, vibrating, living experience and for the assurance that there is Someone who is able to meet their every need and to take a caring interest in their short, turbulent journey through life.

They need an encounter with the One who said: "I am He that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive"—Jesus Christ.

by Len Magee

ELIM BIBLE COLLEGE STUDENT

Speak to the people all the words of this LIFE. Speak from a living experience. You will find that, as a flower eagerly opens to the light and warmth of the sun, so men's hearts will find the message of life irresistible.

From this day on

*Lord of the morning,
Open the portals of my mind,
So that I am free
To take each footstep on the daily walk
Which You have planned for me.*

*Lord of creation,
Make my vision sure and clear,
So that I truly see
The beauty in the flowers
And the splendour of the trees.*

*Lord of the evening,
Implant in me a Christ-like calm,
So that sleep will be Light on wings of promise,
'Til tomorrow's morn I see.*

*Lord of all tomorrows,
May each new day useful be,
Wasted not on binding fears,
But free, to prosper in the fullness
Of thine immensity.*

"Wherefore liest thou thus upon thy face?" (v. 10).

Joshua's reaction to the defeat at Ai was understandable. He blamed God (v. 7) and then apologised, offering as an excuse his great disappointment at Israel's conduct (v. 8). On reflection he admitted to being concerned for the testimony of the Lord and the honour of His name (v. 9). God revealed to Joshua that there are times when prayer is not the answer to the problem.

The basic cause of much defeat for the people of God is sin. When sin is dealt with we can pray and expect to be heard (Psalm 66:18; James 5:16). Victory is assured when we follow God's instructions without wavering.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Book reviews

Hope Changes Things, by Brian Tatford. Published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House. Price 7p, postage and packing 3p extra.

This booklet is called an introduction to the First Epistle to the Thessalonians, and if it does this for the readers it achieves its best purpose. When Mr. Tatford says that this Letter of Paul contains very little theological teaching except for chapters 4 and 5, referring to the coming again of Christ, I wonder if he, too, has missed the point that perhaps the importance of 1 Thessalonians lies just here, especially as he then refers to Christ's return as the "Christian's living hope" and calls the pamphlet "Hope changes things." "The Eschatological Problem" and "Times and Seasons" occupy half the total writing. Hopelessness is still a prevalent feature not only of the world but of much of the professing Church (see page 10), consequently another reading of 1 Thessalonians can only be stimulating to faith.

D. E. DEAN.

Life's Greatest Trip, by Arthur Blessitt, published by Word Books. Price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra.

Here we have poetry (I think), pictures and prose presenting personal evangelism in the worst places. It is a modern American version of the George F. Dempster type of book, with emphasis on youth. The opening gambit is the "You say" of the Beatles, Mia Flower and Harvard professor Dr. Leary, followed by the "Behold, I say" concerning getting together and conversion.

There is a galaxy of converted people and a glossary of modern verbiage which helps to make the book readable. Like the writings of most modern evangelists, there are no chapters devoted to the fish who got away—the rich young ruler, the all forsaking, the Gethsemane weeping scene, the one of the company who was a Judas.

My first reaction to the book was that I was handling a shallow, teenage book (although about deep spiritual experiences). It could be used to fan the fires of evangelism and personal witnessing. It is worth 40p, but why does Mr. Blessitt not have his glossary in alphabetical order?

JAMES KAY.

Prophetic Witness Manual, numbers 1-16 (inclusive). Published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House. Price 12p each, plus 3p each postage and packing.

Space does not permit detailed comment on the vast sweep of prophecy, mainly from the futurist viewpoint of eschatology, convincingly dealt with in the sixteen booklets constituting the Prophetic Witness Manual. The titles themselves will convey to the reader some idea of the wide expanse of prophetic truth set forth: The Coming Crisis; Interpreting Prophecy; God's Methods with Man; Israel and her Future; The Church's Hope; Resurrection; The Seventy Weeks; The Gentiles' Future; The Great Tribulation; The Two Beasts; Babylon; The Devil; The Second Advent; The Millennium; End of the World; Outline of Events.

Only a brief general survey is possible of the important and far-reaching subjects presented in a clear, concise manner by well-known and able Bible expositors, some of whom are of international repute in the religious world.

These excellent booklets are well prepared and attractively produced, and are of a size to fit into a woman's handbag or into the pocket of a man's coat, and in this way could be referred to conveniently at any time.

Although there is in some instances an overlapping of thought, which is to be expected in a work of this nature by various authors, an illuminating, interesting and thought-provoking standard of Scriptural exegesis is maintained all the way through the booklets concerning the coming again of the Lord Jesus and the events preceding and succeeding His coming for His Church.

Even though readers may not agree with all the details presented they will find the booklets stimulating and challenging. They should be read studiously and prayerfully. To those long committed to a study of eschatology the reading of the series will deepen and quicken their interest in it, and to those commencing a study of eschatology will come an intensification of desire and resolve to become more conversant with the teaching of Bible prophecy.

Elim News

BLACKPOOL, Marton

Pastor : R. Clarke

On the departure of Pastor and Mrs. D. W. Cartwright and Christopher to Rowley Regis after being with us for six years, the church showed appreciation of their faithful service by presenting the pastor with a briefcase and a cheque and Mrs. Cartwright with some pottery.

They were replaced by Pastor and Mrs. R. Clarke, who, we are pleased to announce, became the proud parents of a son, Stephen Daniel, on October 24th.

This is Pastor Clarke's first pastorate. He is also a full-time teacher at Fleetwood Grammar School, where he is head of the art department. He has already made his presence felt at Marton. Attendances have increased on Sundays and at the weeknight meetings. Several souls have been won for the Lord.

We ask for your constant prayers for our pastor as he holds the burden of two demanding jobs, that the Lord will richly bless him, his wife and their young son.

JACK BANCROFT.

BRIGHTON, Preston Park Pastor: L. J. Repath

We can add a footnote to our crusade report. We have received eleven addresses from the Billy Graham Organisation of contacts from the showing of the film "Two a Penny." Two people have reported that they were healed during the crusade.

L. J. REPATH.

SOUTHAMPTON

Pastor : J. C. Kennedy

At our annual church business meeting it was gratifying to have a noticeably increased attendance. Our treasurer presented a healthy balance sheet and reported offerings over the past year at a new high level. Gifts to missionary work totalled over £400. As the various section leaders reported, we learned something of the problems faced but also of the blessings enjoyed in the wide scope of evangelistic outreach.

Each week from 300 to 500 children are being reached with the Gospel, most of these from non-church-going families. The young wives and literature distribution sections have been the means of other good contacts, as also has our monthly family service.

The efforts of all our workers, with the sacrifices involved, are appreciated and prayer and support were solicited for them.

H. BLACKBURN.

GLOUCESTER

Pastor : F. Lavender

I went to prison one Sunday morning. The Gloucester choir were making one of their periodic visits. Although the authorities were glad to see us, there were still security precautions to be taken. We were counted in twice! In the ante-room where we got ready I could see through the barred window a man alone at exercise, walking round a small yard.

It was a strange sight to see our brightly dressed party, the ladies all in white, climbing the iron stairs in the central section up to the galleries and past the cell doors. Warders were everywhere, as anxious as we were that we did not go astray.

The first impression of the chapel was stumbling around chairs to find a seat. When I looked around that drab mass of men, abnormally still and regimented under strong discipline, I was deeply moved. If ever there were men in desperate need of a Saviour it was here.

The choir with their smiling faces were like a shaft of sunshine in a sombre scene. They sang their testimonies, "It's a wonderful, wonderful life" and "Near when you need Him." When they sang "He's always there" we knew that our Lord was in the midst.

Pastor Lavender spoke simply and clearly about Pilate being responsible. He had to make a decision. So the way was prepared for the men to make their own decisions for Christ. How do you make a Gospel appeal to an audience whose every move is closely watched? Said the pastor: "I will include in my prayer everyone who looks up to me as I pray." Some heads went quickly down, but thank God anxious eyes were fixed on him as he prayed. He who knows when the sparrow falls will surely heed the cries from such hearts.

I was very thoughtful when I moved up to be counted out. It seemed as if we had entered another world of darkness and despair hard by the gates of hell.

Does your church choir visit your local prison? I am told that there is always a maximum turnout when this happens.

R. J. NILES.

HULL, Mason Street

Pastor : J. Burgan

After six years of loving, loyal service and ministry among us we bade farewell to Pastor and Mrs. J. Crimp. Very warm tributes were expressed by the officers and people of the church. A love gift was presented to them from the church and from others, including many friends and their children outside the church membership with whom the pastor had many contacts. A musical trio and two solos were enjoyed during the service. We pray that God will bless them and use them mightily in their new pastorate.

MONEYSLANE

Pastor : R. J. George

Our annual Sunday school social, with programme by scholars and presentation of prizes, took on added interest this year, for during a break in the usual programme it became the setting for a special presentation, by Mrs. E. George, on behalf of the church of tokens of appreciation of their services, past and present, to the Sunday school by two long-serving teachers, Mrs. A. E. Malcolmson and Mrs. S. Martin.

Coupled with expressions of appreciation were equally sincere assurances of best wishes and prayers for God's continued blessing upon their lives and labours.

ILKESTON

Pastor : F. Waite

An evangelistic crusade was held to mark the church's tenth anniversary. During a Saturday evening service, at which Pastor B. G. Edwards ministered God's Word, Pastor F. Waite and his wife received presentations from the church as a token of their appreciation for the dedicated ministry enjoyed by the church during the past ten years.

Church of Nazarene Pastor C. Aitken ministered at the services on the Lord's Day, and great blessings were enjoyed as one lady gave her heart to the Lord.

The rest of the week was a time of spiritual uplift for the converted as up to ninety-four adults attended the services. Moving testimonies were heard of God's saving grace. Under the anointed ministry of Pastor Alan Caple one other adult and several youngsters responded to the appeals.

Soloists and Gospel singers with guitars added to a wonderful week, which was climaxed by the visit of the Selly Oak choir.

The seed has been sown and personal witness by members will follow up the campaign. To God be the glory !

A. E. USHER.

SHEFFIELD

Pastor : A. V. Gorton

1971 has been a very happy year, as it is forty years since the Elim Foursquare Gospel message came to Sheffield. To celebrate this we had the ministry of four of the previous pastors of the church.

We commenced in March with Pastor A. J. K. Magee. He is unique in his presentation and humour. It was lovely to hear him again. Next, in May, Pastor and Mrs. J. Tetchner were with us, bringing back to our minds their ministry during the last war and how we went out before the evening service inviting members of the forces to the meetings and supper afterwards. We thrill again as we recollect how many came and accepted Christ as their Saviour. Pastor Tetchner kept us very active and we had great spiritual blessing in the assembly during those years of strife. Twice we sang in Wakefield prison.

Then we had Pastor and Mrs. W. J. Hilliard. He was the third resident minister we had in Sheffield. We have always had happy memories of their ministry, and as this was the first time Mr. Hilliard had preached away from his own church since his illness he became doubly precious to us all.

Lastly, we had Pastor and Mrs. L. N. Knipe. They ministered here prior to Pastor and Mrs. A. V. Gorton, who have been with us for five years. They were delighted to see the growth of our assembly. It was a delight to see and hear them again.

It has been a real spiritual tonic to have fellowship with these four ministers. We have loved all our previous ministers, as we do our present ones, Pastor and Mrs. A. V. Gorton.

(MISS) C. I. LADLOW.

BRECON

Pastor : G. H. Neale

At our harvest thanksgiving service our guest preacher was Rev. Omri Bowen, principal of the Apostolic Bible College. It was wonderful to see the church full and people standing to hear a message on the great truths of Pentecost.

Our Twenty Towns Crusade with evangelist R. Williams, of Rochester, proved of great blessing both in the salvation of precious souls and in encouragement to Christians. The attendances throughout were excellent, with many visitors in the services even though the weather was not favourable.

The convention was over four days, when Pastor W. M. E. Plowright ministered in song and preached the Word of God, both of which brought blessing. Time was spent in prayer with those seeking the baptism in the Holy Spirit.

Our prayer now is that as the church moves into its twenty-first year the blessing of the Lord may be fuller than in past days.

GORDON H. NEALE.

KIDDERMINSTER

Pastor : H. Jeffery

The Sisterhood recently celebrated the ninetieth birthday of the founder-president, Mrs. Palfrey. For eight years from 1956 she led the Sisterhood and established spiritual foundations in many of the members. Converted at the age of nine, she has been an active witness and, from the age of eighteen, she worked for many years among the poor in the Manchester area. Her personal testimony has inspired many to greater efforts in the Lord's work.

After a short service tribute was paid to Mrs. Palfrey's faithful example. She was presented with a basket of fruit, and refreshments were taken, which included a cake iced and decorated by one of the Crusaders.

Our photograph shows Pastor and Mrs. Jeffery on either side of Mrs. Palfrey.

E. MANLEY.

SILVERDALE

Pastor : D. S. Williams

We were privileged to hold a united baptismal service with friends at Bethel Temple. A family of five were among the eleven candidates from our church. Two came from Bethel Church. Each local candidate had a promise read to them before immersion and received a certificate afterwards. Pastor R. Proctor, of Bethel Church, ministered the word and Pastor D. S. Williams convened the meeting.

At our minister's first anniversary services we were delighted to have Pastor A. Lambie, whose ministry was very acceptable. There were many items vocal and otherwise over the weekend. At the Sunday evening meeting the diaconate expressed appreciation for the untiring efforts and zeal of the minister. A cheque was handed to Pastor Williams from the church by Mr. E. Cork and Mrs. A. Maddox presented Mrs. Williams with a bouquet. The surprise item was rendered on Monday night by the male voice section. After the benediction many remained to wait upon God and five received the baptism in the Holy Ghost, two were healed, and one soul was saved. It was certainly a time of refreshing.

We later had a visit from Pastor G. Miller to show two films, which made a great impression on a crowded church.

GUERNSEY, ST. PETER PORT

Pastor : S. Penney

A young man whose family have long connections with our church was recently called to the Bar in the Royal Court, Guernsey. He is John Emile Langlois, son of Mr. Emile and the late Mrs. A. E. Langlois. John was educated at Elizabeth College and later worked in the Procurer's office and in an advocate's office. He did three years' training at London Bible College, and has been an administrator in theological education in various countries. He completed his studies at the University of Caen. John is setting up in practice on his own, the first Guernsey advocate to do this in the past fifteen years.

Soul-winning success

by J. Nelson Parr

12. Contagion

EVERY preacher, Christian and theological writer admits that the Early Church met with success, but we are not prepared to adopt their methods. We meekly submit to failure and stagnation. One famous historian describes the common opinion of the Roman pagans concerning the followers of Jesus as follows: "They were intensely propagandist. While ever unseen, they were at work. Every member was a missionary of the sect and lived mainly to propagate a doctrine for which he was ready to die. Thus the infection spread by a thousand unsuspected channels. Like a contagion propagated in the air, it could penetrate, as it seemed, anywhere and everywhere. The meek and gentle slave that attends your table or tends your children may be a Christian! The favourite daughter of your house, who has endeared herself to you by a tenderness and grace peculiarly her own and which seems to you as strange as it is captivating, turns out to be a Christian. The captain of the guards, the legislator in the senate may be Christians. In these circumstances who or what is safe? What power can defend the laws and majesty of Rome and the peace of domestic life against an enemy like this?" There in a few words we have an explanation of the glorious success of the Early Church. Failure, stagnation, retrogression and defeat definitely show that there is something wrong. Every record of failure in the Scriptures is a record of human lapse. It is impossible to be in the will of God and fulfil Divine conditions and meet with failure. Where has God promised or hinted at defeat, failure or stagnation?

Every member of the Early Church was a missionary, but today ninety-five per cent of the members of churches never win a soul for Christ.

Dr. Len Broughton had a friend who became the pastor of a Presbyterian church. He became very much exercised about the salvation of lost sinners. He had gone on for a year and more and had seen practically nobody saved. One night he called his elders to meet him in the church and they prayed together. He said: "Brethren, I have a proposition to make to you. I wish to resign the pastorate of this church because I do not believe God wants me to say here. I am not having any souls saved." "Oh," said one of the deacons, "we are greatly edified." "Edified for what?" the minister asked. "You have been coming to me with such soothing compliments as that and yet I don't see for what you have been edified. Now, brethren, unless God gives me some souls here very soon I am going to resign the pastorate of this church. I want to say something to you also. You are the elders of this church and I am going to start with you. Brother [turning to one], do you believe that through you a soul was ever saved?" The elder replied, "No, pastor." "Do you?" to another. "No, pastor." "Do you?" "No, pastor," and so on all along the line. "Now, brethren," he said, "I want to make this proposition to you: unless God gives this church souls in the near future you will resign also as the leaders of it." "We are getting along very well," they said. "No, we are not getting along at all!" was the rejoinder. Finally they knelt down and prayed together. In that prayer a covenant was made that they would resign if the Lord did not give souls in the near future. They went to their homes. It was a Saturday night. On Monday morning the elder first questioned by the pastor went into his store. The first man he met was his confidential clerk. He took him into his office, shut the door behind him and said, "Bob, I have been a good master to you, haven't I?" "Yes, sir, you have." "Well, Bob, you have been with me for fifteen years. I am an elder in the church that you attend when you go anywhere, but you are not a Christian and I know it, and have known it all the while, yet I have never spoken a word to you about salvation personally. Bob, my soul is on fire now and I want us to get down here in this room and give ourselves, both of us, to Christ. I will give myself to Him for greater consecration; you give yourself to Him for salvation." "Yes, sir. I will be only too glad to do it," he said, and down they knelt. That man was saved. The elder called in another, and another, and another. That day he led eleven men to Christ. On the next Sunday over thirty men were received into that church on profession of their faith, every one of them led to Jesus Christ by an official of the church.

Sad news

IT was very sad for Banto the next time he went to the church, for during the service Mr. English said that he and his wife would soon be leaving the village to work for Jesus in another place.

"I have enjoyed being among you," Mr. English said, "We have had some happy times together and you have all been such good friends to me and to my wife. We have all worked together to make this fine church. Now I feel it is time I moved to another village to do the same work there. I must tell others about Jesus and help them, too, to build a church. I shall miss you all, but I will visit you again from time to time to see how you are getting along. I shall be thinking of you all and praying for you all that Jesus will bless you in your work for Him. This is your church; it belongs to each and every one of you. You all have a part to play in God's plan, however small. God will help you in all you do. Trust Him, believe Him, He will guide you and lead you. Tell others about Jesus. Show them that they, too, can know a wonderful, true Friend, who cares for them and loves them. Invite them to your church and teach them the hymns and choruses you know. Tell them the stories of Jesus, just as I told you."

Banto could not believe his ears. He cried "It can't be true! Mr. English must not leave us!"

A farewell party was held in the church. The women made sandwiches and cakes and set them out on a long table in the middle of the church. The people were sad that Mr. English and his wife were leaving the village after the party was over, but they were happy, too, that Mr. English was going to teach others the love of Jesus. Mr. English had said that he would return to visit them, so they had that to look forward to and in the meantime they had much to do. They would try to fill the church, tell others of Jesus, clean and polish the church, write hymns and choruses.

When the party was over Mr. English said he had some good news. He looked round to see if everyone was present, but he could not see Banto! Wherever could he be?

Mr. English opened the door and went outside to search. He found Banto on the wall outside the church, crying for all he was worth.

"Banto! What is the matter?" asked Mr. English.

"Oh, Mr. English, sir. I don't want you to leave. I shall miss you so much. Please stay, Mr. English, please stay."

"Banto," said Mr. English, "please don't be upset like this. I shall keep in touch with you. Now that you can read and write you will be able to send me letters telling me all about the church and what you are doing in Sunday school. You must be glad and happy that I am going, Banto. You see, my work here is finished. The work that is left is your work, Banto, your work for Jesus. It is up to you now to practise all that I have taught you and to do your very best here for Jesus. I am sure you want other boys and girls to know about your Jesus, too. There are so many children in the world who know nothing of Jesus. Cheer up, and come inside the church, for I have some good news to tell you all."

"THEY that feared the Lord spake often one to another" wrote the prophet Malachi. He was expressing the response of true believers to the defiance and cynicism of backsliders and unbelievers (Malachi 3:13-16).

After every conference the following comments are heard from the lips of many: "The fellowship was great!"; "I went mainly for the fellowship"; "I came to know colleagues in quite a new, delightful way."

We commend to you our own conference, which will take place at Pontin's Holiday Camp, Lytham St. Annes, Blackpool, on May 6th—13th D.V. We ask every one of our churches at home and overseas to take this matter to their hearts in prayer. The potential is tremendous. Times of prayer and ministry in past conferences have been precious indeed. Surely we are all agreed that the need of the hour is Holy Ghost power. Please bring the conference before the Lord in your prayers both privately and in the churches. We trust that greater numbers than ever will attend this year. May we invite you to give the matter careful thought? We shall trust to see you at Blackpool.

"PEK" is a slogan which is beginning to make its presence felt. It refers to the Pentecostal European Conference which is to take place in Berne, Switzerland (see advertisement opposite). We understand that many from other European countries are already booking and it is to be hoped that the United Kingdom will also be well represented. Our contacts with Pentecostal fellowships on the Continent are refreshing. It is true to say that in some lands evangelical witness is spear-headed by our brethren. Whatever we may think about Britain's entry into the Common Market, it must be said that if it brings closer liaison with our sister movements across the Channel this will be one happy result.

Easter Monday is on April 3rd this year. Our Secretary-General has already included several features in the "Evangel" urging our movement to work and to pray that many unsaved people will be at Trafalgar Square and in the Royal Albert Hall. We would like to underline this. Once again we could comment that fellowship on Easter Monday is great, and it certainly is, but we are also thrilled year by year by the spiritual results in conversions, healings and those baptised in the Holy Spirit. It is far from unusual to hear testimonies in our churches as to blessings received on Easter Monday. May 1972's family day be the greatest yet!

A Man whose heart God had touched

(1 Samuel 10 : 26)

A tribute paid at the funeral service for

Mr. F. W. Dowding

by Pastor Laurence E. Lambert

TWO short months ago Mr. Dowding made my farewell presentation. Little did I think that I would so soon be making this farewell peroration. They say that no one is indispensable. Mr. Dowding is irreplaceable. When younger he was rejected for full-time ministry; instead he gave his life to the Yeovil church.

He was a great man. Jesus said that the greatest serve. Mr. Dowding was always serving others. He had that rare combination of being intensely spiritual and immensely practical. He was an enormous help to the pastor, a friend to all. He was perhaps the finest man I have ever met.

He was a good man. His essential goodness radiated from his very being. Children loved him. He had no children of his own, but one felt that hundreds of children knew and loved him. Sunday school outings and parties were never the same if he was not there. His testimony when we broadcast on B.B.C. radio was made so effective by his great sincerity.

He was a gracious man. He really cared for the elderly. He was always challenging the young folk as to their church attendance and progress with God, yet they never took offence, for he lived what he preached. In all the years I knew him he was never moody.

He was a godly man. Other than when in hospital he never missed a meeting in fourteen years, walking in the snow, coming even when ill, returning from holidays to be at his church. Mr. Dowding could really worship and pray. He led us through to the throne. He was utterly Pentecostal, a man of God.

He is a glorified man. Thank God, our dear friend is still alive! That rich voice, that warm personality are now with the Lord whom he loved and served for so long. His last prayer with me just a week ago was, "Lord, we may not meet again down here, but we shall surely meet in heaven." I feel this morning that he is probably leading the worship in some part of glory land. There is a little bit of Somerset in heaven today.

His greatest desire was to see others accepting Christ, especially those members of his family who are still unsaved.

I would like to leave two texts with you. One was beloved by him and often quoted in our deacons' meetings: 1 Samuel 10 : 26 : "A band of men, whose hearts God had touched." He was such a man. Then my personal tribute would be in a paraphrase of the words of Jonathan to David : "You will be missed, for your place at the table will be empty" (1 Samuel 20 : 18).

PENTECOSTAL EUROPEAN CONFERENCE JUNE 27th to JULY 2nd, 1972 in the Festival Hall, Berne, Switzerland

Theme : The Gospel in the Power of the Holy Spirit

Plan to combine your holiday with a spiritual treat in this beautiful country

MEET THE PENTECOSTALS FROM ALL OVER EUROPE

THE Church in our land stands today at a most critical point in her history. The twentieth century with its intellectual advance has produced a materialistic society where the spiritual truths for which the Church has stood are denied, ignored, or treated with scepticism, until the vast majority of the population have no interest in the Church and never attend its services. The result is to be seen everywhere in the lowering of Christian standards which have long governed the life of the nation and the establishment of a secular society with all its permissiveness and resultant social problems. What is the rôle of the Church at such an hour ?

The true Church of Jesus Christ is described by Paul as the Body of Christ, consisting not of denominations as such but of individuals irrespective of their labels, men and women who have exercised faith in Christ's saving power, thus having received His life and having fully committed themselves to Him as His disciples. There already exists, therefore, a true spiritual ecumenicity, where all men are one in Christ Jesus. John, the apostle of love, reveals "God is love" and later he says, "As He is, so are we in this world." Dr. Barclay translates these words : "Because our relationship to this world is the same as His was." The rôle of the Church today is to live as Christ lived, manifesting His character, His love, His concern, His zeal to help and lift the fallen and to bring the wayward back to God. The centre of the gospel is that "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son" for its redemption. As He is, so are we, therefore we must give ourselves for God's redemptive purposes. This will involve us in at least three things : sharing His compassion, His commission and His conflict.

"God so loved the world"—who can ever understand the mystery of Divine love or plumb the depths of this word "so" ? The world, depraved, evil, was opposed to His righteous laws and His holiness, yet He loved it. The outstanding feature of the earthly ministry of Jesus Christ was His wonderful compassion. Again and again we read : "He was moved with compassion," for the sick, the hungry, the bereaved, the wayward and the sinner. Are we moved with compassion as we look on the contemporary scene ? Does the sight of today's social conditions fill us with pity, create in us a yearning to help people in their need ? Do we sit comfortably in our pews and, with a self-righteous air, condemn our present godless society ? Do we pull our skirts around us and pray the prayer of the Pharisee,

So are

ADDRESS GIVEN BY

at his induction as President of the Salisbury
Free Church Council

"Because as

"I thank my God I am not as other men are," or does the sight move us to tears even as Jesus wept over Jerusalem ? We must have His compassion. Suffering humanity, with its physical pains, touches our hearts, but what effect has its suffering through moral and spiritual causes upon us ? John Wesley interpreted this verse "Because as He, Christ, is all love, so are we even in this world."

In the ninth verse John says, "In this was manifested the love of God towards us, because that God sent His only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him." God loved the world and, says John, the evidence of that love was the sending of the Son into the world for its redemption. Again in verse 14 John says, "The Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world." The word sent is the Greek apostello, from which we get our English word "apostle," meaning one who was commissioned or ordained and sent forth on a mission. Jesus came down to this world specifically commissioned. He moved among sinful men wherever they were in their need ; He ate and drank with publicans and sinners. Before He left this world He said in His great prayer recorded in John 17 : "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." Thus we share in His commission. As He came to the world, so He has ordained us to go. This surely means that we must get involved in the affairs of men and women. We must have a social concern. Our love will be seen by our willingness to go out and help those who are in need in every practical way, seeking above all to bring their wandering feet back into the ways of God. We may criticise the methods of the Jesus revolution in America, but these young folk are surely showing us again where our duty really lies. They have gone out to the drop-outs, the hippies, the addicts

and the rest and met them with the gospel just where they are.

The mission of the Saviour was no easy one. To accomplish it meant taking His stand against the authorities of His day and raising His voice against the evils around Him. It made many His enemies and finally led Him to the cross. If the Church is to be as He is in this world, then she must raise her voice against the current evils. The time has come for Christians to stand up and be counted. For too long we have been silent while evil men have corrupted the minds of the people and spread their evil ideas for financial gain. The Church must be the Church militant, fighting evil on every hand even though it may bring embarrassment, abuse, suffering and a cross. We must ever remember that behind evil men are the forces of darkness and therefore as Paul reminds us "we wrestle not against flesh and blood but . . . against spiritual wickedness in high places." We are in a conflict.

When our Lord commenced His earthly ministry He read in the synagogue of Nazareth from Isaiah 61: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord," and He added, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

If we are to fulfil our rôle we require the same anointing. We shall never accomplish anything without the empowering of the Spirit of the Lord. The Scriptures that foretell the darkness of the last days also declare that in the last days God will pour out of His Spirit upon all flesh. This He is doing today throughout the world so that a spirit-filled Church can continue the ministry of the risen Lord and Saviour in this world now.

WONDERFUL LOVE

God's love is seen in the world around,
In the golden sun on the corn-ripe ground,
In the fluttering leaves, in the gentle breeze,
In the roaring waves on the stormy seas,
In the evening hush as the shadows fall,
In the new-born lamb's first feeble call,
In the mighty strength of the eagle's wing;
I can see God's love in everything.

In the springtime blush, in the summer glow,
In the autumn tints, in the winter snow,
In the baby's face with its eyes so bright,
In the moon and stars which shine at night,
In the streams and hills, in the flowers gay,
In the butterflies in bright array,
In the humming bees and the birds that sing;
I can see God's love in everything.

God's love's seen most in the gift He gave
In sending His Son the world to save;
In the life He lived, in the death He died,
God's love is revealed through Him, crucified;
In the words He spoke, when He said "Forgive,"
And "Thy will be done," that men may live.
'Tis a perfect love that can set men free;
I can feel it now embracing me.

IRENE ATTWELL.

THREE MEANS GO!

1 Kings 2:3

Crossing the Irish Sea one starless night, I asked the captain "How do you know Holyhead harbour on so dark a night as this?" He said: "Do you see those three lights? Those three must line up behind each other as one, and when we see them so united we know the exact position of the harbour's mouth."

When we want to know God's will there are three things which always concur—the inward impulse, the Word of God, and the trend of circumstances: God in the heart impelling you forward; God in the Book, corroborating whatever He says in the heart; and God in circumstances, which are always indicative of His will. Never start until these things agree.

That thorn in the flesh

IN complete isolation in the Arabian desert, entirely cut off from the human element, the apostle Paul had an amazing experience unique to mankind. Later he declared that he knew a Christian (undoubtedly himself) who was snatched up into paradise, even unto the third heaven, unaware whether he was in the body or out of it. There he beheld visions and heard wondrous revelations which under no circumstances dare he communicate to his fellows.

Paul was not confused when he stated, "Whether in the body . . . or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth," because, at that time of rapid transition, his spiritual elation was so great that time and matter were swept away!

"Flesh and blood cannot inherit (enter) the kingdom of God," says Scripture, so it becomes apparent that the spirit of Paul actually entered heaven while his body remained immobile upon the earth.

"And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations," continued Paul, "there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me." This means that God gave Satan permission to keep humble by persecution this once proud and arrogant Pharisee, now a devout follower of Christ.

That Paul's affliction may have been defective eyesight is a popular opinion, based on Paul's gratitude to the Galatians, to whom he writes: "If it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes and have given them to me," and "Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand."

As it was customary for scribes to write in a large hand in those days, the poor eyesight theory can be discarded. Furthermore, regarding Paul's vision, there are no half measures when the Lord heals. Surely the restored sight of Paul following his blinding on the Damascus road would be perfect. His optical range might well have been superior to that of his fellows. God would not allow Satan to interfere with His own accomplished miracle, because the restoration of the sight of Paul was essential to his ministry, for he had yet much to do in the service of his Master.

Varied indeed are the suggestions as to the nature of this thorn in the flesh. Let us reason together. "A messenger of Satan" could have been a demon, a satanic envoy whose evil mission was to plague the life of Paul. This was evidenced by the continual buffeting inflicted upon Paul. "To buffet" implies to contend against, to inflict physical pain. Consider the bringing about of the persecutions, stoning, weaknesses, shipwrecks and the continuous stirring up of the people against the longsuffering but never defeated apostle.

by Hugh Sawyer

Three times Paul pleaded for deliverance, but the Lord in His wisdom said, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in weakness" (2 Corinthians 12:9).

ELIM DIVINE HEALING PRAYER PARTNERSHIP

SINCE 1969 I have suffered from a rare blood disorder. Two years ago laboratory tests diagnosed the dreaded cancer of the blood. My wife and family were given the sad news. To my horror I overheard the doctors discussing my case; as you may well imagine my world fell apart.

I prayed with all my heart that this diagnosis would be wrong. In the meantime a dear friend wrote to you and asked for your prayers.

Tests were taken to hospitals all over the country and after several weeks they were proved to be negative. To me that was my miracle. God had answered our prayers.

I have since then had diabetes and jaundice. To treat these I have been given 140 pints of blood. However, today I can gladly say that my ailment has vastly improved. I no longer have the latter diseases. I know that in time I will be completely cured.

May I take this opportunity of thanking you with all my heart. (Smethwick, Warley, Worcs.).

Church reports

BIRMINGHAM, Yardley Pastor : E. Jones

It was with great sorrow that we said farewell to Pastor and Mrs. M. E. Sherwood, who left to go to Sowerby Bridge. In the two and a half years they were at Yardley they helped to inspire spiritual unity and enthusiasm. The pastor soon became known in the community through his door-to-door visitations. His electrical and technical training was soon put to good use in the extensive rebuilding of the church interior, now well on its way to completion.

The service was taken by the deacons and Mr. D. Lea ably passed on God's Word. Items were given by members of the church and the Sunday school, and everyone was greatly blessed. It was a personal blessing to the writer that Pastor Sherwood's last official act was to conduct the dedication of my youngest son.

Despite the obvious sad undertones we were encouraged that in God's infinite love and wisdom He had at short notice prepared a couple well able to fill the gap. We were glad to welcome into our midst Pastor E. A. Jones and his wife.

On the following Sunday we were delighted to have the President, Pastor A. A. Biddle, with us officially to welcome Pastor and Mrs. Jones.

We are looking to God to continue to work through us in speaking to men, women and young people in this district and to draw them to Himself.

BOURNEMOUTH, Winton

Pastor : G. N. Backhouse

At our harvest festival services the Sunday school joined in the Sunday morning service. A record number of over 100 children attended and the church was packed with parents and members. The service was greatly appreciated and blessed.

Another highlight for the Sunday school was the anniversary. Each service was well attended. This presented a splendid opportunity to put over the Gospel in word and in song to many parents and friends. Sunday school work is very tiring and frustrating at times, but it has its own reward and it is very gratifying to see the numbers increase and the interest of the children in the things of God.

At our pastor's third anniversary the ministry of Pastor W. J. Maybin was greatly appreciated. Mention must be made of the musical items by the Wessex Gospel Choir, a male voice group from Parkstone, and individual items by church members. Tribute was paid to the faithful service of both Pastor and Mrs. Backhouse and their undoubted enthusiasm in the work of God.

(MRS.) D. F. KEMP.

For the past few months about thirty women have been devoting their spare time to knitting and sewing and have produced a big collection of dolls and soft animals.

The women are all members of the Elim Pentecostal Church in Winton and they have been doing this work during their meetings. The toys were sold at auction by Mr. D. S. House. Mrs. Elna Backhouse, wife of the church's minister, says it is the first time they have done anything like this, but it has been a great success. The work has been done by women of all ages ranging from young wives to retired people and the proceeds of the sale will go to the Elim Women's Missionary Auxiliary.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

DEAR EDITOR,

As one who is a treasurer and also involved in lay preaching I see both ends of what we term "ministry expenses." When I know that there will be a visiting speaker at my church I ensure that the visitor's expenses are assessed in advance, placed in an envelope and handed to him at his visit with our good wishes. So often when I visit another church I am asked rather embarrassingly: "Do we owe you anything?" or "What are your expenses?" As I am engaged in other employment I am able to refuse expenses, but I often wonder how many men, though desperately needing their expenses, refuse them because they are too embarrassed to answer the question, especially when it is asked in front of other people.

Far too few of our men today receive an adequate salary, and I wonder how those who have the oversight of church finances would feel and react if placed in a similar position.

Fellow treasurers, please take note!

Yours sincerely,
(Name and address supplied).

OF OUR INFIRMITY

When Jesus wept for Lazarus, He joined a mourning crowd.

He did not stand aloof from them, in secret knowledge proud,

Rebuked them not for unbelief,
Reproached them not for tear-blind grief,

But stood, His own head bowed.

"If you had been here," Martha wept, "my brother had not died."

Behind the words He sensed the charge that faith had been denied,

Yet stood with quiet dignity,
Defended not His sovereignty,

But let spent grief subside.

When Jesus wept at Bethany, He wept for all who see

The open grave, and tread the path of deep perplexity.

And so I think that, standing thus,

When Jesus wept for Lazarus

He also wept for me.

Drive like a Christian

DO you drive a car—or any vehicle for that matter? What kind of a driver are you? According to a recent medical report submitted by the Medical Commission on Accident Prevention, aggressiveness is one of the main factors in road accidents. Accident-prone drivers are often egocentric, lacking in consideration for others, aggressive, impulsive and intolerant of frustration. There will be more cars than ever on our roads during 1972, so driving and travelling will become even more hazardous and dangerous. I need not emphasise the shock and injury which often accompany accidents. I happen to know from personal experience all the damage to one's vehicle and the inconvenience and prolonged negotiations over insurance settlements. I contend that as we face a new motoring year we should not only ask for God's protecting care throughout the year and on every journey we make, but we should vow to drive reverently and carefully.

The Pentecostal Evangel of the U.S.A. elaborates on this theme. Its comments are worth sharing with all who use our roads, whether for work or on holiday. Sometimes we are in care-free mood and inclined to be careless and in a hurry to reach our destination.

"Reverence for human life is one of the characteristics of Christianity which distinguish it from heathen religions. In the days of Noah, when the human race was still young, the Lord said, 'Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made He man' (Genesis 9:6). This reverence for human life affects the care with which Christian motorists drive their cars on crowded streets and highways.

"If every Christian would 'drive reverently' the toll would be less. Is 'reverently' too strong a term? Not according to the Bible. It uses the word to denote varying degrees of reverence: the profound respect a worshipper feels toward the Lord; the filial respect of a child toward his parents; the loving respect of a wife toward her husband; the dutiful respect of a citizen toward the head of state.

"This reverence, therefore, will cause us to respect all the traffic laws, whether a police or highway patrol car is in sight or not. For God sees, and disobedience is sin. The husband who reverences the loved one sitting beside him will not endanger her life by ignoring a 'no overtaking' sign or driving through a traffic light at red. A teenager with reverence for his parents will remember their admonition, 'Son, do be careful,' and he will slow down just because he respects their advice.

"For speed kills. The National Safety Council of the U.S.A. says that excessive speed is a contributing cause in more than forty per cent of all car fatalities. High speed is a mark of irreverence. It reflects the spirit of the age, which is marked by self-will, insubordination and a lack of discipline.

"Reverence on the highway is as important as reverence in church. The Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Sermon on the Mount are just as applicable to the man in the driver's seat as to the man in the pew. The motorist has more than a massive accumulation of horsepower in his control; he has the lives of his fellow men in his hands. If he is a Christian, he will give his car a safety check before he hits the road, and he will drive it in the fear of God."

T.C.C.

As we should be

*He never passes on a bend,
Nor ordained speeds exceedeth,
Treats other drivers as his friend
And right of way concedeth.
I met a chap like that—but there,
I scarcely can remember where!*

LIFE MORE ABUNDANT

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10).

Life more abundant, life in its fullness,
Life overflowing with gladness and joy,
Life that is wonderful, so full of meaning,
Real inward peace that naught can destroy.

This is the life that Christ came to bring us
By His own death and rising again.
This life is His life, His gift eternal—Life without Jesus is empty and vain.

Not in the outward forms of religion,
Nor by your striving can life be made new;
Only through faith in a personal Saviour,
Life more abundant, just now, is for you.

HIS WORK

"And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels" (Malachi 3:17).

As in a dream I saw my Saviour stand—
No longer toilworn, lowly, Man of grief,
But King of kings—a sceptre in His hand,
And all the world of men beneath His sway.
Upon His head a royal diadem

And I one tiny jewel in that crown.

"Ah, Lord!" I cried, "You took me from the dust!"

How can it be that I Your brow adorn?"

"I sought you long and found you 'neath the mire.

Mine were the crushings, Mine the testing fire.

I saw the beauty in the stone concealed,

I cut until the brilliance was revealed.

I paid the price—thou art My own rare gem,
Fit jewel for a Monarch's diadem.

Let not unworthiness your beauty hide,

Rejoice in Me, 'twas I who made you thus!"

Jet Pilot's Testimony

by D. J. Stuart

I KNOW personally of men who can recount years spent in crime and sordid vice, until one day they found Christ, and all was wonderfully changed. I have listened to testimonies of women whom God has taken from the streets, drink and drugs, and in a moment has miraculously transformed into new creations in Christ Jesus (2 Corinthians 5 : 17). I have wished sometimes that I could tell as spectacular a story — dramatic, gripping, dynamic, certain to bring a chorus of hallelujahs !

After a pause for thought I have cancelled that wish and thanked God for godly parents who nurtured me in the truth of the Word of God and encouraged me in the things that are "true, honest, pure, lovely and of good report" (Philippians 4 : 8). I thank God that He showed me of my need of a Saviour, because my sin had to be dealt with if I was to know the joy and reality of eternal life. God showed me as a lad of fifteen that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3 : 23). How far short is irrelevant, because without the cleansing blood of Christ the end is the same (Romans 6 : 23). I had no excuse for my sin, since I had heard the way of salvation from my infancy. I knelt and confessed my sin, pleading for forgiveness, and at that moment, in the home of the church youth leader (God bless him) in Hastings, I found Christ. Hallelujah !

I left home in 1950 and joined the Royal Air Force as an apprentice, taking the prayers of parents and friends with me. I did well academically and in 1954 I was commissioned as an officer and in the following year won my wings as a pilot. Spiritually, however, I was in the wilderness. My witness gradually became less effectual. I succumbed to the things that the world has to offer a young "jet jockey" and the glory began to fade from my soul. During years of tremendous flying fun, but spiritual drought, the good Lord kept His hand on my life, because my young wife found the Saviour through the faithful ministry of the Gospel in a little Baptist chapel in a Lincolnshire village near the R.A.F. station. This was wonderful, because her background was totally different from mine, but my worldliness by now was a terrible barrier to her spiritual growth. We both compromised with the world, going to parties, night clubs and so on.

In Germany in 1964 and 1965 we came into contact with some young Pentecostal airmen whom God used to bring us to our senses (Luke 15 : 17). As we returned to the "Father's House" the things of the world fell away and the blessing of the Lord was renewed (Isaiah 55 : 7).

On returning to England, I did a flying instructor's course. We were posted "overseas" again—to a flying training school on the Isle of Anglesey (Sir Môn) in North Wales ! Here the Lord led us to an Elim Pentecostal church and we embraced the truths of Pentecost for ourselves. We praise the Lord that our three daughters accepted Christ as their Saviour while we were in fellowship with this lovely assembly and we place on record our tremendous gratitude for the anointed ministry of the beloved pastor, under whom we grew in grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Peter 3 : 18).

Now I am no longer in the R.A.F. flying jets, but work as a flying instructor with a civilian school, teaching on light piston aircraft, but God is the same and is as true as His Word (Joel 2 : 25-28). God has wonderfully blessed and led us over these last seven years, and we look forward to the future. What He has done for one He can do for others (Isaiah 55 : 6, 7).

(Mr. Stuart is now a deacon of Cheltenham Elim Pentecostal Church.—EDITOR.)

THE FAMILY ALTAR

Scripture

Notes
by

J. C. Smyth

Monday, January 10th

Joshua 7: 16-26

"The fierceness of His anger" (v. 26).

Clear instructions had been given by God as to how everything in Jericho was to be treated (6:18). Everything in Jericho was devoted or "put in the ban" (Hebrew, Cherem). A devoted article had a curse upon it. Anyone taking such an article into a house or tent automatically brought the curse upon it and all in it. Achan, his family and possessions were destroyed because of the curse.

God can never condone sin. The punishment for sin has been clearly stated from the beginning (Genesis 2:17). Man disregards the Divine warning at his peril. Jesus has taken the punishment for sin on the cross at Calvary and a free pardon is available for all who trust Him.

Joshua 8: 1-17

"The Lord said to Joshua" (v. 1).

The second attack on Ai was vastly different from the first. On the first occasion Joshua did not consult God, but listened to men (7:3). On the second occasion God had been consulted and had given the instructions (vv. 1, 2). Israel would never have been defeated at Ai had God been consulted in the first instance.

God's instructions as to strategy for the second attack were general. The details had to be compiled by Joshua (compare v. 2 and vv. 4-8). God expects His people to learn by experience and to use the sense that He has given them. He does many of His wonders through His gifts to men, once they are surrendered to Him.

Joshua 8: 18-35

"Joshua built an altar . . . and afterwards he read all the words of the law" (vv. 30, 34).

There was a pause in the conquest of Canaan. Many may have thought that they should be getting on with capturing and subduing the land, but it was not really time off. The two activities were essential to maintaining the spiritual life of the people. In building the altar at Mount Ebal they made a fresh dedication of themselves to the Lord. In the public reading of the law they were reminded of the requirements of God for their future life. The reciting of the covenant was a blessing to the people (v. 33).

Make time in the midst of spiritual warfare to dedicate ourselves to God and to read His Word.

Thursday, January 13th

Joshua 9: 1-27

"We have sworn to them by the Lord" (v. 19).

By cunning, spiced with flattery, the leaders of the people were tricked into an undertaking with those whom they should have destroyed (vv. 4-15). When the leaders discovered their mistake it was too late to do anything about it. They had entered a covenant that they could not break (v. 19).

Today very little acknowledgment is given to the seriousness of breaking covenants and promises. It is a sign of the last days (2 Timothy 3:3). Christians should never break an understanding made before God even though they may have made a mistake (Psalm 15:4). If a mistake is made that cannot be rectified we must pray for grace to glorify God nonetheless.

Joshua 10: 1-15

"The Lord said . . . threw them into a panic . . . threw down great stones . . . hearkened to the voice of a man" (vv. 8, 10, 11, 14, R.S.V.).

This day is recorded as the greatest ever (v. 14). The Lord was in it from the beginning. The call to help the Gibeonites came at night and was answered immediately. The army marched all night, fought all day and fought on during the miraculous extension of the day (vv. 9, 12). With all that man was enabled to do, God did even more (v. 11).

No matter how great the confederacy of evil that arrays itself against the people of God, victory in the strength of the Lord is theirs (Psalm 27:1), but lest they boast in their achievement the Lord demonstrates that without Him the job would not have been completely finished (v. 11; Psalm 44:3).

"Give me this mountain" (v. 12).

Every Israelite was allocated a place in the land. God had apportioned and reserved a place for them. Caleb had been promised a particularly difficult land, a mountain where giants lived. He was one of the two oldest of the people, being eighty-five years of age, at least twenty years older than the rest of the male population. This did not deter him from occupying his God-given inheritance, nor did it encourage him to ask for an easier assignment. He was confident that he could conquer the mountain and the giants because God was with him (v. 12).

Some Christians never discover what is their inheritance in Jesus. They spend their time wishing for what others have. Make the most of what God has given you and He will multiply it for His glory (Matthew chapter 25).

Sunday, January 16th

Joshua 23: 1-16

"Else if ye do in any wise go back" (v. 12).

Part of Joshua's final message to Israel was a warning against backsliding. To go back would mean a denial of all that God had done for them. Such backsliding could be avoided by obedience to God's Word (v. 6), by stringent regulation of their relationships with the people of the land (v. 7), and by taking heed to their spiritual lives (v. 11).

Backsliding can always be traced to a neglect of God's Word and our spiritual state and is often accompanied by a fraternising with those who are of this world. To backsliders the Lord is gracious, loving them still and desirous of healing their backsliding (Jeremiah 3:22).

A letter to Bwana Ron

It is a cold morning at Kikilo. I stand in the doorway of my room. A woman strolls by polishing her teeth with an mswaki (a twig of the toothbrush tree). The pastors are singing their breakfast grace. Pastor Paulo's children are chasing the dinner. He runs, he soars, but all in vain. I hear the squawks of capture. Perhaps it is that one who wakes us up so early. I hope so! Here comes a bowl of eggs from Esther; "vintage," I think. "Friers!" I decide.

"Hodi"—four muffled ladies approach, only their bright eyes showing. Grandma, their leader, wants to send a letter to Bwana Ron. She said, "My name is Mariumu, but Bwana Ron would remember me as Mando. In 1953 I came to Kikilo church to hear the first missionary. I could not stand the things he said. They went into my head, all against our customs and beliefs. A shetani came into me and I got drunk for three days to wash the matter out of my mind. I vowed I would never go to Kikilo again. But then Bwana Ron continued to come to our village and my children turned to Yesu."

"Tell me about yourself!" said I.

"I am the second wife of Bara. He divorced his first one and took a third one, who soon died. We followed our tribal customs in all matters: sacrificing to the dead, placating the spirits, and seeking from the Mtambuzi (diviner) the reason for the death of one of my children. I found no satisfaction or peace until a year ago. It was then I took Yesu into my heart. My husband, too, has been converted and chose the name of Musa when he was baptised. Tell Bwana Ron. I know he will be so glad. Tell him Zakayo is now the evangelist in charge at Siropo," she explained.

So, Pastor Ron Gull, here is your letter from Mariumu (Mando). I send too the greetings of many more at Kikilo who still remember you, Betty and the children.

The hush of the hills

by Philip E. Streeter

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ALEXANDRA PARK, BELFAST

"The mountains shall bring peace to the people" (Psalm 72 : 3).

Lord, I heard the call of moorland and mountain today.

Like You, I wanted the companionship of the hills

Far away from loud and fierce voices.

How delightful, how glorious to be alive!

Here on the summit I am one with air, earth and sky.

Standing on my toes I can reach and touch creamy clouds

That break apart to Dive across the heavens before the wind.

Distant ladders of light resting on the far-off sea
Lose themselves in the blue.

Mirrh pours down in the sunshine and a Myriad flowers breathe out holy incense around me.

Standing here,

I see things through angels' eyes that peer down—

Distant hills, alive and dancing in the heat,

A faraway lake, creased and full of broken sky reflections,

Cottages that crouch shyly beneath tangled trees

And drowsy fields girdled by winding lanes

Down which shadows march like spirits—

Your toys, Lord, the hills, the seas, the sun.

Lying dreamingly on this warm earth

I watch the swing of clouds from horizon to horizon and

Listen to the quiet voices of field and hill whispering their secrets.

You know what I mean, Lord!

There is a silence up here—

A silence that speaks if only one will listen,

A silence of mystic voices singing sad songs,

Perhaps the sad songs of your sufferings, Lord?

The grass around me sighs and sobs,

Pine harps moan in the breeze,

Flowers rustle, drowsed with the droning of bees and shrilling of crickets.

A tractor chatters to the soil in a far-off field.

Sheep grizzle.

A farm dog yelps at the sun and so

Melancholy is the cry of the plover wheeling, dipping, tumbling,

In the phantom silence of the cloudlands.

The afternoon glides by with dreamy eyes.

A lone rook oars across fading skies and Buttercups prepare to fall asleep

As I clamber down to earth again.

The inspired Word

"All scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Timothy 3 : 16).

THIS verse indicates that the various authors were inspired and that from innumerable utterances by prophets and teachers the Bible books are set apart as inspired.

1. Authorship

Many different men were involved, but behind them all was one Author. Men spoke and wrote with all their individual characteristics, but God inspired them (2 Peter 1 : 21).

2. Authenticity

The Bible is not subject to human error, for God is the Author. Human knowledge has not caught up with God's revelation. God is true, therefore His Word is true (John 17 : 17).

3. Authority

God does not discuss or suggest. When He speaks, heaven and earth shake. The Word proceeded out of His mouth and is powerful. The Scriptures make the claim that they are inspired; they are worthy of our humble obedience. God has spoken and all His authority is behind His Word. We receive the truth from the Word by the revelation of the Holy Spirit.

Church reports

CHIPPENHAM

Pastor : K. Phillips

Many churches have fallen victim to falling attendances and closed down, but in Chippenham the opposite has happened.

A carpet shop has closed down and plans are being made to turn it into a place of worship for the Elim Pentecostal Church.

The shop is on the Causeway—where many businesses have found the Bristol to London traffic too much for comfort.

The church—at present meeting in a social centre in Wood Lane—is only three years old. Chippenham borough planning committee have approved the change of use, but they insist on parking space and rear access before the shop can be used as a place of worship and children's playgroup centre.

There will be room for about sixty people by the time conversion has been carried out, but they are hoping for many more to turn up to the services because there are about 1,000 people living within five minutes walk of the new premises.

Regular attendance at the Sunday meetings is about forty, and some old established churches would be pleased to have that number. "We started off with just eight," said Mr. Phillips. The attraction, he said, was that people are really seeking the truth. "When they find the Lord's for real, they react quite favourably," he said.

They will also provide playgroup facilities and evenings for young people with a "good news boutique." However successful the Elim Pentecostal Church may be, they are pretty much an exception.

Evening Post.

EASTBOURNE

Pastor : J. Lancaster

As the prelude to a week of Billy Graham films, 100 members of the church marched through the town to the new shopping precinct in the centre of Eastbourne, where they held an open-air service. Carrying placards advertising the meetings and Gospel texts, the marchers made a considerable impact on the Saturday morning shopping crowds and were able to give away a large quantity of literature, including 400 copies of the evangelistic number of THE ELIM EVANGEL. It was the first time anything of this nature had been attempted in Eastbourne and the church was greatly encouraged by the helpfulness of local officials, especially the police, who provided an escort and even switched off traffic lights to enable the march to take place. Passers-by commented on the wide representation of age groups in the march, from teenagers, young married couples and their children, through to those in their eighties.

The same enthusiasm was shown by the church in preparing for the actual film crusade. Well-attended Sunday night counselling classes, the distribution of over 5,000 handbills, and a fortnight of early morning prayer meetings all played important parts in gearing the church for this special effort. The crusade itself was well attended and brought many new people into the church. Twelve people made a public response to the appeals and others who made no outward response are being followed up.

Photograph by Eastbourne Gazette.

MACCLESFIELD

Pastor : A. D. Leitch

The posters about the town had announced its coming, hundreds of invitation cards had been handed out, each one accompanied by an explanation and a personal invitation, and now the sign outside the church said : "Here." The Gospel Music Festival had arrived.

On the Tuesday young people came to hear groups from Liverpool and Chesterfield and Val Grieve, the speaker from Manchester, in a church building that had been modified by spotlights, coffee tables, decorations, etc., yet retained its atmosphere as a place of worship.

On Wednesday an Ashton-under-Lyne group and a talented local singer, David Bailey, sang. The accent was on personal contact and witness. The group and the soloist gave testimonies in song and word and the Crusaders used a questionnaire to discuss with and question all the young people in the meetings as to their relationship with God. Some good contacts were made.

This method of outreach has become an annual event in the Crusaders' calendar, but familiarity did not breed contempt. The preparations were backed by prayer and prayer meetings were held, mainly by older members of the church, while the meetings were in progress—a real source of power!

As a follow-up to the festival a barbecue was organised, when about fifty teenagers and twenties gathered around a fire at the house of friends of the church, then into the large garage where a group from the local Baptist church led the singing. The songs were interspersed with speakers, Pastor A. D. Leitch finishing with a short word and ending a full evening in prayer.

All the hard work and expense in organising the three days of intensive outreach culminated in success. The seed of the Gospel was fruitfully sown, the ground prepared and continually cared for by prayer. We leave the results with the Lord!

M. KENT.

LEITCHWORTH

Pastor : G. S. Hillman

The church business meeting merged with the golden wedding celebrations of Joseph and Paulina Awrotenko from the Ukraine proved a unique, enjoyable occasion. After tea, Joseph and Paulina, who speak little English, were presented with a card signed by all the members of the church and a handsome box of chocolates. Through an interpreter, Mrs. Sussman, a Latvian, and a faithful Christian, our dear friends praised God for all His kindness in leading them to Elim. "I have no relations in England, I am far from home in the Ukraine, but God has given us many brothers and sisters in our church," Joseph stated. He spoke in glowing terms of the kindnesses they had received from all, especially from our pastor. Our brother and his wife have endeared themselves to us all. He finds it difficult to communicate with us, but it is a thrill to hear him communicate with God as he pours out his heart in prayer in his mother tongue. Since his conversion nineteen years ago he has spent every Friday in prayer and fasting. We are proud to have these loyal members of Elim.

After the celebrations came reports from every section of the church. We have lost many friends through death and removal from the district, but others have joined the fellowship and it has been a record year for finance, particularly missionary giving. We look forward to a year of progress in spreading abroad the full gospel of our Lord and Saviour.

(MISS) C. V. BRADBURY.

FIGHT EVIL

This is the Last Will and Testament

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

D2546

Letter to the Editor

Dear Pastor Walker,

May I express my sincere appreciation for the timely contribution from the pen of our esteemed brother, Pastor Joseph Smith, namely "The Bible and dress," which appeared in a recent issue of our weekly magazine? For a considerable period I have been distressed at the absence of good taste and moderation as I have viewed the questionable and immodest apparel of some of the young and not so young in the ranks of our Pentecostal churches. The fashions of the world have invaded the precincts of the sanctuary; standards have been lowered without due protest. It is true that many have become the slaves to fashion, preferring the secular to the sacred, being prepossessed with the evanescence of worldly glamour.

With crystal clearness the precious word in 1 John 2:15-17 sounds the warning note, "Love not the world," for it will surely rob us of all that is wholesome, pure and healthy for our spiritual enrichment, progress and prosperity. Bible truth must be obeyed and appropriated, otherwise the weak vacillate, the wanton vaunt themselves and Satan smiles with satisfaction. May the flower of our youth be stirred to desire conformity to the image of Him who is altogether lovely. Thank you, brother Smith, for you welcome and so necessary admonition.

Yours in Christ,

(MRS.) J. BELLERBY.

Hereford.

to take the news led a young apprentice to ask why, and I had the joy of leading him to Jesus.

I had been off work for two weeks and there seemed no likelihood of my finding another job. I was beginning to feel a little perturbed. I had a long discussion with my wife about the situation and we came to the conclusion that perhaps we were not being positive enough in our prayers. We prayed on the Monday of the third week that I might have work by the end of that week, fully expecting that I would be starting a new job on the following Monday.

On the Tuesday I had a message to contact the directors of the firm which had made me redundant in April. On the Wednesday one of the directors took me to Hatfield for an interview for a job on contract with another firm. I passed the interview and was asked to start on the Friday—the end of the working week. The Lord had answered my prayer to the letter!

I do thank the Lord that at this place there is an active group of the Workers' Christian Fellowship; about half the group are members of Pentecostal churches. I have already enjoyed wonderful fellowship with these brethren and hope to continue there for some time, but I am quite ready to leave that with my wonderful Lord and Saviour!

IN April 1971 I was made redundant by the firm for which I had been working as a draughtsman. I was not too worried, as I had faith in the promise that "My God shall supply all your need." I felt an assurance that the Lord had another job ready for me. Two weeks later I started work again with another firm.

I had been with that firm only a few months when the news came that the particular factory where I was working was to close down. I was to be redundant again. Again I was not too worried. I praise the Lord that the way in which I was able

by J. Nelson Parr

13. The foundations

PERSONAL soul-winning must be the chief, leading object of our lives. Let me repeat the words of one of the greatest revivalists the world has ever known. May the Spirit of God burn them in letters of fire upon our hearts. Here are the words of Charles G. Finney: "Those serve their own gods who are not making the salvation of souls the great and leading object of their lives. This is the business which God sets His servants about and if any man calling himself a Christian and paying outward respect to religion be not doing this, as his business, as the leading and main object of his life, he is NOT SERVING JEHOVAH. He is 'serving his own gods.'" Read 2 Kings 17:33: "They feared the Lord and served their own gods."

Jesus Christ made personal soul-winning the leading and main object of His life. He said God has "sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised [crushed and broken down by calamity—Amplified Version]" (Luke 4:18). The Lord Jesus revealed His great longing and Divine commission for every Christian when He spoke to Saul of Tarsus, saying "I send thee [to the Gentiles] to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God" (Acts 26:17,18). This should be, and must be, the leading and main object of our lives. Until this is so we are not living according to the will of God and cannot possibly expect soul-winning success. This applies to every Christian, whether Bible school tutor, pastor, lecturer, teacher, church officer or church member.

We must be Holy Ghost desperadoes in our determination to win souls. Personal soul-winning must be priority number one. Jesus Christ was the world's greatest revolutionary. His methods filled the religious hierarchies with consternation and venomous hatred. He preached in the street, in the open air, at the seaside, in the wilderness. Every member of the Early Church was a revolutionary; "Daily in the temple and in every house they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ." William Carey was determined to win souls. He burned with a blazing desperation to win souls. Carey was a cobbler. He was continually closing his shop and going to village after village seeking to bring lost souls to the Saviour. One day a friend said to him, "Mr. Carey, I want to speak to you very seriously. If you only attended to your business more you would be all right and would soon get on and prosper, but as it is you are simply neglecting your business." Carey looked steadily at his friend and said, "Neglecting my business? My business is to extend the kingdom of God and I only repair shoes to pay the expenses." Carey was a Holy Ghost desperado possessed with holy determination to win souls. This will bring success in soul-winning and produce Spirit-filled prayer warriors. Jacob was mightily determined when he said, "I will not let Thee go except Thou bless me!" Jesus was desperately determined to lay down His life and suffer in order to stop the world going to hell. He prayed violently in Gethsemane, with strong crying and tears, and sweat as it were great drops of blood.

Desperate determination to win souls will always produce desperate prayer warriors. We had several prayer meetings every week and an all-night prayer meeting every month and occasionally a week of prayer and optional fasting. The Bible is full of instances of men and women who, when faced with defeat, stagnation or exceptional problems and impossible situations, became desperate prayer warriors. One need only mention Abraham, Jacob, Moses, Joshua, Elijah, Daniel, Jesus, Paul. Desperate praying produces desperate soul-winners.

Good news

BANTO got off the wall, went inside and sat on a stool at the back. He did not want to go down to the front so that the other people would see he had been crying.

Mr. English stood up in the pulpit and said: "My wife and I thank you so much for the lovely tea. We have been so happy here and now we must leave, but first I have something to say to you all. I am leaving Banto's father in charge of the church here. He will be your pastor. I want you all to help him as much as you can. Banto's mother will be in charge of the Sunday school. Now for the really good news. As I told you some time ago, the children in Great Britain have been saving up their pennies each week to give to missionary work. Last night I received a parcel from them, filled with all the things that they had bought with their money. There are a nice red cloth for the pulpit table, a big yellow vase for the Sunday school room and a box of pencils and crayons, twenty hymn books, so you won't have to share them now, and, best of all, a brand-new Bible for each one of you. I want you all to come to the pulpit as I call your name, so that I can give you your Bible."

Soon Mr. English called Banto's name. Banto could not get up to the pulpit fast enough! He did not care who saw that he had been crying. Now he was crying with happiness! Oh, how thrilled he was when Mr. English handed him his Bible. At last he had his very own Bible, the very thing he had always wanted.

He went back to his seat and opened the Bible. He could hardly read what was written on the cover of the Bible. He wiped his eyes with the sleeve of his shirt and read, "To Banto from the boys and girls in Great Britain. May God bless you."

When Banto went to bed that night he was no longer sad that Mr. English was leaving. Banto wanted all the children in the world to know of Jesus. He wished that there were hundreds of men like Mr. English, telling boys and girls all over the world the wonderful stories of Jesus. Banto stood at his window and looked out. "Somewhere out there," he said, "Mr. English will help other children to read and write, teach them hymns and choruses, help them to build a church like mine. When I grow up I will go to Great Britain to thank the boys and girls for my Bible. They do not know how happy they have made me."

Banto knelt by his bed and asked Jesus to bless all the missionaries and he thanked Jesus for his Bible.

Banto got into bed. He was happy. Now that he could write he would be able to send letters to Mr. English. Now that he could read he would be able to learn more of Jesus from his new Bible. Now that he had the Bible he could read for himself the stories of Daniel, Jonah, Joseph, David, the disciples . . . there was so much to read. He had a church now where he could go to sing and pray. There was a Sunday school where he could sing all the choruses Mr. English had taught him. His favourite would always be "Building up the temple" because isn't that just what Banto had helped to do? So many wonderful things had happened since he had met Mr. English. Best of all was that he knew Jesus.

Banto reached out, took his Bible from the cupboard, put it under his pillow, and fell asleep.

THE END

WHEN the new President of Pakistan came to power in the aftermath of the terrible war with India, he is reported to have said that he wished he had lived at another time. He said that his country, having had the more populous East Pakistan severed from it, was like the first chapter of Genesis. Despite all the pro—and anti—feelings, he surely must have gained the sympathy of many.

He must have felt like David when he wrote "Oh that I had wings, like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest" (Psalm 55:6). Mendelssohn's beautiful musical setting of this in his motet "Hear my prayer" has familiarised it to millions and it is often overlooked that David was near to despair because of fear and the treachery of his enemies.

President Bhutto's task is a daunting one. It must worry the world because of his country's friendship with Red China. To contemplate the possibilities of India's powerful armed forces backed by Russia's might amid the dissipation of many of the prized dreams of the Islamic Pakistanis must be too awesome for us to realise. We can understand his wanting to live in another generation.

The Christian can have similar sentiments in this post-Christian era, as sociologists increasingly call it. The fascinations facing our children, the diabolical manipulations of our adolescents by worldly vested interests, the fiscal problems brought by over-production of consumer goods, the sheer indifference of most Britons—all these and more present a formidable prospect to evangelists.

We do well to read the whole of Psalm 55. If we reckon without God we are doomed to abject failure. We are as sheep among wolves, no match for the machinations of evil. How marvellous, then, are David's declarations of faith: "The Lord shall save me," "He shall hear my voice," "God shall hear," "He shall sustain," "I will trust in Thee."

God is the source of authority, power and victory. We do not need doves' wings to escape, but we certainly need the power of the Dove with which to fight—and win!

Conversation Pieces

IN my travels up and down the country I have been impressed and blessed by the fellowship of the ministers and members of our churches. The conversations which I have enjoyed often contained some stories which have lodged in my memory. I thought it would be good to share some of them with the readers of this column. I trust they will bless you, and/or challenge you.

I was in Paisley staying with one of the deacons when he paid tribute to one of our churches by telling me about one of their members called Robert Wieland. This brother met with a very severe accident on the motorway and was rushed to a hospital in Darlington. The pastor of our church was contacted and he and his people visited Robert every day of the week and took him communion every week for six months. That is a record of which any church could be proud. Darlington has shown us all an example of true Christian love which we do well to repeat if the opportunity arises. Congratulations to you all! Having done it for Robert, you did it for the Lord and He will bless you for it.

Another story was told me by an Irishman in Scotland. In the Apsley Street church, Belfast, there used to be a great soul-winner called Jackie Reed. I believe he is now in America. One night this brother was singing a solo, Redemption Songs, number 816. The chorus goes like this: "I was poor as the poorest, outcast from the fold." As our brother was singing this he looked through the door of the church and saw standing on the pavement a well-known woman of the streets. Immediately he left the platform, continuing to sing as he went outside. Putting his arm around this woman, he brought her back into the church and led her to the Lord. In her testimony afterwards she said it was the first time anybody had shown her real love. You know it is still true what another hymn from Redemption Songs proclaims: "Do you know the world is dying for a little bit of love?" We must not only go and tell them, but we must love them as Jesus loved us, even unto the end of Himself (John 13 : 1).

I was the preacher at a rally in Coatbridge. A group of young men were called upon to sing. Before they did so they gave a word of testimony. They had been invited to take part in a meeting, but they said that it was like being on the moon—there was no atmosphere! Soon, however, singing about Jesus changed all this and there was a good atmosphere and much blessing. There must have been a great atmosphere on the day of Pentecost and in the church at Antioch, for there the Holy Spirit brought unity and love to them all. We must cultivate this atmosphere so that when people are in our company they will feel the presence of the Lord with us.

A story about two sisters, one six and the other five, illustrates how children grasp more than we think. We grown-ups forget that children have something built into their make-up which enables them to understand what they cannot explain.

Alison's family like to go camping. They are well equipped with airbeds to sleep on. One night she pulled the valve out of the bed and it was deflated. Nothing attempted, nothing won, she set about blowing it up by mouth. Daddy saw her and said, "Don't do that! Your damp breath will perish the material." Alison turned to her sister Sally and said, "What does perish mean?" Whereupon Sally replied, "It hasn't got everlasting life."

That little girl spoke a profound truth as found in 1 John 2 : 17, "And the world passeth way . . . but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

The Lord bless the whole Elim family throughout the world in 1972!

A. A. BIDDLE.

TWO of the greatest, most irresistible testimonies to the deity of Jesus Christ were made by two of Christ's apostles, Simon Peter and Thomas. In answer to Christ's question, "Whom say ye that I am?" Peter replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus answered, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 16:15-17).

When Thomas was invited by Jesus Christ to touch His wound prints Thomas replied, "My Lord and my God" (John 20:28). Simon Peter made his statement before the death of Jesus Christ, Thomas made his after the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The Saviour was and is no superstar. One can understand why Simon Peter wrote the final words in his Second Epistle (2 Peter 3:18): "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ"—an acknowledgment of the incomparable Christ, the Divine, perfect God-man.

Let us compare truth with error, the ever-Divine Christ of God with the spirit of antichrist of the last days (1 John 2:18).

"One of the great paradoxes of show business is occurring in the U.S.A., where a British work, 'Jesus Christ—Superstar,' a folk opera, is depicting the last seven days of Christ. This has been spurned in Britain, but is making a fortune for its composers and lyricist and the British company that controls it" (Daily Telegraph). I quote from both the Daily Mail and the Daily Telegraph: "Standing room only for 'Jesus' pop opera." Two young musical Britons, Tom Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber, wrote the work, which claims to present Christ as seen through the eyes of the youth of today.

What was He then—a revolutionary, a magician? The Daily Mail said: "Top of the pops—with a magic show that sends the fans wild. For three years He has had this fantastic magic show on the road . . . claims to be born of a virgin mother. The rumour is that He is a chippy—a carpenter of Nazareth. He would be up to some yokel, putting His hand on his shoulder, look into his eyes and say, 'Pack your toothbrush, you're coming with me.' He opens the magic show with a love-and-peace routine and goes on into a medicine man act. When they became hungry and thirsty He had the great conjuring trick where 'Superstar' transformed Himself into a supermarket by introducing bread and fish seemingly out of the air. The slender figure, the day He did that, had 5,000 fans on His hands."

Jesus Christ Superstar

"And Thomas said, my Lord and my God"

by L. C. Quest

These are some of the sayings or quotations by an adaptation, written by Victor Davies, of the Daily Mail, in four articles. (I quote from one.)

In the Daily Telegraph John Barber writes: "Christ on the boards and the new American rock musical 'Godspell.' This will be in London. It is an adaptation of Dennis Potter's 'Son of Man,' a crude and violent dramatisation of the same subject. Meanwhile, 'Jesus Christ—Superstar' on Broadway leaves out Christ's Divinity and resurrection, but seems to present Christ as an inspired hippy with a pallid softness." This kind of error presented in such a way in rhyme and rhythm or rock and roll is a tragic misquotation and error which is not Christlike, but the spirit of antichrist of which the Scripture warns concerning the last days (1 John 2:18; 2 Thessalonians 2:3).

Jesus Christ is not God and man—He is the God-man, "God manifested in the flesh" (1 Timothy 3:16). Throughout the Bible Christ is represented as a person having two natures, divine and human. As God, He did not enter a human body or join himself to man, He became a man. As the Word He became flesh (John 1:14)—the unity of two natures in one person. "Great is the mystery of godliness," wrote Paul to Timothy. Jesus Christ is the beginning, middle and end of the great Book, the Bible. In the days of His flesh He said to the religious, "Search the Scriptures . . . they . . . testify of Me" (John 5:39). As in Hebrews 10:7, "Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me)," "the book" is the Old Testament, "Lo, I come" is in the New Testament.

Christ is the theme of prophecy, portraiture and preaching. He said, "I and My Father are one" and "Before Abraham was, I am." As the tar ?

and said unto Him,
—John 20 : 28.

Son of man on the cross, He cried, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" As the Son of God, He prayed, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my Spirit." As the triumphant, scarred, conquering God-man, He cried "It is finished." Yes, He died in strength. He died voluntarily. He gave up the ghost, literally "let go His Spirit." The Divine Lord was sent by God the Father as Saviour, mediator, the servant of the Supreme. The peerless, precious, priceless God-man was born, lived and died and rose again contrary to the laws of life! No Superstar, He was crucified, died and was buried according to the Divine plan (Isaiah 53). He rose again punctually, orderly and triumphantly.

To accomplish such a glorious salvation for mankind God erected a bridge of four spans over the chasm made by sin. Each span is an integral part of the whole, not just the last seven days of Christ as presented by "Jesus Christ—Superstar": the incarnation, the crucifixion, the resurrection, and the ascension and exaltation. For about thirty-three years the well-beloved Son, who through all eternity had been in the bosom of the Father, left His home in glory to be born from the womb of a virgin. In infancy He startled a king, in boyhood puzzled the doctors, in manhood ruled the course of nature, in death rose triumphantly, this peerless Man; He is not a Superstar, but the incomparable Christ. In His own words "I am He that liveth and was dead: and behold I am alive for evermore. Amen."

The only begotten Son is omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent, not to be imitated or portrayed, but to be worshipped and adored, the One in whom to have faith, the One to love. Oh that Paul's experience might be ours: "Christ liveth in me."—Christ in me, the hope of glory! ☺

Daily Thoughts on Bible Characters, by Harry Foster. Published by Victory Press. Price 95p, postage and packing 8p extra. Also available as a paperback, price 45p, postage and packing 5p extra.

This book of daily readings is different from the average devotional book both in content and in style. The author has a penetrating insight into the characters of the Bible and gives them a contemporary setting. Here are people who are of like passions as ourselves and in a few short sentences the reader is enabled to see in another man or woman the problems, mistakes, and triumphs that are their experience, and to profit thereby. The portions will comfort, challenge, stimulate thought and provide a large amount of information about the characters and the situations in which they are found.

It is easy to read, down to earth and factual.

The Living Bible, published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., 4a Balham Station Road, London, S.W.12. Price £3, postage and packing 25p extra. (Paperback edition, in conjunction with Hodder and Stoughton, price £1, postage and packing 6p extra).

This beautifully produced paraphrase of the whole Bible by Dr. Kenneth Thompson has been launched with a great deal of publicity on radio and television and in the newspapers. It is an American production and the printers are to be congratulated on a really first-class job as regards the bound edition, judging by the copy we had for review.

Many, especially young people, have been helped and blessed by Living Letters, Living Prophecies, Living Gospels, etc., and they will welcome the appearance of the whole Bible.

Provided it is remembered that this is a paraphrase and, in this edition at any rate, with the background of American as opposed to English scholarship, this fresh approach to the Bible will prove to be of great use and blessing.

IF YOU WERE I AND I WERE YOU

If you had been born in a country dark,
And I in a Christian land,
And you did not know of a Saviour dear,
Reaching out a nail-pierced hand,
Inviting to come "whosoever will,"
What would you think I should do?
If truth so precious were mine to impart,
And you were I, and I were you?

If I could read the precious Word,
Which teaches of the way;
If I could hear the church bells ring,
And I knew of a Sabbath day,
And a Father dear, who answers prayer,
Would I be loyal to Him and true,
If the message were not carried to all—
If you were I, and I were you?

Two thousand years have passed away;
The story to us is untold;
Men, women and children dying each day,
May we not be sheep of His fold?
Oh, haste with the message, precious, sweet;
Is His mercy but for the few?
To us, the heathen in darkness, do
As you'd have us do to you.

AN OUTLINE

The daily half-dozen

"EVERY day the people shall go out and gather a day's supply" (Exodus 16 : 4, N.E.B.).

(1) Daily bread (Matthew 6 : 11). (2) Daily Bible (Acts 17 : 11). (3) Daily cross (Luke 9 : 23). (4) Daily dying (1 Corinthians 15 : 31). (5) Daily exhorting (Hebrews 3 : 13). (6) Daily trust (Matthew 6 : 34).

*Day by day and with each passing moment,
Strength I find to meet my trial here.
Trusting in my Father's wise bestowment,
I've no cause for worry or for fear.
He whose heart is kind beyond all measure,
Gives unto each day what He deems best,
Lovingly, its part of pain or pleasure,
Mingling toil with peace and rest.*

A QUOTATION

Christian unity

Would that all the party names and unscriptural phases and forms which have divided the Christian world were forgotten and that we all might agree to sit down together, as humble loving disciples, at the feet of our common Master to hear His Word, to imbibe His Spirit, and to transcribe His life in our own.

JOHN WESLEY.

A POEM

Me and the Lord

The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do.
I said, "You git somebody else, or wait till I git thru."
I don't know how the Lord came out—no doubt He got along,
But I felt kind of sneaking, like I knew I'd done God wrong.
One day I needed the Lord, needed Him right away,
But He never answered me at all, and I could hear Him say
Down in my accusin' heart, "Child, I've got so much to do,
You git somebody else, or wait till I git thru!"

Now when the Lord has a job for me, I never try to shirk ;

I drop whatever I have on hand and do the good Lord's work.

And my affairs can run along, or wait till I get thru.

Nobody else can do the work the good Lord has for you !

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. COLEMAN

Intercession

IN writing this column I am conscious that I have written little or nothing on intercession. My reason for this is that I know so little about it. So much that we call intercession is not intercession at all, but simply prayer.

I turned to the best Book in the world, the Bible, and was surprised to find that "intercession" appears only a few times and "intercessor" only once. God wondered, we are told in Isaiah 59 : 16 that there was no intercessor. God could find no man, so His own arm brought salvation. God looked for an intercessor, a man to stand in the gap, but He could not find one man.

Intercession means to plead or entreat on behalf of another. Jesus Christ is the great Intercessor and so is the Holy Spirit in God's children.

It could be our privilege to be intercessors, to plead the cause of men before God at the throne of mercy. It might cost us very much to stand in the gap.

Two aged sisters, week after week, month after month, pleaded on behalf of the young people of their beloved Hebrides. God not only saw, but sent the Hebrides revival. God saw a man pleading for a church in a certain city, which once had a great congregation and had been a great evangelical witness in the city, but only one family remained. They had no minister, the Sunday school had closed and services each Sunday morning and evening attracted only six people. God saw a man pleading and He touched the heart of an evangelist to go to that city and today that church is flourishing again.

God is looking for intercessors who will stand in the gap. This requires hard work, with no pay in earthly currency, but with a rich reward in heaven. What about you? What about me?

FROM T. H. STEVENSON

AS 1972 gets into its stride the major churches in Great Britain will begin to assess and publish their numerical strength and, unless there has been a sudden change, each will report a steady decline. The exception will most probably be the Roman Catholic Church, but, even if their sheep increase, there is a professed annual dramatic decrease in the supply of shepherds for their flocks.

We need not wait for figures, however, to ask about facts. What is wrong with the churches? When the Dean of St. Paul's welcomes professed Anglicans who are members of the infamous musical "Hair" to celebrate the third anniversary of their blasphemous, obscene show by receiving Communion, and the remaining members of the cast to sing five of the show's songs instead of hymns, many must ask "What is wrong with the Church of England?" Not even the fact that Princess Anne chose to visit this show twice gives it a label of decency. As the Daily Telegraph summed it up: "A devout Christian, considering it in its context of any Christian Church, must regard the show as lewd, blasphemous and immoral."

What is wrong with Methodism? A Methodist minister has published a book to help people in their prayer life. In the city where I live one would require to visit the Anglican S.P.C.K. shop to get the book and then proceed to the local Roman Catholic church to purchase a set of rosary beads, because he writes that in your prayers you need the beads to give you a kind of "count down" while you seek to make the upthrust to the heavenlies!

What is going wrong with the Baptists when the esteemed Rev. Beasley-Murray, Principal of Spurgeon's College, resigns as chairman of the Baptist Union Council and numerous Baptist ministers have been expected to leave the Baptist Church? The important question is the deity of Christ, because Rev. Michael Taylor, Principal of Manchester Baptist College, proclaimed in a major address that Jesus was an ordinary man and that God's presence in Him was no different from His presence in any ordinary man. The Irish Baptist Church is part of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and I have often wondered how this section, which each year shows a slight numerical increase, continues in alliance with the Baptist Union, which is part of the World Council of Churches. Will this latest event rouse the staunchly evangelical Irish Baptists?

I have no space to ask "What is wrong with the British Pentecostal Churches?" but a feature from The Observer entitled "The new Britons" mentions that among the West Indians alone in England there are at least 100 Pentecostal congregations, surely a little indication that it could be shown that we are on the right road.

*May I watch for ways to cheer
The weary and the sad ;
May I make their path more clear,
Their troubled hearts more glad.*

*For such service fit me, Lord,
Give me the tender heart ;
Quick response to every word
Thy wisdom shall impart.*

W. H. CHAMINGS.

Wonders !

"Open Thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law" (Psalm 119 : 18).

DR. ALEXANDER gives a more precise rendering: "Uncover mine eyes and I will look—wonders out of Thy law!" The last clause is said to be an exclamation after the covering had been removed.

Many complain that they get nothing from the Bible. It cannot be for lack of treasure in the Book, for thousands of volumes yearly come forth to display the gems of truth found by men of God. There is need to ask God to cause the veil to fall from our eyes. Only the Holy Spirit can take away the dimness of our spiritual vision and enable us to see the hidden wonders of the Bible.

Christian Therapy

THE long winter nights are with us now and for people who suffer from insomnia the hours of darkness must pass very slowly. Worry, fear, tension and sorrow can cause sleeplessness and make night even more intolerable than the day.

An article in a newspaper tells how the bedtime chat beat the sleeping pills in a geriatric hospital. Two thoughtful, sympathetic male nurses talked to their patients about their worries and they found that this bedtime chat helped most of the patients to sleep soundly. Now the number of pills used in six geriatric wards has dropped from 840 a week to fifteen, surely positive proof that people need to unburden their hearts to a sympathetic friend.

We are not meant to go through life keeping a permanent stiff upper lip. There is a wonderful sense of release when we relax and tell our problems to a friend who cares. In these days of rush and bustle and with the time-wasting pursuit of television viewing and the predominance of sport and entertainment, few people have the time or the inclination to listen to others who are in need of a confidant. This is where the Christian can score. I believe that there is a real ministry on these lines. In hospital wards Christian nurses have a unique opportunity to share their patients' problems and to a lesser degree so do the visitors.

In church life this ministry should be in operation continually. Among neighbours and unsaved friends the Christian should always make time to be a sympathetic listener, even against his or her natural inclinations. I heard a talk on the radio telling of the success of group therapy for widows. One lady told of her grief, shock, bewilderment and feelings of guilt over the death of her husband and how even her own brother was unable to understand or communicate in any way to lift her sorrow. "If only he had put his arms round me," she said, "but all he did was to give me a glass of sherry!"

This brings me to another aspect of sympathy—the loving touch bestowed by the hand or arm of someone who really identifies with another's need. Surely this is where Jesus excelled. We read of His gracious touch when He healed the sick and of those needing deliverance desperately seeking to touch the Lord, to have the comfort of physical contact. "Whithersoever He entered into villages or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets and besought Him that they might touch if it were but the border of His garment." "Besought" means "to call to one's side." Jesus always responded and took time to listen, to touch and heal. The ministry of compassion and healing is twofold: willingness to listen with concern to those who bring their problems and heart-breaks, helping them if need be to find forgiveness and comfort, and then to lay hands on those seeking healing for their bodies through prayer.

George Bennett in The Heart of Healing writes: "The touch of Christ, or the laying on of hands given in His name does two things: first, His sharing in the sufferings of our common humanity; second, it conveys His divine authority over all the powers of evil that afflict us." We can play a vital part in the extension of Christ's ministry on earth, not in our own strength or wisdom, but by the power of His Spirit working through us. We rejoice in the scope and tenderness of His glorious ministry (Luke 4:18). John the apostle links us with that anointed ministry. As our love is perfected and we dwell in God, "As He is, so are we in this world" (1 John 4:17).

*Saviour, let Thy law of love
Be written on my heart;
May the Spirit from above

WHY ?

THIS is the question asked by children and you are surprised by their ability to keep it up! When you have answered one "Why?" —as you think—to everybody's satisfaction, out it comes again, "Yes, but why?"

They are not alone in this, however, and to help you answer some of the questions which arise during personal witnessing, door-to-door work, etc., we have prepared a series of pamphlets under the very title, "Why?"

Current titles are: "The Baptism in the Holy Spirit," "Church Membership," "Divine Healing," "Salvation," "Prayer," "Baptism" and "The Second Advent."

Order from Grenehurst Press, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, please, sending cash with order. Prices are: 100 for 50p (postage and packing 10p extra), 250 for £1 (p. and p. 25p), 500 for £2.25 (p. and p. 30p), and 1,000 for £4 (p. and p. 35p). You can order assorted titles in multiples of twenty-five.

Divine Love

Walk among mankind and show to them
His love,
For there is no other love like His.
The smallest spiritual affection is a portion of His universal love.
Do not presume that your love will effect change in a brother's life ;
It is His powerful, transforming love only that gives life.
You have no true love that isn't His—
Be an instrument of His love.
Take His love and be used for the glory of
His name,
For His name is love, His character is pure
love,

He is love and power and life.
Let His love motivate your inner conceptions and conscious thoughts.
Let His love be evident in your conversations with mankind.
Let His love flow through your actions.
Let His love guide your footsteps through the world.
Live by His love and you will love with His love.
Receive His boundless love, the power of
His blood and everlasting life,
For He bled for love of you.

Joshua 24 : 1-15

"Fear the Lord and serve Him" (v. 14).

It would appear that some of the people of Israel, while following Joshua and their leaders, secretly served the gods of Ur and of Egypt. They were not willing to make a definite commitment to either side. Joshua's recital of the history of the Lord's dealings with His chosen people from the day Abram was called out of Ur stressed the power and might of Jehovah compared with the futile efforts of other gods. Such a God as Jehovah demanded the absolute allegiance of His followers to the point that all other gods were disowned.

Jesus stressed that such is still the demand of God, for no man can serve two masters. Joshua's challenge is as fresh now as the day it was uttered: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

Tuesday, January 18th

Joshua 24 : 16-33

"And Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua" (v. 31).

One can never overestimate the far-reaching effects of one man's life and testimony. As long as Joshua lived his manner of living affected the lives of all Israel, influencing the people to serve the Lord. This influence continued long after his death. All who had been closely connected with his ministry were so moulded by his character that, as long as they lived, Joshua's influence remained and the people served God (v. 31).

The constant prayer of every Christian should be that those with whom we are in contact will so sense the power and presence of God in our living that they will be attracted to follow and serve Him.

Galatians 1 : 1-10

"Do I speak to please men?" (v. 10).

One of the greatest temptations of the servant of God is the natural desire to be popular. This temptation can be manifest in the tendency to water down an unpalatable truth in the presence of some dignitary or the sacrifice of a principle to gain acceptance with the crowd. The true child of God must expect a measure of unpopularity. He should be suspicious of the force of his testimony when all men speak well of him (2 Timothy 3:12; Luke 6:26). Like Peter and the Early Church, "we must obey God rather than men, rejoicing that we are counted worthy to suffer dishonour for the name" (Acts 5:29, 41).

Galatians 1 : 11-24

"To reveal his Son in me" (v. 16).

Paul claimed that God's special purpose in saving him was to show forth Jesus. God particularly demonstrated in his life the patience and longsuffering of Jesus (1 Timothy 1:16). The Psalmist declared that the praises of God would be shown forth to all generations by His people (Psalm 79:13). How much and what aspect of God's mighty work in salvation is seen through our lives by those around us?

"Let the beauty of Jesus be seen in me."

Friday, January 21st

Galatians 2 : 1-10

"That the truth of the gospel might continue with you" (v. 5).

Paul was fighting to establish before the Christians of Galatia his position as an apostle, which was recognised by the leaders of the Church at Jerusalem. It was not an attempt at self-justification with a view to retaining authority among the Galatians for jealous or selfish ends. His contention had but one motive: he desired that those who sought to bring God's people into bondage should be thwarted and that the truth of the Gospel would triumph. He stubbornly defended the faith (vv. 4, 5).

Truth is ever assailed by the enemies of the Gospel. Satan attacks on every side. We must resist him and he will flee. It is time to fight for the faith and freedom!

Saturday, January 22nd

Galatians 2 : 11-21

"Not I, but Christ" (v. 20).

For Paul the death of Christ on the cross of Calvary meant so much. The old, unregenerate "I" was crucified with Christ. At one time Paul had placed so much reliance on his personal achievement in the works of the law. He came to realise that justification was not achieved thus (v. 16), but by faith in Christ who died instead of him. He also realised that death of self opened a glorious possibility in that Christ, who died in his stead, could also live instead of Him. He could exchange his puny life for Christ's divine life—dead to self, alive to God. "Live out in me thy life, O mighty Saviour" is a prayer only realised as self is crucified with Christ.

Sunday, January 23rd

"Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law" (v. 13).

The original intention of the law was to bring life (v. 12). The failure occurred in that there was no one who could continue in all that was commanded, so that all, having sinned and come short of the glory of God, were under the curse of the law (v. 10). Abraham, in spite of his sin, had found favour in the sight of God by his faith. By becoming a curse for all men, Jesus redeemed all men from the curse of the law and the blessing enjoyed by Abraham—favour with God—is available to all by faith in Christ (vv. 7, 13).

Dreams or realities ?

A NEWSPAPER recently told of a boy being savagely attacked by a supposedly tame puma. My mind turned to the beautiful picture presented by Isaiah 11:6 of domestic and wild animals living together in peace and of children playing happily with them. The vicious nature of that puma made it appear that Isaiah was out of touch with reality and that what he wrote was a lovely but impossible dream, a fairy story that could never come true.

Isaiah seems to have been given to dreaming impossible dreams, for in 2:4 he tells of nation not lifting up sword against nation nor learning war any more, and in 11:9 he says that they shall not hurt or destroy in any part of the world, but everybody knows that there is always war, for nations seem incapable of living together in peace, that individual men and women are constantly hurting one another and that on every hand we see violence and wickedness. We must ask ourselves, therefore, if the Bible is just a Book of worthless sentiment, a child's dream world or a drug addict's illusion.

If it were not for one startling fact we could very well dismiss the Bible in this way—and that fact is Jesus Christ! The Bible makes it clear that the visions of Isaiah and the other prophets will be fulfilled when the Lord Jesus comes again to rule over all the earth. His life on earth shows that He is able to do what Isaiah foretold. We are told that Jesus, during a time of temptation, was with the wild beasts, not in a state of fear, but in a fellowship which exists between the Creator and His creatures. We are shown also that the disciples let down their fishing nets in response to the command of the Lord Jesus and they had a remarkable catch of fish. On another occasion the Lord Jesus rode into the noisy city of Jerusalem sitting on the unbroken colt of an ass, surely a miracle! This authority over wild and domestic creatures extended to mankind also. He called busy men to leave their work and follow Him and they did. A word of authority restored the violent Gadarene madman to peace and sanity. When His enemies came to arrest Him, He spoke two words, "I am," and they were at once prostrated before Him—there can be no doubt that they could never have taken Him had He not willingly given Himself into their hands!

Isaiah 11:6; 2:4

By FRANK LAVENDER
Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Gloucester

In the sad story of Cain the Lord showed a distinct likeness between the violence of human sin and the viciousness of wild beasts. Cain was thinking murderously of his brother Abel when the Lord gave a direct warning that sin was crouching at his door; that is, as a lion crouching to spring on its prey, so sin was crouching to destroy Cain. This human sin makes Isaiah's words seem to be ridiculous to people today, because we see how sin is everywhere crouching, springing, destroying men and women, bringing them into bondage and carrying them to eternal ruin. This same sin is threatening to destroy you and me, for each of us is included in the declaration of God's Book that "all have sinned," all have missed the mark.

I thank God, however, that there is good news for us all because One has overcome the violence of sin for us. The Lord Jesus certainly died a violent death on the cross, but His death was for the sake of others; it was for you and me. By His death He has destroyed the destructive power of sin for those who trust Him and His victory was proved when He rose from the dead. He is the living One who offers salvation and life to all. We can be saved from the power of sin by believing Him. We need no longer fear a lost, Godless, Christless eternity; we can know instead peace, joy and security through the forgiveness of our sins. The old hymn truly says: "He died that we might be forgiven, He died to make us good"; I cannot explain how it happens, but I know from experience that it works! He will save you from sin and destruction if you will let Him. As surely as He will one day bring peace to the whole earth, so surely He will bring peace to your life now if you will trust Him.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The age of the Earth

A second study

by J. T. BRADLEY

(SECRETARY-GENERAL)

IN the context of the age of the earth, moon landings and space exploration, the following quote presents startling implications: "It is known, however, that the region above about eighty miles [above the surface of the earth] is very hot, over 1,000° F. and possibly rising to 3,000° F. and is in fact called the thermosphere for this reason." 3,000° F. is hot—the melting point of wrought iron is 2,732° F., 1,500° C. Extraordinarily, this statement was made apparently as late as 1957 in D. R. Bates's Composition and Structure of the Earth and its Atmosphere, and is referred to by H. M. Morris and John C. Whitcomb in their book The Genesis Flood, published by Evangelical Press. Of course, nobody had been up there up to the time this statement had been made, so how "it was known" no one knows! The theory of this red hot envelope's existence was deduced or inferred, but our quote shows the danger of deduction and inference without the support and confirmation of observation and experience.

Had the thermosphere been only half the maximum temperature indicated above it would still have been red hot; space capsules would have melted in flight. The heat generated by friction with the atmosphere on a space vehicle's re-entry is a different matter and can be, and is, taken care of by the provision of a heat shield.

Now that men have been there the scientists' "it is known" is demonstrated to be ignorance. Man's visit to the spot has shattered the inference of a red hot or white hot thermosphere; observation and experience have taught us differently. If geophysicists and astro-physicists can be so wrong about a supposed super-heated envelope only eighty miles up, we ask how far away from truth may they be in their speculations about events that happened thousands of millions of years ago, or of conditions millions of light years away from us?

Moon exploration has also exploded another fallacy of science. We recall the considerable discussion prior to the first moon landings about the moon's suspected dust layer. The assumption that a blanket of dust covered the surface of the moon sprang from the belief that the planets of the solar system as they sweep through space gather up myriads of meteoric dust particles. The earth's atmosphere burns up the dust that earth sweeps up, hence only the very hugest meteorites arrive on the earth. However, the moon, having no atmosphere, collects the meteoric dust on its surface.

As the moon has been sweeping through space for some 6,000,000,000 years, so we are told, the lowest estimate of dust depth was guessed at some thirty to forty feet. Thirty to forty miles would have been as reasonable an estimate. On the spot investigation has discovered three to four inches of dust.

The great question is "What went wrong?" Two possibilities present themselves: either that meteoric dust is an astronomers' figment of imagination or that the supposed age of the universe is supposition and nothing more. The discovery of only three to four inches of dust on the moon's surface explodes completely the idea of a moon and a universe incredibly old. An unprejudiced interpretation of this new discovery would lead to our acceptance of a world and a universe not incredibly old, as science states, but incredibly young, as the Bible states.

One conclusion may be confidently drawn from the exploding of the hypotheses mentioned above of an exceedingly hot envelope surrounding the earth and of a huge depth of dust on the moon—that at least an observer's being on the spot is necessary to absolute proof of any theory about the size of the universe and its age, and of events supposed to have happened countless ages ago.

My testimony of healing

by Roger Smith

I WAS not brought up in a Christian home, but in a religious environment. My family were Church of England but they let me attend a Methodist Sunday school. At the age of ten I was handed a tract and invited to attend a Salvation Army film service. After attending the Army meetings for a few months I accepted Christ as my personal Saviour.

For the next eight years I tried to live the Christian life, but at the age of eighteen I began to drift away from the Lord and became spiritually cold.

At the age of twenty I received my call-up papers for the forces. I enrolled for six years in the North Staffordshire and Kent Yeomanry. I was stationed abroad for four years in the Middle East and for two years in Italy. I had the privilege of visiting the Holy Land. This left a deep impression on me. I could not help but think of the days that I had spent in Sunday school and the stories I had heard about Jesus.

At the end of the 1939-45 war I was demobbed and came home to Silverdale. I had been married for four years and my wife's mother invited us to attend the Elim Pentecostal Church in Silverdale. While attending the church I rededicated my life to Christ. I was baptised in water on Easter Monday, 1949, in the Elim Pentecostal Church, Longton. I was determined to serve the Lord and to follow Him.

On January 10th, 1954, I met with a serious accident at work. I slipped two discs, twisted my spine, and ripped all my left lumbar muscle. I attended the hospital for three months, after which they put me in a plaster jacket. From then on it meant that I had to visit the hospital regularly and wear steel supports. This went on for two years. In 1958 I was given deep radium treatment and put in another plaster jacket. I was unable to work regularly because of the pain, losing three months' pay in a year. My condition did not improve. In 1966, after seeing a second specialist, I was taken into the Orthopaedic Hospital in Stoke-on-Trent, where I was put on traction to stretch the spine. A number of X-rays were taken, which revealed that I was suffering from osteoarthritis of the spine. I lost the use of my right arm and there was wastage in my left leg. I had terrific pain in my back. My life was just taking tablets, yet I was simply growing worse all the time.

During 1969-70 I had various treatments and was given twenty X-rays. One of these showed that I had spondylitis of the neck (stiffening of the joints), which meant that I could not move my neck from side to side. They gave me neck tractions with no results. I then had to wear a leather collar. After twelve months the specialist told me that there was nothing more that they could do. I would just have to live with it. The future looked black. I was going to be a permanent cripple.

In a prayer meeting on a Tuesday night at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Silverdale, I went forward with many others to be prayed for. I had been out many other times in the past, but this night was going to be different. The minister, Pastor David Williams, and the diaconate anointed me with oil in the name of the Lord. Then it happened. It was just like an electric current right through my body. I began to move my neck from side to side and up and down for the first time in four years. The pain left my back, hip and leg, the first time I was free from pain in seventeen and a half years of torture. It was like being set free from prison.

I went home and took off my support and have never worn it or my leather collar since. That happened on May 18th, 1971, and I am still free from pain, praise God! Since then I have been able to drive my car and do jobs such as decorating the house and giving a hand in decorating our church.

On the following Tuesday night I was baptised in the Holy Spirit with signs following.

My desire is to serve God in the days that lie ahead. Already God has used me to witness to people in my work and in some of the local Elim churches.

I trust and pray that anyone reading this testimony who has been sick for a number of years may find encouragement, and be determined even more to believe that God will meet their need.

Soul-winning success

by J. Nelson Parr

3. In order to achieve success, personal soul-winners who become desperate will be willing to adopt new methods. Jehovah is not confined to the few methods mentioned in this book. Remember the words of Rev. S. Chadwick: "When any method becomes a lifeless and useless thing, its proper place is the scrap heap." The only way to conquest is over the bodies of dead heroes. Keep moving! Let the dead bury their dead. Let dead men stay with dead things and let the living follow the living Spirit. There is life and conquest in progress. The stationary stagnate and die."

Dr. John Daniel Brown, of the U.S.A., who baptised 1,400 people in two years, said: "I preach Christ and Him crucified, but the people who walk the aisles of our church are won during the week by the pastor or some member of our personal soul-winning band." Paul did not follow the apostles who lived in Jerusalem. He was so desperate to win lost souls that he wrote: "I make myself everybody's slave in order to win as many as possible" (1 Corinthians 9:19). You will be condemned, vilified, ostracised, criticised and pilloried just as Jesus and Paul were. Even the Corinthian Christians considered Paul had lost his mental balance. Some thought that he was too narrow-minded. He replied, "Knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men and if we are beside ourselves it is to God." Desperate soul-winners will adopt desperate methods after desperately seeking the face of the Lord.

4. Soul-winners must be dedicated, Spirit-filled desperadoes. Many pastors and others are full of alibis to cover their failure. One said, "God will bless whom He chooses and how He chooses. Nothing that we can do in the way of dedication, submission or hard work will promote the effective preaching of God's Word." This statement places undue unscriptural emphasis on the sovereignty of God and will lull those who are not seeing progress and glorious success into a state of spiritual coma. Their attitude will be "God is not blessing my ministry, so why worry?" In other words, "God will bless those whom He chooses and it is quite evident I am not one of them." Some folk have said similar things to me. They forget that when we had about twenty people I stood in the open air alone many times and went for years house to house winning souls with just one other worker to help. They forget that over forty years of toil, sweat, tears, nights of prayer, labour and hard work brought down the blessing of God.

Jesus left the ivory palaces and became destitute, despised, deserted, obedient to the death of the cross. Because He stooped so low God has highly exalted him (Philippians 2:9).

Preachers who say "God will bless whom He chooses" quote Genesis 12:2, 3, but do not miss verse 1. If Abram had stayed in Ur of the Chaldees he would have missed phenomenal blessings. Abram ignored the scoffs and sneers of his relations and friends and became a hopeless fool in their eyes.

George Whitefield said: "I had a day in my life when I fully surrendered in consecration to the Lord and that day I said 'I call heaven and earth to witness that I give myself up entirely to be a martyr for Him who hung on the cross for me. I have thrown myself blindfolded and without reserve into His almighty hands.'" This confession uncovers the absurd folly of the preacher who said: "Nothing which we can do in the way of dedication or submission or hard work will promote the effective preaching of God's Word." Why did God bless General William Booth so mightily and use him to bring millions to Jesus Christ? Bramwell, his son, asked his father his secret. He replied, "There was a day when I knelt at a bare table in Nottingham and vowed that God should have all that there was of William Booth." In after years Eva Booth added this rider: "That wasn't really his secret—his secret was that he never took it back."

George Müller, asked the secret of his service, replied, "There was a day when I died, utterly died." As he spoke he bent lower until he almost touched the floor. Continuing, he said: "I died to George Müller, his opinions, preferences, tastes and will. Died to the world, its approval or censure, died to the approval or blame of my brethren or friends, and since then I have studied only to show myself approved unto God."

Dedication, unreserved surrender, submission and very hard work are absolutely essential to the salvation of lost souls. The abundant blessing of God came upon the ministry of Charles G. Finney because he was dedicated to one purpose in life, the salvation of lost souls. C. T. Studd emphasised dedication, submission and hard work as essential characteristics of servants of Christ when he said :

Oh give us Stephens, Johns and Pauls who won their martyr crowns :

Who tackled priests and pharisees and never minded frowns.

We need the seed of the Shadrach breed who braved the emperor's ire,

Who will stand for truth and walk with God into the hottest fire.

Lord, send us lion-hearted men with good, courageous habits,

Who will never run from the Devil's gun like hares and bunny rabbits.

We want some seers without pride or fears, who can laugh but cannot grunt,

Not those pretty dears who shed salt tears when they leave to go to the front.

No use for the nicey picey brigade, nor the namby pamby crew,

Sure the ice cream lot would melt on the spot, send only the hottest brew.

Away with all excuses, alibis and subterfuge and let us become Spirit-filled desperadoes in this soul-winning vocation !

BELFAST, Melbourne Street

Pastor : W. G. Mullan

Is the Irish Christian bigoted toward and indifferent to his Roman Catholic neighbour ?

At the close of a prayer meeting, in which a burden for Roman Catholic souls had been felt, one of our members related his experience of that very day. A victim of a public-house horror blast had lived in the heart of an I.R.A. district, where a number of soldiers and civilians have been killed and wounded recently. Our brother felt led to visit this home in the Ardoyne, Belfast.

Beside a coffin surrounded by mass cards, etc., he sought to comfort a grief-stricken wife and mother. He told her of his Christian faith and of Christ the sympathetic High Priest and left a tract with her.

The visit was much appreciated and when our brother left one man insisted on escorting him back to the main road. This walk afforded another opportunity to testify of personal faith in Christ and of assurance of sins forgiven.

Those who know the area must feel convinced that only God could have provided the grace needed and the unseen protection. May He open the blind eyes of Roman Catholics and Protestants alike !

BIRMINGHAM, Selly Oak Pastor : A. Caple

For the past three years our choir has presented a John Peterson cantata during the Christmas services. This year, again under the direction of Peter Rammell, a sixty-voice choir performed "Joy to the World" at the Assemblies of God Church, Upper Gornal, at Stirchley, our branch church, and in our newly extended building. It was a rush to get the building extensions to the point where the extra room could be used. Over 400 people were packed into the church with about forty-five standing. Over forty children were also accommodated. God's blessing was evident and a number of people responded to the Gospel message. One of this year's soloists, Gillian Perry, was brought to Christ through a previous year's cantata.

True Messiah

During the last two years our country has suffered through reports of the gruesome murder orgies of a self-styled messiah by the name of Charles Manson. The leading witness against Manson was Linda Kasabian, who had previously claimed Manson as her messiah. She had adored and worshipped him before disillusionment set in. Recently she announced her conversion to Jesus Christ. Her husband, from whom she was alienated, has also been converted to Christ, and this brought them back together. She says, "I have found my true Messiah !"

DR. BILLY GRAHAM in Christianity Today.

Are we too clever for the Holy Ghost?

by John Lancaster

Notes of a sermon preached on a recent Sunday morning in the Elim Pentecostal Church, Eastbourne, and put into print at the request of members of the congregation.

"The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee"
(Luke 1 : 35).

RECENTLY I delved into the pages of a book written by a great Evangelical scholar, Dr. Gresham Machen, on the Virgin Birth of Christ, a magnificent work of several hundred pages written to counter the arguments of those who, though calling themselves Christians, do not believe any more in this great doctrine of our faith. The book is a very necessary one, but as I reflected on the amount of research and theological discussion it engaged in I could not help being struck by the way in which the New Testament itself treats this same theme. In thirty-four words the angel Gabriel sets out the only satisfactory explanation of this high mystery of the incarnation, declaring that only the power of the Holy Ghost and the overshadowing of the power of the Highest can bring this otherwise impossible thing to pass. Two things stand out in the New Testament record of the incarnation of Christ: it is unashamedly supernatural; it is unbelievably simple.

This has greatly challenged me. Have we become too sophisticated, too clever by half, in our modern approach to spiritual life? We seem to imagine that because we live in a complex, technological society we must have a complex faith to match it, that it is now unfashionable to believe any more in the simple, unadorned power of the Gospel to change modern man.

To many Christians, bred in an intellectual climate in which "science" claims to have made God unnecessary, the New Testament emphasis on the supernatural has become an embarrassment. Whether we like it or not, Christianity had a supernatural beginning and can only continue to exist in its original, authentic form in a supernatural environment. The birth of Jesus Christ was "on this wise" and likewise the origins of the Church were unmistakably supernatural.

This is not to say that we must abandon genuine scholarship or that we must not seek to give a "reason for the hope that is in us," but it is to say that unless we recognise the essentially supernatural character of Christian faith and experience we shall fail to understand the vital principle on which the on-going life of the Church depends. We cannot exist as the genuine Church of Christ unless we recognise our constant need of the creative activity of the Holy Spirit in our midst.

We have recently witnessed the pathetic spectacle of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral welcoming the cast of the blasphemous show "Hair" to a special service of thanksgiving. Here in the Lord's House and to the Lord's table were welcomed a company of people whose public utterances and behaviour are a blatant denial of all that is called "Christian." Such is the state of religion in our land, so blurred are the moral and spiritual values, so utterly blind are the spiritual leaders that the Church placed the imprint of its blessing on that which it ought to denounce.

This event, among others, makes me ask if it is not time for us to make a clear-cut distinction between what is truly Christian and what is not. Have we become so clever at camouflaging Christianity that we have deceived even ourselves? There was a time when Christians were obviously Christians by the way they behaved, the speech they used and the way they dressed, but it seems to me that the lines have become so crossed that it is sometimes difficult to tell where the world ends and where the Christian Church begins. Have we become so clever at identifying ourselves with the world that there is no real difference? What happened in St. Paul's is the logical outcome of many trends found even in Pentecostal churches. It ought to make us ask whither we go. I feel challenged by this, not that we should return to legalistic and repressive forms of so-called "holiness teaching," but that we should recognise the need for a clear-cut, Biblical standard of purity and wholesomeness in every aspect of our lives. Unless we are careful instead of Christians we shall become moral chameleons, adept at merging into the prevailing background rather than being distinctive disciples of Christ.

Faced with the tremendous disclosure of God's purpose for her life, Mary asked the honest question, "How shall this be?" Nicodemus asked the same question (John 3 : 9). Every real Christian must ask it when faced with the supernatural purpose of God for the Church and for his own life.

The answer is always the same: "The Holy Ghost. . ." The same Spirit who brooded creatively over the darkness in the beginning (Genesis 1 : 2), who empowered Gideon and Samson, who came upon the prophets and men of God of old, alone can quicken and bring to birth the "holy things" that God has purposed. "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you" (Acts 1 : 8).

Likewise, it is only when "the power of the Highest" overshadows us that we can be made to fulfil our place in the Divine scheme. Significantly, the word rendered "overshadow" is used by Luke to describe the cloud that enveloped the disciples on the Mount of Transfiguration (Luke 9 : 34) and of Peter's shadow falling in healing power upon the sick (Acts 5 : 15). It speaks of Divine presence enveloping men in a conscious manifestation.

The "power of the Highest" ("the Most High," R.S.V.) recalls the title by which Abraham referred to God in his encounter with the king of Sodom (Genesis 14 : 22, 23). Because his dependence was on the limitless resources of the "Possessor of heaven and earth," Abraham declined the generosity of Sodom's king. Perhaps it is a measure of the Church's bankruptcy that she has welcomed the representatives of Sodom into her sacred house and courted the favours of a godless age by compromising the moral and spiritual standards by which she was once known. The gifts of Sodom could never enrich Abraham and nothing but the power of the Highest can equip the Church in this hour. We need the Holy Ghost! All of us—pastors, people, youth workers, young people, teachers, children, committee members, office-holders, evangelists and personal workers—need to be filled with the Spirit. There is no substitute.

Christianity began with the supernatural, but it also began with very simple people. Peasants, priests, shepherds and sages, the people to whom the purpose of God was revealed were marked by their simple sincerity and willingness to respond to God's revelation. Not many mighty or noble, not the elaborate or the complex, but the unaffected, open-hearted men and women who were prepared to let God do what He wanted with them were those most closely involved in the earth-shaking drama of the Incarnation.

God is not looking for clever people. More often than not they get in His way. He is looking for people who know enough of their own limitations to see that only in the power of the Spirit can they ever hope to become truly effective Christians, people who will humbly and honestly say with Mary: "I am the Lord's servant, and I am willing to do whatever he wants" (verse 38, Living Bible).

Genuine Christianity is unmistakably supernatural and nothing less than the presence and power of the Holy Spirit in our personal lives and our churches can equip us to meet the challenge of our day and age. Let us face Paul's searching interrogation: "Having begun with the Spirit, are you now ending with the flesh?" (Galatians 3 : 3, R.S.V.). If the answer to that question is "yes" then we have become too clever for the Holy Ghost.

Letter to the Editor

DEAR BROTHER WALKER,

I would like to thank Pastor J. T. Bradley for his timely article, "A comment on the cults," and to say that I agree with everything he said.

It seems that many of the Pentecostal "elect" are being deceived in these days as to believing that Roman Catholics are receiving the Holy Spirit, and yet remaining faithful to their pagan organisation.

The purpose of receiving the Spirit is to receive power, so that we may be witnesses unto Him, the One who saves, keeps and satisfies. The Holy Spirit will not exalt an organisation which fetters and binds men and women, who have no Saviour to whom to be a witness.

Cult members need a Saviour. It is our responsibility to lead them into the "glorious light of the Gospel."

Yours in Christ.

IN response to a request from one of our English churches, our Headquarters felt it wise and good to call for another Day of Prayer for Ireland in all our churches tomorrow, SUNDAY, JANUARY 23rd. Our Field Superintendent notified our pastors of this proposal at the end of last month and we are very grateful for the plans and arrangements already made to concentrate believing prayer upon this pressing need.

Those who have not had the privilege of visiting Northern Ireland during these truly distressing troubles may not appreciate just how dominating and heart-rending they are. The thought comes again and again as one sees the wanton destruction in places like Belfast, "This is part of the United Kingdom!" We assert our strong opinion that if similar terrible events were taking place in London, Cardiff or Edinburgh there would be a national outcry.

Many of our good friends from Ulster tell us that their longing is that God will graciously do again what He did some forty years ago. Times were troublous then, but God raised up a fiery evangelist, Rev. W. P. Nicholson, and many believe that, just as the Wesleyan revival prevented a French revolution situation developing in Britain, so God's power to save stayed the hand of the enemy in Belfast and in Northern Ireland.

A man may be of Roman Catholic or of Protestant background and upbringing, but we know that he needs a personal Saviour. Ireland has known great visitations of the power of the Holy Spirit in times past and surely such a reviving bestowal was never more needed than now. We shall pray for our own kith and kin, our "ain folk," in our beloved Elim churches, not forgetting those in Eire, but our intercession must obviously cover the whole tragic situation. It is no part of our duty or ministry to enter into political problems attached to the whole sad dilemma, but we would certainly be right to pray for those in power in Dublin, Belfast and London. Theirs is a weighty burden. We recognise that a truly lasting answer must come through spiritual means. We ask for your fervent prayer during the Sunday services, in your own home, in Sunday schools and youth activities, indeed throughout our whole movement. We include quite a number who are cut off from immediate fellowship with our churches, but who retain precious links through the "Evangel."

God bless Ireland!

SATISFACTION

Thought for the day broadcast on B.B.C. Radio Medway

by R. Williams

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ROCHESTER

Are you easy to please ?

WE all like to have a little moan. Recently many have been having their say. The press, television and radio have all been vehicles of public and private opinions. The meteorologists have come in for a lot of stick over their misjudgment of the long-range weather forecast. Perhaps a couple of goldfish may serve as a better weather symbol for our country. We should not blame the meteorologists. They do not make the weather ; they only try to advise us what to expect. We are unreasonable sometimes in the way we show our disapproval.

Life can be miserable if you are not satisfied with the things around you. How can we possibly hope to give our best when things are not what we would like them to be ? Why is it that we think things should change merely for our advantage ? We show our disenchantment with things that other people would consider a real privilege. The circumstances of others always seem good to us, while ours seem good to others. A person is well paid if he is well satisfied.

A man once put a board up on his land, on which he had written, "I will give this field to anyone who is really contented." When he asked the applicants if they were contented people they always replied "Yes." His reply was, "Then what do you want with my field ?" Contentment consists not in great wealth but in having few wants.

We do many things to improve our lot in this world and rightly so, but there is something far deeper to this business of being satisfied. I have met people whose situation has been anything but enviable, but they would not change their way of life for the world. This undoubtedly has been due to their faith in God. When God is a vital part of your life He is able to help you to be more understanding. What could be more satisfying than that ?

The Bible has a very definite view on the happiness of people. It says, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." I would not suggest for one moment that all irreligious people are unhappy, but I assert that true satisfaction is related to Christian conduct and is improved by every evidence of Christ-like deeds, which arise from changed hearts.

Stop to think what you are setting out to be. I wonder if satisfaction is among your priorities. In appreciation of the completeness found in Jesus Christ, someone wrote these words :

*I am contented with Jesus,
I am contented with Him,
Daily He helps me my burdens to bear,
Happy for He dwells within.
I am contented with Jesus,
He's by my side every day,
In sunshine or rain, He's always the same.
I am contented with Him.*

Church discipline

"DISCIPLINE" means "a training that produces obedience and orderliness." It is particularly significant to Christians because from it we get "disciple," i.e. one who follows the instructions of another.

Many have the idea that discipline is a set of rules and regulations that threatens our freedom, when its right use leads to our highest good. We gladly accept the rules of the road for our own safety. No one in his right senses would take the liberty of driving on the wrong side of the road or of ignoring a red traffic light. Such "freedom" would be short-lived anyway!

Discipline in Britain

Before considering Church discipline, let us look at the subject as related to other walks of life. Take Parliament, for instance. At times there are harsh words and heated exchanges between members, but, on the whole, our representatives at Westminster exhibit an excellent control in the deliberations of State. This is not so in every Parliament. Fighting sometimes breaks out in some.

Consider the military. The British soldier is regarded as one of the best disciplined in the world, patient under provocation and obedient to his superiors. In other countries we have often heard of a political coup that has taken over the army.

Sport, while it has deteriorated in some quarters, still has a fund of good will and common sense appreciated still by players and spectators, but in some countries games are watched from behind barbed-wire fences.

The anomaly

Here is the paradox. In overseas countries where the discipline of the national institutions seems doubtful, nevertheless their Church discipline (often Roman Catholic) remains fairly secure, while at home our institutions seem secure while our Church discipline leaves much to be desired.

Our quest, therefore, is to find ways in which our churches can receive the training that will produce obedience and orderliness.

The Ministry of the Word

According to Acts 2:42 the disciples "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine," which indicates that in the Early Church there was a constant, solid exposition of the Word of God. A return to this is a priority today. Its lack may be one reason for our indisciplined condition. An analysis of many of today's sermons reveals "padding," repetition of platitudes, opinions of men, quotes from the classics, and a few Scriptures thrown in somewhat illogically. When such an unauthoritative trumpet blows, what sort of obedience will it summon?

God's Word does come to us in many ways, however. If only we would allow it to have an impact upon our lives, Church discipline would be self-applied, but many seem to fall short of expected standards. To such must be exercised the ministry of care. In one denomination the leaders of the local meetings periodically gather together to consider the members who are in spiritual need. They call them "Care Meetings." The principles for such meetings are laid down in Galatians 6:1, 2: "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." This shows WHO is to do it: "Those who are spiritual"; HOW it is to be done: "in the spirit of meekness" and the reason for meekness: "considering thyself lest thou also be tempted."

Church discipline must never be administered in the wrong spirit or out of spite. The aim must always be the restoration of the offender to a place of blessing and usefulness in God. "Count him not as an enemy" says Paul, "but admonish him as a brother" (2 Thessalonians 3:15).

Private admonition

When discipline is called for, it should, in the first instance, be done as privately as possible. Remember, the offender is to be admonished "as a brother." If we had a brother in the flesh who was involved in a scandal, would we shout it from the housetops? Straight speaking can be done quietly and in love. Many a minister has saved his congregation much concern through private admonition.

Matthew 18 : 15 clearly shows the procedure. This localises the matter. A fire brigade not only seeks to extinguish the danger, but also acts to stop it spreading. James 5 : 19, 20 reminds us that "if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him . . . he shall hide a multitude of sins." Nothing is hidden from God, but it can be hidden from others. That is what I call a proper "good hiding"!

In church business meetings and even in conferences, some bring up matters which could easily be dealt with privately. This is unscriptural and uncharitable.

If private admonition fails, Matthew 18 : 16 indicates the next step to be taken; one or two witnesses should be brought according to Scriptural precedent (Deuteronomy 17 : 6; 2 Corinthians 13 : 1). If this also fails then the rule is that it must be brought to the church, who, after hearing all the relevant evidence, may adopt one of the following disciplines if the case warrants such.

Disfellowshipping the offender may be necessary. This simply means "to cease to have fellowship with." In the Early Church (and since) there were certain false teachers going around stirring up trouble and others who were walking disorderly. Paul gave directions to the churches to apply discipline upon such. Notice the emphasised words in the following passages: "Mark them which cause divisions . . . and AVOID them" (Romans 16 : 17); "An heretick after the first and second admonition REJECT" (Titus 3 : 10); "WITHDRAW from every brother that walketh disorderly" (2 Thessalonians 3 : 6); with the disobedient "HAVE NO COMPANY" (2 Thessalonians 3 : 14); him of contrary doctrine "RECEIVE NOT" (2 John 10, 11), and this Scripture continues "neither bid him God speed"!

The disfellowshipping of a believer will mean that he will not be allowed to break bread or take any public part in the worship and witness of the church. This is usually for a limited, prescribed period. If the offender is genuinely repentant he or she may continue to attend the meetings; this should be encouraged. The whole church, having been informed of the disfellowshipping, should stand by the decision and not weaken its application by any false sentimentality.

Excommunication of an offender is a very serious, solemn step. It involves being expelled from the Church. Such discipline is a last resort, reserved for the gravest offenders. There must be no mistake. When the action is righteously carried out, God endorses it, for what is bound on earth is also bound in heaven. The excommunication may not necessarily be irrevocable, but, when sentence is passed, no time limit should be mentioned. In the days of the apostle Paul some excommunications carried with them a very solemn discipline. A man living in immorality at Corinth (1 Corinthians 5 : 5) and Hymenæus and Alexander (1 Timothy 1 : 20) were "delivered unto Satan." This meant that the protecting wall that surrounds the Christian was lifted and Satan was allowed certain moves against the one so delivered, nothing short of a judicial handing over to Satan under Divine permission. Even this was not punitive, but remedial: "that the spirit may be saved" (1 Corinthians 5 : 5).

It may be that cases that call for such stringent measures are rare, but excommunications are still necessary in some cases for the sake of the Church.

The purity of the testimony of the Church of Jesus Christ must be maintained at all costs. How can a Church be holy if it condones immorality? The disturbing factor about the case at Corinth is that the church allowed it to continue. The highest standards must be upheld otherwise "a little leaven leaveneth the whole." Discipline also has a salutary effect upon others, causing them to fear.

THE TREE HOUSE

Story and drawing by

SHEILA PRICE

BRIAN and Carol lived in the country. Their house had a big garden and right at the bottom of the garden was a tall tree.

One day Brian had an idea. He said to his sister "I know what we can do, Carol. Let us make a little tree-house, a little hide-out for ourselves up among the branches "

"Yes," said Carol. "That would be splendid. But do not let us make it very high up, because that would be dangerous."

"Right," said Brian. "We will make it by that branch. That is not too high off the ground."

Each day they climbed up into their tree-house after they had eaten their tea. They rested a plank of wood between two branches and placed two cushions on it. Their mother gave them an old blanket and they put this on some smaller branches a little higher than the plank. Now they had an ideal shelter.

Each day they climbed up into the tree-house to read their magazines. Sometimes their mother allowed them to take their tea with them. How they enjoyed eating their sandwiches up among the branches! They discovered that they could see right over into Farmer Brown's field. They spent many a happy hour watching him working among his animals.

"Brian, do you know what this reminds me of?" said Carol. "It reminds me of how Zacchaeus went up the tree so that he could be certain of seeing Jesus."

"Yes," said Brian, "and, although Zacchaeus was so small, Jesus looked up and saw him as He passed. Jesus knew that he had gone to a lot of trouble and Zacchaeus was so pleased when Jesus told him that He was going to have tea with him."

Brian and Carol sat up in their tree-house singing the chorus about Zacchaeus. As their mother prepared supper she could hear them singing at the top of their voices!

Excommunication may also be necessary for the sake of the world. What influence can a church have if its members are living questionable lives? In a court of law, if some alleged offence was not objected to when it happened the Judge may rule that the thing was condoned. Excommunication shows the world where we stand.

For the sake of the individual, Church discipline has sometimes saved the offender from himself. It has awakened him to the enormity of the offence and shown how seriously God views his misdemeanour. Later, through the working of God's grace, repentance is produced (as with Jonah), restoration to blessing and even a form of usefulness to God.

Seeing that we live in a permissive society, may God give us all the grace we need to walk as we should, keeping a tight rein on ourselves and, as the Scripture exhorts, judging ourselves that we be not judged.

Spurgeon's successors decide

The famous Metropolitan Tabernacle, Elephant and Castle, London, is to withdraw from the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland.

Rev. Peter Masters, the minister, said that the Baptist Union's association with the World Council of Churches was a denial of the evangelical faith, and had sharpened dissatisfaction felt or some time by the church.

JUDAS

THE prayer of Jesus is a confession, but not of sin, for He never sinned. On the contrary, if we say we have no sin, the truth is not in us, but if we confess our sins, He is faithful and forgives us.

Jesus confesses that, in a certain measure, He has not succeeded : one of those whom He had passionately and tenderly loved had escaped Him, and, with a broken heart, He says that, in spite of all His love and constant care, He has lost him. The text, however, expresses more of victory than defeat. He could have added "I have kept the majority of those whom you confided to my care. I have kept the impulsive and inconsistent Simon and, in spite of his many weaknesses, My grace has been sufficient for him. I have kept the sons of thunder, James and John, notwithstanding their narrowness of spirit and ambition. I have kept Matthew, lover of his money-bags. I have kept Thomas, who saw everything in black. Judas has thwarted My plans, however, and has disappointed the cherished hopes that I held for him regardless of his great possibilities and all that I tried to do for him. He went away and I lost him."

This text is interesting because of the light that it projects on the character of Judas and on how we regard his treasons. A popular pastime is to disparage certain persons after their death. The other half of the game is to re-establish a rogue who, professedly, was not understood during his lifetime. Judas also has had his defenders who regard him as a victim of fate.

The first fact to consider is that he belonged to Jesus. You cannot lose something that you have not owned. Judas belonged to Jesus in the same way that Peter, James or John did. Some affirm that he was a demon from the beginning, but the Scriptures do not say this. Luke states that he became a traitor ; one does not become what one has always been. Peter says that he fell ; in order to do this he must have stood. Jesus and His disciples put their confidence in him and chose him as treasurer ; you do not put money into the hands of someone you distrust.

A few months before the event Jesus knew of his double dealing, but the disciples believed in him right up to the Last Supper. When Jesus declared : "One of you will betray Me," each one asked himself if it would be him ; no one pointed a finger toward Judas.

Two things determined the apostleship of Judas.

Judas had chosen Jesus. One day the Lord's call sounded powerfully within him and he renounced all possibility of becoming rich. Although he loved money he denied all to follow Him. Jesus confessed His poverty : "The Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head." He taught that to become a disciple one had to deny oneself, take up one's cross and follow Him. Judas did this, or Jesus would never have accepted him as a disciple, even less as an apostle. It is easy to say that Judas's motives were impure, but what of those of James and John who canvassed for the highest place ?

Jesus had chosen Judas in the same way as the others : after a night of prayer. It is unthinkable to say that Jesus chose him because He knew that he was a traitor. Most certainly Judas was not perfect, but there were within his heart possibilities for good as well as for evil. The soil which is good for producing thorns is equally good for producing a field of wheat.

It is important to know how he met his tragic end. Jesus lost Judas with much sorrow. He did not lose him because of fault on His part, by bad luck, misfortune. He lost Judas because this individual deliberately made a bad choice. He fell by transgression as we also can fall. He was human as we are. We sometimes try to forget this and like to think that Judas was very different from us. If we do not find in ourselves the same possibilities as were in him, it is not because we are superior to him, but because we are blind. We travel the same path. Be sure that he fell gradually. No one is lost all at once in the same way that no one becomes holy in one moment.

One day a sum of money was remitted to

Judas for the poor. Did he take a few pence thinking to replace it later? He never returned it. On another occasion he did the same thing. Each time he more deeply outraged his conscience. His dishonesty had a repercussion upon his communion with the Master. All that Jesus said created in him reproach, uneasiness. "Beware of covetousness," Jesus would say, "the life of a man does not depend upon that which he possesses." These rebukes worried him, causing him to have bad thoughts and feelings. When we are convicted of sin two ways open to us: we take the side of the doctor against the disease, or we side with the sickness against the physician. Judas took the second road. Little by little he became the enemy of Jesus, he who aforetime was a friend. His love changed into hate and he sided with His enemies.

May God guard us from doing likewise! May His spirit enlighten us and strengthen us, so that we will never keep unconfessed sin in our hearts, which will drag us into perdition all the days of our life. The Lord can, and wants to, keep us from falling.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF PASTOR H. KITCHING

ON December 28th, 1971, my husband and I were privileged to attend, with Mrs. Kitching and members of the family, the funeral service of Pastor Horace Kitching. It was conducted by Rev. Harker in the little country Methodist Church in Richmond, Yorkshire, where Pastor Kitching had preached many times since his retirement.

This beloved disciple of the Lord had suffered ill health since an operation in February. For the last fifteen weeks he was in the famous St. John of God Hospital at Scorton, tended carefully and lovingly by the nursing brothers. Mrs. Kitching sat by his side unwaveringly through the long night watches, reading to him his favourite passages of Scripture. As their eyes grew tired, they prayed together.

Pastor Horace Kitching was ordained as an Elim minister in the Welsh Tabernacle, Pentonville Road, Kings Cross, London, on December 29th, 1929. He was a member of George Jeffreys's revival team and became well known for many years as "Uncle Harry," the children's evangelist and founder of Sunshine Corner work in Elim churches throughout the British Isles. He was loved and is remembered by many for, during his campaigns, churches and halls were filled to capacity with children sitting on window sills and in the aisles.

During his retirement he has been active in churches in the North East Presbytery and has stood in the gap for us many times at Bishop Auckland. During this past summer it was his greatest pleasure to sit in the garden and read God's Word, even though he knew the seriousness of his illness.

Many friends in Elim will join me in extending our deepest sympathy to Mrs. Kitching and to her family.

"To whom he whispered a little while before he left this scene of time: 'Grieve not for me, I am going to the land of everlasting flowers.'"

(MRS.) M. BROWN,

*Secretary, Elim Pentecostal Church,
Bishop Auckland.*

Did you ever stop to think, my friend,
This world is what you make it;
And any good thing you desire
Is yours—if you will take it?
Why, you can make your life so bright
With such a glowing lining
That all your friends will gaze at you
And think the sun is shining!

Church of God Evangel.

We journey to the "Mount of God"
Where speaks the "still small voice"
And new commissions from our Lord
Shall cause us to rejoice;
While in unbroken fellowship
We mount up high and higher,
'Til every trial shall prove to be God's chariot of fire.

After Carmel

HEAVENLY MEAT

BY CARRIE JUDD MONTGOMERY

I DON'T suppose that there has ever been a child of God who has not had an "after Carmel" experience. Maybe we have never received such a spine-chilling message as Jezebel sent to Elijah, but we have all known very real, venomous threats from Satan.

Our human nature is such that frequently after a successful spiritual conflict we plunge from the ecstasy of victory to the depths of depression and fear, just as Elijah did. After running twenty miles to Jezreel in triumphant exuberance, poor Elijah fled a further 100 miles out of Jezebel's realm into the wilderness. His mind and body were at such a low ebb that he actually asked to die! God was ready for every eventuality, however, and an angelic cook and waiter was there in attendance to comfort and to feed the exhausted prophet.

When he reached Mount Horeb, God outlined a master plan to destroy the idolatry of Baal. Warlike Hazeel was to be appointed king of Syria. Jehu, a known opponent of Baal worship, was to be appointed in Ahab's place. Elisha was to succeed the prophet. These three would bring down the destruction of God's adversaries.

Isn't it wonderful how God anticipates His children's needs? When we are restored He speaks gently to us with reassuring words and unfolds His plans and purpose by a still small voice. In these days of constant attack from the Devil, when much of the ancient wickedness associated with Baal worship has reared its ugly head again, stand firm and strong in the fight against evil. Almighty God will overcome all His enemies. When weariness comes and depression sweeps over our souls, refuse to panic. Rest and listen for God's still small voice. We shall find that our faulty human reasoning will give place to His majestic wisdom and direction. Like Elijah we shall gird ourselves once more and go forward in faith.

"And he looked, and behold, there was a cake baked on the coals, and a cruse of water at his head. And he did eat and drink, and laid him down again" (1 Kings 19 : 6).

To us, as in the days of old
When worn and weak and faint,
And we would fain withdraw from all
That bears a human taint ;
When Satan by his taunts and threats
Is causing us affright,
And in the wilderness alone
We grope in starless night—

The Angel of the Lord draws near
To rouse from sorrow's sleep,
The mighty God of Carmel's heights
Notes even when we weep ;
No word of stern rebuke He gives,
But only, "Rise and eat—
The journey is too great for thee
Without this heavenly meat."

No human hand prepares this food,
Or gives a cooling drink ;
The Love that sees our every need
Is nearer than we think.
The fire that burnt the sacrifice—
That sacred fire from heaven—
Still condescends to bake the cake
That day by day is given.

We eat and drink, but not enough
To satisfy His heart,
A full, sufficient, strengthening feast
Must heaven's love impart ;
And so with patient tenderness,
The Angel comes again,
And gives anew the Bread of God
To fainting sons of men.

Book reviews

Sing to God, Christian songs for juniors, compiled by Margaret V. Old and Elspeth M. Stephenson. Published by Scripture Union. Words and music £1.25, postage and packing 11p extra. Words only 12½p, postage and packing 3½p extra.

This most attractively produced book will be a welcome addition to the repertoire of many Sunday schools and youth groups. Designed mainly for the eight-plus group, it has an excellent selection of old favourites and up-to-date hymns and choruses. There are seven sections to the book, covering hymns about God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, what God wants of us, living as God's friends, the Bible, and all God's people. It is good to see a robust hymn like "Praise, my soul, the King of heaven" retained, but equally pleasing to meet some of the down-to-earth words of modern hymns such as the following verse from hymn No. 16 :

"Lord of science, Lord of art,
God of map and graph and chart,
Lord of physics and research,
Word of Bible, faith of church,
Lord of sequence and design,
All the world of truth is Thine."

Guitar chords are included in the music edition and the format of this allows it to be opened on the piano without the annoying habit of automatic self-closure! As one who snatched some happy moments playing and reading through this selection I can warmly recommend it to youth workers.

JOHN LANCASTER.

Be filled with the Spirit, by David Petts, M.A. Published by Students' Pentecostal Fellowship. Price 10p, postage and packing 3p extra.

This is a clear, concise, convincing presentation of the subject. It should meet the need of those students seeking further experience with God and, being undenominational, will have an appeal to many sections of the Church. It need not be confined to the college population, for its simple presentation will suit most interested parties. The skilful arguments for the initial evidence may cause a slight stumble as people wait for a tongue and not THE Person of the Holy Spirit. It is not essential to have hands laid on for the filling (page 7). I think a chapter should be included on the power of the Spirit. Like many other booklets, it does not go far enough. The baptism in the Holy Spirit is not synonymous with the power to witness. With Christ it came forty days later. Acts 1:8 says "after"—but who knows how long after?

The Little White Book, by Johannes Facius, Johny Noer and Ove Stager. Published by White Book Publications, S.T.L., P.O. Box 48, Bromley, Kent. Price 25p, postage and packing 3p extra.

Here is a Christian answer to the controversial "Little Red School Book," of which 100,000 copies of its revised version were published last November. "The Little White Book" has been translated and adapted from the Danish edition, "Der Lille Hvide."

It is a great pity that our young people have so many of the private, personal and sacred things in life paraded so blatantly before them. However, if immorality is paraded as being normal and not sinful, then such a book as "The Little White Book" is necessary, particularly when such large quantities of the other are being churned out.

Over 22,000 copies of the book under review were sold in the first month.

Notes
by
J. C. Smyth

Monday, January 24th Galatians 3 : 15-29
"For in Christ Jesus you are all sons of God" (v. 26, R.S.V.).

Those who have placed their faith in Christ are in Christ, a position bringing many blessings, including sonship (v. 26), equality (v. 28) and victory (2 Corinthians 2:14). They have put on Christ, the old man with his deeds having been laid aside and the new man having been put on (Colossians 3:9, 10). They belong to Christ (v. 29) and thus to God (1 Corinthians 3:23), Divine ownership having been established because the purchase price has been paid in full (1 Corinthians 6:19, 20).

Tuesday, January 25th Galatians 4 : 1-11
"God sent forth His Son . . . God hath sent forth the Spirit" (vv. 4, 6).

God's timing is always perfect. Jesus came in the fullness of time when everything was ready for Him. Men were ready for a Saviour. The Jews realised their need because of the failure of the law. The Roman conquest had established excellent lines of communication; the message could therefore be speedily carried across the world. The Greek language was understood in all the places thus linked. God moved at the ideal time.

The Son came to God's own people and was rejected, so the door of salvation was opened to all who will receive Him. On those who accept is conferred the right to be called the sons of God (John 1:12). God sends the Spirit of His Son into their hearts as an inner witness whereby they cry, "Father," the seal of their adoption (vv. 5, 6).

Wednesday, January 26th Galatians 4 : 12-20
"For I am perplexed about you" (v. 20, R.S.V.).

Paul laid bare his heart in this passage, revealing his tender concern for the souls of those to whom he preached. His burden for the spiritual condition of the converts was difficult to bear because he could not understand why the Galatians, having shown him so much love, should change. His feelings were intensified because those who were leading the people astray were doing so out of a selfish motive for vainglory. Jesus revealed similar feelings when He saw the people as sheep without a shepherd. Only those with such a deep concern for the souls of men make successful shepherds of the flock of God.

Thursday, January 27th Galatians 4 : 21-31
"Cast out the bondwoman and her son" (v. 30).

Hagar and Sarah lived in torturous tolerance after the birth of Ishmael to Hagar. When Sarah's son, Isaac, who was born subsequently, was not very old, it became obvious that the bondwoman would have some influence on the son of promise. Sarah demanded that the bondwoman and her son be dismissed (Genesis 21:9, 10). Only by this apparently harsh treatment could possible contamination of the son of promise be avoided.

Paul likened those under the law to the child of the bondwoman and those in Christ to the child of promise (vv. 25, 31). Strong measures, even dismissal, were the only answer to the Judaizers if the Church was to be kept free from the contamination of erroneous doctrine. The New Testament makes it clear that under no circumstances must heresy be tolerated in the Church (1:8, 9).

Friday, January 28th Galatians 5 : 1-12
"You were running well; who hindered you from obeying the truth?" (v. 7, R.S.V.).

Paul often used this metaphor from the Greek games. The foot race, the passion of all the Greeks, had obviously made a great impression on him. He spoke of not running in vain (2:2) or aimlessly (1 Corinthians 9:26), of the prize which was presented to the winner, and of the dedication of the athlete to his training (1 Corinthians 9:24, 25). Scripture also stresses the discarding of any weight or hindrance which might restrain the athlete (Hebrews 12:1). Seeing that we are being observed by so many, our race should be run with patience, our eyes being firmly fixed on Jesus, who has traversed the way before us (Hebrews 12:1, 2).

Saturday, January 29th Galatians 5 : 13-26
"Live in the Spirit . . . walk in the Spirit" (v. 25).

Two forces are always at war in the life of the Christian: the flesh and the Spirit. To ensure victory for the Spirit we must not give the flesh a base from which to operate. "Occasion" (v. 13) is literally "a base for operations" when used in the military sense. We must fulfil the Law by loving our neighbours as ourselves (vv. 13, 14). The mainspring of all fleshly desires is selfishness.

We must give place to the Spirit, walking in the pathway of the Spirit and being led by Him. Thus

The shadow of fear

"The Lord is my light . . . whom shall I fear?" (Psalm 27 : 1)

By H. Burton-Haynes

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church,
Clacton-on-Sea

LISTENING to a schools' broadcast I was reminded of an incident which, it is alleged, happened to Alexander the Great when he was a youth. A stranger offered to sell his father a magnificent horse. Everyone admired the creature, but no one could ride it. Alexander closely observed its movements and then begged permission to ride it. His father consenting, Alexander led the high-spirited horse, Bucephalus, into the face of the sun, vaulted into the saddle and rode away with complete success. Why did he succeed when others had failed? Alexander had noticed that Bucephalus was frightened by all kinds of shadows when its head was turned away from the sun. When it faced the light all was well.

This story illustrates a law of life. Many people go through life terrorised by shadows. Fear is one of the commonest human burdens, a menace to happiness and well-being. People develop a morbid fear of the unknown, for their own future or that of their dear ones, of being in a crowd, of loneliness, poverty, old age, disease or death. The Greek language has been almost exhausted to find names for the various manifestations of morbid fear!

Bucephalus was frightened by a shadow, an illusion, something which did not really exist. Perhaps you can remember, when you were a child, lying in bed and in the darkened room the window curtains assumed the eerie shape of a weird face. The wisest thing to do was to turn on the light, look at it, and realise that it was not real and had no power to harm you.

The same applies to "those things which from the shadowed depths of the mind, haunt us; things which may have happened in early youth. It is only by turning on the light of present conscious reason and looking at them closely and realising that they have no real power to harm us, that we can rob them for ever of their evil effect on our personality." Having faced the situation, let us rely upon Christ's power to meet it. On His lips were so often the bracing words "Be not afraid!" His presence brings a sense of "otherness," which means two to fight our fears instead of one. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

"He stands in his own light," we say of someone. All will agree that a man who does this has only himself to blame for most of the difficulties that beset him. When we turn our back on the light we have to walk in the gloom of our own shadow. This is how shadows are created, how fears arise. If we face the light of His presence, however, the shadows cease to worry us. Just as when we face the sun our shadow is behind us and we no longer see it, so when we seek the Lord, when we turn our face to the Sun of Righteousness, our fears drop behind us.

Compare your life with the lists in verses 19-23, the yardstick by which our actions may be judged.
Sunday, January 30th Galatians 6:1-10

"Let us do good unto all men" (v. 10).

The weight of teaching in this Epistle so far discredited that doctrine of salvation which demanded of men more than acceptance of the finished work of Christ. In proving his doctrine Paul feared that he had given the impression that the works of the Law were not important, whereas he was seeking to show that they were not essential to the new birth. He now stressed the relevance of good works for the man who has accepted Christ; they give an opportunity to manifest Christ (v. 2). Every opportunity to serve our fellow men and the household of faith should be taken (vv. 9, 10).

Just too late!

By F. Lavender

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

THE press reported that of twin boys, six years old, one was born seven minutes later than his brother, but this was enough to make a difference of £10,000 in his inheritance from his grandfather's estate. Neither boy was responsible for the later arrival, but many people who are late for appointments are entirely to blame.

In Matthew 25 : 11-13 we are told of five young ladies who were too late in preparing. Ten girls were chosen to be attendants at an important wedding, but, when they arrived for the ceremony, five realised that they had come without oil in their vessels, so they went to get some. While they were away the bridegroom arrived. The five missing girls came back, found the wedding over and, with colossal cheek, made their way to the reception. I would have thought that they would have been too ashamed to show their faces. The bridegroom, with a touch of Yorkshire bluntness, told them to go; they had let him down and it was too late to make amends.

Hebrews 12 : 16, 17 speaks of a man who tried too late to repent. Esau was a materialist. He loved his stomach. Missing a meal would give him a real attack of the miseries. Like the lad in the newspaper story he was a twin and, because he was born first, he was due to have the bigger share of the inheritance when his father died. One day his appetite really landed him in the soup. He had been out hunting and had missed his lunch, but, as he neared home, he came across his twin brother Jacob busy cooking a delicious hot-pot. His already sharp hunger warned him that he would die before he made the extra few hundred yards to mother Rebekah's kitchen, so he begged a bowl of hot-pot from Jacob.

Now Jacob was acutely aware that he was likely to have a thin time when the inheritance was shared out, so he hopefully suggested that Esau gave him his share in exchange for food. Esau quickly worked out that if he died before his father (and he felt that this was very likely if he did not have some food soon), then Jacob would have the lot in any case. He clinched the deal, ate the meal and went on his way. Later, when he found that he was still alive but that his father was supposed to be dying, Esau had a change of mind, but it was too late. The inheritance was firmly held by Jacob.

Another story is told in Numbers 14 : 40 about the time when Israel were too late in obeying. After the Lord brought Israel out of Egypt He promised to give them a good land and, sure enough, He brought them to the border of the promised country. The people were cautious, however, and thought that it would be a good idea to send in a patrol first. They were most diplomatic. They did not want to tell the Lord right out that they did not trust Him, so they said that they just wanted to be sure of the way—strange that the Lord had led them right across the desert without making a mistake, yet they thought that He might get them lost in a land of towns and cities! Anyway, the twelve-man patrol went into the land and came back again to the camp. They all agreed that it was a very fine land, as good as they had been told. Ten of the men said that there was a problem because the fellows who lived in the land were bigger than the Israelites. The other two men, Caleb and Joshua, were very impatient to have a go at the Canaanites, so they sharply told their ten friends not to exaggerate and to get ready to launch an attack. The ten then dug their heels in and said that the people of the land were so big that they made the Israelites seem like grasshoppers ; it was ridiculous to think of attacking them.

The outcome was that the army of Israel rebelled against the Lord and refused to go into battle, so the Lord sentenced them to death for cowardice in face of the enemy, except loyal Caleb and Joshua. When they realised the mess they were in, one division of the Israelite army decided to obey the Lord after all and went off to attack the Canaanites. The Lord warned them that it was too late for them to obey his previous order and that they would get a beating from their enemies, but they went just the same and were defeated.

The Bible constantly warns you to prepare to meet God ; it commands you to repent and receive Christ as your Saviour from sin. To those who are obedient God promises His gift of eternal life. Do not hesitate to choose Christ, otherwise you may find that it is too late, that the door is shut and you are eternally lost. The Bible says that now is the time when God will accept you, now is the time when He has promised to save you. Tomorrow is not promised ; it may be too late. Turn to Christ now !

FIGHT EVIL

This is the Last Will and Testament

WITH A WILL !

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

Elim News

The London Crusader Choir completes forty-three years of international ministry

In the old Elim Church, Clapham, London, in January 1929, some sixty Elim Crusaders, mostly teenagers, gathered for the inauguration of the London Crusader Choir. Also present were Pastors E. C. W. Boulton, E. J. Phillips and R. E. Darragh. These young people had been brought together by the founder of the choir, Pastor Douglas B. Gray, who had caught the vision of a group of dedicated young Christian singers and musicians ready for any and every immediate call for evangelism and to present the message with spiritual finesse and musical expertise.

Early days had their problems. Not all the volunteers could be classified as helpful musically! Nevertheless, enthusiasm burned in every heart and a group was formed that might well be called "Crusader Commandos." These beginnings brought rather more bricks than bouquets, but, undaunted, determined leadership and spiritual verve soon had the choir ready for public ministry, beginning in the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday, 1929. The choir has ministered at every Elim meeting in this great auditorium since then.

Outreach ministry developed widely and swiftly; 1934 was the year of the first releases of the choir's gramophone records. During the previous year, by amazing and miraculous circumstances, the doors of British prisons were opened for a ministry that has developed in a way never before known. Over forty prisons and Borstal institutions have echoed with the sound of music and the preaching of the Word in well over 1,000 visits. Present-day top-security jails remain open to the Crusader Choir, a mark of the confidence and respect of the authorities, when others are not now granted such opportunities. Radio and television ministry by the choir first commenced in January 1945, and continues to the present. Such broadcasts on B.B.C. and I.T.V. on many varying programmes run very close to a century. The international history of the choir embraces visits to Switzerland, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, the Channel Islands, Canada, the U.S.A., Eire, Ulster, Scotland, Wales, etc. Resulting from these outstanding tours a great Pentecostal fellowship has been developed with many nations by Elim's central choir.

The passing of the years has meant many changes in its personnel. From the choir's ranks sixteen members serve as full-time missionaries, while a similar number serve at home, including the exacting duty of being the wife of an Elim minister.

Last year the choir fulfilled eighty appointments in addition to rehearsals, recordings etc., terminating with the outstanding Symphony of Praise in the Fairfield Halls, Croydon. One music critic from the press stated that it was a night of inspiration and of a very high standard rather infrequently heard in Christian festivals.

We express our deep appreciation and thanks to fellow ministers and members for every kindness shown to us. We covet your prayers, your understanding and your help in such a unique gospel outreach, not least the support and ministry of today's generation of Elim youth. The harvest field is great, the labourers (and singers and musicians) are too few. How about you?

With their pastor, a group of adults and children visited the local hospital. Carols were sung in every ward, with patients and their visitors joining in. The church's own Father Christmas, Paul Burford, gave a kind word and a gift to each patient on behalf of the church. God bless all who helped with this work in the Master's name!

Pastor : J. Shellard

The funeral service for Grace Halliday took place on December 31st. She was well known to the Elim family and her keen interest in the Elim missionary work made her many friends. A letter from the Missionary Secretary, Pastor L. Wigglesworth, was read during the service. It spoke of her early interest in the work in the Congo when she helped support one of the pastors there. Her enthusiasm as missionary secretary has encouraged a missionary vision in our church.

The service was conducted by the pastor, assisted by the district superintendent, Pastor W. J. Maybin, and by Pastor C. J. E. Kingston, a former minister of the church.

The deep affection with which she was held was reflected in the congregation of fifty. Testimonies were given of her influence on the lives of those who were privileged to know her.

The chorus sung at the graveside, "I know whom I have believed," summed up the triumphant faith of our sister, whose life had been a living epistle, an eloquent sermon, of God's redeeming grace.

J. SHELLARD.

CRADLEY HEATH Pastor : T. W. Jacobs

Three weeks before Christmas the children of our junior church started to bring items of food to make up Christmas parcels for old people in our area. Gifts came from many sources—packets and tins of all shapes and sizes, from sugar and tea to best red salmon and Dundee cake! One Tuesday evening the pastor was introducing a time of collective study when in came two enthusiastic youngsters carrying their gifts for the old folk. We ended up with over eighty individual items, including a crocheted blanket made by some of the children.

During the Christmas week the Crusaders and some older members of the junior church delivered the food parcels. Each home rang with the singing of a Christmas carol, followed by prayer. The blessing brought to these people could never be expressed in words. Our own children and young people learned something of the joy to be found in serving others in the name of Christ.

LOUGHBOROUGH Pastor : J. H. Hunt

During the past year God has blessed our church. The number attending the services has increased. This is a university town and we have had the joy of fellowship with a good number of the students.

At our twenty-third anniversary services the speakers were Pastors C. J. Watkins and F. Waite. Their anointed ministry was much appreciated.

At a recently held youth weekend we had a visit from the Kensington Temple youth singers, Pastor E. R. Corsie being the speaker. The services on the Sunday were conducted by Trevor Partridge, our former youth leader, who is studying for the ministry in America. This was indeed a weekend of blessing.

At our annual business meeting the reports indicated an increase in blessing and numbers in each department of the work. The smile of God is indeed on us here under the excellent ministry of our pastor.

S. G. PARTRIDGE.

MAGHERA

Our church was officially opened in May last. Since then the Lord has blessed us in a wonderful way. Precious souls have been saved, bodies healed and some baptised in the Holy Spirit. In a recent crusade God moved in power. It was a joy to see Roman Catholics being saved and healed.

A Sunday school and a Bible class have been started. The Lord is blessing this very important work. Our prayer for Ulster is that the Lord will send revival.

ROBERT SCOTT.

SHEFFIELD Pastor : A. V. Gorton

At our annual fellowship meeting the six deacons were re-elected and another was added. It was a night of rejoicing. The church offerings had increased by £500, while the missionary offerings, including E.W.M.A., were £1,000. Five new members were received into fellowship. Every report had a note of blessing and victory. The Crusaders and Sisterhood had grown in numbers. The young people had done coffee bar work, hospital services, sick visitation, personal work and invitation on the streets of our city. A special feature was the brothers' weekend, when on the Sunday the church was packed, with an overflow in the extension. A minibus collects Sunday school scholars and brings older members to the services. Some decisions for Christ were made and altogether it has been a memorable year. The Christmas Sunday carol service will remain in our memories with a church packed to overflowing.

(MISS) C. I. LADLOW.

MOTHERWELL Pastor : F. W. Jones

Pastor and Mrs. E. J. Thomas were welcomed to our watch-night service by our pastor. This was the first of five services at which Pastor Thomas was guest preacher during our new year convention. His message brought us to the end of the year. It was followed by tea. Thereafter, until about 2.30 a.m., spontaneous testimony by word, song and verse provided a most satisfying time of fellowship.

We met again on Saturday evening and on Sunday morning. Our Sunday evening service, at which Miss M. Haddow was the soloist, was followed by a "sing-along."

Our last service passed all too soon. We pray that the old-fashioned Word as preached by Pastor Thomas will prove to be fruitful among the new friends who attended. The singing of Pastor and Mrs. Thomas and his ability to involve both young and old in praising their Saviour will be among our memories. This was truly a time of refreshing, for which we give thanks to God.

ROBERT MCKILLOP.

Letters to the Editor

DEAR SIR,

I would like to comment upon Pastor Bradley's article entitled "A comment on the cults." He set forth the position of the Roman Catholic Church and its doctrinal errors in relation to the "Christian cults" (Jehovah's Witnesses, Spiritism, etc.). He also made the point that experience which is of God must conform to the truth as found in the Scriptures. This was especially in connection with claims made by Catholics to being baptised in the Holy Spirit. Mr. Bradley's view was that we should not accept the position held by "Pentecostals" who are not willing to leave and denounce its doctrines and allegiances.

I believe that we should have a balanced outlook towards the Charismatic renewal within this "cultish" denomination, one which neither completely discredits all Pentecostal manifestations as being self-induced or devil-inspired nor readily accepts the authenticity of all who claim to be baptised in the Spirit without seeing the fruits of their lives.

I would like to make two points: that Elim members should not become dogmatic and think that only those who belong to Pentecostal churches can be truly baptised in the Spirit; and that Pentecostals should guard against a spirit of criticism or judgment towards those who claim to be Spirit-filled, feeling that they will be more effective witnesses for Christ by staying in their church, be it Roman Catholic, Anglican or any other established denomination.

Many, of course, will not be able to compromise on such important matters as transubstantiation, infant baptism, purgatory, etc., and will leave their church, but let us be open to (and rejoice in) the fact that God may keep some Christians where they are, so that they may witness to many in the Roman Catholic Church who are not easily reached by Evangelicals. As Jesus said to John when he had seen a man who was not a disciple casting out demons, "He who is not against us is for us."

Yours sincerely in Christ.

COLIN E. REED.

London, W.13.

Dear Bro. Walker,

I am sure that the article on cults published recently will spark off a lively debate because the list of cults includes Roman Catholics, although some claim the baptism of the Holy Ghost with speaking with tongues.

The Catholics are in one fundamental respect different, since they accept that forgiveness from sin is by the sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ. I had a Catholic friend who professed that he had accepted Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour. I suggest that there are born-again Catholics, so then these may receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Should born-again Catholics, baptised in the Holy Ghost, leave their Catholic tradition of worship? Though it may seem surprising that many do not do so, this does not indicate that the experience is spurious. If this were so, what of those born-again believers in most other denominations who make similar claims to a Pentecostal experience? I am as sure as one can be, for instance, of the faith, conversion and reality of the experience of an Anglican Pentecostal vicar and his wife, albeit he still sees fit to christen babies and remain within the church.

I accept the initial list that was quoted, since, as far as I am aware, none of these accept salvation as the gift of God by Jesus Christ. While accepting that the Catholic Church may not be effective in producing as many born-again believers as some others do, I would suggest that it contains many who are truly saved and so, together with Pentecostal believers in other denominations, we should accept them. As a minister of a Pentecostal church said recently, "Pentecost is an experience, not a denomination."

TESTIMONY TIME

My story

by Anthony Pesaud

"I'm not ashamed to own my Lord, or to defend His cause." I give God all the thanks, praise and glory because of His mercy. I can take my stand for Him.

One night I entered the Elim Church in Dennis Street, Georgetown, Guyana, a sinner, lost in sin, but—and this is one "but" that I praise God for—that was the night when I left the church with a Friend who "sticketh closer than a brother." I left with Jesus my Saviour. This was on July 27th, 1970. This was the most wonderful thing that has ever happened to me. Friends, I regret that I hadn't accepted sooner.

I had many girl friends; I still have, but now they are sisters in Christ. I used to go about with these girl friends of mine and, being just sixteen, I did not know of the bad things behind this, but praise God for the change that has taken place.

I used to read many bad books, but the Bible has now taken their place. I thank God for that grand old Book—the Book of books.

The cinema was like a second home to me, but church has taken its place—the House of God. My heart was filled with hatred, idolatry, uncleanness, strife and envy. I had a very stony heart, but God in His mercy replaced it with a heart of flesh which contains joy, peace, love, gentleness, goodness and meekness.

I was a bit religious before being converted. I was like the Pharisees—religious, but not saved. I read my Bible in my spare time and went to church and Sunday school. I used to attend the Roman Catholic church. I obeyed the rules and the creeds and took the sacraments. I tried to live up to their standard. I was also baptised or sprinkled with water when I was about six. These did not save me. I learned that Jesus died for me and that now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation.

What could I do but accept the only Way, Truth and Life? Now my nights are turned to day and my sorrows to joy. Now I sing "On Christ the solid rock I stand; all other ground is sinking sand."

A wonderful preservation

ON November 23rd, four-year-old Stephen was out with his mother when he was knocked down and run over by a car. He remained conscious and can remember the accident and going to hospital. His only injuries were grazes on his forehead and knee and a bruise under one eye. About two hours after the accident he was sitting up in bed looking at books and complaining of feeling hungry! Below are quotations from newspaper reports:

"It is astonishing!" said the police constable who witnessed the accident. "The car knocked him down and I saw both wheels pass over his chest. I thought he would have been killed or badly injured." (The Daily Mail).

He was kept in hospital for two days, then after X-rays and tests for possible internal injuries the hospital announced, "We can find nothing seriously wrong with him." Said a hospital official: "This was truly an escape in a million. We were baffled when we could find nothing wrong with the boy." An A.A. spokesman said: "Astounding as it may seem, something like three-quarters of a ton passed over the boy's chest." From the British Medical Association came the comment: "It is extraordinary that the boy should escape without major injury." (The Daily Express).

A police spokesman said: "Stephen is a very fortunate little boy and is lucky not to have been killed." (The Yorkshire Post).

No one can understand how Stephen escaped major injury but we, his parents, know that it was not luck but only the mercy and love of God which preserved him and we give Him the praise and glory due to His lovely name. We can truly say with Nahum, "The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble, and He knoweth them that trust in Him."

This accident has been widely publicised, being reported both in national and local newspapers and also on television. It is proof to the nation that miracles still take place. We pray that as a result of this men and women may come to a personal knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Report by Stephen's parents, who are members of Elim Pentecostal Church, York.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

JESUS is the great Teacher of prayer. He has taught us not to pray like heathens using vain repetitions, praying over and over again to gods who are afar off. We are to pray with a personal confidence in the Lord. We do not pray to One who is far off, remote, impersonal. If we know the Lord then prayer is to One whom we know and love.

We do not pray unaided. The Lord has given to us the Holy Spirit, who helps and inspires us just as much as He inspires preachers.

A lady solemnly promised to support by prayer and finance a couple going to the Far East. The promise was kept until she went to her reward in heaven.

One night she awoke with a sense that her friends were in danger. She knelt to pray and continued for a long time. When she felt that God had answered, she got back into bed. She later discovered that her friends had been in great danger at the very time when she had prayed. Bandits were roaming the countryside where her friends were labouring for Christ and village after village was destroyed and every inhabitant slain. Soon the bandits arrived at the village where her friends lived and house after house was set on fire. The missionaries waited. Soon the door burst open and the bandits entered, led by a young man who could speak some English. He stopped and looked at a text on the wall. He asked if they were missionaries and, being told that they were, gave orders that they and their house were to be spared. The reason was that some time before he had been attended by missionaries when he was sick and was grateful for what they had done. Was it chance that there was a text on the wall, that the bandit could speak some English, that his eye had caught sight of the text? I don't think so! God had inspired a woman to pray and He had answered.

Is certainly somebody: I don't drink.
Many a somebody who didn't think
Became a nobody because of drink.
Anyone can follow what crowds do:
I'm trying to be somebody—how about you?

THE meeting was in full swing. Members of the congregation had been freely invited to read verses of hymns aloud before they were sung, if they so wished. The hymn of the moment was Harry Tee's grand "Let the fire fall." A young man read one of the verses with obvious blessing and joy. At the end of the hymn he asked permission to testify and revealed that he had travelled to the service in severe pain, hardly knowing how he would be able to endure sitting through the proceedings. As the hymn was being sung, he told us, he felt that God had touched him. All pain had gone and he stood before the people absolutely radiant.

On the very next day folk were leaving a crowded rally. The preachers were shaking hands with them as they left. One lady told one of them how that she had been ill for twelve weeks, but had felt a desire to attend the rally. She felt that God had wonderfully touched her. She had been able to sit right through two lengthy meetings in one day, whereas she had previously hardly been able to lie with any comfort for three months. She travelled home gloriously happy in God's power.

These things happened this very month.

Do we count our blessings enough? Have we tended to delegate Divine healing and the touch of God to special evangelistic events? We strongly feel and have believed for years that if all the testimonies of healing which arise in British Pentecostal churches in one month could be recorded and presented we should have a happy surprise. God moves magnificently in what we call our ordinary meetings, as well as in conventions, far more frequently than we allow.

This reluctance is very strange when you think about it, for so much of our praying is directed towards the very request that God would move, yet we seemingly so readily fall into the error of imagining that God's blessing takes place in Brazil, U.S.A., Korea—almost anywhere except in poor old United Kingdom!

Let us give God the glory! If God touches you, testify! Faith begets faith, as experience so quickly proves. We are encouraged to believe when we see and know that God has moved in the lives of others who have suffered or who have been oppressed similarly.

To believe in God's power is not to be optimistic, for the optimist can be as unbalanced in his thinking on one side as the pessimist is on the other. To believe is to be a realist—for God hears, answers, heals!

Getting down to the work to attend school and travel home to their isolated farmhouse at weekends.

God showed them a special need in their own area. They took up this challenge and commenced a Sunday school among the Bantu children. God blessed and they now have a fine group of children.

The climax of their year's work was the special Christmas story which they enacted. The girls did everything themselves, including making costumes, clearing out a small barn and whitewashing it for their production. Their normal services are held in the open air. The story was excellent and was a real blessing. At the end of the evening they presented the children with small gifts, which again they had made themselves. They made a wonderful effort and we are sure that God will bless them for it.

Pastor Ron Gull uses his "mobile visual aid" while telling the story of "Chibwa the dog."

I have told this story that it might challenge you all—as it did us. These two girls, without any prompting from any of us, saw a need and got down to the work, telling those with whom they could communicate about Jesus. May we also look around and see the need in our own area and get down to the work!

CLICK, click, click, click. At the piano the pupil's eyes follow the swinging upside-down pendulum and then move down to the musical score. Every note has its measure of time and every rest has a predetermined period of delay. Only as the timing indicated on the score is observed can the music of the master be recaptured. The wearisome monotony of the lesson and the driving mechanism of that clock-like contraption begin to beat into the brain the idea that life is a matter of rhythm, that all events have a place in the beat of the universe.

The clicks of the metronome, the pips of the Greenwich time signal, the ticking of the old grandfather clock in the hall, the sun peeping over the horizon at break of day, the moon appearing on the black velvet of the night sky, all remind us of the regularity of our lives and the universe in which we live. God is the great timekeeper. Never behind or before the timing of His appointments, His calendar of world events is more accurately determined than the pulsations of the quartz or cesium clocks of the modern generation.

David's son is very specific on this question of universal events: "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven," he writes. He goes on to enumerate the phases of life that must be multiplied millions of times in the experiences of the human race. We leave them to the private study of the reader, taking but a few as examples of our most pressing needs.

He begins where we all begin—at birth (v. 2). A baby cries as it is released from the comfort of the womb, where the heartbeats of the mother have given, though almost unconsciously, the first lesson in rhythmic movement. A new life begins, destined perhaps for greatness or to be submerged in oblivion among the masses of the world. For every man there is a moment to be born. The materialistic concept would suggest that this is merely the result of blind, indeterminate forces, a mechanism that runs like a wonky clock—without meaning, just a biological accident.

God places the crown of Divine appointment on every babe's head. This is the arrival time scheduled by the Almighty. The child's appearance is a miracle of Divine precision and thus the nobility of man is rescued from the trash-can of scientific hypotheses and the uneven stumblings of a syncopated society. Mordecai's words to Esther have a bearing on all our lives, "Thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this," and though the circumstance of our experiences may not be as impressive as those which concerned this Hebrew woman, yet we do have some part to play in the plan of God. He has created us for some service in His kingdom. We shall meet people by crossing their paths but once only; it could be an encounter resulting in world salvation. Many of our meetings are now-or-never opportunities; not one is by chance. When that tough little Hebrew was born into the household at Tarsus his parents had little idea that he would influence subsequent generations by his life and writings, yet that is exactly what Paul has done. Examining the sacrifice of Christ his Lord and searching through the Scriptures, he has helped us to understand the doctrine of justification as no other exponent has done. No birthday is accidental.

As Pentecostalists we cannot help but take note of the Preacher's reminder that there is a time to laugh (v. 4). There are those [tell it not in Gath!] who would severely remind us that this does not apply to church time! If this aspect of Divine exhortation had been heeded through the centuries, how different many lives would have been. Thousands have been driven from the Church by the morbid, artificial concept of worship so popular in many Anglican, Roman Catholic and even nonconformist circles. How well I remember the dreary hours I spent in the church where I received my first introduction to religion. As a family we were always early at the services—too early for my impatient little ego—so there was plenty of time to observe the procession of well-dressed patrons making their way to their appointed pews, directed by the steward, who, hymn-book at the ready, safely piloted them. We all spoke with bated breath as the feet moved noiselessly over the carpet. One had the feeling that a cough would have started an avalanche somewhere, that God was tucked up asleep in the rafters and we must not wake Him up! This, I was given to understand, was reverence. It was soundless and soulless, and my restless limbs ached through the interminable hours. To this day I remember the faint perfume of those Sunday gatherings which has remained as the aroma of orthodoxy. It might have been somewhat pleasant but for the sulphurous fumes emanating from the boiler room beneath!

It took Spirit-filled Pen'ecostalists to prove the worth of a joyful faith. Their zeal for the Word of God led me to discover that the Bible contains abundant exhortations to rejoice and be happy. How shocked some of those well-conditioned pew-renters would have been at my discovery is easy to imagine. It was so undignified to exclaim "Praise the Lord!" or "Hallelujah!" yet we read in the very Book that these congregations took for their guide of people dancing for glee, thanking God that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name, of an apostle writing from a dismal dungeon in Rome to his followers: "Rejoice in the Lord always." Back at the centre of Hebrew worship are the constant exhortations to praise. Even the renowned King David did not think it undignified to express his emotions in dancing before the ark of the covenant, while his wife, Michal, who despised his hilarity and sneered when he came into his house, was left barren to the day of her death. So must end all who attempt to restrict the praising heart. Miriam the prophetess in the camp of Israel took her timbrel and led the women in dancing and rejoicing on the deliverance side of the Red Sea and all the people sang their song of triumph. We can be sure that it was no funeral dirge for the Egyptian host engulfed in the flood; it was a victory song! Even the prophet Isaiah becomes lyrical with praise when he views the coming millennial glories: "All the trees of the field shall clap their hands" (Isaiah 55 : 12).

One modern writer reminds us that "Laughter is God's soothing touch on a fevered world. . . . Gladness relaxes tension. Humour is one of the finest solvents for the grit of irritation in the gears of life because it helps to get rid of conflicts that do not really matter: it disposes of irrelevances by laughing at them."

Finally, Solomon reminds us that "There is a time to die" (v. 2)—solemn thought! Shake it off as we will, every day brings us nearer to the time when we must face God alone. Only God knows the exact hour of our appointment with Him. It is essential that we prepare ourselves for that moment of truth, for there are only two ways to die: either as redeemed sinners or as unregenerate sinners. Paul speaks of that experience in writing to the Philippian Christians: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. . . . For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better" (1 : 21, 23). Singing of the salvation of God, the psalmist David anticipates death as a way through to the great and final deliverance: "He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from death" (Psalm 68 : 20). Newberry has the marginal note: "goings out, or escapes." Of the issues of death the psalmist is in complete agreement with Paul's later writings: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace" (Psalm 37 : 37). In the prophecy of Balaam's parable the end of the righteous man becomes the desire of the prophet: "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!" (Numbers 23 : 10).

What of this ungodly, indifferent and careless generation? The Bible witnesses throughout its pages to the tragic loss of those who reject God's overtures of mercy. Let the psalmist speak again: "But the transgressors shall be destroyed together" (Psalm 37 : 38). No man should dismiss easily the awful results of sin. They already exist. Spreading throughout the world like a malignant cancer, evil brings suffering to humanity. This is an evident and undeniable fact. Dare we treat lightly our Lord's own words in Mark's record of the Gospel: "Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched" (Mark 9 : 44, 46, 48)? He who would gamble away the safety of his soul on the sorry premise that all will turn out well in the end and that chance will help the unrepentant through the portals of death is a fool indeed.

We can do no better than quote the words of the Master Himself: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life. . . . Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation. . . . He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 5:24, 28, 29; 3:36).

The issues of life and death are thus in our own hands. Of one thing we are sure: "It is appointed unto men once to die."

Death comes with a crawl or he comes with a pounce,

But whether he's slow or spry,
It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts,
But only how did you die?

E. V. COOKE.

The uncertainty of the hour of man's demise adds urgency to the call to make a personal decision about the future. The words of Scripture have meaning we must never ignore. On the calendar of the Almighty are events general and events personal. God can as easily determine the day of world destruction as He can count the beating of the humming bird's wings. The dissolutions of universes are more surely set than are the strident vibrations of the worker's morning alarm clock. We must be ready. There is no provision for us to choose for ourselves the moment of decision. God says, "Now is the appointed time, now is the day of salvation." To be too late, though only by a fraction in physical terms, may be too late for all eternity.

STRIPES

"Oh, dear," said Barnaby the zebra. "Oh, dear dear me!"

"Whatever is the matter?" asked his mother.

"I'm fed up, that's what," answered Barnaby. "I'm fed up."

"And why should you be fed up? You have plenty of food to eat, lots of space to play in, and nice big trees to sleep under. Why should you be fed up, Barnaby?"

"It's these awful stripes," said Barnaby. "I don't like them."

"Why, they are very nice stripes," said his mother. "I cannot imagine why you don't like them."

"Well, I don't like them, mother. I look as if I have pyjamas on."

"Don't be silly, Barnaby. If you did not have stripes you would look like a donkey, wouldn't you?"

"I wouldn't mind looking like a donkey," said Barnaby. "In fact I would be proud to look like a donkey."

"What do you mean, Barnaby?" asked his mother. "I thought you liked being a zebra. Why would you rather be a donkey?"

"Well, it is like this," said Barnaby. "Donkeys are famous in a way aren't they? I mean, Jesus rode on a donkey, didn't He?"

"Yes, that's right," said Barnaby's mother. "But didn't you know that Jesus had stripes, too?"

"What do you mean, mother? How could Jesus have had stripes?"

"Oh Barnaby, when Jesus was on His way to the cross to die for the sins of the world He was beaten with ropes and sticks, which made bruises and scars and stripes all over His back."

"I never thought of that," said Barnaby.

"Do you know what I think, Barnaby?" asked his mother. "I think perhaps we were given stripes so that we should remind people of how Jesus was wounded for them."

"I think you are probably right, mother," said Barnaby, and off he trotted, thinking to himself how smart he looked.

Pioneers of Revival, by Charles Clarke. Published by Fountain Trust, price 35p, postage and packing 5p extra.

This little book is a must for every Christian. It will stir the reader to seek the Lord in earnest prayer for the revival which we so desperately need in these days of accelerating moral decline.

The writer has given an excellent survey into the way God moved upon the hearts and lives of some of the great men of God who were used by Him in revivals in past years. Their lives were Spirit-filled, and their ministries revolutionised many precious lives. Christians as well as outsiders were brought very close to God. It is a book which grips and challenges one right from the beginning.

Life isn't all Honey, by Dr. Frederick A. Tatford. Published by Upperton Press. Price 35p, postage and packing 5p extra.

Yet another book comes from the prolific pen of Dr. Tatford, well-known convention speaker and author of some fifty books in all. In business life he was a high official of the British Atomic Energy Authority.

There are nine chapters covering nine of the major problems of life: suffering, fear, guilt, sex, ineffectiveness, powerlessness, helplessness, friendlessness, and guidance. With his wide knowledge of life he writes, often from personal experience, with a deep understanding and sympathy. This is a book for all. Those who preach and teach will find many fresh stories and illustrations of the Lord's adequacy in every situation of life.

J. ALEXANDER WRIGHT.

Gold in my Shoes, by Willie Prentice. Published by Victory Press. Price 30p, postage and packing 3p extra.

This enjoyable, intriguing book tells the story of a retired bank manager's sponsored walk of nearly 600 miles to raise money for the work of the Hour of Revival Association. Mr. Prentice walked from Aberdeen to Eastbourne and raised £3,600. He describes some of the physical problems, but also the many opportunities he had to witness for the Lord Jesus. What shines through the book even more than the absorbing details of the journey is the author's obvious devotion and dedication to the Lord.

Perhaps the book's greatest interest will be to those who were closely connected with this commendable effort, but I found it both stimulating and challenging. It is a book to be read and passed on to a friend rather than kept, but it demands to be read nevertheless. It is easy reading and can be read at one sitting. A word of warning is necessary lest others try to emulate this admirable adventure—Mr. Prentice was an experienced walker before this mammoth effort!

In days when there are sponsored walks for many activities, it is good to see something being done for evangelism. Could this be done on a smaller scale by Crusaders for missionary work?

LAURENCE E. LAMBERT.

Born to Burn, by Dr. Fredk. A. Tatford. Published by Upperton Press. Price 60p, postage and packing 10p extra.

Probably because he was not affiliated to any missionary society the life and ministry of David Davies has not been widely publicised. The story of his efforts to reach China's lost multitudes and of the intensity of the suffering which he endured at the hands of the Japanese makes soul-stirring reading.

Mr. Davies is portrayed as a humble, self-effacing man with a tenacious faith in God, which, though most severely tested, brought him through.

A chapter on Chinese religions provides useful background information.

It seems out of character, however, that the suggestion of Gladys Aylward's responsibility for Mr. Davies's imprisonment and torture should be so frequently laboured.

This is a book that you will find hard to put down.

From T. H. Stevenson

THE first Sunday in the year saw God move in our assembly, as He had been pleased to do frequently in the preceding year, and in some respects to a pattern, in baptising with His gracious Spirit. It was a welcome surprise to see a considerable number of university and college students at our morning meeting. We learned that they were from several denominations and countries and were holding a conference in a country mansion. Part of their time had been spent in personal witnessing in Worcester streets, and fifteen people had made a profession of Christ. After our morning service one young man spoke to me of the great impression made upon him in our worship round the Lord's table and in the manifestation of the gifts of the Spirit, this being his first visit to a Pentecostal church. I said that I was prepared to be early in my vestry that evening and pray with him that he might be filled with the Holy Spirit. At six o'clock he arrived, together with another young man and two young lady students. We could only spend a brief time together, so it certainly was not a "waiting" meeting! God began to move their hearts and soon one of the young men was speaking in other tongues. I was soon to learn that he had received this experience seven years ago, but he had never known fellowship with any believer with a Pentecostal experience, so this was a true revival of a lapsed experience. Soon the other young man was also filled with the Holy Spirit. As this happened the former young man told me that it was the first time he had witnessed another receive the baptism in the Spirit. Time flew too quickly, as our evangelistic meeting was due to begin, or surely we would have witnessed the ladies also receive—perhaps they now have, for God is not limited to time, place or man.

I have described in an earlier article soldiers coming to our prayer meeting and being filled with the Spirit. Their testimony brought along a fellow soldier, who worships in a local evangelical church. Only when I stood to conclude the prayer time did I realise that the soldier had come to the front seats and was bowed in prayer. As we began to praise the Lord, God swiftly set the seal of the baptism upon the young man.

How thrilling it is to see young hungry believers of many denominational backgrounds desiring this Pentecostal experience—and not only young Christians. How quickly they seem to receive—no reservations, inhibitions, preconceptions, nothing but a desire that in simple trust responds to a brief, simple explanation and exhortation. It is all of God and all for God's glory. Space denies comment upon the problem of Pentecostal church members who do not receive the very experience that is a fundamental of their faith. Perhaps comment is not needed, as to experienced ministers and to long-standing members who have not "received" some reasons must be well known. How true, but maybe so much overlooked are Paul's words "The simplicity that is in Christ."

Stone-throwing

THE Bible is sometimes brutally frank about certain incidents in the history of its characters. This is so in the detailed life of King David. The great triumphs and miserable failures are described with care and the Holy Spirit has seen fit that other lesser happenings are recorded to give a complete picture of Israel's greatest ruler, a very human and lovable personality.

In the Second Book of Samuel we read in chapter 16 that David was subjected to the indignity of stone-throwing. Already in the throes of a heart-breaking conflict with his traitorous son Absalom, David had wept as he went barefoot over the Mount of Olives. Now came the crowning insult. Shimei, son of Gera and a member of King Saul's deposed family, met David, cursed him continually and threw stones and dust at him. As David and his company went along the road, Shimei went along the hillside, well out of reach. With obvious cowardice, he hurled stones, earth and curses at the king.

I am amazed at David's forbearance and mildness, for this could have broken David and caused his anger to flow and bloodshed to follow. One of his hasty nephews was eager to retaliate and to cut off Shimei's head there and then, but David had learned meekness and humility. He reasoned quietly with his hot-heads and left the outcome with the Lord. I like the reasoning in verse 12, that God would recompense good for the evil curses he received. He completely ignored the stone-throwing. How wise he was, for he certainly reaped what he sowed. In chapter 19 the outcome of this incident is told. After the death of Absalom, King David was conducted back over Jordan to Jerusalem. On the way Shimei met him, fell at his feet, craved his forgiveness, and was graciously pardoned.

I wonder how many of us when suffering because of stone-throwing (metaphorically speaking) remember the lessons taught here. Dr. Joseph Parker wrote: "We must not be dismayed because men throw stones at us. Many stones are thrown which never reach their mark. Stone-throwing may be an indication of cowardice, of an evil temper, of fretfulness and of a spirit in no wise attractive."

There may be someone who reads my page who is at this moment suffering such an attack—perhaps even veiled innuendoes or outright curses. Take a leaf out of King David's book. Ignore it all! Read Psalm 37 and let it soak into your soul. David knew what he was writing about from first-hand knowledge. If you are quite sure that you do not deserve the stones and curses, keep calm, be gracious, humble, dignified, unperturbed, and God, all-wise and all-seeing, will look on your affliction and reward you with His great goodness.

David did nothing when faced with malicious curses and stone-throwing. Herein lay his wisdom and strength of character. Shimei apparently learned his lesson. Any who may be tempted to indulge in similar activities should remember that the old proverb warns that ashes always fly in the face of him who throws them.

"Take care when throwing stones. Watch out when trying to put other people in their proper place. And keep in mind this little story of one customer to another in a grocer's shop: 'How did that naughty little boy of yours get hurt yesterday?' The other customer smiled graciously—in-deed charmingly—as she replied: 'That good little boy of yours hit him on the head with a stick.'"—FRANCIS GAY.

Alerting all sixth-formers and school teachers

THE Inter-School Christian Fellowship have prepared some splendid courses to help those who are currently studying for "A" levels. They are not "cram" courses, but offer field work and study relative to the particular subject being taken. They are held at very interesting parts of the country, mainly during the EASTER VACATION.

Here are some of the courses and where they are being held :

Subject	Location
R.E.	Chester College
Social Service	Chester College
Ecology	Isle of Man and Isle of Arran
Arts	Durham
Chemistry	Chester and Nuneaton
Mathematics	Swanage
Physics	Northampton and Nuneaton
Geology	Ballycastle (Northern Ireland) and Isle of Arran
Geography	Matlock, Swanage and Wadhurst (Sussex)

This last course is from July 24th to 29th. All the others will be during the Easter vacation.

GRANTS. Many education authorities are prepared to give grants of up to fifty per cent of the cost to help pupils attend these courses, which are closely related to "A" level studies. Where better could one study these subjects than in a Christian atmosphere with other Christian young people and under Christian teachers?

The cost ranges from about £8 to £15 according to the length of the course. Here is a holiday with a difference. Some of the centres are by the sea and others are in the heart of the country. For fuller details write to: The Inter-School Christian Fellowship, 47 Marylebone Lane, London, W1M 6AX.

A.C.T.

The Association of Christian Teachers is another fellowship which our Elim school teachers should know about. It keeps teachers briefed on many aspects of the profession. Conferences are arranged from time to time. The Easter one will be in Christ Church College, Canterbury, during the vacation and will review educational trends, examine schemes which are currently emerging, and focus attention on recent reports and publications by the Department of Education and Science. Among the papers to be given are "The Christian Teacher's Dilemma" and "Pastoral Responsibility in the Infant School."

The annual conference of the A.C.T. will be held in Sunbury Court, Sunbury on Thames, on March 3rd to 5th. Subjects range from "Life Themes in the Junior School" to "Teaching Aids." Among those taking part will be Dr. H. D. McDonald, D.D., Ph.D., the Vice-Principal of London Bible College.

Full details can be obtained from: The Secretary, A.C.T., 47 Marylebone Lane, London, W1M 6AX.

Christian Unions

Every Elim pupil should seek to have a C.U. meeting in his day school. For details of how to go about this write to I.S.C.F. at the address given above.

Sunday school teachers and youth workers should encourage the young people under their supervision to attend the Christian Union meetings in their schools.

Galatians 6 : 11-18

"I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus" (v. 17).

In this closing passage of the Letter to the Galatians, Paul writes in his own hand. He adds his personal testimony to the argument against those who held to the importance of outward form and religious rite. He suggests that preoccupation with such matters is part of the world which was crucified unto him by the cross which had become his only glory (v. 14). The marks cherished by Paul were not those of the Jewish rite of circumcision, but those that his body bore for the sake of the cross and his Saviour. Have we any battle scars gained in the conflict to maintain the "honour of His cross"?

Tuesday, February 1st

Judges 1 : 1-21

"As I have done, so God hath required me" (v. 7).

God's laws cannot be broken. Over the centuries the expression of them may change and the circumstances vary, but the principles remain the same. Adoni-bezek considered the punishment meted out to him and realised that it was the same as he had handed out to seventy others (v. 7). The law of God, as he discovered, is as Paul crystallised it in his Letter to the Galatians: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Galatians 6 : 7). May we ever live so that from today's actions we will not reap pain or embarrassment tomorrow.

Wednesday, February 2nd

Judges 2 : 1-10

"There arose another generation after them, which knew not the Lord" (v. 10).

Ignorance of God and His ways is the most appalling ignorance of all. Who was responsible for the lack of education of the new generation?

The generation just passed must bear a large part of the responsibility for the ignorance of the present generation. To examine the failure of past generations to communicate adequately to their successors the knowledge of the Lord is essential. We must pray earnestly that God will enable us to avoid their mistakes and effectively to pass on the understanding He has graciously vested in us. Let us pray today for all those engaged in youth work and for all Christian parents that they will be used in the Christian education of the next generation.

Thursday, February 3rd

Judges 2 : 11-23

"The children of Israel did evil" (v. 11).

Today's passage summarises the conditions that we will find throughout the book of Judges, which contains the sad story of the rise or fall of the people of God contemporary with their allegiance to or their backsliding from their walk with God. Their ignorance of the Lord and their early failure to obey God's command to drive out the people of the land were primarily responsible for the repeated lapses of the people into sin. Times of revival were experienced through these dark ages of Israel's history, but only when individuals found power with God through faith (v. 16; Hebrews 11 : 32).

So much depends on each individual. Our prayer must be: "Send a revival, start the work in me."

Friday, February 4th

Judges 4 : 1-11

"If thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not . . ." (v. 8).

God revealed to Deborah the prophetess the method by which the people of Israel could be freed from the tyranny of Jabin, which produced some of the fiercest oppression of God's people during this period. As a woman Deborah could not lead the army. Barak was chosen for this task. Deborah prayed and passed on God's guidance, but Barak did the fighting. Each could not operate without the other. They recognised each other's ministries and their joint dependence on God.

We must always acknowledge that all do not have the same task in the economy of God. We are dependent on each other and God if we are to accomplish His purpose (1 Corinthians 3 : 6-9).

Saturday, February 5th

Judges 4 : 12-24

"The Lord discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots" (v. 15).

The preoccupation of any army engaging the army of Sisera would be the chariots of iron peculiar to it. These were the main strength of Jabin's oppression of the children of Israel. It is significant that the source from which these enemies of the Lord drew their strength was the cause of their destruction. It is generally believed that the heavy iron chariots were bogged down in the soft ground of the valley. Paul reminds us that the strength of men is as weakness to God (1 Corinthians 1 : 25). There is no power which can save those who exalt themselves against God.

Sunday, February 6th

Judges 5 : 1-18

"I will sing praise to the Lord God of Israel" (v. 3).

The two sides of the coin

by C. J. Sawyer

IN saying "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord," Jeremiah describes a life of purpose, fulfilment and triumph over adverse circumstances—a truly Christian ideal (Jeremiah 17 : 7, 8). It is promised to the one who trusts in the Lord, who clings to Him with earnest, determined faith.

In practice, however, such faith may have a grim aspect about it. It may not of itself produce the full life which the context depicts in such glowing terms : "For he shall be as a tree planted by the water, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green ; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit." Sometimes, indeed, this determined faith seems to produce the reverse ! What is the missing factor in this all too common experience ? The words "and whose hope the Lord is" contain the vital missing factor. They are no mere repetition of the earlier statement. They rather constitute the reverse side of the coin of faith. They are different. They must be, or the coin would be counterfeit.

On the first side, my own image looms large. It is I who must take the initiative and put my trust in the Lord. On the second side, though, I and my faith—so unsatisfactory at its best—have given place to the Lord, who has Himself become my hope, my trust, mighty and unwavering.

A little child steals a hand into his father's. His grip is too tiny to save him from stumbling or even to ease his loneliness. That is the first side of the coin. Then comes the answering pressure of the father's hand, warm and strong. That is the second side.

A very slender line first links the stranded vessel to the tug. It would snap at the first strain. This is the first side. The line is used to haul in a rope and the rope a cable, and soon vessel and tug are moving off together. That is the second side.

Many have missed the ultimate of blessing through looking at only one side of the coin of faith. Ada R. Habershon made no such mistake, as shown in her lovely hymn :

When I fear my faith will fail,
Christ will hold me fast.
When the tempter would prevail,
He can hold me fast.

I could never keep my hold—
He must hold me fast,
For my love is often cold—
He must hold me fast.

He will hold me fast,
He will hold me fast,
For my Saviour loves me so,
He will hold me fast.

DON'T GIVE UP !

Many years ago in an industrial town in Scotland a young woman took on a Sunday school class of boys. The worst, most unpromising one was named Bob. After two or three Sundays he did not turn up. The teacher went to look for him. Although the boy had been given new clothes by the superintendent, they were already ripped to pieces and filthy. He was given another new suit and invited to come again. He attended only once or twice. Once more the teacher went out to find him, only to discover that the second set of clothes had gone the way of the first.

"I am utterly discouraged about Bob," she said, "I fear we must give him up."

"Please don't do that," the superintendent pleaded. "Try him once more. Tell him I will give him a third suit of clothes if he will promise to attend regularly."

Bob did promise and attended faithfully after that. He became an earnest Christian. That obstinate, ragged, runaway boy was Robert Morrison, who became one of the greatest missionaries to China, translating the Bible into that difficult language and thus bringing the Word of God to millions.

No song is as sweet as the song of victory. Singing has played an important part in the celebration of the victories of the people of God. Following the mighty deliverance from Pharaoh at the Red Sea the children of Israel sang (Exodus 15 : 1). A day will dawn when all the redeemed of the Lord will sing a new song (Revelation 5 : 9). The predominant theme of the song will not change, but the note of victory and triumph will. Songs of praise should be a daily part of our worship and prayer (Ephesians 5 : 19).

From the President's pen Calling Boys and Girls!

I HAD intended to write to you more frequently than I have done, but somehow I have not been able to get around to doing this. To make up for it here is a page especially for you.

I hope you are enjoying going to Sunday school and all the other activities which are held for you. I always praise the Lord for the Elim Sunday school which used to be held in Rendle Street, Plymouth, for it was there as a boy that Jesus came into my life. By the way, have you accepted Jesus into your heart? If not, why not go to your Sunday school teacher and tell him or her that you would like to do just this? I am sure that they would be only too pleased to help you.

I am told that there are 250,000 Sunday school teachers in this country and all of them do this work freely and often at great personal sacrifice.

Do you appreciate your teachers as much as you should? I would ask you to do all you can to help them, for they are doing a great work for the Lord and for you. I still go to Sunday school every week and have no intention of giving up. It is just great to be there. I have been going for over forty years and I am set on a record; unless, of course, you beat me to it!

God answers prayer. We often hear people say something like this. It is good to hear it, but it is better to experience it for yourself.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Let me tell you what happened to me last December. I was on one of my tours in the North Midlands and had to travel by car from Beeston in Nottinghamshire to Ashbourne in Derbyshire, passing through Derby en route. I think all drivers would agree that the worst hazard on the road is freezing fog. It was so dense that it was difficult to see the tail lights of the car in front and it was impossible to see any road signs. What is more, I was not familiar with the road. I prayed and asked the Lord to guide me. There loomed up in front of me a lorry. I believed that the Lord had answered my prayer. I followed the lorry for mile after mile for nearly two hours, when I suddenly lost sight of it. I stopped the car and asked the way and what do you think? Yes. I was only about 100 yards from a roundabout which was on the main road to Ashbourne and when I passed the roundabout the fog had lifted and I arrived without any trouble at all. God will answer your prayers and be your Guide and Friend if you trust Him. God is interested in every part of your life and wants to be a part of it, so why not ask Him to play His part every day you live?

Here are one or two sayings which will do you good.

"When you are down in the mouth think of Jonah—he came out all right in the end."

"No one can get rid of a temper by losing it"; of course you can get the victory through prayer.

"It is a good report when some people tell us they are not themselves today. It is a big improvement."

"In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths."

Have you heard the story of the boy who went to a party? When they had all sat down to tea, the host asked him if he wanted another piece of cake which was made especially for him. His answer was a blunt "No," to which his parents said: "No, what?" Immediately he replied, "No jolly fear."

This was not only rude, it was certainly most ungrateful. Are we not ungrateful to Jesus unless we give Him thanks for all His goodness to us? We ought to say every day the words of Psalm 103:1: "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless His holy name."

Can you work this out? Take a letter from each word in each line. The last line gives a clue to the word itself:

My first is in apple and also in pear,
My second is in lion, but not in bear;
My third is in big, though never in small,
My fourth is in rise, but not in fall;
My fifth is in dark, but not in light,
My all is often the cause of a fight.

God bless you all!

ARCHIE A. BIDDLE.

An answer for today

Everyone is living, yet is it a life
When man can only cause hatred, pain and strife?

It's a constant revolution against what is right

And gradually we're slipping into sin's darkest night.

No one cares about the beauty in life which is real,

They just go on searching, but there's nothing to feel.

Ask the man in the street how he gets peace and bliss,

Wait for his answer and it will sound just like this:

"Give me my drink, my drugs or my smoke,
And I'll feel just as if life is one big joke!"
But when the feeling's ended, his life seems a bore,

Nothing is real, so he grasps out for more.

Lonely and aimless, he just lives in sin,
Having nothing to help him, living within.

Wait! There's one answer; it comes from above—

It's Jesus, a Saviour, with forgiveness and love.

He really is with us and knows of today.

He can lift all our strife and brighten our way.

He brings peace and meaning, plus life that is true.

So now, please, do think. Will His way be for you?

It leads straight on upward to a land of delight,

So if you don't know Him, please seek Him tonight.

Church reports

BALLYMENA

Pastor : A. D. Sandford

The first weekend of 1972 saw a party of Irish college students at the Ballymena church. At the Saturday rally some seventy teenagers heard the gospel story in testimony, song and word, some, we believe, for the first time. We pray that the seed sown may provide a plentiful harvest to the glory of God.

While refreshments were being served, ten off-duty soldiers came into the church; earlier that day they had been given invitations by some of the girls from the church. These young men were bewildered by the situation in Ulster. It was our joy to tell them what Christ's transforming power could do to their lives.

One of the students ministered at the Sunday morning service. After the elements had been distributed, the pastor was about to place the cloth over the Communion table when he felt led to ask anyone in the meeting who had not yet accepted Christ to dedicate his life to Him. A young man in his twenties signified that he wanted to get right with God. It was learned later that he had been an alcoholic and had attended the meeting on the Saturday night. He came to the evening gospel service, his face aglow!

On Sunday afternoon the students participated in the Sunday school and Bible class. Some were questioned on their call to full-time service.

On Sunday evening the church was completely packed to hear the gospel proclaimed by Raymond Cotter. There were approximately 300 people in the church and some men had to stand as every available seat was occupied. God is really blessing in Ballymena and the people are hungry for the things of God.

ROBIN HARVEY.

BIRMINGHAM, SELLY OAK

Pastor : A. Caple

A visit to the Alton Road church is always something to look forward to. On Saturday, January 8th, the writer was particularly pleased to be invited. He was a member of the church some twenty years previously. It is wonderful to hear of a church that has to extend its seating capacity to make room for all who wish to attend. Since that time twenty years ago, when the congregation on Sunday nights would have been around sixty (I speak from memory), the work has continued to grow and the 200-plus seating became insufficient, hence the extension.

The old platform, which took up a fair amount of room, and the wall behind it were taken away. The whole of the main body of the church then became available for seating the congregation. By use of sliding panels the former minor hall became the platform. This can be readily converted to use for midweek activities and smaller functions. The whole effect is very pleasing to behold.

Pastor P. S. Brewster was invited as the preacher for the opening weekend. In spite of the extra seating there were over seventy standing; the entrance, vestry and kitchen were also all full.

There was a note of triumph throughout the whole service and both the singing by the Upper Gornal Y.F.C. Choir and the ministry by Pastor Brewster were of a high order. We pray that the blessing of God will continue to rest upon Pastor and Mrs. Caple and the members as they continue their work for Christ.

RYDE

Pastor : I. R. Hall

We recently held our first Men's Weekend, when G. N. Backhouse, Pastor of the Bourne-mouth (Winton) church, was the speaker. The Church Session decided to hold a Men's Weekend because of the high proportion of men in the congregation, usually over forty per cent. Between them they formed a singing group which ministered with great blessing at the evening meetings.

The Saturday night meeting was supported by friends from the Assemblies of God at Cowes and Sandown. Included in the programme were Mr. B. Parkman, guitar soloist, Mr. P. Kershaw, accordionist, who led the chorus singing, and Mr. F. Dives, who gave a thrilling testimony of healing.

On the following evening Mr. C. Ashley opened in prayer, Mr. A. Hurley was the soloist, Mr. P. Rowe recited, and Messrs. D. Diggins and G. Rayner led the choruses. Mr. D. Wright was the pianist and the pastor convened the meetings.

The ministry of Pastor Backhouse was greatly appreciated. There was a real sense of the Lord's presence in the meetings. As the first special meetings since the Ryde Revival Crusade conducted by Tony Chamberlain two months ago, they provided an encouraging indication of the permanent value of the contacts made and the blessings received then.

CREWE

Pastor : M. C. Epton

In November 1971 we bade a sad farewell to Pastor D. Fenton, who took up fresh ministry at Dudley. At the farewell service our pastor and his wife were presented with a gift and we wished them both God's richest blessing.

At the induction service of our new pastor, M. C. Epton, we experienced a deep sense of the Lord's presence. Pastor A. D. Leitch, of Macclesfield, led the meeting. Pastor F. J. Day, of Longton, gave the charge to the pastor. Pastor E. J. Thomas, in bringing the charge to the church, left us in no doubt as to our duty. Mr. Epton invited Mrs. Epton and their children to the platform to present them to us.

During the few weeks in which Pastor Epton has been with us the Lord has kindled His fire in our hearts. A Crusader group has been formed and a number of long absent friends have been turned back to God. The whole church has been filled with the expectancy of God's blessing.

During the week preceding Christmas our Sunday school pupils' parents were all visited and given personal invitations to our prizegiving and carol service. For the very first time since I accepted Christ as my Saviour, I witnessed the filling of our church to capacity.

We expect to complete the construction of our baptistry soon and look forward with joy to our first baptismal service in our own building.

We pray much for an anointed ministry through our pastor, and ask you to join us in prayer that our blessed Saviour will give an even greater world-wide harvest of souls in 1972.

J. D. TALBOT.

MAGHERA

At Christmas, while on vacation, it was again my privilege to minister at the Maghera church, which is not yet one year old. It was good to see young people who had an experience with Christ at the previous mission attending the Bible studies. Determination is what they believe in at Maghera and this is why the work is growing. Four months ago they opened a Sunday school which is attended by thirty to forty children. A Bible class is held simultaneously, supported by about fifteen people between thirteen and thirty years of age.

The Sunday services have grown since June last and now number forty-five to fifty. They have no pastor as yet, but they are determined to see the work of God grow.

The area is mostly Roman Catholic and is difficult, but at a recent campaign God moved and about sixty decided for Christ, some of whom were Catholics.

In November 1971 the name of the Democratic Republic of Congo was changed to THE REPUBLIC OF ZAIRE. This does not appear to have received the international publicity one would expect, but nevertheless it is an accomplished fact. Since the name Congo forms part of the title of Congo Evangelistic Mission, our C.E.M. friends had no alternative but to amend their title to read :

THE FOLLY OF ASA

2 Chronicles 16 : 12

by F. LAVENDER

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

HERE is one of the saddest stories in the Old Testament, for it tells of a man who served the Lord vigorously in his youth, but who resented the Lord rebuking him for a sin he committed. He would not humble himself afterwards and he died in a backslidden condition.

After the death of king David, in fact during the reign of his son, Solomon, Israel turned from God to idolatry and as a result, the nation split into two, Judah in the south, Israel in the north. When Asa came to the throne of Judah he followed the Lord with all his heart, as David had done. Idolatry was overthrown. Asa even deposed his mother from her exalted position because of her idolatry. Judah turned to the Lord and became prosperous and peaceful.

Early in Asa's reign a huge army from Ethiopia attacked Judah, but Asa's confidence in the Lord was so strong and humble that the Lord honoured his trust and the Ethiopian army was defeated.

Twenty-five years later, however, Baasha, king of Israel, made plans to attack Judah with an army much inferior to the great army of Ethiopia and Asa sent to Syria to ask for help instead of trusting in the Lord. Because of this the Lord sent His servant, Hanani, to rebuke Asa and to urge him to put his trust in the Lord. Asa was so angry that he threw Hanani into prison and began to oppress others who he thought were involved. When he contracted a painful disease soon afterward, Asa would not return to the Lord but tried to find a cure elsewhere. His doctors could not deal with the Divinely inflicted disease, so Asa died prematurely, stubborn, unrepentant, unforgiven.

There is a message here for the nations. The world is in the grip of a deadly, menacing disease. This disease is called by many names, such as fear, suspicion and self-interest, but the Bible calls it sin. Because of this sickness the world is facing disaster and destruction. The Lord Jesus Christ is able to deal with the disease. He can provide the remedy, but the nations still go instead to false physicians who cannot heal them. They call conferences, set up organisations, invent more destructive weapons—anything rather than turn to Christ. How can they have peace without the Prince of peace? How can they be healed except by enthroning Christ?

Sin also poisons individual lives. The Bible plainly declares that we have all sinned (Romans 3 : 23) and that the result of our sin is death, separation from God (Romans 6 : 23). On every hand men and women are dying without God and without hope; the tragedy is that it need not be so. God has made a way of salvation. The Lord Jesus died in order to save us from our sin (1 Corinthians 15 : 3). He is the only One able to restore men to God and, if they will receive Him, He will save them from the sickness, power and penalty of sin.

Have you ever asked the Lord Jesus Christ to save you from sin? There is no need for you to go to a lost, Christless eternity, because He has promised to receive all who sincerely ask Him to save them. Do not harden yourself wilfully and stubbornly as Asa did, but accept Christ now as your Saviour, crown Him as your Lord and know forgiveness of sins and peace with God.

THE MINISTRY

Notes of the address given at the last ordination service

"Take heed to the ministry, which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it" (Colossians 4 : 17).

MOSES, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Amos, Joel, Peter, James, John, Paul and R. D. Bradley have one thing in common: all are preachers. Preachers are in good company, therefore they need always to maintain a high regard for their calling and to hold it always in high esteem. This will keep them true to their mission in life. Paul did this constantly. He declared "I am an apostle to the Gentiles" and "I magnify my office." He wrote: "How shall they hear without a preacher? How shall they preach except they be sent? As it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace and bring glad tidings of good things."

Paul never doubted his calling. It mattered not what he did, where he was, what his circumstances, he was always sure that he was in the Divine will, at the centre of things. He was God's chosen vessel, ordained to be a missionary to far-away lands, to suffer great hardships in the name and for the cause of Christ. "I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles"; "Show how great things he must suffer for My name's sake" were the demands upon him.

Those ordained to the ministry must be absolutely sure that they are in God's will. Take Paul as an example: "I was made a minister"; "who am less than the least of all saints, that I should preach the unsearchable riches of Christ." It will be theirs to find out, to investigate these riches and then to preach them. Paul declared again that he was "allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel," God counting him faithful, putting him into the ministry. He constantly thanked God for this honour.

Throughout his writings, Paul's was the pen of a ready writer: "I am appointed a preacher, an apostle, and a teacher"; "I am made a minister"; "manifested His word which is committed

by R. D. BRADLEY

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SMETHWICK, WARLEY

unto me, according to the commandment of God our Saviour." Even when in prison, bound in chains, he gloried, saying that he was "an ambassador in bonds."

Dwell on this aspect of the ministry. Get the glory and the honour of it. We are in a man's world, doing a man's job. Paul writing to the Church at Corinth placed the minister in a unique relationship with God; "God hath given unto us the ministry of reconciliation"; "We are ambassadors for Christ"; "as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." Could the minister's position be higher?

Such a position brings corresponding responsibility as to doctrine and as to character and conduct. Read with great care Paul's great appeal to the Ephesian elders (Acts 20 : 28-32). The Church of Christ must be looked after, cared for, nurtured, nourished, built up. This is the work of the ministry.

To Timothy, a young man just launching out, Paul wrote: "Give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine . . . Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them . . . Take heed unto thyself, and to the doctrine." You will need to "labour in the word, and in doctrine" if you are to implement it. If our churches are to be sound in the faith they must know the truth, and this is the minister's work. We are commanded to preach the word: "Speak thou the things which become sound doctrine"; Teach, and exhort, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the doctrine which is according to godliness.

This is a serious business and it must always appear so to those to whom we preach. "I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead . . . Preach the word, reprove, rebuke, exhort."

Preach with faith and certainty, never wavering. "These things command and teach"; "Teach and exhort with all authority"—the minister's in view of his office. They will be held responsible at the Day of Judgment for the spiritual and moral state of the churches under their care.

Church discipline is an aspect rarely dealt with, but it is of vital importance. The Church has a right and a duty to exercise it. False teachers will arise in its ranks. Scripture says "Whose mouths must be stopped"; "rebuken them sharply"; "these things speak, exhort and rebuke with all authority"; "heretics after the first and second admonition, reject."

Sinning within the fellowship is all too common in these permissive days. Never be afraid to take steps to keep your church free from the pollutions of our age. Our society has rejected God and His commandments, but our responsibility is always to insist on the Christian attitude to life. Where the Word is not adhered to, the Bible declares, "Withdraw thyself"; "note that man and have no fellowship with him"; "if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man and have no company with him." This Word in our hands is both sword and shield.

The difficulties of the ministry could occupy much time. Do not expect to be always popular. There will be times when you will feel terribly alone, like Paul: "All in Asia have forsaken me." He was dearly loved by some, bitterly hated by others. He had both wonderful friends and strong critics. He spoke of the afflictions of the Gospel, adding: "endure all things"; "Endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ."

The rewards of the ministry are enormous. By your preaching you will save some. You will be privileged under God to present souls redeemed before the Father. Your preaching will transform lives.

Our real reward will be at the judgment seat of Christ. Paul claimed: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them that love His appearing."

WE sometimes wonder if the Christian public are aware of the problems which face publishers of evangelical literature. Many will know that some publications of long standing, with names which once were nationally known, have disappeared. When it is realised that one of the very largest evangelistic associations was backing one of these papers and yet it has gone, the challenge is seen in all its starkness.

As regards book publishing in the spiritual realm it has to be conceded that most Christians are not readers of their own material. Novels, the excellent productions from the Dave Wilkerson group and similar books have a reasonable circulation, but, unfortunately, Christian books are so often sold in quantities of but a few thousands. When you consider that secular books, and some of a variety calculated to depress and even to deprave, sell in tens and sometimes hundreds of thousands, we are made furiously to think.

Part of this is, of course, a reflection of the sadly back-slidden state of Great Britain. The Church is in a minority numerically, indeed the church-going community is but a small part of the population, even including those of non-evangelical persuasion.

Magazines are often unfairly compared. Everyone connected with the publishing world knows that circulation is all-important to success. Certain costs are basic to a publication whether you print 100 or 100,000. It follows that the selling price can be reduced considerably if the number sold is increased, or alternatively the number of pages or features can be improved or increased. Many secular magazines have circulations numbered in millions. One women's magazine has claimed that it disposes of over 5,000,000 copies every week. At least fifty-five per cent of every such publication is taken up with adverts. The same is true of daily newspapers and it must be remembered that newspapers with circulations of over 1,000,000 are in financial difficulties. Christian publications cannot command such remunerative advertisements (even if they wanted to) because of small circulation.

We make a special plea for your interest in Christian publications, not least those of our own movement. Perhaps we would be shocked to compare the amount Christians spend on secular newspapers, books and magazines with what they expend on Christian publications. We want others to buy good Christian literature. How much do we buy ourselves?

WORRY!

by R. Williams

Broadcast on "Thought for the day" over B.B.C. Radio Medway

ON the quiet, I'm a bit of a worrier, and I don't suppose I'm the only one! I sometimes envy those people who never seem to care what happens. Some even laugh when things go wrong. I wish I could! I'm working at it.

I've been thinking about this problem, as so many seem to be affected by it. I'm sure there's an answer to it.

A minister tells of a friend of his who was reckoned never to worry. Apparently he tried it once, because he noticed that everybody else seemed to be doing it and he thought that he might be missing out on something. He set aside one day. He wasn't going to do anything but worry. After a good sleep and a big meal (he reckons that you can't worry successfully on an empty stomach) he set about his worrying. When the minister asked him how he got on, his friend said that he persevered until noon and then gave up because it didn't make sense.

Why do so many people indulge in this paralysing pastime? We're told that it brings on ulcers and changes your outlook on things. It can affect your work. Some even consider that it's a killer. Now that is serious. Anything that can do those things to me can't really have my best interests at heart.

It's about time we realised that worry is a destructive process. We weren't born with this worry habit; we acquired it. There is a proper time to begin an effective attack on worry, and that's now.

A psychologist states: "Worry is the most disintegrating enemy of man." A physician declares: "Worry is the most subtle and destructive of all human diseases." Now I know that some things really do cause genuine concern, but surely we weren't created to be terrorised by anonymous fears. Don't you think it's about time we took ourselves to task on this matter and really thought about this problem? Make no mistake, it's a real one.

One step to take in breaking this stranglehold is to believe that you can, with God's help. I'm sure that the majority of our problems are imaginary, but they become real by the frenzy we work ourselves into. It's important that we look our problems in the face and don't worry about their size.

I know of people who have actually found a cure for worry. They claim that sharing their problem with God in the simplest of ways has relieved them of many burdens they'd have to carry alone. In the Bible, in the book of Job, the man known for his patience, it says "The thing which I greatly feared is come upon me." This shows that we can engineer our difficulties.

In the New Testament there's a quotation saying "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Really the suggestion is that we can help make ourselves into the kind of people we think we are. From now on I've decided to think differently, because I'm sure God doesn't want me weighed down by worries. He gave His Son to lift our burdens, not make them heavier. Why not join me in asking God to grant a constant release from unnecessary worry?

O for a faith that brings me triumph

When defeat seems strangely near,

O for faith that changes doubting

Into vict'ry's ringing cheer.

Three wrong responses

by H. P. Barry Benney

The most important thing that ever happened to Barry Benney was being found by Christ at the Elin Pentecostal Church, Falmouth, during Pastor A. Anstey's ministry at that delightful Cornish resort. For the past thirteen years or so he has engaged in pastoral ministry with Assemblies of God. Along with his present pastorate at Croydon, he lectures a little at Kenley Bible College and has something of a passion for writing. Children with a taste for adventure will enjoy his books, The Cornish Camp Mystery and Topham Tiger Hunters. His wife, Dorothy, and children Sharon (fifteen) and Stephen (twelve) complete a happy family group.

CHRIST NEEDS MEN! He always has; He always will. With a world to be won and time rushing down the drain, there is no danger of unemployment in this business of building the Church of God. The need for dedicated disciples willing to make a total response to the constant call of Christ has never been greater. Tread carefully, however, for there is a wrong way as well as a right way to respond to the call to service.

Luke 9 tells the story of twelve ordinary men who were thrust out into the front line armed with power to defeat devils and diseases. Luke 10 shows how their mission was expanded to include a work force of seventy. Tucked in between (Luke 9: 57-62) comes the story of three promising candidates who flopped their preliminary examination in discipleship. Each responded to Christ.

Each made the wrong response. Let us slip into the Divine interview room and learn by their mistakes.

Meet Mr. Self-confidence

This first fellow is the complete extrovert. Luke calls him "a certain man." We find him certain in the positive as well as in the vague sense! Without waiting to be asked, he breezes up to the Lord in the middle of the street and, with all the brash arrogance of his breed, gushes: "Lord, I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest." This statement is surely a boast as big as the universe! In my Bible atlas "whithersoever" covers a whole heap of territory and includes at least one Calvary. If this fellow is sincere we have a spiritual giant on our hands. Get John Wesley to stand on Paul's shoulders, add a couple of Moodys and a Spurgeon or two, and still this fellow would be heard shouting over the tops of their heads!

Anyone but Christ might have been taken in by these grand words. Matthew tells us that the fellow is a scribe, a bit of a V.I.P., obviously a possible asset to the Christian cause. Most of us would have been impressed and perhaps a little flattered at the prospect of winning such an important and seemingly zealous follower; but then the Master is always more interested in quality than in apparent qualifications. Quietly, but vividly, Jesus points out that there is no accommodation with the job. Just as quietly, but just as vividly, our blustering friend vanishes from the pages of Scripture. The man who claimed that he would claw his way up Everest in the steps of the Master, or battle to the ocean bed at His bidding, is struck dumb at the first hint of sacrifice.

Presumably, Mr. Self-confidence had been netted by the glowing reports and apparent glamour of the spectacular Galilean crusades. Perhaps he dreamed of becoming a prominent personality in a popular movement about to sweep the country. Certainly his professed enthusiasm spluttered like a defused bomb at the first touch of harsh reality.

Face facts before offering your life to Christ. There is no glitter and little glamour. Serving God is mostly unspectacular routine and thankless hard work. Mind you, there is a weight of glory—and glory is to glitter as a pocketful of good old-fashioned sovereigns is to a handful of tinsel!

Meet Mr. Self-conscious

The next candidate is a great contrast. Here is your typical introvert, the sort with the personality of a snail. At every demand of life he withdraws immediately into his shell. "Follow Me," encourages Jesus. "Lord, suffer ME FIRST to go and bury my father" is the immediate excuse. I say "excuse" since Christ would hardly have demanded his discipleship if there had been a genuine need to stay at home and nurse a dying father. No, like a lot of us shy folk, this man suffered from ME FIRST. To be self-conscious is to be overwhelmingly conscious of self, an unhealthy condition since self-consciousness is often no more than simple pride disguised in a mock humble suit. Genuine humility gets on with the job God gives it to do without fuss or publicity; false pride can use blushes like the advertising men use neon signs.

ME FIRST is the family disease with all of us Adamites. Lurking in every heart lingers a king-size ego, who loves to jostle himself to the head of every queue. When ego sports a thick skin he pushes forward into prominence, but when he wears a thin skin he preserves his dignity by withdrawing from every situation which threatens his all-important pride. I think our shy friend was allowing his heart to deceive him. ME FIRST remains ME FIRST even when it dons a halo of self-martyrdom and pleads family responsibilities.

No prayer beginning "LORD" can logically contain "ME FIRST"—can it? The two terms are as compatible as a Wall Street banker and the Kremlin. The only known cure is for King Ego to abdicate and offer his throne to King Jesus.

The strange thing is that our poor confused friend Ego finds his true dignity the moment he bows the knee to Christ. Try it and see!

Meet Mr. Everyman

Few of us would slot neatly into either of these first two categories. Most of us would find the blushing introvert's shoes too tight and the blustering extrovert's over large. Like the third candidate, we hover somewhere in between and favour the party branded: "Consecration—with reservations." "Lord, I will follow Thee; BUT let me first go and bid them farewell, which are at home at my house." Too diffident to push himself forward, too ashamed to hang back, this good man is willing BUT—.

We may be the sheep of His pasture, Psalm 23 may be our favourite, yet when it comes to obeying the Good Shepherd's voice we are full of more BUTS than a billy goat—and I seem to remember something about the goats being weeded out from the sheep-pens!

How can a prayer beginning "LORD" contain this sort of "BUT"? "Lord" means director, controller, governor, foreman, manager, boss, leader, guide, chief, head, commander, ruler, principal—whichever way you put it, "LORD" means that Christ's will is our way and no BUTS about it!

Happiness is shaped like a "yes" to every loving command of Christ. Paul hit on the instant secret to successful Christian living the very day he met Jesus. On his knees he spread a blank engagement book before the Sovereign of the universe and used the only prayer which can sincerely begin "LORD":

"Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?"

TESTIMONY TIME

From Hindu to Christian

By RAMAN SINGH

I CAME of Hindu descent. This is a religion that worships a god called "Ram." I believed that my religion was the best and I worshipped very sincerely. I was taught to worship three gods: the god of the sun, the god of the air and the god Hanuman.

One night, as I was coming from the cinema, I saw a large crowd and I became curious to know what was happening, so I went to see. There I heard a man preaching: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

I had never heard before of everlasting life, for in my religion I was never taught of life after death. Each night I continued to attend the crusade, for I wanted to find out more clearly what this everlasting life was. The Lord proved to me that He is the Way, the Truth and the Life. I decided to give my life over to Him and He accepted me, a sinner, and washed me in His own precious blood.

It is ten years now since I became a Christian and the Christ whom I serve has never failed me. He provides, He heals, He comforts and He keeps me by His power.

CALVARY

an outline study by Raymond Cotter
(Elim Bible College student)

Luke 23 : 33-43

WHAT Calvary meant to the Lord Jesus Christ can be summed up : it meant giving His all.

Calvary was called Golgotha, or the place of a skull. There, the worst of criminals paid the price for their crimes.

Why, then, was Christ found on the cross in such a place? We can only reply, "For me !"

*He took my sins and my sorrows,
He made them His very own.
He bore the burden to Calvary
And suffered and died alone.*

Suffering and scorn

Isaiah had a vision of the sufferings of the Redeemer. Read his fifty-third chapter : "He was wounded . . . bruised . . . despised." He who knew no sin was made sin for our sakes that we might be made the righteousness of God.

Humility

"He humbled Himself . . . unto death, even the death of the cross" (Philippians 2 : 8). He was willing to become sin that we might be freed from sin. What a wonderful Saviour He is !

Repentance and forgiveness

Two thieves were crucified with Christ at Calvary. One mocked, but the other repented (Luke 23 : 34-41). Repentance is the way of forgiveness.

In the light of what Calvary cost Christ, what does it mean to you? It could mean forgiveness, cleansing, renewal !

Book reviews

Spurgeon on Baptism, published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 16p, postage and packing 3p extra.

While the writings of Thomas Watson, the Puritan preacher of the seventeenth century, were admired by C. H. Spurgeon, his treatise on Infant Baptism was contrary to what Spurgeon believed and taught. Rather than leave it out of his translation, Spurgeon wrote his own appendix on the subject. Although it covers only twenty-five pages, it is pellucid and full. It is not a book that one could give to a new convert. It calls for diligent and careful study. The mode of believers' baptism is dealt with very fully—it is Spurgeon's refutation of Infant Baptism. This is a Bible study on a great theme. It carries a picture of the noted Metropolitan Tabernacle minister on the front cover.

This is a book that should help Christians to see the importance of Believers' Baptism and its place in New Testament teaching.

W. J. HILLIARD.

The Eternal Covenant, by Mary Hajos. Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 20p, postage and packing 3p extra.

This small book, simply written, with short, easily read chapters, is the story of God's dealings with a Hungarian Jewess, Mary Hajos, in the eventide of her life, desiring to record the Lord's deeds toward herself and her husband, takes the reader gradually through her life, showing how gently but surely God led her from the darkness of Judaism to the light of the Gospel and then just as surely into His service. Throughout this extremely interesting story runs the theme of the eternal covenant of Jehovah with His people Israel.

This book will bless all lovers of Israel and also show the Church the need to care for any Jews who may be led to accept Christ.

TABLES AND CHAIRS

By Sheila Price

"Daddy," asked Carol, "how much did Jesus sell His tables and chairs for?"

"What do you mean, Carol?"

"Well, Daddy, Jesus used to work in the carpenter's shop, didn't He, and He used to help his father make furniture. I have been wondering what He used to charge for the tables and chairs that He sold."

"I do not know the answer to that, Carol," replied her father. "But I know that the people who bought furniture from Jesus would be very pleased."

"Yes, Daddy," said Carol. "They would have had the best furniture in all the world I should think."

"I agree, Carol," said her father, "for Jesus would use the very best wood and the finest tools. He would take great care in making tables and chairs and He would spend time polishing them until He was satisfied that His customers would have the very best that He could give them."

"Jesus must have loved the people very much to go to all that trouble to make furniture for them, mustn't He, Daddy?"

"Well, Carol, Jesus loves us all. He wants us all to have the very best that He can give. This is why Jesus went to Calvary. He gave His life for us, didn't He, Carol? It was the very best that Jesus could give."

"Oh, I know," said Carol, "and we must try to give Jesus our very best in return, mustn't we? Oh, Daddy, I would love to have a chair that Jesus had made, wouldn't you?"

Jesus comes to YOU

by G. N. Backhouse

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
WINTON, BOURNEMOUTH

"John forbad Him, saying, I have need to be baptised of Thee, and comest Thou to me?"

(Matthew 3 : 14).

IT must have been a thrilling moment in the life of John the Baptist when he saw Jesus coming towards him. He had just been describing Him as One who was mightier than he, whose shoes he was not worthy to bear. On this memorable day John had been baptising penitents and receiving publicans, sinners and soldiers. When Jesus asked for baptism, John, startled and taken aback, shrank from His request, for it seemed to reverse the order of things, as if the Teacher were to become the pupil. "Comest Thou to ME?" he cried.

Marvellous condescension

John was conscious of the humility of Jesus, who had laid aside His glory to pursue His sacrificial mission. In the ivory palaces He had been surrounded with the praises of the angels, but He had left it to come to sinful men. Well might every man exclaim with surprise and astonishment, as he perceives the Saviour threading His way through the multitudes down the centuries, "Comest Thou to me?" Yes, He comes to seek you and to make Himself known as your Saviour, Redeemer, Friend.

Matchless love

The scene was the upper room. Imagine the Master showing His love by washing the feet of His disciples. He knelt before them, one after the other, a bowl of water before Him and a towel girded round Him. Peter watched, realising that his turn would soon come. The critical moment arrived (John 13 : 6). Peter protested strongly, only to find that he had not realised the depth of love that prompted such an act. Jesus said to them all, "Know ye what I have done to you?"

They did not know. He had set an example for them to follow.

But none of the ransomed ever knew How deep were the waters crossed.

This Divine, matchless love is for every man, however great his sin—even me!

Merciful patience

In the garden of Gethsemane the disciples had fallen asleep. "Then cometh He to His disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners" (Matthew 26 : 45). The Lord might well have condemned them and finished with them, but, in infinite, merciful patience, He forbore.

We marvel that the Lord comes again and again to men who resist His grace or grow slack and careless in His service. His longsuffering, merciful patience adds weight to our text.

*He is tender and loving and patient with me,
While He cleanses my heart of its dross,
But there's no condemnation, I know I am free,
For my sins are all nailed to the cross.*

Mighty interest

"The Master is come, and calleth for thee," said Martha to Mary in her grief (John 11 : 28). This gives emphasis to the truth that Jesus' appeal is to the individual. There is a glad surprise when a person knows that such an inquiry is addressed to him, personally. No man felt it more than Paul when he said: "The Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me" (Galatians 2 : 20).

"Comest Thou to me?"—yes, He comes to you, because of His marvellous condescension, His matchless love, His merciful patience and His mighty interest.

As His custom was . . .

Luke 4 : 16

CUSTOM and tradition play a considerable part in our lives. Often we are not particularly conscious of this and almost automatically we obey their dictates. It would be unthinkable for most of us to dispense with the traditional Christmas dinner of turkey with trimmings, followed by Christmas pudding and mince pies. Sending Christmas cards and gifts to our friends, carol singing, decorating Christmas trees and our rooms, and the exciting climax for the children of hanging up their stockings are essential to our way of celebrating the festival of Christmas.

We enjoyed the company of a Swedish visitor over the festive season and learned something of the customs observed in Sweden. The children there open their gifts on Christmas Eve, receiving them from the foot of the Christmas tree. On December 25th the traditional meal is dried fish, followed by rice pudding, and later in the day pork sandwiches are enjoyed by all the family. These different customs in a different land are just as acceptable and well established as our own.

I was surprised to find what a lengthy description the dictionary gives to the noun "custom," viz. common practice or habit, established method or manner and general mode of action. Much of our lives is governed by customs, both good and bad. How many things we do simply by force of habit, without giving a thought as to why we do them, yet not to do such things would seem strange and in some instances almost unthinkable. Life is more satisfactory if it has some well-defined guide lines. I do not advocate a solid, stereotyped existence, but certain self-imposed rules are essential.

An example is found in the commencement of the earthly ministry of the Lord Jesus. He came to Nazareth and "as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." The Son of God, far above all in power, Divine sufficiency and intellect, surely always got His priorities right and His custom was regular attendance at the House of God on the Sabbath Day. The implication is obvious. If the Lord made it His custom to worship in the synagogue every Sabbath, surely we should make it ours and be in His House every Lord's Day. In spite of today's slackness and sloppy way of talking about Christian duty, it should not be a thing of fits and starts, but our regular, joyful custom to go to church. There are 112 waking hours in every week; surely we do not begrudge giving three of them exclusively to worship the living God?

Here are some lines from one of our veteran pastors, H. A. Court, which we would do well to think upon :

MORBUS SABBATICUS

a disease that is seriously on the increase

Morbus Sabbaticus, or Sunday sickness, is a disease peculiar to churchgoers. The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday. No symptoms are felt. On Saturday night the patient sleeps well. He eats a hearty breakfast, but about church time the attack comes on, and continues until services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easy, and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better and is able to take a walk and talk about cricket or politics.

About church time he gets another attack and stays at home. He retires early—sometimes sleeps well, wakes up on Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the next Sunday.

The peculiar features of the disease are : (1) It always attacks professing church people. (2) It never makes its appearance except on Sundays. (3) The symptoms vary, but it never interferes

TELLING OTHERS

by Adrian L. Hawkes

Notes used at Elim Youth Camp, Fraisthorpe, Bridlington

SOMEONE has worked out that if every Christian won three people to Christ each year, assuming that there were only 5,000 Christians in the world, their converts being taught to do the same, in one year there would be 20,000 Christians, in nine years there would be over 1,000,000,000, and in ten years the whole world would be evangelised and saved.

From the Pentecostal Church's angle if there were 12,000,000 of us in the world, and if each one of us reached just one for Christ each year in the first year there would be 24,000,000, and in ten years there would be nearly 13,000,000,000 Pentecostal Christians.

Every church member must be a catcher of fish

Read Mark 1:17, 18, then ask "What is a Christian?"

He is not just a church attender or a do-gooder but a person who realises that he is a sinner and knows that only Christ can save him. He puts his whole life, faith and trust in God, accepts Christ, loves Him and receives many things because he is a Christian, like peace, inward joy, a clean conscience. He shows that he is a Christian by loving other Christians, following Christ and preaching the Gospel. Read Luke 15:26; Revelation 1:5, 6; Mark 1:17, 18; John 13:34; Mark 10:38.

How can we learn to fish for men?

In Mark 1:14-22 principles are laid down. Note the four steps: forsake all; follow Jesus Christ; be His disciple; He will make you a fisher of men.

Where are we going to fish and how should we start?

"Where" is easy: wherever we are, at school, in the factory, in the office—the pool is the world.

People love to talk about the things that interest them. Start conversations about Christ. Most people, when we get to know them, have real needs—you are a Christian counsellor. Don't be afraid to bring people to the point of decision.

Whenever you get the chance share experiences with other Christians, requesting their prayers and help. Wherever possible work with other Christians in fishing for men.

Perhaps you never quite know how to get the conversation round to what you want to say. Read the story of the woman of Samaria (John 1:1-43). She is a wonderful example of how to swing a conversation, or how to do the job. The best example of witnessing and of personal work is Jesus Christ. Look at how He dealt with people; He did not treat them all in the same way.

Look at Christ with the Pharisees (Matthew 12:34); the crowds (Matthew 13:34); the disciples (Mark 9:28); the woman (John 4:27); the publicans (Luke 8:32); the great sinners (Luke 8:32).

Christ was not afraid to get involved. He was the Friend of sinners. He did not just meet them to preach at them; they liked to be with Him. He broke conventions, did not follow religious habits. He knew and loved His people and always dealt with them as individuals. Paul was the same. See him at Athens, on the doors, in the jail, with the church and with such people as Timothy.

Can we ensure results?

It is a pretty poor fisherman who never catches any fish. Three Bible formulae should be followed.

Formula one: Mark 16:15; Luke 24:47; Acts 1:8: go; preach; preach in Jerusalem—just where you are (at home even); preach in Judæa—office, factory or school; preach in Samaria—the town you are in; preach in the uttermost parts—everywhere!

Formula two: Mark 16:15; Luke 15:23; Acts 1:8: have a large vision; compel people to come into the kingdom of heaven; do it in the power of the Holy Spirit.

Formula three: Acts 2; John 14:15; Luke 24:47: follow Christ; wait; receive power.

What shall we see?

Look at Peter on his first fishing expedition (Acts 2). See the spread of the Early Church. See God working in Mark 16:15. Expect signs following. Look at Paul, Peter, Philip. Read Mark 16 and rejoice—and go to it!

Judges 5 : 19-31

"They came not to the help of the Lord, against the mighty" (v. 28, R.S.V.).

Twice in Deborah's song of victory are mentioned those who failed to come to the help of the Lord in the fight against His enemies. As long as there was one who was willing to fight on God's side, God did not require further human assistance. The condemnation in the passage is not because Deborah felt that the help of those who failed to come was essential to victory, but because they had failed to commit themselves to the cause of God. As they did not join in the battle they could not rejoice in the victory. May all Christians be so committed that they will readily associate with those who seek to engage the enemy in the fight for right.

Judges 6 : 1-18

"Israel was greatly impoverished" (v. 6).

People quickly forget. The forty years of rest following their deliverance from the tyranny of Jabin erased from the people's memories the price that sin demands and produced ease and idleness that led to sin. The people had become satisfied with their current level of achievement and did not find it necessary to attempt anything further. God had given them a land far in excess of that which they had occupied. Those forty years could have been filled with activity by their possessing all that God had promised.

We must go on to possess all that God has provided for us. To become complacent and satisfied with our present situation can only lead to failure (Amos 6 : 1).

Wednesday, February 9th

Judges 6 : 19-32

"Throw down the altar of Baal . . . and build an altar unto the Lord" (vv. 25, 26).

Gideon's call to God's service did not immediately thrust him to the forefront of the battle against the enemies of Israel. The first task he was given was in his own home, where the testimony to the Lord had to be established before he tackled the greater job. Gideon proved that he could be trusted to establish a work for God in the most difficult area of all—where he was best known. It is thrilling to note that he won his father (v. 31) and the whole of his village (Judges 6 : 11, 34). If every church member would seek to win his family and his neighbourhood for Christ it would not take long for the world to be reached. Consider Acts 1 : 8.

Thursday, February 10th

Judges 6 : 33-40

"I will put a fleece of wool in the floor" (v. 37).

So much is made of this Scripture by Christians today. It is common to hear of someone "putting out a fleece." It should be noted that Gideon was not seeking guidance as to what action he should take. God had already given his spirit peace on the question of his choice and appointment to the leadership of the people (vv. 15-24). Gideon was seeking reassurance that this was the time and place for God to deliver His people as He had promised.

God reassures His servants in these days by the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who is the seal of our choice and appointment to His service.

Friday, February 11th

Judges 7 : 1-8

"Lest Israel vaunt themselves against me" (v. 2).

God knows the tendency of humanity to boast following a victory. Gideon's army was reduced to a handful in comparison with the hosts of Midian to avoid this trait. It was impossible in human terms for 300 to engage successfully an army of 135,000. Victory in such an enterprise could only be attributable to a miracle and thus to God. Is the boast of the Church as to her strength of numbers and academic achievements the main hindrance to a demonstration of God's power? When we are weak then He is strong (1 Corinthians 1 : 27).

"If thou fear to go down, go thou with Phurah thy servant" (v. 10).

On two previous occasions God had been willing to reassure Gideon of His presence. Now He arranged a third sign to help Gideon and instructed him to make a visit to the enemy camp. God thought of Gideon's fear to make this journey and provided an aid in advance in the person of Phurah (v. 10). Gideon soon discovered that the powers arrayed against Israel were more afraid of him than he was of them. The Midianites realised that God was with Gideon.

We should never fear the enemy of our souls for "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

The problem of suffering

"The sufferings of this present time" (Romans 8 : 18)

by H. Burton-Haynes

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, CLACTON-ON-SEA

THESE are troublous times. Men and women the world over are passing through severe and, in some lands, fiery trials both of body and mind. The age-long question of human suffering presses for a satisfying and final answer with more insistence than ever.

The Bible throws a flood of light upon this great problem, teaching that suffering, traced to its source, is the result of sin. Had the human race never fallen, never deviated from the path of God's Law, suffering would have been unknown in the world. "By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Romans 5 : 12). What devastation sin and death have caused! There is not a family which has not been divided by the cruel hand of death.

Sometimes suffering is obviously due to personal sin or carelessness. If a man commits a crime against society and is brought to justice he must suffer the consequences of his misdeeds. As so often is the case, his fall involves innocent people; they have to suffer too. This deterrent has kept many a man from making shipwreck of his life. Is it not a fact that multitudes have suffered and are suffering not because of their own sin or selfishness but as a result of other people's misdemeanours? Civil strife, political exploitation, insatiable lust for power, poverty, hunger, oppression, to mention just a few things, have caused untold misery. No man can live unto himself. We cannot live in watertight compartments; we affect our fellows either for good or evil.

With so much sin going unpunished, injustice appearing to triumph and the sufferings of the oppressed passing unrequited, human existence would be a colossal tragedy were there no life after death where all the injustices of earth could be put right. God has not spoken His final word concerning this great problem. We can rest assured that the Judge of all the earth will give a conclusive summing-up of this question of human suffering and provide a satisfying answer to all that is so perplexing now.

Why does not God intervene and force men to change their ways? This question is frequently raised. To do so would be to tamper with man's free will. Man would be simply a robot. God would have to violate His own nature, for God is love.

It is comforting to realise that human disobedience introduced suffering into the world, but Divine wisdom works through it to achieve benevolent purposes. One of the good things which comes out of suffering rightly borne is the formation of Christian character. Patience is created through protracted affliction. Sympathy and gentleness are the fruit of adversity. Victory is only accomplished by fighting against evil. Courage could not exist where there was nothing to make us afraid. Faith is developed where circumstances threaten to overwhelm us.

To all who are heavy laden the Saviour says, "Come unto Me . . . and I will give you rest." With Him we may face life confidently and unafraid, whatever it brings.

tory is gained over the enemies of the Lord. In the flush of victory it is so easy to be defeated by the people of the Lord. Gideon soon found that, having defeated the host of Midian, he had to face criticism from within the people of Israel. God gave him great wisdom and he tactfully fended off the clash with the Ephraimites.

May God help us, when we have been successful in the battle, not to succumb to subtle temptation from within.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Can you face Christ's coming?

asks F. Lavender

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

Malachi 3 : 2

IT is a fact of history that events do not always turn out in the way that had been anticipated. A few years ago, during the crisis surrounding Algerian independence, a number of influential French people plotted to bring General de Gaulle to power and they finally succeeded. Those who agitated for his return expected the General to adopt their policies, but they quickly discovered that he had both a mind and policies of his own. The plotters became General de Gaulle's bitterest enemies and even tried to murder him.

For hundreds of years the people of Israel had waited for Messiah, the Prince promised by God, to come and rule. The folk in Malachi's day were certainly longing for His coming, but they were not looking for Him to come to cleanse the nation's sin or because they wanted Him to teach them and lead them in the ways of the Lord. They simply wanted Messiah to deliver them from their enemies and to make Israel the mistress of the nations. They wanted to rule over their oppressors and to give them a taste of their own medicine.

Malachi declared that Messiah would surely come as the Lord had foretold, but he warned Israel that His coming would not turn out as they had expected. The nation was filled with corruption and wickedness and Messiah, the holy Son of a holy God, could not exalt such a nation. He would first fearfully purge them and take away their filth.

This had been the constant message of the prophets. Isaiah had said (4 : 4) that the Lord would wash away the filth of the daughters of Zion and purge Jerusalem by the spirit of judgment and of burning before exalting Israel. Zechariah declared (13 : 9) that the Lord would refine Israel as silver and try them as gold before He reigned on the earth.

When the Lord Jesus came He cleansed the Temple of God in Jerusalem as a sign to Israel, but the nation rejected and crucified Him. At His second coming He will complete the purging of Israel, as the Scriptures show, before Himself ruling over the cleansed and humbled remnant.

If the prayer meetings in your church are anything like ours in Gloucester you will often hear the cry for revival. As we look at the condition of our nation and of our churches, there can be no doubt that we desperately need such revival, but we have to ask, "Who among us is ready for Christ to come in reviving power?" Do we really believe that He will be content with things as they are in our lives?

Revival will not be cheap and easy. It will not commence with "glory meetings." Revival will be costly, agonising, searching, bitter and humiliating in its beginnings, though its final results will be glorious indeed. Quarrels which separate Christian from Christian, hurtful gossiping and backbiting, awful indifference to the will of God, worldliness, impurity, selfishness, above everything callous unwillingness to tell others the Gospel of the Lord Jesus, must all be dealt with and cleansed. Revival will demand our time, our ability, our money—in fact, our whole being, nothing less than total committal, without reserve, to the Lordship of Jesus Christ. Are we really willing to pay such a price for Christ's coming in revival?

Christians are looking for the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ and we often speak of the signs which show that His coming is near, but are we sure that we are ready to meet Him when He appears? At His return, every believer shall stand before His judgment seat (Romans 14 : 10). The Apostle John said that some will meet Him with confidence, but that others will be ashamed when they appear before Him (1 John 2 : 28). We all want to hear Him say to us, "Well done!" when we meet Him, but the Scripture which reveals that He will say to some : "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" shows that to others He will say: "Thou wicked and slothful servant" (Matthew 25 : 21, 26). How can the Lord Jesus, who is the Truth, say that we have been good and faithful if we have been indifferent to His will and have lived for ourselves? Make no mistake, there will be both joy and sorrow, laughter and tears, at the judgment seat of Christ. If we prepare our hearts for revival now we shall truly be able to face that day with joy, for what is not put right now must be dealt with then. What the Holy Spirit shows us is wrong in our lives must be put right either now or at the judgment seat of Christ. Surely it is better to humble ourselves before God, put things right and open our hearts without reserve to our Lord, than to be put to shame before the hosts of heaven!

Let us yield to the moving and convicting of the Holy Spirit now, so that we shall be able to greet our Lord with joy when He appears! ~

Church reports

WINTON, BOURNEMOUTH

Pastor : G. N. Backhouse

Like the woman referred to in Proverbs 31 : 13, who "worketh willingly with her hands," a number of the women of the Winton church have been working hard and willingly for the missionary cause. They have been meeting regularly on Monday afternoons at the Manse to make various articles which have been sold to interested friends, the proceeds going to missionary work. These meetings are in addition to the regular women's meeting on Thursday afternoons. In the months prior to Christmas they turned their attention to the making of dolls and animals of a very high standard indeed, the sale of which realised quite a good sum.

The Sisterhood also donate a sum of £13 per quarter to the support of an African evangelist. During the year a little over £200 has been given for missionary work. Our Elim missionaries deserve every bit of support we can give them and this practical help by the women of the church is an encouraging feature of the work at Winton.

The life of Christ was the theme of our annual Sunday school anniversary and prizegiving. The children sang and recited items dealing with seven aspects of Christ's life. The teachers' item reflected Christ as Saviour; each teacher gave a short testimony to the saving power of the Lord Jesus Christ. Our pastor rendered a solo entitled "The Crucifixion" and then gave a short inspiring gospel message. Mrs. Dainton presented the prizes to the children.

We thank God for the many parents who attended and for the Sunday school work, which has been steadily increasing.

A carol service was held at which the children portrayed the Christmas story. It was a moving experience to see them play their parts so well—even the tiny ones who sang "Away in a manger."

Thanks are due to all who worked so hard for this service, including the parents. A good congregation was present, including quite a number of parents.

Mr. Bob Pickett, who has played a big part in the work of our small church in the past, and who is now studying for the ministry in the Elim Bible College, gave a short word.

We now look to the Lord for further blessing in our new venture—the Sunday school.

CULLYBACKEY

Pastor : W. Spence

What matter if the evening, weather-wise, was not all that could be desired—a steady drizzle was descending—when the visit of myself and my photographic colleague to Cullybackey last Friday was to “Sunshine Corner”? This year marks its twenty-first year of existence and it has accomplished much in the formation of young lives at a stage in time when the shaping of character is so important.

“Sunshine Corner” is a really worth-while activity undertaken by the Cullybackey Elim Pentecostal Church, with a group of dedicated workers working assiduously for most of the year, every Tuesday night, in two groups—junior and senior. There is also a meeting each Thursday evening for those who have passed into the teenage stage.

What better instruction for children, and teenagers, than the inspired Word of God? What better foundation on which to build a life than a personal knowledge of the eternal Redeemer?

In an age when young people come in for so much criticism I found it refreshing to see approximately 150 of them assembled with their parents in Cunningham Memorial Church hall (kindly lent for the occasion) for the annual get-together, under the very acceptable chairmanship of Mr. William Spence.

With 150 children under the one roof, all very spick and span in their dress, all full of the joy of living, it was not difficult to know why this well-established venture is known as "Sunshine Corner"—to mingle with them was to restore one's faith in human nature.

For three of these youngsters the occasion was a very special one—they received special awards for five years' unbroken attendance. They are Jennifer Ross (aged twelve), of Tullygrawley; Rosalind Mailey (aged nine), of Ard-na-Maine, Cullybackey (who received silver medals), and Robert McKendry (aged thirteen), of Tullygrawley (who received a miniature silver cup). Yvonne Ross (sister of Jennifer) received a special award for five years' unbroken attendance last year and in the past year she has also not missed a day. The awards were handed over by Mrs. Sandy Spence.

"UNCLE HARRY"

by Mrs. Madaline Coull

JUST two lines announced that Pastor Horace Kitching had gone to be with the Lord.

It is a long way back to the 'thirties when this servant of God was the pastor of Dundee Elim Pentecostal Church. These were early days for this Scottish congregation; revival fires still burned after the great evangelistic campaign of Principal George Jeffreys and his team.

Pastor Kitching was a man of prayer and he taught this flock how to pray, showing young converts especially the path of intercession. Every meeting had its session devoted to this priestly act. Sometimes a whole day was thus spent.

He taught the people to love the Book. His preaching was clear, descriptive, even dramatic; his listeners could "see" as well as hear the truth presented. The Saturday night rally was a venue for Christian folk from far and near and many a gathering was enlivened and enriched when pastor introduced some illustrious character like Billy Bray and others.

He encouraged the timid to witness for Jesus and many a first-time-ever sermonette was spurred on by the whispered word of praise as he sat behind the trembling speaker in the youth meeting.

He loved children and children loved him. To them he was "Uncle Harry." He would pack the building with them and win their attention and response as he told the sweet story of Jesus. Here he had a priceless talent, a rare gift; he could come right down to where little children are.

In a branch Sunday school a band of teachers, with more enthusiasm than experience, moved in among the slums nearby in their quest for the young. A mother had died with tuberculosis and they found their pastor more than willing to answer the summons for help. He gave comfort and conducted the funeral, though the grateful family had no link with the church save that of a small girl attending the Sunday school mentioned.

He cared for the flock and for those outside the fold. On one Sunday he asked for twenty souls. God honoured his faith and gave him twenty-plus. He held the first baptismal service in the church. The impressive service was reported in the local press. There were nearly sixty candidates that night. He was a slender man and God must have given him physical as well as spiritual strength.

The farewell came and in his final service he told of God's grace to him from boyhood up. "Old Leaves" he called it. Now the pages will turn no more, but the story is not ended. Hearts were sad when he said good-bye to Dundee. On December 28th, 1971, he said his last good-bye, but for him the glory chapter has just begun. Here is one who looks back and "rejoices and gives thanks to God for every remembrance" of a faithful shepherd who has gone to his well-won reward.

Three ply

by G. Wesley Gilpin

PRINCIPAL OF ELIM BIBLE COLLEGE

A COLLEAGUE in the ministry sent me a Christmas card bearing the familiar words "My God shall supply all your need." Because the card was the desk kind I propped it up in front of my telephone. Tilting back in my swivel chair, I looked long and thoughtfully at this brief text, spelling each word aloud, slowly. This is how I saw it.

The buoyant confidence of relationship

"My God shall supply all your need."

It was something of a disappointment to Jesus, late on in His ministry, to discover that Philip, one of His disciples, was not aware of the identity of His Father. In reproof He said, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known Me, Philip?" (John 14 : 8, 9). The natural result of prolonged close relationship should be confidence in the other party's ability. This encouraged Jehovah to confide in Abraham in the matter of Sodom : "Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do ? . . . For I know him" (Genesis 18 : 17-19). Said the psalmist : "O God, Thou art my God ; early will I seek thee" (Psalm 63 : 1). This confidence in his Creator-God led Elijah to demonstrate in a convincing manner the qualities of Jehovah as the true God who answers by fire against all the phoney claims of Baal's followers.

This presupposes God's readiness to be known. Paul's great objective at Athens was to proclaim the "unknown god." How reassuring are the words : "Draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to you" (James 4 : 8). It also presumes the importance of intimate relationship for effective living. To this end Paul prayed : "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection" (Philippians 3 : 10).

The buoyant confidence of this relationship needs to be shown today. "The people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits" (Daniel 11 : 32). There is no message in the effete abstractions of the Robinson-Tillich theology, where God is lost in the maze of philosophic speculations, but what happy memories we have of people who have come to us and have said with confidence : "God did this for me !" Let us take up the call of the psalmist : "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what He hath done for my soul" (Psalm 66 : 16).

The significant impartiality of deity

"... shall supply all your need"

Here is the centre strand in the threefold cord. The diversity of human need is met by the impartiality and resourcefulness of God. This is the basis and message of evangelism. It was the great message of the sheet let down from heaven, in which were "all kinds of reptiles and animals and birds of the air." It resulted in Peter's adventure into the field of Gentile evangelism (Acts 10 : 11-15). The marvel of the Christianism message is its width and adaptability so that it can be taken with confidence and love to all men everywhere and is effective in all its parts because of the all-sufficiency of its author (Matthew 28 : 18-20). No other religious message or philosophy can make this claim. No single person is outside either the care or the scope of Divine love.

Jesus taught important lessons by illustrations that went to the farthest extremes and yet were true in all their parts and seeming extravagances. "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?" and "five sparrows sold for two farthings?" (Matthew 10 : 29 ; Luke 12 : 6), but of the one thrown in in a bulk order it is said : "not one of them is forgotten before God," then, lest we continue to doubt the reassurance, proceeds "ye are of more value than many sparrows." "Consider the lilies how they grow : they toil not, they spin not ; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these . . . how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?" (Luke 6 : 24-28). "All your need" may be as different as day from night from mine or someone else's, but "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things"

(Matthew 6 : 32). "Ah, but you don't know me!" is a common retort. "No, but I know my God, and the things that are impossible with men are possible with God" is our emphatic rejoinder.

The unique versatility of Divine supply "your need"

Life imposes much strain upon us. Human nature breaks down at many points and at unexpected times. These needs are both great and diverse. Examples can be multiplied. The supply included the provision of water from a rock and bread from heaven for two million people trekking through an uncharted desert for forty years. At the other end of the scale it met the peculiar requirements of a delicate little preacher who was inhibited by his natural defects, afflicted by physical deformity and hounded by the establishment of his day. When driven into a corner he was compelled in desperation to shout out, "Who is equal to such a task?" (2 Corinthians 2 : 16, T.C.N.T.), but in almost the same breath he was able to reply, "All our ability comes from God" (2 Corinthians 3 : 5, Knox). Human need is matched by Divine sufficiency. The classical example of this is Abraham. When he was ninety the order came: "Walk before me and be thou perfect"! One is tempted to protest: "God, why can't You leave the old man alone?" but the order came from someone who had just revealed himself as EL-SHADDAI (All-sufficient).

"A threefold cord is not quickly broken" (Ecclesiastes 4 : 12). The combination of personal trust and evangelistic zeal needs right at the heart a firm faith in the ability and power of God.

HAVE you ever thought what you would like to be when you leave school?

Andrew couldn't quite make up his mind about what he would like to be. Sometimes he was quite sure that he was going to be a policeman when he grew up. He would picture himself as a police sergeant helping to track down criminals. At other times he decided he was going to be a Mountie. He would love to wear the Mountie uniform and ride on horseback somewhere in Canada! Then, if he saw a fire engine rushing through the streets, he would want to be a fireman and ride on a big red fire engine. Andrew was really undecided about what he was going to be!

"What would you do if you were me?" Andrew asked his father one day.

"Well," said his father, "if you are going to choose between a policeman, a Mountie or a fireman you'll have to grow a few more inches yet, but you should be tall enough by the time you leave school."

"What do you mean by tall enough, Dad?"

"Well, Andrew, you have to be a certain height. You couldn't be a policeman if you were too short, for instance. It's like being a Christian, really. Only Christians must be small enough."

"Does that mean Jesus only likes short people then, Dad?"

"Oh, no, Andrew! Being small enough to be a Christian means being humble and kind, not being selfish or boastful. So you see, Andrew, whatever you will be when you leave school the most important thing is to be a Christian. You start by humbly giving your heart to Jesus," his father explained.

THE cost of cutting coal cannot be measured in pounds and pence only. Those who know miners are all too aware of the devastation of life and limb which accompanies the winning of what used to be called black gold. Some of us wonder if there could not be some other way of providing fuel and the discoveries of North Sea gas, for example, have been gladly received as a hoped-for means to this end. It appears that we shall be dependent on coal for a large part of our fuel needs for at least the foreseeable future, however. We believe that safety in the pits has been greatly improved, but great physical hardship and danger are still involved.

Part of the miners' strike is but a fraction of the national struggle that has been with us for a generation—the difference between basic rates of pay and actual earnings, with the underlying truth that many thousands of men must do overtime to make a living wage. It simply is not true that all who work in mining earn above the average; in fact we believe that it could be proved that many in mining are poorly paid. When you consider the often dirty and unpleasant conditions, the shift working and the like it makes you wonder again at the fundamental disbalance in our society. A newspaper recorded recently that Evonne Goolagong, the tennis player, can make more in an afternoon than her sheep-shearer father can in a whole year. Pop stars who would faint at the sound of real music, stage folk almost totally dependent on publicity boys to make them "attractive," sleeping partners in firms who want names to appear on letter-headings and prospectuses, temperamental footballers who set standards before thousands which make right-thinking folk shudder—these and many like them are "rewarded" with enormous salaries or fees. We dare to suggest that there are some members of the Royal Family—those on the periphery—who are allocated state money out of all proportion to their importance or to their usefulness to the community. We welcome the fact that at least some of them earn their own living.

The British community will have to face the fact that it will have to pay more to our fellow citizens who do the dirty jobs for us. If a man is ready to toil and sweat in muck that we might have coal for our power stations and fire-grates, then he must be properly rewarded. The labourer is worthy of his hire. We readily apply this to the ministry and rightly so, but are we prepared to apply the principle all across the board?

We may be accused of playing politics, but we cannot help but say that our sympathy is with the miners.

"We beheld His Glory"

"That they may behold My glory" (John 17 : 24).

PART I

THE glory of Christ is veiled from the average Christian. The Church may preach many things, but if it neglects the essential glory of God's Son, then it falls short of the basic, most necessary teaching of the faith. John 17 reveals that Christ has a glory that was His before worlds began, that He never lost it, that He has given part of it to His followers.

Repossessing

Even before the agony and triumph of Calvary, Christ had assurance of repossessing that glory which He had before worlds began (John 16 : 28). The successful Mediator, the Son of Man, was made flesh and brought redemption, fulfilling His Father's will. He gladly wished to return and take the regal, rightful seat at God's right hand, to administer with justice the kingdom of grace, shedding His glory upon the bond-slaves of mercy (Psalm 68 : 18). He is willing and more abundantly able to shower freely upon men those precious bestowals (Ephesians 4 : 8), gifts full of His immortal glory.

Everything that Christ bestows upon the heirs of grace is tinged with Divine glory. Remember the exploits of king David ; the chase to Ziklag, the victory, the words that followed : "he sent of the spoil unto the elders of Judah, even to his friends saying, Behold a present for you of the spoil of the enemies of the Lord" (1 Samuel 30 : 28). Christ says in the Gospels : "Ye are My friends," thus we are recipients of the spoils of Golgotha. Our Lord has put the enemy to flight. He who made captives is overthrown. We are set free and have additional blessings, for we are part-takers of the glory, the spoils that He has obtained. "For through Him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father" (Ephesians 2 : 18). This is part of our heritage in Him, one of the gifts given to make all one. Here is glory multiplied beyond the mind of man : access to God. "Of His fullness have we all received" (John 1 : 16).

Reflecting

Read 1 Peter 1 : 11. This mentions "the glory that should follow" : glory for Him, for He could return to the Father, and glory for us, for we were to become His children by adoption and thus inheritors of the Divine fortune. Because He has glory, He wishes it to be seen (2 Thessalonians 1 : 10). Our text implies that it will be seen and shared ! We are partakers of that radiance, so called and so chosen that we might, in constant effort towards heaven, establish in time and upon earth "That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in Him, according to the grace of our God" (2 Thessalonians 1 : 12). How can we, the created, add anything to Him, the Creator ? Is it not that in saving lost sinners He gains to Himself in our justification the glory of forgiveness ? As sinners see in us the work of grace, they give God glory and praise Him for His goodness. We then add that virtue to His glory.

I am inclined to believe that that which is laid up for us in heaven is glory. Read 1 Corinthians 2 : 9. If this glory cannot be conceived, how can we attempt to fathom the matchless splendour of the Son of God ? There is a lingering excellence

THE Doctrine of the Trinity has often been attacked by false cults. They have sought to dethrone the Lord Jesus Christ and rob Him of His deity. On the other hand there are some who teach that Jesus and Jesus alone is God. They actually teach that Jesus is the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

There are various sections of the "Jesus only" people. Some accept the Trinitarian concept of the Godhead and merely teach that believers should be baptised in the name of Jesus only and not in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, as commanded by the Divine, unerring Founder of the Christian Church. They say that Matthew 28:19 should not be in our Bible at all, as most modernists do when they come up against something in the Bible which does not suit them.

Those who teach that Jesus is the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit quote various Scriptures to defend their doctrine. For example they quote: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9). The same writer states (1:18), "No man hath seen God at any time," yet hundreds of people saw Jesus. Again John says (14:6): "No man cometh unto the Father, but by Me"; this verse does not make sense if Jesus is the Father. John also reveals a wonderful truth, which again refutes the "Jesus only" theory: "The only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him." How could He be in the Father's bosom if He were the Father? Again we are told: "God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself." It does not say God was Christ, but that God was in Christ.

It is important to notice the many attributes which God and Jesus both possess. This does not prove that they are one and the same person. The "Jesus only" teachers recently issued a hand-out stating: "Jesus is the Father." To back this they ask: "Who is the Alpha and Omega?" They continue: "Revelation 1:18 says Jesus, but Revelation 21:6,7 says the Father." The Bible clearly teaches that the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit are eternal, therefore they are all without beginning and without end, so that all three could claim to be the "beginning and the end." This is how Alpha and Omega are explained in Revelation 21:6. The same holds good for many other attributes which both God the Father and God the Son possess. To base a doctrine on the theory that both are one and the same person because they have common attributes is to say an orange is an apple because they both have so many things in common.

More on why we reject the "Jesus "Oneness"

There are portions in the Scriptures where the three persons in the Godhead are seen in their separate identities. For example, there is the baptism of Jesus in the Jordan. They are, therefore, three persons in their own right. However, there are times when the Godhead speaks as one. A board of governors can issue a statement or a commandment. In doing so they can speak with one voice. They are a compound unity. Dr. C. J. Rolls points out that, in the Hebrew, this compound unity is used in Deuteronomy 6:4: "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord." The commandments follow. The members of the Godhead spoke with one voice. They spoke as one Lord. Right from Genesis 1:26 God is revealed as being a compound unity. This verse does not say "Let Me make Man in My image" but "Let Us make man in Our image." In Isaiah 6:8 we read "Also I heard the voice of the Lord saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for Us?" Hebrews 10:5-7 and other Scriptures also show this plurality in the Godhead.

To say that Jesus is the Father is to infer that Jesus cried with a loud voice on the cross and merely spoke to Himself. Such a claim makes foolish the statement, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" How can you forsake yourself? It is almost sacrilege to say that He was talking to Himself! To whom did Jesus pray in the Garden of Gethsemane when He cried, "O My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me: nevertheless not as I will, but as Thou wilt"? Did He pray to Himself?

Did Jesus pray to Himself in His great high priestly prayer of John 17 : 5 when He said, "And now, O Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was"? What is the meaning of this verse if Jesus is the Father ?

Again, we read, "I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman" (John 15 : 1). Is the vine the husbandman ?

To take John 10 : 30 out of its context and say that Jesus is the Father is ridiculous and renders the passage as having no sensible meaning. This verse states "I and My Father are one." The very words "I and My Father" prove they are separate. They are one, as seen in their unity of purpose in not allowing any of their sheep to be plucked out of their hands by the Devil. This is the context. You and I can be one in purpose and one in many other things, but that does not mean that you are I !

Similarly, many Scriptures show that the Holy Spirit is a person in His own right. Jesus spoke of "another Comforter who would come" (John 14 : 16). Jesus must have told a deliberate lie if He meant Himself and not another Comforter, even though He also stated "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you."

If Jesus is the Holy Spirit how can we explain John 16 : 7, 15 : 26 : "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me." It is obvious that there are three distinct persons involved in this verse. From this verse alone it is nonsense to suggest that Jesus was talking to Himself and would merely send Himself to testify of Himself !

Another verse wrongly used to support the "Jesus only" theory is Colossians 2 : 9 : "For in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." It is poor exposition to deduce from this verse that Jesus is the entire Godhead. This would mean that, when Jesus was on earth localised in an earthly body, God was nowhere else either in heaven or on earth. Was that the case ? The emphasis is on the word "fulness." Surely this means all the characteristics which are found in the Godhead were to be found in the Lord Jesus Christ when He was on earth. In Christ there is Divine love, Divine justice, Divine mercy—everything that is in the Godhead in absolute fulness of quality, praise His matchless name !

If there is no Trinity, and Jesus is the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, it would logically follow that it is as right to be baptised in the name of the Father or of God as to be baptised in the name of Jesus. Now the Jews readily accept Jehovah as God, but not that Jesus of Nazareth is God in any shape or form. This is why in all ages converts to Christianity from religious or heathen backgrounds, some of whom do not know or accept Jehovah, and/or Jesus, need to be baptised in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. This acknowledges the existence, the Divinity and the co-equality of all three, hence the reason why the Founder of Christianity personally gave us this command.

King James invited the best theologians in the world and gave them almost unlimited resources to produce the Authorised Version of the Bible. The scholars who gave us the Revised Version did all in their power to correct or clarify any points that they felt could improve the Authorised Version. Those who gave us the New English Bible were well aware of the arguments advanced regarding Matthew 28 : 19. All these men, along with Weymouth, Moffatt and a host of others, include the Father, Son and Holy Spirit when translating the verse.

It is sad, though noteworthy, that leading writers from the "Jesus only" people use rank modernists, such as Peake and others, to suggest that this verse should not be in the Bible as we have it today. We withstand any modernist who or sect which cuts pieces out of the Bible or wants to alter it to suit their teachings.

that Christ has, which, when seen, leaves men speechless. Paul on the Damascus road saw the glory of the risen Christ, went to the street Straight, and saw and said nothing for three days. The eye of faith, the seeing eye of the Christian, penetrates beyond the dark veil to observe the majesty that is His: the wonder of His person, the combined natures entwined in one redemptive act for lost mankind. "But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God" (1 Corinthians 2:10).

Revelation

If Christ's glory could be understood by natural men, then it would be very little and of small value, but God and His glory in Christ are past human comprehension. Paul says that, after he had preached the Gospel, there were still unsearchable riches, past finding out. I suppose that he fathomed deeper than any man, yet in all his understanding of the great truths he still implied that the vastness of Christ's treasures was like an ocean that was too deep to plumb. Some regions of the sea bed have never been reached; they are beyond natural investigation. This is like God.

There are, however, many things which we can know. God has put a curtain over the gleaming image of Christ, and we see through a glass darkly, but some revelations have been given for our knowledge and anticipation. It would be unwise to reach heaven and not have some slight insight of the glory, for it is mainly glory that will be beheld in that wondrous land. You will see the glory of Christ in His nature and inner being and it is only as God leads us into deeper communion with Him through Christ by the Spirit that we can know the real glory.

Christ carries heaven within Himself and He will convey the knowledge of this in part as we worship Him. The Bible reveals this path and we are bidden, for our blessing and for His glory, to walk in wholehearted relationship, born of blood, settled by righteousness and given freely upon Divine merit.

In November 1971 the name of the Democratic Republic of Congo was changed to THE REPUBLIC OF ZAIRE. This does not appear to have received the international publicity one would expect, but nevertheless it is an accomplished fact. Since the name Congo forms part of the title of Congo Evangelistic Mission, our C.E.M. friends had no alternative but to amend their title to read:

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

Prevailing prayer

Genesis 32 : 24-32

JACOB prevailed in prayer because he felt that his life and the lives of his family were at stake. There remained perhaps a matter of hours before his brother came to take his revenge. Jacob used those hours in prevailing prayer.

Desperate situations make us pray desperately. How blessed it would be if we could pray more often in this fashion!—perhaps more souls would be saved, more bodies would be healed and more people would be blessed of God. Jacob prayed earnestly. He wanted one thing and for that thing he prayed. The result was a changed situation and a changed man, for God gave him a new name.

Take someone on your heart and prevail in prayer for them. Perhaps you could pray for one of our evangelists, pastors or missionaries.

I read a book which reveals how the Soviet secret agents work. Moscow considers certain plans, then instructs its agents to go to work. Men and money are freely supplied. One plan required a small number of highly trained men. These were obtained and weeks of training followed. They had to work seventeen hours a day. The remaining hours were for sleeping and eating. Once or twice they were permitted recreation. They were being trained to advance Communism in a certain country.

I could not help thinking what could be achieved if we were prepared to do more for the kingdom of Jesus Christ. God has a plan, the redemption of the world. He has trained workers in the field. Will you back one of them with your prayers? It could mean a little less recreation or rest, but it will be worth it all when we see Jesus. Are you willing to prevail in prayer for a person or for a special problem?

From T. H. Stevenson

AFTER reading a recent issue of the ELIM EVANGEL, in which I queried "What's wrong with the churches?" and quoted some examples, an interested reader promptly corresponded with me, expressing agreed interest, and kindly presented me with a small book that seemed so relevant: What's Wrong with Preaching Today? The content was an address given to the ministers' conference of the Orthodox Presbyterian Church at Westminster Theological Seminary by Rev. Albert Martin. This Banner of Truth book would be of interest and benefit to many preachers and listeners. It deals with "The man" and "The message."

My reader friend wrote: "Even in Pentecostal circles—as a layman and so much on the 'receiving end,' I feel we can get used to a generally much lower standard of preaching than we should" and added his "genuine concern," qualified by the remark that his concern was "partly maybe as one gets older and somewhat less active one tends to think rather more deeply."

The friendly critic was equally sympathetic by noting: "Pastors are usually very busy people with so many demands on their time that it could not be an easy task to set aside the necessary time for study."

The book and the letter made me give prayerful thought, though perhaps on different lines—with a mind on comments I might make for your perusal by making some simple measurements. The length of the sermon seems important now, or should I say the brevity? The saying itself has become boring: "If you don't strike oil after twenty minutes, stop boring." This overlooks that some of the great oil companies operating in the North Sea have struck oil (or gas!) by patiently boring for longer than anticipated or budgeted for. Suppose you had been a member of the Early Church in Rome or Corinth, how would you have fared listening to the patient reading of those long written discourses by Paul and read by voices other than the author's? Could you have fellowshiped with the earlier Scottish Presbyterians, who took their lunch with them for the break in the few hours' discourses?

The breadth of the preaching is very important, thinking of the pastoral ministry and not a particular sermon. By circumstances I have been deprived in my present pastorate of covering a wider scope than I have accomplished. I look back almost amazed to my first pastorate of one brief year before entering Elim Bible College. My library was sparse, but somehow I managed to preach four times each week, and included series on "The Second Advent," "The Tabernacle," "The Levitical Offerings," "The Doctrine of Christ," "The Fruit of the Spirit" and "The Feasts of Jehovah." There was neither telephone nor even bicycle for quick communications (their absence possibly presented less other demands). I do not know what I attained, but I certainly bravely attempted. Maybe it had something to do with being single, or having a single mind, or maybe someone would suggest that it was a single-track mind, but it started me off in the right direction.

As for the depth of the sermon, here is a modern problem: the depth or the density. Many still want the pure "milk of the word," but they prefer it condensed, skimmed, dehydrated, or even evaporated. The "strong meat" is not to everybody's taste. Like the natural meat today, the price to pay is quite high for both preacher and hearer.

Now there is only the height to refer to. Dr. A. T. Pierson called Ephesians, with its several references to "the heavenlies," "The Alps of the New Testament." Every other part of Scripture is equally inspired by the Holy Spirit, yet preaching can be "flat." It can, however, reach heights that no other form of oratory can. When anointed by the Holy Spirit and lifting up Christ, preaching can lift a congregation near to the presence of God.

With authority

THERE is a noticeable trend today to resent authority in any form. The popular idea is "to do your own thing," to disregard the establishment and all that suggests conforming to accepted codes of behaviour and belief. Much as we might applaud new ideas and freshness of approach in all walks of life there must be an authoritative basis to life and society. This aspect of our Christian faith is, to me, very satisfying and stabilising. We have commenced to study the Gospel of Mark in my Bible class and right at the beginning in chapter one we were faced with the irrefutable evidence and demonstration of Christ's authority.

The first Sabbath of Jesus' public ministry is described in detail. It is a glorious, breathless account of the Saviour's power and authority. We can almost hear Peter, the eye-witness, telling it to Mark under the inspiration of the Spirit, living over again that never-to-be-forgotten day when the Divine authority of their Master blazed out for the first time. He spoke with authority in the synagogue; with authority He commanded the demon spirit to leave the poor, tormented man. The same authority operated in the privacy of a humble home and Peter's mother-in-law was healed immediately. To crown the day, at sunset our Saviour faced the whole population of the city and again took complete charge, healed the sick and cast out many demons. The word translated "authority" is defined as "unique knowledge together with unique power." Jesus possessed it then and still does today. If only this stupendous fact found acceptance in our doubting, hesitant hearts, if only we could lose our timidity in the depths of His authority, what a difference it would make!

Dr. A. E. Knox, one-time Bishop of Manchester, wrote: "The impression of Christ stamped on every page of the New Testament is the impression of authority. Whether He is calling disciples to Himself, teaching the multitudes on the mountain, healing disease, casting out devils, rebuking hypocrites, forgiving sins, solving problems of the law, feeding the multitude, hushing the storm, raising the dead, revising the law of the Sabbath or of divorce, announcing the doom of Zion, foretelling the day of judgment, preparing the disciples for His departure, submitting to arrest, facing the Sanhedrin, making answer to Pilate, opening paradise to the penitent thief, giving commission to the disciples after His resurrection, or about to ascend to heaven, always, in all conditions, though He is not doing His own will, but the will of Him who sent Him, His words, His actions, His rebukes, His commands, are those of One who is conscious of supreme, indisputable authority. His very prayers are not without that tone. 'Father, I will.' 'Father, glorify Thy name.' It is little wonder that His adversaries asked, 'By what authority doest Thou these things?' or 'Who gave Thee this authority to do these things?' Questions which Christ refused to answer. For the answer was in the consciences of His questioners. The judge within them responded to the authority of the judge without."

Acknowledging the absolute authority of Christ's words and living under the authority of Christ's power, we can go forward with confidence. We can stand forth in the midst of a doubting, questioning age, where even some who profess the name of Christ have dared to call themselves "Christian agnostics" and can say without a shadow of doubt "I know" and can demonstrate the fact by our triumphant Christian living.

Dr. Joseph Parker used to say that the Greek word for "authority" meant more than just this; in his view it carried with it the suggestion of audacity. He wrote "An audacious Christ should have an audacious Church."

Judges 13 : 15-25

"So Manoah took the kid with the cereal offering, and offered it upon the rock to the Lord, to him who works wonders" (v. 19, R.S.V.).

In Manoah's mind the immediate wonder was that his barren wife would bear a child. In future days he would be astonished at the progress and spirit that his child would manifest. Worship is fitting to the Lord who works wonders. The age of miracles is not past, for we still have the miracle-working God. The miracle of the child Samson was with the distinct purpose of fulfilling the Divine will and bringing glory to God's name through His people. The God of miracles always works with those whose objective is the glory and honour of His name.

BOOK REVIEW

William and Wendy Books, by Meg Braga : No. 3, Pepperpots and Presents ; No. 4, Pictures in the Spring. For children 4-6 years old. Published by Victory Press. Price 20p each, postage and packing 3p each extra.

These two delightful books take William and Wendy through the excitement of Firework Night to a happy Easter. We enter into the "wills" and "wants" of wee William and the frustrations of Wendy, as they begin to learn through everyday happenings about the difference Jesus can make in the lives of young children. These books are beautifully written. The claims of Christ even on the young come to the fore through these human and so real situations.

TAKE TIME FOR THE CHILDREN

Take time to hear their prayers at night,
And cuddle them a bit.
Tell them a story now and then,
And steal some time to sit
And listen to their childish talk,
Or take them for a walk.

We little know it now—but soon
They're gone (the years are swift),
For life just marches on and on ;
Heav'n holds no sweeter gift
Than shouting boys with tousled hair,
And toys left anywhere.

Take time to laugh and sing and play,
To cherish and enjoy
A little girl with flaxen curls
And that dear little boy.
They ask so little when they're small,
Just loving care—that's all.

Judges 8 : 22-35

"And Gideon made an ephod . . . which thing became a snare" (v. 27).

Have you noticed how so many great men destroy a lifetime of victory and usefulness by an ill-advised act which colours their memory for ever? In the midst of rejoicing over the great victory over the enemy, and following hard after the display of wisdom in dealing with Ephraim and of modesty in refusing to accept for himself and his sons the kingship of the people, Gideon commissioned an ephod, a symbol of victory. This became an idol influencing himself, his family and the people of Israel. How wonderful it is that the Lord is gracious and forgets our foolishness! Gideon is listed with the mighty men of faith in spite of his lapse at the end (Hebrews 11 : 32).

Judges 9 : 1-21

"Whether is better for you?" (v. 2).

Jotham, the only survivor of the murderous act of Abimelech, bravely stood forth at the coronation of Abimelech and told a parable which revealed the irrelevance of power and authority in comparison with service for God to man. The productive trees, the olive, used in worship to God and healing for man, the fig, the prolific fruitbearer, and the vine, whose produce made cheer and happiness, all declined vain power and preferred to continue in usefulness. The trees have no need of a king. Service is of more value to God and His people than a useless position of authority. Consider the words of Jesus: "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant" (Matthew 23 : 11).

Wednesday, February 16th

Judges 9 : 22-29, 50-57

"Thus God rendered the wickedness of Abimelech" (v. 56).

Faithful Jotham had prophesied the judgment that was to come upon the men of Shechem and Abimelech. Judgment inevitably follows sin. Those who are faithful to the revelation of God's ways will not cease to proclaim the punishment which God has declared will follow unrighteousness. It may be fashionable to portray God only as love, but He is also just. Just as God's condemnation was served on the men in our reading, so God will accomplish that which He has foretold concerning those who sin. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Hebrews 10 : 31).

Thursday, February 17th

Judges 11 : 1-11

"Jephthah uttered all his words before the Lord" (v. 11).

From doubtful parentage, from the failure of previous rejection, and from the leadership of a bandit group, stepped Jephthah, who was soon to be heralded as a mighty man of valour, worthy of mention in the roll of the giants of faith (Hebrews 11 : 32). Such is the condescension and love of God in all generations. The worthless come in contact with His saving grace and become worthy. The sinner becomes the saint. He is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him. The secret of Jephthah's success was in his relationship with God (v. 11).

Friday, February 18th

Judges 11 : 29-40

"I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back" (v. 35).

To what a position Jephthah had committed himself and his family! It may be that his vow was hastily conceived without due consideration of all the contingencies. Nevertheless, while he expressed great grief and sorrow, there was no suggestion that he would seek to go back upon his promise. Indeed it was an undertaking that he had given voluntarily for better or for worse.

There can be no justifiable reason for withdrawing from a voluntary undertaking made before God. In these days those who make vows, especially of marriage, would do well to remember Jephthah. It is better not to make vows unless there is a clear determination that they will be revered whatever their demands.

Saturday, February 19th

Judges 13 : 1-14

"How shall we order the child, and how shall we do unto him?" (v. 12).

The sacred task of parenthood lay heavily on the shoulders of Manoah. He was certain that such a sacred task and solemn duty could only be undertaken with the help and instruction of the Lord. Manoah realised the potential of his son, as yet unborn, and that he would be a Nazarene unto God.

Christian parents should realise that parenthood is a sacred task. We need God's help in performing it in the dark days in which we live. Samson was dedicated from birth. Dedication of our children at an early age is the first step in our duty to prepare our children to serve the Lord.

Mzee Bull, Tanzania

Jesus, Son of Mary?

Pastor Joseph Ibrahimu.

THE assembled pastors were considering a list of names of men to be recognised as evangelists. "Tomaso Tiba," said I. "Why should he be given credentials as an evangelist?" The chairman smiled as he said, "You baptised him, Mzee." "Kumbe," said I, "that must have been a long time ago. I have not baptised anyone since 1958."

Tomaso, who lives at Gumba, became very concerned about his neighbours and began to witness to them. Entering a village and asking permission to speak, he was told that there was a mad woman in chains there. They explained that his presence would stir up the demon within her and she would become violent. He answered that the God of whom he wanted to tell them could heal the woman. Having preached, he prayed with the woman and told her that Yesu would free her from the demons. The father was astonished to see how quiet and obedient his daughter was to this preacher of Yesu.

This Tomaso had no doubts. He asked us to make a special visit to the woman. Entering the village, we went into the workshop of the woman's father. "Yesu was a carpenter," said I. We began to witness about Yesu, Son of God. The father said that he knew of Isa bin Maria (Jesus, son of Mary). "That is an insult," said I. "I have never heard of a great king being called the son of a woman. Everybody knows the name of the ruler of our country (Tanzania), but whoever heard his mother's name?" Joseph and I alternated in witnessing to the group of men, each praying as the other spoke, searching for the word of wisdom which would persuade them to allow us to see and pray for the woman.

"I have spent much money on her," said the father. "Two waganga (witchdoctors) have been unable to help her." "Did you call the sheh (Moslem priest)?" said I. "Why, of course!"

said he. "He could not help her?" "No." "But Yesu can," said I. "Come and see her, but I am afraid she will leap on you and injure you," said the father. "We are covered and protected by the blood of Yesu. No demon has power to harm us," I said.

The poor soul, who was about thirty-five years old, was chained about both legs to three logs. She could move short distances by picking up the logs and shuffling along. Joseph told her what we were going to do. "You pray, Mzee," said he. We laid hands on her and asked Yesu, Son of God, to deliver her. Joseph again counselled her. She made no response beyond a movement of her head. The father's eyes were bulging with astonishment.

I went away with a prayer burden for the woman and her father and mother. Eight days after being prayed for, she was still apparently healed and was asking why she was chained. My burden persisted. I knew that the parents would have to be convinced before they took off those thick chains. How long would that convincing take? So I prayed specifically twice a day.

Fourteen days after being prayed for, the woman awoke to find that her chains had come off. They were not unlocked, but she was free. The relations held counsel. It was established that nobody had touched the chains, but they were off. Said the father: "I do not know who took them off, perhaps it was Mungu (God), but I will not put them on again."

The last report speaks of her living a normal life. She has been many miles to visit friends. It is possible she may return to her husband. She went to draw water for him recently. "Kumbe," said a local Moslem to Tomaso, "your God is great, ours has nothing."

Yes, it was the work of Yesu Mwana Wa Mungu—Jesus, Son of God!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

LOOKING FOR NEW

by Len Magee

ELIM BIBLE COLLEGE STUDENT

"Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Peter 3 : 13).

EVERY Christian should be socially conscious and aware of his responsibilities in the realm of caring and providing for his fellow men. An absence of interest and willingness to stretch out the helping hand is characteristic of the late Mr. Faith, but what do we do when atheistic humanitarians besiege us to share lofty visions of mankind marching on to future happiness and glory? How do we answer the torments of compromisers who call us to faith in unity rather than in the unifying Christ? These earthly-minded so-called intellectuals put the cart before the horse, yet they attack the evangelical as being destructive rather than constructive. Their cry is for works, but without the hindering and embarrassing influence of such terms as "separation," "sin," "judgment" and "Christ's Second Coming." Surely the answer lies in being realistic about the problems of time and in getting our priorities right.

In today's world, amid a scene of flickering wars, confused politics and distressing signs of woeful, unprecedented international conditions as the nations reshuffle, humanity is slowly linking and welding itself together in larger units as man sees that the only solution to world calamity is world-wide unity. As the curtain draws back we see the actors being positioned for the final pageant in which the last proclamation shall be "Peace and safety." Thereafter the fiery curtain will fall and a new age will begin.

Let us beware lest we find ourselves absorbed in the vain task of building, conglomerating and eventually lining ourselves up with a world which, in Peter's white-hot words, is "reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." In a similar way that men store up firewood for winter, we live on a planet which is "kept in store" to become fuel for the wrath of God. We are not in the secondhand or reconditioning business. God has called us to the ministry of reconciliation, not rehabilitation. We should not see this world as an ailing convalescent which, with a little renovation and resuscitation, can be nursed back to some degree of health; we look for "NEW heavens and a NEW earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

*To what cause, then, do we channel our energy? Jude's words are blunt and vivid and, as we hurtle on towards the day of the Lord, singularly apt: "Snatch some from the fire and have mercy on the waverers" (Moffatt). It is not he who violently opposes moral pollution, who introduces sweeping social reforms, or who seeks to better the lot of his fellow men, who is wise. Though these things be a fruit of godliness, it is he who wins souls who is wise.

*Should not the intensity of our efforts border on desperation and our preaching be infused with sighs and tears? Spurgeon said: "The game of eloquence, with the souls of men for the counters and eternity for the table, is the most wicked sport in the world." God help us not to be found playing games, but to be found pleading with sinners.

*The light of dawn is breaking,
Darkness will soon be by,
A new day is awaking,
Soon Christ will come in the sky.
What of the lost, Lord,
Where will they go?
What of the lost, Lord?
Do you really want to know?*

If we REALLY believe that millions will be swept into eternal damnation at Christ's return, if we REALLY believe what God has said regarding the end of man and his present habitation, we will live in this future incinerator with the love of Christ constraining us to SNATCH men and women from the fire as we look and hasten for that day where the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Let us ask ourselves are we more community conscious than convert conscious, socially conscious than soul conscious? Are we looking for the NEW earth or busy with the old? Are our priorities right?

The evangelist, J. H. Dick, with a group of the Cardiff Crusaders who assisted him in the Penzance crusade.

Twenty-town crusade at Penzance conducted by Pastor J. Dick and Cardiff Crusaders

WE set off at midnight after the Sunday evening service for the journey to Penzance—a hired van and five cars in various states of repair—and despite one breakdown at 2 a.m. we all made it. Needless to say, the twenty-five Cardiff Crusaders were glad to unroll their sleeping-bags on the church hall floor and have a few hours rest before the evening service.

During the week that followed almost every home in Penzance was visited and many heard the Gospel in the daily open-air meetings on the sea front.

We thoroughly enjoyed the children's campaign and, after we told the twenty-four who gathered on the first night to bring their friends, we were amazed—120 turned up on the following night! A Sunday school was established and one of the local men took on the task of being the superintendent.

The numbers at the main services were excellent, reaching a climax of 160 at the closing rally. During the week's campaign a number of people accepted Christ in the services and during door-to-door work. Some were baptised in the Holy Ghost and one young man, now back in America, was delivered from demon powers. At the closing rally about sixteen people rededicated their lives to the Lord.

The church members and caretaker were marvellous. It is not much fun having twenty-five lively Crusaders taking over your building for a week!

The Crusaders returned home tired but very happy and alight for God. We had the inevitable breakdown on the way back, but even that turned out for good—the garage hand who came to help found Christ as his Saviour!

Pastor : J. Teague

January 16th, 1972, will go down in the history of our church as a very important day, for this was when the first members were received into fellowship by our pastor and his wife. Pastor F. Wagner was the speaker. He also had a word of encouragement for the new members. The service was followed by the usual "family time," when light refreshments were served.

A new venture was the holding of a service at Wyatt House, Paganhill, when Mr. Blick played Father Christmas. The over-sixties were really blessed and we were invited to go again.

Please pray that God will help all those who work in this corner of His vineyard.

Pastor : J. A. Hamilton

Pastor J. A. Hamilton, from Hull City Temple, was recently inducted to the pastorate of our church. The service was conducted by the District Superintendent, Pastor W. J. Maybin, and was well supported by ministers from the presbytery and from local churches.

Pastor Hamilton was welcomed to the church by the secretary, Mr. E. E. M. Downer, and to the presbytery by a former minister of Hull City Temple, Pastor H. Palliser, of Kingston-upon-Thames. The charges to the minister and church were given by another former minister of Hull City Temple, Pastor I. R. Moore, of Clapham.

On the Sunday two weeks later our pastor had the joy of seeing two young men from Charterhouse, Godalming, receive the baptism in the Holy Spirit after the morning service.

We look forward to the blessing of the Lord under our brother's ministry.

TRIBUTE TO ROYAL GORNOLD

By J. Osman

HEAVEN is richer and Bournemouth inestimably poorer by the death of Royal Gornold, who, from very early days, maintained links with Elim. Our beloved Joseph Smith married Roy's sister, Cynthia, and Christopher Smith, who spoke at the funeral service at the Springbourne church, is his nephew.

All who knew Roy will echo the sentiments expressed in a letter to his widow, Alison, that "he was the most Christlike man we have ever known."

He collapsed after proposing a toast at a wedding reception in Bournemouth. He had given the bride away at the wedding in St. Peter's Church.

He was a man full of good works, best known possibly as a director of St. George Films of Bournemouth, in which he had been associated with the late Madeline, Lady Lees, of Lytchett Minster. In this capacity he has produced many religious films, including the colour film "Messiah," parts of which have been seen on British television. Other films include a documentary on the work of Billy Graham, one which has been shown in over twenty countries entitled "Voice crying in the wilderness," and many road safety films which have been shown all over the country. This last is not surprising in view of the fact that he was the national treasurer of the Christian Road Safety League, which his sister, Mrs. Barbara Mackie, founded. He was involved in work among the Jews, to whom he showed that Christ was the true Messiah.

To my mind he was the epitome of a true Christian gentleman. Gentle, gracious, courteous, kind, humble, thoughtful, considerate are adjectives which are not too fulsome to capture the sweetness of his character. It was a pleasure to be in his company and one always felt a wish that one was more like him. To know him was to love him and through his life and testimony many have come to know the Lord. He fought a good fight, finished his course and kept the faith.

The secret of his saintliness is embodied in one of his favourite choruses : "I know a fount where sins are washed away, I know a place where night is turned to day. . . . There's a wonder working power in the blood of Calvary." His love for the Lord, who saved him, shone through in everything he did.

Good night, Roy. We look forward to seeing you again IN THE MORNING.

The King's smile

Words and drawing by SHEILA PRICE

THERE are many museums up and down the country and I expect you have visited one at some time or another. Some museums have an art gallery in them, where we can look at paintings of famous people who lived long ago.

One evening, after all the visitors had gone, the caretaker of one museum was having a last look around before he locked up for the night. As he was passing a painting of a king he was sure that the king spoke!

"Please don't go just yet," the king said. "I get so bored and lonely hanging up on this wall all the time. The people gaze at me as they pass, but none of them has time to stop for a chat. Tell me, my good man, what is the world like now? Has it changed much since I was king?"

"Well," said the caretaker, somewhat surprised, "the world has changed a great deal. We have rockets going to the moon now, and motorways, television, jet 'planes, express trains, hovercraft, supermarkets and —"

"Stop!" commanded the king. "I have no idea what you are talking about. We had none of these. I am sure they are all very nice and make life a lot easier, but what I really want to know is does God still send His beautiful sunshine, does He still make the flowers grow and the birds sing?"

"Why, yes!" answered the caretaker.

"Tell me, are there still churches in the world? Do children still go to Sunday school?" asked the king.

"Oh, yes," replied the caretaker. "I go to church myself as a matter of fact. I go to the Elim Pentecostal church just round the corner and my boy and girl go to the Sunday school there too. We all love Jesus."

"Oh, I'm so glad!" replied the king. "I am so glad that the important things have not changed. You have made me very happy. Thank you for stopping to talk to me."

* * *

"No one will believe me when I tell them that a painting spoke to me!" thought the caretaker.

Just as he was about to lock the door he glanced back at the painting and was certain that he saw the king smile.

'Bye for now!

TESTIMONY TIME

MY son, Martin, aged eight, was told by the doctor on December 22nd, 1971, that he would have to spend Christmas in hospital because of appendicitis. The doctor had arrived in the late evening. My daughter, Lesley, telephoned our pastor and he came and anointed Martin with oil and prayed for his healing.

We then took Martin to hospital, where we were told that they would not operate that night, though the doctor had said that they would, as Martin's pain had gone.

He was kept in hospital for another day as he had a temperature, but, praise God, he had no more pain. We are assured that his healing is complete.

It makes me ashamed when I think of what I have missed through times of failure. We as a family give God all the praise and thanks for what he has done for Martin and for the ministry of Pastor R. Morrell.

(MRS.) K. GREENING.

"We beheld His Glory"

"That they may behold My glory" (John 17 : 24)

by M. W. Carr, B.Sc.

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, CALVARY
CHAPEL, KING'S HEATH, BIRMINGHAM

PART II

Resemblance

MEN have tried to capture Christ's resemblance in order to reveal to the world some measure of His glory, but all they do is to put Him to an open shame. There can be no visible image that correctly portrays the nature of God. Natural man cannot fathom God and therefore cannot mould him in earthly likeness by earthly means. This only belittles the real glory that is His. If man by his finger can give God a face, then man will cherish that form to the exclusion of faith, the only spiritual eye the believer has. We walk by faith, not by sight, and therefore we leave the physical form unknown and concentrate on the matchless glory of His work and the regal outworking of His person. All we need to know is that Jesus died for us and that by faith we secure His affection and eternal forgiveness. "He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him. He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from Him" (Isaiah 53 : 2) hardly presents a picture to envy. Enlarge the eye of faith and let this be your whole task : to see Him clearly in ascended power. Let not images of human creation detract from that noble, glorious Saviour. His glory should enwrap us with wonder and by diligent seeking through the pages of Scripture we find out the greatness of His person.

Restoration

It is needful to look for this glory. Read 2 Corinthians 3 : 18 : "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." The quality is rare, unique because it is eternal. The things that are eternal are unseen, and if this glory is oftentimes outside our grasp it is because we are striving for temporal things (2 Corinthians 4 : 18).

God once sent His glory to earth and few saw and understood the Divine intrusion : "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1 : 14). This miracle of omnipotent love, so vainly treated, was the only Son, the manifestation of the Father's glory, sent to bear the penalty of imputed sin. Consider the relationship between truth and glory. When men see truth they seek nothing less than God's glory, for truth is the very nature of God and therefore cannot be less than God. Christ was truth and in this He manifested God's glory. Many miss God because they cannot face the truth!

Reception

While this age lasts and before Christ returns, the only means of seeing Christ's glory is by that faith that also secures redemption for us. This faith is not of man and cannot be encouraged in destitute sinners, except it be engendered by God. Have you faith? If you have, you have also the means of beholding the glory that comes of Divine revelation. You may strive earnestly, but you will not thus see or enter the inner circle of perception. It is not given to a select few, however, for the promise of faith is to "whosoever." All may come, but so few do come. God is not partial in His love; He bestows it upon everyone who comes to Him. God will not push glory on to any man, but He longs that individuals will seek for a further knowledge of Him past the elementary scenes of nature, that only contain His natural greatness and goodness. Faith, then, is the key; it opens the door to God and leads us inside to further joy.

Radiance

God's glory is seen in the person of Christ and saving faith makes that new life more appreciate the Lord. Peter puts it : "Whom having not seen ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory" (1 Peter 1 : 8). "Yet believing" is a challenging phrase. When all things go against us, we rejoice with full glory, because we are growing in the knowledge of Him who brings all things to perfection. The sure word to us is: "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3:18). As we grow we shall find glory the companion of our way. The Scriptures are given for this precise purpose. "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature" (2 Peter 1:4). "For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ" (v. 8). This knowledge will bring glory (2 Corinthians 3:18).

Resolution

Are you still uncertain of the glory? Do you find but little of it in your life? Then consider that it may not be the right lord you behold, or that you may not be using the right eye to behold Him or the right glass to behold Him in. That mirror is no less than the Scriptures, for in them are seen the face of the Lord and our image. Look often at that reflection and let the Spirit of God work the transformation. "Be ye transformed," says the Book. Simple believing faith can do what nothing else can; it can make us to be like Christ. "He must increase and I must decrease," and it can only happen as we are aware of His rightful authority. The Bible gives us that. Paul gives us the secret in Romans 15:13: "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost."

Abundant knowledge will lead to right reckoning of Christ's glory. We need to put Christ's glory before any other thing in heaven and earth. To do this, we must see rightly and strive to ensure that what we see is of God, ascribing to Him the eternal measure that is His due. Only by faith can we do this and faith is freely given of God ("and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God") to all who long for a right relationship and have a sincere motive in seeking.

This will convince you that you are saved, for the more you see of God and find out by revelation about His glory in Christ, the more you will realise that you are saved. Those who have a strong, unshakable faith have seen much of that glory. The greater the degree of knowledge about Him that we possess, the more fully must we consider that there is a supernatural Spirit who is guiding us into all truth. Seeking this glory also serves to strengthen us in the safety of our souls. This is not belief for belief's sake, but true, open insight into God's remedy against sin.

The proof of salvation is to see Christ's glory progressively!

ONE aspect of the teaching of the signs of the times must be kept very carefully in focus. From passages like 2 Timothy 3:1-5, those with eyes to see and voices to declare can readily point to the evidence that we must now be in the last of the last days. To some extent the Bible signs, or at least many of them, have been evident in previous generations, but many would agree that no previous generation has seen the overall body of these amazing predictions clearly there. The now oft-quoted terrors of 2 Peter 3 must have seemed like a Dante's inferno of a nightmare. They are still a nightmare, in all too real a sense, for the unsaved, but we now know from observable scientific facts just how devastating and how real such catastrophes can be. The nuclear age shudders at the very secrets it so proudly revealed.

We must take care, however, for there must be no implied rejoicing at the revealed doom of rejectors. If Jonah's prophecy shows anything it definitely reveals this. You will recall how God's mercy to a foully cruel capital, Nineveh, evoked from the reluctant prophet the petulant words, "Was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarshish: for I knew that Thou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest Thee of evil." These words, read with hindsight, seem almost incredible. He blamed God for being good because it did not fit in with his view, no doubt his intensely nationalistic view, of what should be. He was right in that Nineveh would be judged, as the prophet Nahum related with sighs of relief, but he was wrong in accusing God. The Lord God almighty has mercy upon whom He will.

Perhaps our problem is that we all too often preach the gospel to the converted. That sad expression "the outsiders" has always seemed to us to be unfortunate and self-revealing. The "insiders" are there only by the grace of God. There is no superiority that is inherent; we are what we are by the grace of God. A "them and us" situation in our thinking is dangerous if it produces a sense of being better or of isolation. The propagation of the signs of the times is right, essential to the full-orbed message, but may it be received by us in all humility and produce fervent prayer and evangelism. We are involved, like it or not.

By all means save some. . .

"Au revoir, Tanzania!"

by Arthur D. Bull

I LOOK over the side of the 'plane at the desert sands of North Africa far below and then continue the letter I am writing to pastor Paulo. I write, "The pilot has just told us that we are five miles above the earth. It is 2 p.m. I have just been praying for you all. I am so sorry we were parted so quickly this morning. Did you see the 'plane go?"

Four pastors with the wives of two of them came to the airport at Dar-es-Salaam to see us off, but the airline separated us abruptly before the scheduled time. There was no time for the last-minute exchanges, just "Kwa heri—with blessing, Mzee! Kwa heri, Mama—with blessing!" as we grasped their hands.

The preceding days had been so full. The farewell service at which I said, "The people say you are our children, but we did not cleanse you from sin; Yesu did that. We did not deliver you from the power of Satan; Yesu did that. This same Yesu will keep you all, whether we are present or absent. You are not sons of Bulu, but sons of the living God."

"Joseph, stop them!" I said. The Masai were stripping off their ornaments to give us tokens of their regard. A chicken squawked down the church in the hands of an Mkwezi woman. "No!" said Joseph, "I won't stop them; they want to give."

There were so many questions about our home country. "London has 10,000,000 people, but we shall walk through them unknown to all," I said. "How can that be?" they asked. "Everybody knows you here." "Take us with you," said a group of Masai. A quick thought crossed my mind—we would soon be well known if we appeared in London with these our black "daughters"!

The mission was a hive of activity. Our house, now occupied by Joseph, was filled with people, walking, talking, sitting, greeting, singing, lying down. "What's that smell?" said I. "There are lots of smells," said Joseph. "Masai?" "I am used to that one!" I said. "Ah, what's that?" I pointed to four legs sticking out from under a sack. "A small cow," Joseph replied. "It has a high smell," said I. "When was it killed?" "It was felled yesterday," said Joseph. "Which yesterday?" I asked.

Mari had come 120 miles to say "Go with blessing." Fanufai the cripple had been fetched from only ten miles away. Pastor Paulo and his wife, Esther, travelled a two-day journey of 400 miles!

The pilot breaks in on my thoughts. "Captain here," he says, "the weather is clear, departing temperature 78 F. Temperature of destination, -2 C. Yes, in a few hours we have left our brethren thousands of miles behind, but at 3 o'clock I was reminded to pray.

So often I have answered the reproachful words of the Christians, "We do not see you often now" with "The work is widespread, you have your local pastor, but even if you do not see me, remember, I pray for you every day at 3 p.m."

Now, 6,000 miles away, we pray still, because, as Paul wrote of the Philippians, we have them in our hearts.

The Big Hole

By Leslie Wigglesworth

SECRETARY OF ELIM MISSIONARY SOCIETY

PETELO was visibly troubled. We knew that his mother was ill, but we did not realise how complicated his situation was. His mother lived in a village over against the Big Hole. Locally this was known as a black spot where a particular brand of witchcraft kept the people in a state of fear and terror. The sorcerers claimed that the spirits in the Big Hole communicated with them regularly and "helped" them with their necromancies. Most of the "help," of course, gave them complete control over the people by apprehensions. Gifts to the witchdoctors could ensure protection for the individual against bad spirits and, because they had special contact with the ghosts of the Big Hole, this was thought to be reasonable and logical!

The Big Hole appeared generations ago before the grandfathers of the present grandfathers were born, so nobody knew exactly how or what it was. The hole was like a huge quarry fifty to sixty yards across. The sides were precipitous, descending perpendicularly 150 feet to a beautiful blue pond. Some geologist had tried to plumb the depth of this water hole and his plummet had reached a depth of 220 feet without touching bottom. So it was a very special Big Hole both to Africans and Europeans. Hair-raising tales of bloody cruelties are told around the village fires. Old men speak of the raids of the slavers who took the most healthy looking men and women to sell as slaves. To satisfy their sadism they made long rope bridges and suspended them across the Big Hole. The undesirables were driven on to the bridge, which eventually sagged, broke and threw its burden into the waters below. There was little escape from death by drowning. The screams of the victims, coupled with the frenzied jeers of the raiders, were terrible to hear. The place is therefore supposed to be a sheer concentration of unfortunate spirits who frequent this "burial" ground.

Petelo wanted to bring his mother to the mission for prayer and care, but his relatives refused point blank to take her out of the hands of the greatly feared witchdoctors. As he was the eldest son he had some say in the way his mother should be treated, but have you ever heard the horrible curses that are hurled at those who try to interfere with spirit controls? It takes a firm faith in Christ and a bold stand against satanic powers to bring relief to a benighted people. Petelo felt sure that God wanted to help his mother; it was not right for her to remain under the influence of devils.

One day, after much searching of heart and with some apprehension, he set off, determined to bring his mother the twenty-odd miles to the mission. Christian friends were ready to carry her. They all knew the danger of supernatural evils. Petelo tramped on with the inward conviction that he should trust in the Lord, but with the thought that he was involving others. This made him agonise in prayer. As he crossed the plains his soul was uplifted in supplication. Suddenly he found himself asking the Lord a strange request. "Lord," he said, "so that I may be sure that I am doing the right thing by my mother, my family and these your children, let me see an impossible sight. Lord, let me see a man carrying a woman's load and a woman carrying his bow and arrows." This seemed a ridiculous thing to ask.

Several travellers passed him, but in each case the woman had her usual load on her head while her man carried only his bow and arrows. It was almost tantalising to see the number of people who were in the bush that day. On he went until he could see the village across the last valley of his journey. The grass huts shone in the evening sunshine. He knew that among them his mother was receiving the attentions of the spirit worshippers. He descended to the stream just half a mile out of the village. There was only one couple between him and his objective. The path up the hillside to where he would confront his spiritual enemies was empty except for a man and a woman descending, each carrying the normal load. "Perhaps I have prayed a foolish prayer, Lord, but it seemed to come out of my innermost being and I don't want to be mistaken," he mused. Just then the woman stopped and spoke to her husband. Fascinated, Petelo watched them from about 100 yards away. He could scarcely believe his eyes, for the woman actually handed her load to the man and she took his bow and arrows! They passed the delighted Petelo with the usual friendly greetings of path travellers.

"A woman carrying bow and arrows and a man carrying her load! Hallelujah! Lord, You have spoken, I will trust and not be afraid of what man might do, for You have spoken. Now I know what I must do," he prayed.

Shortly afterwards he sat in a family palaver and informed his brothers that his mother would be carried to the mission the next day. Pandemonium followed. The whole village heard the family quarrelling. The argument raged around whether the heathen brothers' fear of the witchdoctors or Petelo's faith in Christ would prevail, but eventually Petelo's forthright assurance that his mother would be better at the mission persuaded them to let her go. The witchdoctors made a fuss. It was a new experience for them to meet a man who did not quake before them. Curses filled the air and they were not mere expletives to relieve pent-up feelings. Men and women have died because of the invocations of evil uttered by the sorcerers. The faithful man hated the noise. The curses were dreadful, but he believed that once his mother was away from such contamination she would be safe.

The next morning a path hammock was made. A hunting net slung on a long pole sufficed to carry the frail woman. Before the heat of the sun became too strong, friends helped to carry her to the village near the mission. Immediately she was surrounded by people who loved the Lord. The sheer contrast of love and blessing as opposed to fear and cursing affected her strangely. The appeal for her wellbeing was made to the Great Spirit and to His Son, Jesus. For days she had listened to incantations of evil origin. The difference was so great. Gradually her own fears were dispelled. The relatives who had opposed Petelo saw a miracle as she yielded to the ministry of love. Christians' prayers began to release her mind from the bondage of evil spirit control. One wonderful day she opened her heart to accept Christ as her Saviour. Healed in soul and body, her life became useful and Petelo's troubled expression disappeared. His fellow Africans knew what a battle he had fought and how he had reached out through the tenacity of tribal tradition to bring Christ to his mother. His humility and sheer contentment were evident and so were the faith and healing of his mother. We learned the story in a testimony meeting when he could not contain his joy and praise. His Lord had triumphed!

In November 1971 the name of the Democratic Republic of Congo was changed to THE REPUBLIC OF ZAIRE. This does not appear to have received the international publicity one would expect, but nevertheless it is an accomplished fact. Since the name Congo forms part of the title of Congo Evangelistic Mission, our C.E.M. friends had no alternative but to amend their title to read:

On the Wards

by John Hyde

FREE CHURCH CHAPLAIN OF A SCARBOROUGH HOSPITAL

"Sick, and ye visited Me" (Matthew 25 : 36)

SAME time, same day, same round of wards—but very often almost a new congregation. What reception is one to expect today?

With a silent prayer, "Lord, lead me to a needy soul," I enter the first ward. "If a patient is asleep [pretence or otherwise] do not disturb" is the ruling. From bed to bed, occasionally a warm welcome is accompanied by an encouraging smile. This person is ready to talk, from news of family to cause of illness, to the longing to be back home. Here is an opportunity to make known: "Prayer changes things."

In the next bed an aged person sits up. "No time for religion in my life and I'm not listening now. Don't believe in God and life beyond. 'Dead and done with' is my motto." Does sickness bring men nearer to God, as some believe? Very often sufferers harden their hearts and blaspheme the name of the Lord.

"Post me a letter as you go out chum!" comes from someone across the ward, evidently wide awake. Here is a golden opportunity to witness for the Master.

"Don't I know you? I send my little girl to your Sunday school"; no introduction needed here. There is a ready response as I tell of our wonderful Saviour.

"Thank you for your prayers, pastor; I know the Lord will undertake for me," says a child of God in the next bed, who already has made an impression on other people in the ward as a result of relating to them how she found Christ.

I move to a male ward; first a friendly chat with the sister. Several of the patients are absorbed in reading the daily paper. I recognise the butcher who works in the market hall, who remarks, "Fancy seeing you here, but it's grand to speak to someone I know." Is this the man who a few years ago said, "Hope we are not going to get any preaching in the market hall, guv"? A changed man now, he is ready to listen to the Word of God and of His power to save and help him during his time of sickness. In the end bed is a young man whom I have visited on several occasions. "Nearly ready for home now are we?" I remark. "Don't mention home to me!" he says with tears in his eyes, and he confides that his wife has gone off with someone else while he has been in hospital. What is one to say in such circumstances? I commit him to God in prayer that his wife will soon be restored to him.

In one of the smaller wards is the manageress of a local shop, now well on the way to recovery. "Thank you for your prayers. I knew that you would come and visit me. Yes, God has been very good to me while I have been here. I can't thank Him enough. As you well know, there was a time when I had no desire to pray."

I see a very frail lady struggling to fix her hearing aid. "Mustn't miss the chance to have a word with the chaplain about the things of God. I'm ninety years of age and very thankful for what the nurses and doctors are doing for me. The Lord has been very near to me in here and I have His wonderful peace and joy within," she enthuses, and goes on to tell me of her conversion many years ago and of her deep experience with God. I came to minister to this dear one; instead she ministers to me.

On to the isolation wards, where the first patient is a young man who literally trembles from head to foot as he sees me, and calls out, "Am I as bad as that, then, that they have had to send for a parson?" Fear is in his eyes and it is some time before I can convince him that I have brought him words of life and hope. He is under observation and I assure him that the medical staff will do their best for him and that God is with him and can give new life and strength for the days to come. Fear leaves his face; now there is a faint smile and a readiness to listen.

In the next cubicle is a middle-aged man suffering from tuberculosis. We had met before when he was very depressed. What a marked change in his greeting: "I've read your pieces in the papers and they have made an impression on me. I feel uplifted and I am now putting my trust in God.

Already I am feeling much better." It is good to have an encouraging word from a non-church-goer.

My round of wards would not be complete without a visit to the children's section. "Who are you?" "Where do you live?" "Have you seen my mum?" "Come and see my new book!"—all the little patients talk together, not forgetting those in the minority who say, "I go to Sunday school." They lead me to the play room. I try their new toys and have a chat before I leave. May the hand of God be upon these young lives!

So ends another session. Is it worth while? Definitely yes, though only eternity will reveal the fruit of such labours.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Soul-winning success

I have been blessed and encouraged by the articles written by J. Nelson Parr. He made mention in January 1st issue of some 8,000,000 boys and girls in the British Isles who never go to Sunday school. I have been interested in Sunday school statistics for many years.

The situation is very serious today as one thinks of the church of tomorrow. I have a very interesting book, The Centenary Memorial of the Establishment of Sunday School, 1780-1880, which I purchased in a secondhand book shop in Gloucester thirty-five years ago. I quote: "July 6th, 1880. After the laying of the foundation stone of the Raikes Memorial Hall, in drizzling rain the children gathered in thousands toward the park, led by the Gloucester artillery band. The number of children present was about 7,000, apart from Sunday school teachers." Could this be done in Gloucester today—or in any other city?

I am amazed at the great gatherings all over Great Britain at that time. Perhaps the chart below (just one of many) will enlighten the minds of Sunday school teachers. The tremendous increase in population since 1878 should be borne in mind.

Table showing the estimated number of Sunday school scholars and teachers
1878

	Teachers	Scholars
England and Wales ...	422,222	3,800,000
Scotland	47,972	494,533
Ireland	30,175	320,920
	500,369	4,615,453

This was after 100 years of Sunday school work. What will the figure be in 1988? Shall we be able to say as Robert Raikes said as he walked down Sooty Alley: "See what God hath wrought!"?

"Where there is no vision, the people perish" (Proverbs 29:18).

Yours in Christ,

LEON C. QUEST.

PROVIDENCE

vehicles hurtling along, I always say "Thank you, Lord, for keeping me safe."

Life is very precious. To the Christian it is a sacred trust. Small wonder then that the people of St. Edmund's were filled with a deep thankfulness when they gazed awestruck on the fallen masonry of their church and realised what a marvellous deliverance had been wrought. It is good to recognise that the providence of God includes the whole scope of life, for the loss of earthly possessions can be just as much in the providence of God as the preservation of our physical bodies. Job rejoiced in God as the preserver of men; he was also able to accept the loss of all his material wealth and say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

When fire broke out at the old rectory at Epworth, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley and their children fled from the blazing house only to discover that six-year-old John was trapped in his bedroom. When it seemed impossible to reach him, the father fell upon his knees at the foot of the burning staircase and, in agony, commended the soul of the child to God. Young John, finding it impossible to escape by the door, climbed upon a chest and appeared at the window. There was no time to procure a ladder, but one man was hoisted on the shoulders of another and thus the child was rescued. When he was carried to the house where his parents were, the father cried out, "Come, neighbours, let us kneel down, let us give thanks to God! He has given me all my eight children. Let the house go; I am rich enough!"

God's providence overrules the moral and spiritual influences that surround us. Just as much as Mr. Wesley could thank God for bodily preservation of his family, William Quarrier, the founder of the Orphan Homes in Scotland, could look back to the days of his childhood in the Saltmarket area of Glasgow, surrounded by the noisy revelry of the travelling showmen and the evil influences of the booths, and say "That I was not led away I owe to God's overruling and preserving care."

ON a sunny winter morning I walked through the churchyard of St. Edmund Archbishop in Salisbury and gazed with pleasure on the outline of the grey stone tower against the soft blue sky. Above the doorway in the tower of this ancient church is a carved stone plaque with the following inscription: "The Lord did marvellously preserve a great congregation of His people from the fall of the tower in this place upon the Sabbath Day being June 26th, 1653. PraIse HIM O yee ChILdren." The text contains an ingenious chronogram. The enlarged letters, if read as Roman numerals, added together make the date 1653.

I cannot tell you just now of St. Edmund or of the history of this 700-year-old church. Suffice it to say that the patron saint became Archbishop of Canterbury and the church itself was never an ordinary parish church, but a Collegiate church served by a Provost and College of Canons. What interested me was the cheering realisation that here in stone before my very eyes was the evidence of a company of thankful people who were not ashamed to record their tribute to the preserving power of God.

People assume that most things in life happen by chance or luck and that the providential care of God is a doubtful, hit-or-miss affair. Such doubters may smile at the positive faith of the congregation of St. Edmund's 300 years ago. If we believe wholeheartedly in the preserving care of almighty God, however, we are in good company. Jacob, Joseph, Joshua and David did. Job could surely be excused if he had questioned God's providential care, but he gave God a wonderful title: "the Preserver of men" (Job 7: 20). In these difficult and dangerous days it is a great comfort to rest in the care of God. Death stalks our highways. I never set out on a car trip without asking God to preserve me. Even when crossing a busy thoroughfare with heavy

WHY?

THIS is the question asked by children and you are surprised by their ability to keep it up! When you have answered one "Why?"—as you think—to everybody's satisfaction, out it comes again, "Yes, but why?"

They are not alone in this, however, and to help you answer some of the questions which arise during personal witnessing, door-to-door work, etc., we have prepared a series of pamphlets under the very title, "Why?"

Current titles are: "The Baptism in the Holy Spirit," "Church Membership," "Divine Healing," "Salvation," "Prayer," "Baptism" and "The Second Advent."

Order from Grenehurst Press, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, please, sending cash with order. Prices are: 100 for 50p (postage and packing 10p extra), 250 for £1.25 (p. and p. 25p), 500 for £2.25 (p. and p. 30p), and 1,000 for £4 (p. and p. 35p). You can order assorted titles in multiples of twenty-five.

Impact 3G

by Alexander Tee

NATIONAL YOUTH DIRECTOR

YOUR best sermon is yourself. The impact of a consistent godly life is immeasurable. An ever-widening circle is created by even a small stone making its impact on the water of a calm pond. If we have a religious public image which is different from the real person we are inside our front doors, the impact on our children is devastating. It leaves them confused and often influences them in sad ways which filter down into the next generation.

A quarrel in church

God marvellously helped King Uzziah, but when he was strong he trespassed against the Lord and sought to overstep himself by burning incense in the temple. The priests challenged him and a quarrel broke out (2 Chronicles 26:19). Azariah and the other priests actually thrust him out.

Quarrels in churches can have far-reaching effects on newcomers, new converts and our children. Only eternity will reveal the damage done by Christians who were determined to have their own way, irrespective of who and how many they upset in the process. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God" (Matthew 5:9).

Young Jotham knew all about his father's quarrel in the temple. His father was never the same again even until the day he died. After his father's funeral Jotham decided to have nothing to do with going to the Lord's house. He was a good man, but these sad words appear in 2 Chronicles 27:2: "howbeit he entered not into the temple of the Lord." His leadership in this respect had an impact on his people and on his son, for the verse finishes: "And the people did yet corruptly."

Ahaz was never taken by his father to sit with him in the house of God. He never witnessed his father taking any part in singing psalms or reading from the scrolls of Scripture. Perhaps when Ahaz asked his father why he did not go to church Jotham told his son about the bitter quarrel the boy's grandfather had and its terrible outcome.

He closed the church

After Ahaz became king he took things out of the house of God and gave them away (2 Chronicles 28:21). He did not value them. He utterly turned away from God and smashed many of the things in the temple, "and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord." He must have had bitter feelings; they were born somewhere!

In generation one you have an open door, in generation two a forsaken door, but in generation three a closed door. How different it might have been had there been no quarrel! How wonderful it might have been if the second generation had seen the folly of bad feeling and pride.

We do well to be peacemakers and not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together. To cease attending communion services and prayer meetings leads to spiritual disaster, not only to ourselves but to many others, some of whom may not even be born yet.

Monday, February 21st

"The Spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him" (v. 6).

Samson knew the moving of God's Spirit from his youth (Judges 13 : 25). The Spirit of God came upon him three times during the twenty years he judged Israel (Judges 14 : 6, 19 ; 15 : 14). Only once did this experience come in a direct confrontation with the enemy. What might have been achieved had he sought to use his Spirit-filled experience to free the people of Israel from the tyranny of the Philistines? The potential of his life was never fully realised. His strength was often used to help him escape from self-generated trouble.

Oh that every believer would realise the potential of the Spirit-filled life! The Spirit of God is given to enable our lives to be more effective to the pulling down of the strongholds of the enemy.

Tuesday, February 22nd

Judges 15 : 1-20

"Knowest thou not that the Philistines are rulers over us?" (v. 11).

Men easily become resigned to situations. The words of our text were spoken by men of Judah. They had been so long under the heel of the oppressor that they had forgotten the blessing of their tribe and the promises of God to the nation. The men of Judah should have been at the necks of their enemies, not at their heels (Genesis 49 : 8). The people of Israel had entered the promised land to be overcomers, not underdogs (Joshua 23 : 5).

No enemy of the Christian, not even death or sin, can hold dominion over him (Romans 6 : 9, 14). We must not be resigned to defeat. Victory is the right of the Child of God, for "in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us" (Romans 8 : 37).

Wednesday, February 23rd

Judges 16 : 1-17

"Thou hast mocked me these three times" (v. 15).

Self-confidently, Samson played with temptation. Delilah was determined to discover his secret. He should have removed himself from the scene of temptation as soon as Delilah's intent was clear, but he stayed, and played. Note how close to the truth was his reaction to the third temptation. Delilah finally won.

The best way to avoid yielding to temptation is to keep clear of it. Temptation finally wins when we, in self-confidence, expose ourselves to it. The time to withdraw from the presence of evil is the moment it is revealed. To stay in its presence weakens resistance and brings surrender progressively nearer. Paul's advice is best: "Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thessalonians 5 : 22).

Thursday, February 24th

Judges 16 : 18-31

"The hair of his head began to grow again" (v. 22).

Samson paid a heavy price for his mistake. His hair had been the symbol of his obedience to God and of his strength. The shaven head of the blind, bound Samson was the symbol of his disobedience and personal weakness. This condition was not permanent, however, for his hair began to grow again! There was a way back. What he had lost could be restored. He prayed in the moment of greatest humiliation. God heard and answered. Samson's greatest hour was his hour of restoration (v. 30).

God can restore us when we fall. There is no end to His mercy ; it endures for ever. We need only to repent and to pray amid the ruins of failure and God will hear and will answer. We can live again to glorify His name.

Friday, February 25th

Judges 17 : 1-13

"The young man was unto him as one of his sons" (v. 11).

This Levite was not satisfied with the Divine provision and sought to wander from his appointed place and task (Numbers 8 : 19 ; 35 : 7 ; Judges 17 : 8). His personal tragedy was that he was willing to accept less than God intended for him (v. 10). His testimony was so blunted that the family of the idolator, Micah, was not convicted by his presence, nor was his own conscience troubled by the waywardness of the people (v. 11).

May we live in the place and service which God has appointed for us. Never let us be content with less than what God desires for us. May we so live that others become conscious of their own unrighteousness in the light of God's righteousness shining through us.

Saturday, February 26th

Judges 18 : 1-13

"Ask counsel, we pray thee, of God" (v. 5).

It is wise to seek for guidance from God before any venture. Great care must be exercised, however, in choosing the right people and places to inquire for help. The five spies of the tribe of Dan passed by Shiloh on their way from the coastal plain. They could have sought their guidance from the loyal priests who dwelt there. They preferred to ask for help from a renegade priest at the house of Micah, whose manner of living should have been sufficient to warn them that his help would be based on expedience and not faithfulness.

Always go to those whose manner of life and teaching reveals that Christ directs their lives when you are seeking guidance in your own life.

Sunday, February 27th

Judges 18 : 14-31

"They set up Micah's graven image . . . all the time that the house of God was in Shiloh" (v. 31).

No man lives unto himself. The action of the individual often has repercussions beyond his own sphere of life.

Your servant is supposed to work

THE apparently unrelated thoughts of Luke 17:1-10 seem to combine to bring us this message when they are given a little deeper consideration: Your servant is supposed to work.

The Lord talks to His disciples about forgiving, a most important and profound subject. As someone has said, it is "The act in which we share a characteristic peculiar to God Himself, who for no other reason than His grace forgives men the terrible evils listed under the title—sin." The disciples had evidently given considerable thought to this subject and its problems, for their reply to the challenge of forgiving a man seven times in one day was—"Give us more faith." They had discovered that reason was not the answer, for it could never arrive at an acceptable explanation for a man to be forgiven seven times in one day. They must have been aware that the law was not the answer, for they did not request more courage to apply the law, they asked for more faith. They realised that what they needed was to be able to believe that forgiving seven times in one day was right, that it would be beneficial to both parties.

While they learned this truth there was another that they had failed to appreciate. Listen to what the Master answered: "If you have faith the size of a mustard seed you could say to the tree, Be plucked up, and be planted in the sea, and it would obey you." Faith is not measured by its quantity, but by its operation.

Have we faith? Is Christ your Saviour? If He is, it is because you believed in Him. You have faith. To believe that to forgive a man seven times in one day is right, calls not for more faith than you have but that that faith should operate.

The next apparently unrelated thought in the passage seems to be a rebuke to the disciples and, justifiably, to most of us.

If a man has a servant that has worked all day in the field, at sundown will he say to him, "Come and sit down and let me give you your supper"? No—a servant is supposed to work. He will tell him to prepare a meal and serve his master, then he, the servant, may eat. Were the disciples pampering their faith? Did they consider that they only had a little ["Increase our faith"], therefore they were afraid to expect too much of it? Maybe some of us have passed the stage of serving supper to the servant and have already given him long leave or pensioned him off!

If we are to make useful contributions to the progress of our spiritual lives and to that of our local church, our community and even our land, we must make the servant work. We have faith; put it to work! After a measure of success have no pity, but demand more of that servant. It can only be measured by the results it produces. This is just what James wrote: "Show me your faith without your works." You cannot. Then "I'll show you my faith by my works" (James 2:18).

What a tremendous amount of servant power there is among us, but it is being wasted while we pray, "Increase our faith."

Come, now, the servant is supposed to work!

A permanent disservice was done to the people of God for many years by Micah's image, which remained a distraction from the true worship of God at Shiloh for as long as the tabernacle was pitched there.

God takes account of the influence we have on others. The responsibility of every Christian is clearly set out in Romans 14 and summarised in verse 21: "It is right not to eat meat or drink wine or do anything that makes your brother stumble" (R.S.V.).

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Shadow or substance

by R. Williams

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ROCHESTER

IT would appear that the Christian Church is about to be molested by a deluge of cavorting youths under the impression that they are giving to the world a new insight into the Christian gospel. This modern idiom seems to have survived an already tempestuous passage. Some claim that American church dignitaries are convinced of its value to Christian circles. I trust that I shall be forgiven for being less enthusiastic, though I am just as eager to present a living faith.

The birth of the recent "Jesus Cult" seems to have a couple of "twin sisters"—or would they be better considered as distant relations? I refer to the rock opera, Jesus Christ Super Star, and the musical, Godspell. While in their own way they try to describe various events in Christ's life I fear that their efforts may be scorned because of the presentation they have chosen.

Some of the music in these productions is infectious to say the least, but if only the dialogue was as exciting! Jesus Christ Super Star leaves a very open-ended question: "Do You think You're what they say You are?" Anyone with the vaguest knowledge of the gospel would know that many insinuations were made about Christ and He is not without His critics today. Surely a proper portrayal would present Him in all His deity.

Godspell, at present running in London, portrays Jesus Christ as gyrating, gesticulating, leaping about and momentarily standing in a plastic bucket to re-enact His baptism by John the Baptist. I believe in relating our message to the present age, but I think this scene hardly merits a diploma in theology or an Oscar.

The people most closely connected with this believe that if Christ were present at a performance He would be delighted. I hardly think so, especially when you consider the preposterous expenses involved in such features. To imagine Jesus and John the Baptist doing a soft shoe shuffle in some olive grove or up the side of a mountain is beyond imagination, yet present-day authors seem to think it a fitting thing to show.

The principal player in Godspell says that he never read the Bible until he was offered the part of Jesus Christ, the script of which is based on Matthew's Gospel. In his role he depicts Christ as a clown and, in keeping with the whole extravaganza, eventually gets himself crucified on a wire fence.

Where is this sort of thing going to end? Do such producers feel that the Church, which has been so opposed for 2,000 years, really needs to degenerate to this kind of spectacle? It can only be treated as a fad. Unfortunately sincere Christians are going to be left to put the pieces together again. I hope that British churchmen are not going to be as gullible as their American counterparts are considered to be. One journalist said that "even the churches are taking it seriously." Because a thing is new it is not always good. Some are excited by present trends, but I hope they will remember that these are performances of professionalism, commercial ventures.

Everything that brings people nearer to a faith in God is good, just as long as it is not at the expense of Christian principles.

One thing sticks in my mind about these two programmes: "How many of the players could really lay claim to being true Christians?"

The Evening Post.

NOW—AND THEN

Peace with the Saviour is mine today,
Walking with Jesus the whole of the way,
Singing His praises, learning to pray,
'Til He shall call me home.

Jesus my Saviour, reigning within,
Once gave His life-blood to take all my sin;
Now I will serve Him, others to win,
'Til He shall call me home.

Soon in His presence ever I'll be—Wonderful moment when His face I see:
Angels will open Heaven's gate for me,
When Jesus calls me home.

Saints from all nations there I shall meet
In adoration round His sacred feet;
Many dear loved ones, too, I shall greet,
When Jesus calls me home.

IRENE ATTWELL.

Church reports

EALING

Pastor : A. S. F. Horne

Our dear faithful sister in the Lord Miss M. Holwell attained the age of 100 years on December 19th. Mr. L. Groves (church secretary) arranged a birthday party for her, assisted by members and with wonderful help from the sisters for the catering. Over 120 participated and it was an honour to have among our guests the mayor of Ealing, Councillor K. H. Acock, J.P., and the mayoress, Pastor and Mrs. G. S. Hillman, and relatives of Miss Holwell. Bouquets of flowers were presented to the mayoress and to Miss Holwell. The mayor gave a very appropriate speech. Pastor Hillman spoke of his arrival in Ealing in 1934 when Miss Holwell was the zealous missionary box treasurer. Our pastor paid tribute to our sister's faithful, regular attendance at the meetings despite the fact that she lives in Chelsea, a considerable distance away.

The President's visit to our forty-first anniversary services (which celebrations also included a birthday tea!) still lives very vividly in our memories.

The annual church business meeting was held recently and encouraging reports were given, including added numbers at the children's meetings, including the branch work at Hanwell. Attendances of late have reached 100 on Sunday mornings and 150 in the evenings.

A prophetic weekend has just been held with Dr. Ralph Ashmore, secretary of the Barbican Mission to the Jews, as special speaker.

With a tinge of sadness, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ayling farewelled from Ealing before moving to Eastbourne. Mrs. Ayling came from Eastbourne, where she was saved and married. At Ealing she has taken an active part in the Sisterhood meetings. Mr. and Mrs. Ayling have been members at Ealing for over twenty years, and for most of that time Mr. Ayling has served on the diaconate.

Presentations were made by our pastor on behalf of the church and Sisterhood and both the pastor and the church secretary paid tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Ayling's service and faithfulness. Our prayers follow them to Eastbourne. We wish them every blessing in their retirement.

STOCKPORT

Pastor : E. Snelling

Just three months after the opening of our new building we received another wonderful blessing from the Lord, when we held a united baptismal service, Salford and Lord Street Mission joining with us. Thirteen candidates followed the Lord through the waters, each one giving a word of testimony. The power of God's Spirit was so great upon them that they could hardly speak. Pastor Maddon delivered a very forthright, heart-searching sermon, which brought a challenge to everyone in the crowded church. Pastor A. Lambie and Pastor E. Snelling helped in the convening of the meeting.

The last days of 1971 were enriched by the visits of Pastor C. G. Smith and Pastor L. W. Green, which were appreciated by us all. Then Pastor Joseph Smith came and strengthened us by reminding us that a fruitful year could be ours if we remembered that there can be no reaping without sowing.

We were kindly invited to the Baptist Church, Union Street, where Rev. Harry Young warmly shared with us his baptistry, church and congregation in a joint baptismal service. Our own pastor gave an inspiring address. This was church unity in action and we rejoiced as we witnessed the baptism of twelve candidates, ten Elim and two Baptist. Some were very young and some not so young, but all of them are "rooted and grounded in Christ Jesus."

Pastor Peter Griffiths, on a working furlough from Rhodesia, spent a recent Sunday with us. In the morning his sermon was on prayer. In the evening he brought his wife and family and a friend, a young medical student, who gave an enthusiastic testimony. He concluded his day's ministry with a talk on Rhodesia and answered questions which reflected the concern of all of us regarding the present situation there. Then came slides showing the work of God being undertaken by our dedicated missionaries in Rhodesia, as well as the medical work of the Doctors Brien, for all of which our admiration is beyond all telling.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

In reading the article "Jesus Christ, Superstar," by L. C. Quest, I was reminded of the greatness of God and of His goodness to me, not only in the saving of my soul but the healing of my body. I was in hospital for an operation and came to the last part of the preparation, even to the signing of the agreement form, when the Lord intervened and the operation was never performed. To God be the glory! The pastor and friends of the Lowestoft Elim Pentecostal Church could not have shown greater love and loyalty. God was pleased to answer their many prayers in His way in the healing of my body. (MRS.) H. TALBOT.

God our Banner

by JOHN HYDE

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SCARBOROUGH

THE conflict between Israel and Amalek (Exodus 17) ended in victory for Israel and the erection of the memorial which Moses named "Jehovah-nissi," meaning "God our banner." Moses went up on the mount while Joshua and the men of war fought in the plain. We think of Moses as interceding on the mount with God, but if we read carefully we find no word about prayer.

His attitude is contrary to the idea that his occupation was intercession. He sat there with the rod of God in his hand and that was a symbol of Divine power. When he lifted the rod, Amalek fled before Israel, and when the rod dropped Israel fled before Amalek. The uplifted hand was not the hand of intercession but rather the one which communicated power and victory.

When the conflict was over Moses built his memorial of thanksgiving to God and piled these great stones which perhaps still stand in some unexplored valley.

What was the cause of this conflict? Deuteronomy 25:17, 19 informs us that it was a deliberate effort to defeat God's purpose while Israel was yet feeble. All Christians have a battle to fight.

The first field on which we have to fight for God we carry within ourselves. There can be no victories for us over other enemies until we have subdued the foes that are within: pride, selfishness, indifference. God can help us to gain victory over internal foes.

Further, as Christians we have to battle against sin and sorrow, but we have this consolation that God is on our side and that if we abide in Him He will bring victory. Then we have to be ready to deal with uncharitableness, narrowness of view and the vehemence of temper, things which can creep into our lives and quench the Spirit of Christ. We are called upon to be clean and pure as soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Remember whose command you follow. The banner in ancient warfare moved in front of the host and determined the movements of the army. By the stones he piled and the name which he gave them, Moses taught Israel and us that we are under the command of God. Absolute obedience is the first duty of a Christian soldier, the entire suppression of his will. In order to be blessed, strong and victorious our desire must be "Not my will but Thine be done."

Recognise by whose power you conquer. The banner to us suggests a false idea, because it gives the impression of a flag or some flexible material, but the banner of the old-world armies was a rigid pole with a bright solid metal ornament on top. Thus it links with this incident, for the rod which Moses had in his hand was a miniature banner, by which, when he lifted it up, victory came to Israel. It was not Moses who won the battle nor the rod; the true victor was the Lord. He was Moses' banner. In all conflicts and difficulties we must look away from the created and from external things and look only to God. The Lord is my banner.

Divine Healing

by Dora Flower

THIS subject is precious to anyone who has received this blessing from God. We must ask ourselves if we believe it to the extent to which it was held dear in former days. Any lessening of fervour can be one of the reasons why we do not witness miracles accompanying the preaching of the Word of God to the same extent as in the early days. Then many were healed without being prayed for as the Word went forth. The manifestation of the power of God was so great that people were healed as they sat and listened.

In the Bible, Divine Healing is just as much a reality for today as is salvation, in fact salvation and Divine Healing complement each other. The Lord Jesus healed all who came to Him; He never sent one empty away.

Divine Healing is not faith healing. Many so-called faith healers exist, but the evidence usually proves that there is no lasting effect in the experiences of those whom they claim to have healed.

It is not spirit healing as practised by Spiritists. This is of Satanic origin and is dangerous.

It is not mind over matter as Christian Scientists would have us to believe. This amounts to wishful thinking.

Divine Healing takes place as the loving hand of a loving God intervenes directly above and beyond all other powers and meets our need. It is as obtainable as salvation—by faith. Why then are not more people who believe this doctrine healed?

They do not ask.

They do not expect healing.

They do not take from God.

I was in the hands of doctors and physicians for seven years with a mysterious illness which affected mind as well as body. During all this time I had an inner conviction that I would never be well again unless the Lord Jesus healed me. Funds were very low. My faith rose to believe that I could do a job of work despite my weak state. I praise God that, when I took this step of faith, He chose to heal me and to make me fit for the job.

From experience and observation I feel that the following hints are very important.

Never be presumptuous with God to make a good show before men. If you have been forward to be prayed for and have not been healed, ask yourself why.

Have you let go of your trouble? If not, how can it be taken from you? How can you be healed? When you came to Christ for salvation you let go of your sins and He took them away. The same principle must be observed with Divine Healing. God will never disappoint you. Even if you have been troubled with your complaint for twenty, thirty, even fifty years, the Lord is more willing to heal you than you are to let Him!

Do not presume upon God's time. You may ask Him to heal your headache, when the cause lies with you. You may need a few more hours very necessary sleep!

Certainly try all natural means of healing when they are available. God seems to delight to let His power be known when we can do no more. After all, all the cases of healing in Holy Scripture were apparently beyond human aid.

You may remind me that many of God's choicest servants were never healed. They lay on beds of pain and wrote beautiful hymns and poetry. Perhaps they never heard about Divine Healing or did not hope that it was for their day. Scripture revelation, not individual experience, is the true guide to doctrine and practice.

I am persuaded that sick soldiers are no compliment to any army. They are certainly of no use to their sovereign. God surely wants His army to be fit and strong, for He has made all provision for this to be so!

THE SHOES THAT FOOLED THE LEADER

Joshua 9 : 5

By Sheila Price

TONY looked very smart when he went to Sunday school last week, because he wore his new red sandals. Miss Brown, his teacher, said how nice he looked. His sandals did not look new for long, however, because, while Tony was in Sunday school, it started raining. By the time he arrived home his sandals were wet and covered in mud. They looked quite old and shabby.

Tony's mother got a cloth from the cupboard and began to clean his sandals. "Do you know about the shoes that fooled the leader?" his mother asked. "No," replied Tony. "But I would like to hear the story."

"Well," said his mother, "Joshua had captured most of the land of Canaan and the other kings there at the time were afraid that Joshua would kill them. So that their lives would be saved the kings thought up a plan to fool Joshua. Firstly, they dressed in the oldest, dirtiest, most patched-up clothes they had. Then they put on their oldest, shabbiest shoes. These were broken so badly that they had to tie them to their feet with pieces of old string. Lastly, they packed some dry, mouldy bread into a basket and went before Joshua.

"Joshua did not recognise them. He thought they were tramps! 'They are from another land,' he said to himself. 'They must have travelled many days to get here. I will spare their lives,' he said. Joshua had been completely fooled. The kings were glad that their plan had worked.

"A few days later Joshua found out that the kings had deceived him. He was very angry. 'You fooled me with your shabby garments and broken old shoes,' he cried, 'but I promised that your lives would be spared and I will not go back on my word. You have apologised to me and I forgive you.'"

"The kings did not deserve to be saved, did they?" asked Tony. "They had done wrong."

"That is true," replied Tony's mother. "But they apologised and Joshua forgave them. When we do wrong, Tony, if we ask God's forgiveness, He has promised to save us, too."

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

IT is easy for most of us to get to church. Some of us are blessed with cars to take us from door to door. Others use public transport and, despite our grumbles about high fares and poor service, we can get to church and home again fairly readily. For those crippled with complaints like arthritis, however, it is a very different story. Here is how God answered prayer for one such sufferer.

V— was badly crippled. She had the opportunity of a beautiful flat and accepted it. Then came the problem of how to get to church. It was made a matter of prayer.

Some weeks went by. Someone offered to take her to the local Anglican church. Had God answered prayer? It seemed so.

Sunday came and with it disappointment, for the church was very high and the lady went home sadly. Prayer was made again and months passed by.

An Elim minister was asked to call on her. Transport was arranged for our sister to attend his church and soon she was enjoying good Pentecostal fellowship. God had truly answered prayer.

Can you rejoice in answers to prayer? We would like to know about them so that we can publish such testimonies in this column. They will encourage others. Write to: PRAYER AND PRAISE, THE ELIM EVANGEL, P.O. BOX 38, CHELTENHAM. We will be pleased to hear from you.

PRAY for Ireland !

The sheer horror of the whole situation has come to us in the sad news from New Zealand of the tragic death of one of the former members of Ulster Temple, Belfast, Mrs. McClelland, who has, in her passing, starkly silhouetted the terrible possibilities of such strife.

Our sister went to New Zealand some eighteen months ago. She recently went shopping. She had just bought a bedspread. There she was at the bus stop when a demonstration in support of the I.R.A. (yes!—in New Zealand!) took place. Pamphlets were being distributed. Mrs. McClelland tore up the one given to her. Someone brought down on her head the support of one of the pro-I.R.A. banners. This was made of some hard substance like Bakelite. Tragically, the skull of our dear sister was cracked. She lived for only six hours. We understand that a charge of manslaughter may be preferred.

We need to pray for that small church in Christchurch, New Zealand, to which our friend belonged.

As far as we are aware, this is the first death among our loved ones connected with our Irish churches to arise from the present heart-rending troubles. We are sure that all "Evangel" readers will wish to send a message through this Editorial to our brothers and sisters in Ireland that we feel deeply moved for them and with them. Mrs. McClelland was seventy-nine years old. We cannot but feel outraged that unbridled feelings 13,000 miles away from the centre of the troubles have led to her untimely decease. We think of the fine assemblies of Ulster in particular, not least of the Ulster Temple. We extend our compassion to the loved ones of our departed sister.

It has become a cliché to say, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." We have heard this quoted in prayer in Belfast. If ever it was true—and, thank God, experience proves that it is—the need for its outworking is now. Expedience, human ingenuity, compromise, political agitation, even military power seem unable to advance one step nearer to a solution, indeed they appear to worsen the situation. We cry, "O Lord, how long?" and beseech the mercy, grace and power of God to be brought to bear upon this whole disaster.

Elim Festival Songster No. 12, published by Elim Pentecostal Church Headquarters. Price 15p, postage and packing 3p extra.

The Songster's thirteen pieces, drawn from a wide background of Gospel music publication, represent good value for money and will give splendid service in many spheres of musical ministry. The inclusion of songs from such well-known composers as Vep Ellis, Joy Webb, Ira F. Stanphill and John W. Peterson enhances the value of the book and the potential use for soloists, duettists, etc. The piece "What a lovely Name" is welcomed in that it has not been readily available in Gospel music in this country. Crusader groups will find the guitar chordings a great assistance in the presentation of some of the songs.

DAVID HOLMES.

(Elim Festival Songster No. 11 can also be obtained from Grenehurst Press at the same price.)

The Untapped Generation, by David and Don Wilkerson. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott. Price 60p, postage and packing 6p extra. From the experience of the Wilkerson brothers comes this excellent book about the generation which has, in the main, been untouched by the churches.

The book is about serious contemporary problems, the addict, the alcoholic, the homosexual, the revolutionary. It is not so much a treatise on how to reach these people, but rather a handbook on how to help them once they have been reached. The problem of integrating these folk into the normal church scene is well dealt with. The message is plain. Real Christian counselling means real love and compassion.

Advice is interspersed with vivid episodes from the work of Teen Challenge.

This book is a must for every Christian worker and pastor involved in youth work and worth every penny!

D. G. WOODFIELD.

The Troubled Mind, by John Eddison. Published by Scripture Union. Price 35p, postage and packing 6p extra.

John Eddison has written at least six books for Scripture Union and in some ways this is the most useful. There are chapters on fear, doubt, loneliness, anxiety, unhappiness and discouragement, all of which may be our lot at some time. The author is prepared to face up to these problems in a refreshingly frank manner and the advice he offers in each case is both sound and scriptural.

My only complaint would be that the book is aimed (probably unconsciously) more towards the young person who has passed the eleven-plus than towards the one who has failed, but anyone, young or old, will be helped by this book.

The testimony of Paul

by Maldwyn Jones

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
EASTLEIGH

OF the twenty-seven New Testament books, thirteen, possibly fourteen, were written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit by the apostle Paul. From his birth until his appearance in Jerusalem as a persecutor of Christians we know little concerning his life. This zealous member of the Pharisee party, who belonged to the tribe of Benjamin, was born in Tarsus a Roman citizen. It is traditionally believed that Paul's forebears were from Galilee. We do not know how they came to migrate to Tarsus, a centre of learning; scholars generally have presumed that Paul became acquainted with the Greek philosophies and religious cults during his youth there. He later went to Jerusalem where he finished his education from the foremost Jewish scholar of the day, Gamaliel.

He is introduced in the Bible in Acts 7:58: "And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." We are further told in Acts 8:1: "And Saul was consenting unto his [Stephen's] death." In his Epistle to the Philippians, Paul says that his zeal was demonstrated in the way that he persecuted the Church. He was an ardent Jew. His one ambition was to uphold the faith of his fathers and he felt that it was vitally important that every trace of Christianity be wiped out. His writings show that Stephen's martyrdom left a great impression on Paul. He was to remember how he consented to the death of Stephen.

His next task was to go to the city of Damascus to bring back captive all those who confessed to be Christians. His conversion (Acts 9:1-9) revolutionised Paul's life. He became one of the mightiest evangelists the Church has ever known.

His name

He is known to the Christian Church as the apostle Paul, but to the Jews of his day he was known as Saul of Tarsus. The change signified the change in his life. Paul never tired of giving his testimony, never failed to be thrilled by the wonder of his salvation. Saul was either the name given to him in the early part of his life or the one he chose when he was old enough, for this was often done. The change might appear to be of little consequence—only S instead of P—but this is very important. "Saul" means "great, important"; "Paul" means exactly the opposite—"little, insignificant, of no value." It is probable that his parents named him Saul when they saw his promise of greatness. It seemed that this promise was to be fulfilled, as he soon made an impact upon the religious scene in Jerusalem. Perhaps he looked forward to the time when his name would be as well known as that of his master, Gamaliel. His conversion changed his name, but it also changed his life and his ambitions. His desire from this time onwards was to live and to work for his new master, Jesus Christ. He was no longer desirous of making a great name for himself, but of extolling the name of Jesus. His new name adequately described his view of himself—small, of no significance, of little importance.

His position

Paul, writing to the Romans, described himself as "a servant of Jesus Christ." He was no longer the master of his own life. He belonged to Jesus. He was writing to people who despised servitude of any kind. The Romans were known for their iron rule. They completely dominated all the nations that they conquered. Slavery was despised; it was considered a status symbol if a Roman household owned a slave. The Roman citizen gloated in the thought of power, revelled in wielding the sword, never dreamed of being a servant, and was a master among men. Paul understood this much better than we do, for he lived in the time of the glory of Rome, yet, in writing to the Church of Rome, he introduced himself as a "servant."

Paul did not consider himself to be just a servant, but a bond-servant, the most menial of all servants: not only a servant in the sense that a clerk in a store is a servant, but distinctly a menial, doing the work of drudgery—a bond-slave. This is typical of Paul's attitude after he came into contact with Christ, as seen in 1 Timothy 1 : 15.

He was the menial bond-slave of the despised, rejected, Nazarene. What an introduction this was ! If we were introducing ourselves we would want to make as good an impression as we could. Paul had many outstanding qualifications of which he could rightly have boasted. He even said nothing about his having been a member of the Jewish Sanhedrin, the mention of which would have carried weight and power, for he wrote to Jews and Gentiles who made up the membership of the Roman Church. The Gospel does not need the wings of the world to flight its way to the heart of the unbeliever.

Paul considered himself to be the sole property of his Master, Jesus Christ. He willingly, joyfully, gave himself to the work of Christ. When we become Christians we are still in a position to say no to the Lord. The Master wants us to willingly and joyfully give ourselves to His work.

Every man is a slave of some kind. If we are not slaves of Jesus Christ, then we are slaves of sin and Satan. Many are slaves to alcohol, drugs, sex. Satan has got such a hold upon them that they feel it is absolutely impossible for them ever to be free. Paul was once a slave to national and religious pride, but, when he was converted, he was freed from these prejudices only to become enslaved to Jesus Christ. Christ had come with His sceptre and had taken His seat on the throne of his heart. We talk about being consecrated, sanctified, Spirit-filled Christians and being a Christian means all these, or it means nothing.

His calling

Many critics attacked Paul's claims to be an apostle, as is evident from his writings, for he continually defended his apostleship, which he mentioned eleven times. He considered it to be an office of great importance (Romans 11 : 13).

Notice that he was called to this high office. In 1 Corinthians 1 : 1 he declared that it was the will of God that he was called to be an apostle. He made himself obedient to the Divine will. He valued the office, not because it brought any glory to himself ; the dignity of the office lay in that he was an apostle of Jesus Christ. He was not to be idolised, for he was servant and not Master, but he was to be respected because of the dignity of the office. The call of God comes to every Christian. Not everyone is called to enter the Christian ministry, but we are all called to be witnesses. The great commission was meant not only for the apostles, but for every Christian (Mark 16 : 15). There is a difference between choosing and being called and in this lies the secret of the failure of many good men and women. Some have chosen to preach, but have never been called. The sad thing is that many are silent to the call of God. They are too busy doing their own will.

His life

"Separated unto the gospel of God," Paul did not live the life of a hermit. The Bible nowhere advocates monasticism. Whenever a Biblical character withdrew from the scene of public action, it was to return to become once more instrumental in the work of the Lord. We can make a mockery of the call to separation. It is not only separation from the world, but separation unto Christ. Let us not become bogged down with a legalistic separation. In our desire that young converts should cease to do certain things we dictate to them concerning things of which we have been convicted. The Holy Spirit is well able to convict young converts of how they should run their lives. Be separated to Christ. As we get near to Him the things of the world "grow strangely dim in the light of His glory and grace."

AN OUTLINE

"A PROSPEROUS JOURNEY"

"We will travel by the King's highway" (Numbers 21 : 22, N.E.B. Compare Isaiah 35 : 8, 9).

A choice way. "The redeemed of the Lord shall walk there."

A pure way. "The unclean shall not pass over it."

A plain way. "The wayfaring . . . shall not err therein."

A safe way. "No lion shall be there."

A joyful way. "The ransomed . . . shall come to Zion with songs."

A transformed way. "The wilderness shall rejoice and blossom as the rose."

A homeward way. "To Zion."

AN ILLUSTRATION

THE MOLLUSC

The mollusc, by deliberate and patient absorption of lime and the rejection of all else, has built up for itself a hard shell which shuts it off from the external world and represents in a distorted, unrecognisable form the ocean from which it was obtained. This hard, wholly unnutritious shell, this one-sided secretion of the surface consciousness, makes as it were a little cave of illusion. By false thoughts and desires man has built up for himself a false universe.

A QUOTATION

TULIPS OR ROSES ?

"TULIP is the name given to Hyper-Calvinism, with its emphasis on Total depravity, Unconditional election, Limited redemption, Irresistible grace, Perseverance of the saints. I prefer the ROSE—Redemption for all who will believe, Overcoming grace to meet all our needs, Sanctifying power to keep us clean, Everlasting bliss for all who endure to the end."—AARON LINFORD.

When Paul exhorted his converts to sacrifice he knew what he was talking about. The purity of the Christian faith has been besmirched by nominal Christians who claim to have a personal faith in Jesus Christ, but who have not sacrificed their all for Him. In Romans 12 : 1, 2, Paul talks about living sacrifices. J. B. Phillips has interpreted part of the second verse : "Do not let the world around you squeeze you into its mould."

Many ordinary men and women have made great personal sacrifices in order to serve the Master. Paul sacrificed his religion. He was very zealous for his Jewish faith. At a comparatively young age he had made a name for himself among the Jewish leaders. He was a Pharisee of the Pharisees. In his zeal he greatly persecuted the Christian Church. When he became a Christian he relinquished the faith in which he had been brought up and he sacrificed his apparent future. Paul's relatives would be zealous for the Jewish faith, so when he became a Christian it meant severing family ties. His companions must also be left. Think of the other members of the Sanhedrin with whom he had sympathised and planned. He had built up a great reputation for himself, but this, too, had to go. He was at one time wealthy, but, when he gave up his seat on the Sanhedrin, his wealth went also. Tradition has it that Paul was stoned to death outside the city gates of Rome.

His desire

His personal desire was that, having come to know Jesus as his Saviour, he wanted to know more of Him (Philippians 3 : 10). His national desire is expressed in Romans 10 : 1 : "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved" (compare Romans 9 : 3).

My Testimony

By Iris Farmer

SOME months ago I had a severe attack of fibrosis which was very painful and prevented me from using my left arm, which I could not raise at all. After suffering this for five weeks, during which time I was attended by a doctor, I remembered James 5 : 14, 15.

On the following Tuesday, at the end of the prayer meeting, I asked the pastor if the command could be obeyed for me. I worship at Caerphilly Elim Pentecostal Church. Pastor J. E. G. Cooper anointed me with oil and prayed while he and the deacons laid hands on me.

At the end of the prayer I could move my arm and raise it to shoulder level. The next morning when I awoke the pain had gone. I was able to raise my arm above my head and move it normally.

I returned to my work, feeling that I must testify of God's goodness. I had been warned by two people not to speak of Christianity to one elderly person into whose home I go in connection with my work as a home help. I was told : "She is very hard and will only hurt your feelings by sneering."

I prayed about this eighty-one-year-old lady and asked the Lord to give me an opportunity to witness.

One day she said to me, "It seems unusual that you should have got well so soon, as my sister had that complaint and was ill for months even after hospital treatment." Here was the opening I had prayed for. I testified to her of my healing. She listened quietly.

A few days later she questioned me further about Christianity and I was able to tell her of Calvary. She replied "I believe."

Not long after this she was taken ill. We prayed together. She has now recovered. When speaking to me of this shortly afterwards her words were : "For which I thank God."

Jesus is the same yesterday, today and for ever !

BILLY GRAHAM AT PRESIDENT'S INAUGURATION

AFTER flying to Liberia in the Presidential jet, Dr. Billy Graham was privileged to take part in a thanksgiving service, following the inauguration ceremony of Liberia's nineteenth President, Dr. William Tolbert. Among the distinguished visitors were Mrs. Pat Nixon, wife of the President of the U.S.A., and Mr. Keith Speed, a Government Whip in the House of Commons, who represented the British Government.

For twenty years Dr. Tolbert was vice-president to his predecessor, William Tubman, who died in London last July. The new President of Liberia was formerly the President of the World Baptist Alliance. He is said always to carry a Bible with him. He has made no secret of his Christian faith during a long public life. Dr. Tolbert has been pastor of two Baptist churches in Liberia.

The inauguration ceremony was celebrated by parades and displays, together with the thanksgiving service in which Dr. Billy Graham participated. The ceremonies began with a Sunday afternoon service in the historic Providence Baptist Church, which was established in 1821 by freed American slaves from South Carolina, as they founded the new nation of Liberia.

B.G.E.A.

From T. H. Stevenson

THE Editor, preaching last Sunday evening in my church, touched on the function of the Christian as a witness and in a very few words described a witness as one who knows about what he speaks. This is an important part of the Christian life which more than once I have illustrated from a famous, or infamous, murder trial in London not many years ago, familiarly known as "the chalk pit murder trial."

The leading witness was a former Australian cabinet minister. In the witness box he began his evidence by saying, "I think," and was immediately interrupted by the presiding judge who declared: "You are here as a witness; tell us what you know, not what you think. The jury and myself will do that."

I doubt if anyone could more neatly define the scope and the limitation of a witness. Each disciple of Jesus Christ is called to be a witness and this is the effect and essence of receiving the Holy Spirit baptism—"And ye shall be witnesses unto Me." In certain spheres of Christian service there may be a shortage of personnel through lack of qualification or willingness, but in the most important means of spreading the gospel of Christ there is no possible shortage of material. All are called upon to testify and, if all fulfilled this message, it would surpass every other means or medium combined.

The first and foremost witness each can give is that the Christian knows the assurance of salvation through faith in Christ—despite the fact that Rome decrees: "The doctrine of the assurance of salvation is the chief plank of every heresy. No one can know with a certainty beyond doubt, in this life, that he is saved." Who can read, for example, John's First Epistle, with his constant, emphatic reference to this very aspect of faith, "We know," and give any credence to the Papal dogma? On the grounds of personal experience, the seemingly most inefficient or inarticulate believer can be an effective witness for Christ by telling what he knows by experience.

Added to experimental religion, there is also evidence one can accumulate to a point of positive knowledge, the knowledge gained by investigation, like the Bereans of old who hearing Paul preach "were more noble than those in Thessalonica in that they searched the scriptures daily to see whether those things were so." When Christ died and rose again His disciples believed not and the basic reason for their unbelief and ignorance was that "they knew not the scriptures how that Christ must suffer and rise again from the dead." Through study of the Scriptures there is so much that God by the Holy Spirit can make us to KNOW which makes our experimental witness so much more articulate and effective. Conduct and character are essential but are incomplete without converse. There must be the spoken word about the Living Word, verified by the written Word of God.

Let us speak what we know, but realise that no one knows it all! None knows the day or hour of our Lord's return. There are things "of which we cannot now speak particularly" (Hebrews 5:5) and, in Peter's words concerning Paul's Epistles, there are "some things hard to be understood" (2 Peter 3:16). At best, "we know in part," but every follower of Christ who does not witness by lip and life fails the Lord. ☺

Super!

"NORWAY is a country that calls for superlatives ; it is a magnificent country and they are a superb people" ran the glowing description encouraging me to plan a Norwegian holiday.

Superlatives, superb, superfine, superior, superhuman, supernatural, supernal, supersonic and superstar—what a number of "supers"! The prefix is now an adjective in its own right. We used to enthuse with words like ripping, jolly fine, top-hole or smashing ; the "with it" folk today shout "Super!" It simply means above, beyond, to an unusual degree, and it gives great satisfaction to realise that in this crazy, bewildered world the youth of today are proclaiming "Jesus Christ Superstar." There may be much that is spurious in the current trend and expression of faith outside the recognised Church, but, as always, the Lord Jesus emerges supreme. He can never be ignored or forgotten for long. He is in the truest and most sacred sense the Super Star. Those who thought up the title may have had in mind the connotation of a star in the realm of entertainment or sport, but such tawdry stars can easily become fallen stars.

The Lord Jesus claimed the title of the bright and morning Star. Peter wrote of Him as the day Star. He excels in all things. We never need hesitate in our use of superlatives concerning the Lord Jesus, for the Bible itself is gloriously extravagant in His praise. Read again Ephesians 1 : 17-23 ; Philippians 2 : 9-11 and get a real thrill out of the splendour, the wonder, of His absolute superiority. In eternity the Lord Jesus was the glory of heaven and was co-equal with God. When He came to earth His birth and His marvellous acts and miracles were supernatural too. Today He would be called a Superman, above all other men, celestial in the beauty and glory of His character ; in a word, He is supernal. On the dread day when He became a sacrifice for our sin, His star-like qualities outshone all the shame of the cross. He had prophesied, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." The stars of stage, screen and sport may have their moments of triumph and acclaim and the fans may clap, scream and shout, but the moments pass, life goes on, and new stars replace the others. Not so with Jesus Christ. For almost 2,000 years people of many nations have been drawn to the cross and the One nailed there, who said that His greatest moment of glory was when He was lifted up to die for all mankind.

The Bible makes it clear that when the Lord Jesus returns to this world His supremacy will be absolute. I believe that this is what mankind is longing for, a Sovereign to reign and to captivate all hearts by His shining splendour, love and justice.

Join all the glorious names
Of wisdom, love and power
That ever mortals knew,
That angels ever bore ;
All are too mean to speak His worth,
Too mean to set our Saviour forth.

Should all the hosts of death,
And powers of hell unknown,
Put their most dreadful forms
Of rage and malice on,
I shall be safe ; for Christ displays
Superior power and guardian grace.

ISAAC WATTS.

Mary of Israel

by L. V. D. TILLER, Jerusalem

MARY is a typical, well-built, hard-working Israeli of twenty-four, who, like many of her contemporaries, speaks four languages fluently.

If she lived in England she would be a keen Elim Crusader (in Israel the very word "crusader" is anathema), fully active and participating in every aspect of church work and Christian service. She is like a coiled spring of intellectual and spiritual energy bursting with potential and eager for unlimited practical expression of her faith in and love for Jesus. Her enthusiasm and capacity for work would be an embarrassment for many a pastor hard put to it to keep up with her and would cause either inspiration or shame to other Crusaders.

For a Hebrew Christian in Israel, the very land of the Bible and of Jesus, it is a different story, however. Mary has never known an Evangelical church, let alone a Pentecostal one, in the sense with which you are familiar. Her home town, one of the oldest in modern Israel, with a population of 44,000, is entirely Jewish, with not a single Christian church of any kind in it, nor will one ever be allowed. She has never attended a lively convention or done any Sunday school or youth work, for such Christian activities are illegal among Jews. Until recently she had never lived in a Christian home, yet she loves and serves the Lord Jesus her Messiah with a dedication which has become an example to many.

Like many Jews, she came from a large, close-knit, religious family. At one time there were about 100 close relatives, mostly living in the same district of Hungary. Her father owned a chain of shops. Now only an uncle, her mother and herself survive. Her mother remains an invalid. She bears horrible, indelible soul and body scars of Auschwitz, which have left her embittered and antagonistic towards anything Christian.

Mary was brought to her Saviour-Messiah through secretly reading the New Testament during a time of severe trial. She has had to suffer for her new-found faith. One example will suffice.

Good, secure employment sufficient to support her mother and herself is not easily available in Israel. A bank manager friend of the family engaged her to work in the bank, but during the final interview in order to settle the commencing date, in casual conversation the New Testament was mentioned, and upon her admitting that she had merely read it the interview terminated in a frosty atmosphere. She heard no more of the job.

In spite of this and multiplied instances, Mary never falters and, though much cannot be outwardly spoken, we ourselves have been surprised at the number of non-believing Jews who have sought to discover what it is that makes her so strangely different from ourselves.

Crusaders, everywhere! Remember it is always the life that tells for Jesus!

"I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever" (v. 4).

Many assert that this Psalm was penned by David during his exile at the time of Absalom's rebellion. David, cut off from God's house, longed for an opportunity to attend it. His great love for God's house never abated. He regarded it as a place of satisfaction (Psalm 65:4), safety, supplication, sacrifice and song (Psalm 27). He considered that it was better to be a door keeper there than to dwell in the tents of wickedness (Psalm 84:10) and was glad of every chance to go there (Psalm 122:1).

God's honour and glory fill His house with blessing (Psalm 26:8, 84:4). Let us never forsake the assembling of ourselves together there!

Tuesday, February 29th Psalm 62:1-12

"My rock and my salvation; He is my defence; I shall not be greatly moved" (v. 2).

Note the difference between verse 2 and verse 6. Apparently the psalmist expected that a little movement was possible in verse 2, but in verse 6 he categorically states that he would not be moved. The strength of the Lord in whom we trust is contrasted with the powers arrayed against His people. The Lord is likened to an impregnable rock, but the enemy is like a leaning, tottering fence (v. 3, R.S.V.), altogether lighter than a breath (v. 9, R.S.V.).

The answer of the people of God to the forces of evil and of Satan is constant trust in Him to whom all power belongs (v. 11).

Wednesday, March 1st Psalm 63:1-11

"My soul thirsteth for Thee . . . shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness" (vv. 1, 5).

David enjoyed so much of God because he desired God so much. He vividly expressed his need of God as a great thirst aptly illustrated by the dry, parched desert earth as it longed for rain (Psalm 143:6) or that of the harrowed heart fleeing from its pursuers and desiring refreshment (Psalm 42:1, 2).

Spiritual thirst is a prerequisite of spiritual satisfaction. God has made ample provision to meet the needs of all who will come to Him. The promise is that all who hunger and thirst shall be filled (Matthew 5:6).

"Ho, everyone that is thirsty in spirit,
Ho, everyone that is weary and sad;
Come to the fountain, there's fulness in Jesus,
All that you're longing for, come and be glad."

is a new beginning commencing with a childlike experience (vv. 1-4).

The responsibility. Note the teaching of Jesus concerning whosoever offends (vv. 5-7) and whatsoever offends (vv. 8, 9). Rigid discipline, ruthlessly applied, is required of all who would live for God. This discipline must be seen in the personal and public life of the believer.

Our Lord cares for children and places a great value on them (vv. 10-14). Pray for every Christian parent and youth worker again today. What a condemnation God announces on those who lead a child astray (v. 6)!

Friday, March 3rd Matthew 18:15-22

"If thy brother shall trespass against thee" (v. 15).

Jesus recognised the weaknesses of men. He knew that problems would arise between them. Differences between brethren must be reconciled. Jesus wisely placed the responsibility upon the offended. The offender can be ignorant of the trespass.

The spiritual approach must be personal and private (vv. 15, 16). If this fails, the matter should be aired only in the church (vv. 17, 18). The attitude of all who handle the case must be prayerful. Concerted prayer enlists the active participation of Christ in the problem (vv. 19, 20).

Our attitude to forgiveness should be generous. Pardon for ourselves can be dependent on our willingness to forgive others (Matthew 6:15).

Saturday, March 4th Matthew 18:23-35

"Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellowservant even as I had pity on thee?" (v. 33).

The test of and example for all our actions are the life and actions of the Lord Jesus Christ. We are commanded by Jesus to do unto others, not only as we would be done unto, but as He has done to us (John 13:15). He is our example in suffering (1 Peter 2:21), forgiveness (Colossians 3:13), humility (Philippians 2:5) and holiness (1 Peter 1:16).

Help me, Lord, to be like Thee,
Help me Thine image to bear,
Showing the world the fragrance
Of Thy beauty rare.

Sunday, March 5th Matthew 19:1-12

"I say unto you" (v. 9).

Jesus often challenged the accepted standards of the Pharisees, which many considered to be very exacting, and put in their place a much higher standard. On this occasion Jesus was speaking of divorce, but He applied the same principle to other subjects (Matthew 5:33-48). At times his hearers despaired of reaching the standard and expressed their feelings (Matthew 19:10, 25).

Whenever we are faced with that standard which we consider to be well-nigh impossible we can be encouraged with Jesus' reply to the disciples:

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

THE opportunity to continue medical research surveys among G.P.s and hospital consultants, now in the Birmingham area, gives me once again doors for personal witness and to share with EVANGEL readers more experiences in this field.

One canny Scotsman took twenty-five minutes to place six ticks on a page to be completed by the G.P. I had asked for his quick reaction! I guess that his considered opinion would have taken months! He turned out to be a deacon of a local Congregational church and a true believer. I also interviewed a young Irish Roman Catholic doctor on the same topics and felt that the age, religious and national differences showed in their replies. One finds that certain medical schools and universities produce a different type of G.P., and for my part Scotland takes pride of place.

It was good to interview a Baptist G.P., a young lady, for whom the wife of one of our ministers acts as receptionist. The doctor's fee went to their church funds, much unlike the elderly G.P. whose great-grandfather, grandfather, father and son were also G.P.s. He wanted the fee for "beer money" and had his hand out, waiting, at the end of the interview! Alas, he must wait a month for the cheque. How pathetic it was to see a man in such a profession grasping for even more money simply for beer. It gave me an opportunity to pass on a word and a tract. I am glad that he was not my doctor, for he mentioned in an aside, which I noted in the interview, that he prescribed only the drugs he could spell easily, notwithstanding their medical properties and their virtues. Mind you, some of the names conjured up by the pharmaceutical world are fantastic, beating even some theological phraseology! I hope that from this observation the manufacturers will keep the names of their products short and their products sweet.

Interviewing presents great pastoral opportunities and one looks to the Lord to bless the word of witness and the tracts one leaves with each opportunity.

Birmingham certainly is a difficult place in which to interview G.P.s, especially in the middle of winter, and the picture of overworked, if not underpaid, doctors is certainly true.

One is constantly amazed at the very real side-effects of certain drugs and wonders if the cure sometimes can be worse than the complaint. Some very strange personality changes can take place. Here is power that must be handled with care and prayer in the case of good Christian doctors. I am glad to say that there are a number who have Bibles at hand or verses of Scripture in their waiting-rooms.

THE REDESIGNED INTERIOR OF ULSTER TEMPLE, BELFAST

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The challenge

by Leslie Wigglesworth

SECRETARY, ELIM MISSIONARY SOCIETY

THE Bible school term was over and Ngoi was making his way along the jungle paths to his home village. Thought of reunion with his family and anticipation of renewed fellowship with the small group of believers made him very happy.

He was startled into caution as he heard twigs snap, the sounds of a forest prowler. He breathed a sigh of relief when a bush buck darted across the path and quickly disappeared into the thick bush. It could have been a leopard or a lion. More thoughts of a possible hunt with the young men of the village quickened his pace because he hadn't had much time for such activity at the mission.

Then, as travellers in remote places have a habit of doing, he recalled memories. He thought of the times when he had tramped through the bush with the "protection" of a personal idol or charm. He had paid quite dearly for the privilege of wearing a witch doctor's ju-ju. Spirits lurked everywhere and had to be kept at bay. Ngoi contrasted his present freedom as a believer in Jesus with the bondage of the old life and he shouted, "Praise the Lord!" Several monkeys chattered in astonishment and a few birds flew away disturbed by this unusual noise in the forest, but Ngoi continued happily until he came to the little town which was home.

"Mwenyi! Tubakwimuna! Stranger we greet you!"—the usual shouts of warm welcome for someone who had been away for a while were voiced up and down the village streets and Ngoi felt at home again. Later in soft whispers in the seclusion of his parents' hut he began to hear the story of a cruel witch doctor's domination of the people. This evil man had appeared out of the bush carrying a beautiful white stone secreted in skins. No one was to look upon it without permission of the witch doctor. To touch it meant certain death. Gazing by permission at the stone would heal the sick after payment and such power was embodied therein that the whole village was kept in fear.

Ngoi called a meeting in the main street of the little bush town and, because he had something to say, a big crowd gathered. As he spoke of the love of Jesus and His power to keep believers from the evils of witchcraft he noticed the approach of a man unknown to him, but apparently very well acquainted with the rest of the crowd. They quickly cleared a way for him and kept well out of his way. Nothing was said as he came to the centre of the crowd, but he listened to the preacher with a sardonic grin on his face. Ngoi's reaction was to call quietly on the name of his Lord. The people marvelled that he was able to continue.

Day after day the unspoken challenge in the form of a quietly mocking witch doctor persisted and the townsfolk got the feeling that a showdown was imminent.

One evening, with interest at fever pitch, Ngoi preached about Jesus while the sorcerer stood before him. There was a bigger crowd than usual, because of the expected contest. Suddenly a loud commanding voice said, "Preacher, can your Jesus keep you from the power of the spirits?" The moment had arrived and the atmosphere was tense. "Yes, He can!" was the bold answer. "Then let's see if he can protect you from my white stone," was the rejoinder. From under his cloth he pulled out a bag made of skins. Slowly, for effect, he drew out a remarkably fine specimen of rock crystal. The crowd, terrified by the power of this thing, covered their eyes and waited for Ngoi to die or to succumb to the witch doctor. "If your Jesus can save you, then take my stone in your hands!"—this was ideed a challenge and especially for a young man brought up in all the superstitions of the country. He confessed afterwards that his legs trembled as he looked at his adversary. Then his gaze fastened on the scintillating stone. His great trust in Christ made him cry, "In the name of Jesus!" He snatched the offending pebble from the hands of the man who was so sure that this was a moment of triumph and stood praying. Gradually it dawned on the terrified people that Ngoi was still alive and this seemed to be penetrating through to the challenger. As more and more people dared to take a glimpse at the Christian with the stone, the witch doctor seemed to recognise that he had lost his authority. Grasping his bauble he ran down the village and was soon on his way into the bush.

The overjoyed Ngoi was holding forth about his Saviour. His courage moved many to trust in Christ and what a story he had to tell on his return to school!

Eight profess conversion at dedication of great-granddaughter

J. Woodhead

A wonderful day of blessing and revival was enjoyed on the special day for Pastor and Mrs. Glass at the dedication of the child of their elder daughter, Mrs. Taylor, who had presented them with their first granddaughter.

Pastor and Mrs. John Woodhead had been invited for the Sunday services. The Sunday morning service included a precious time around the Lord's Table, preceded by an appreciated message by Mr. Woodhead.

The dedication of Caroline Jane Taylor was conducted by her grandfather, Pastor J. T. Glass. The church was full for this evening service. Mr. Woodhead gave the gospel message, and at the appeal eight people professed salvation, all of whom were interviewed by the evangelist.

It will be a wonderful thing in years to come for Mr. and Mrs. S. Taylor to be able to tell their daughter that eight people professed salvation when her great-grandfather spoke at her dedication.

MOTHERWELL

Pastor: F. W. Jones

Our church was almost filled to capacity for the Annual Sunday School Soirée. Most of the 110 regulars at our Sunday school and study groups were present. The parents of many scholars do not usually attend our church but, on this occasion, over thirty of them joined us. After refreshments, the young people took part in group or solo items in song, verse and music and conveyed their separate messages in the way that only children can.

Pastor B. J. Hayes gave a short, simple gospel message appropriate to the occasion. A rich blessing rewarded what was described as being one of our most successful soirées.

On Sunday evening the teenagers of the study group, assisted by some older members, very capably presented a thirty-minute musical message entitled, "A Take-over Bid," the underlying theme of which was evangelism. Pastor Hayes, who had ministered at the morning service, again ably preached the gospel in the evening.

The combined contributions of the young people, the pastor, the superintendent, his staff and the leader of the study group did much to make this a blessed weekend.

(Church Secretary), and a singing item was rendered by the Deacons of the church.

Mrs. LePage, after reciting a poem which she had composed especially for the occasion, said how happy they had been at Merriott and thanked everyone for the kindness which had been shown to them over the past two and a half years.

These sentiments were echoed by her husband, who said that they were leaving Merriott only because they felt that the Lord was leading them to work among the Chinese people.

Mr. W. Thurtle (Sunday School Superintendent) thanked Mrs. LePage for her help in the Sunday school and Mrs. Raison gave a word of appreciation for her help in the Sisterhood.

Mr. King spoke on behalf of the church, especially mentioning Pastor LePage's faithfulness in preaching the Gospel, the work he had done to renovate the minister's cottage, and his ministry in the branch church at Dinnington.

A cheque from the church was handed to Pas-both Pastor and Mrs. LePage by Mr. T. Marsh, a Deacon of the church.

Pastor LePage preached from the text, "Be strong and of a good courage." It was with a sense of our need of God's guidance that we sang our closing hymn, "Guide me, O thou great Jehovah." The Pastor closed in prayer.

The service was followed by a time of fellowship, refreshments being provided by the ladies of the church.

Our prayers go with our dear friends as they enter their new sphere of service for the Lord.

Elim Crusader dies in car crash

Marion, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hughes, was recently tragically killed in a car crash.

Marion, who was seventeen years old, was a member of Whitehaven Elim Crusaders. She gave her heart to the Lord as a very young girl and was baptised two years ago by Pastor K. J. Cave. Her father is a deacon of the church and a well-known preacher. She was an accomplished pianist and 'cellist. Marion was a pupil at Clarendon Public School, Abergelly, North Wales, for five years before entering Whitehaven Grammar School eighteen months ago to prepare for "A" levels.

The funeral was attended by about seventy students from the school, along with staff members and a twenty-strong choir. The church was packed to capacity with relatives and Christian friends. The bearers were four Crusaders and the tor LePage by Mr. T. Dilley (Church Treasurer) and Parker pen and pencil sets were handed to service was conducted by Pastors E. C. Dando, K. J. Cave, A. O. Johnson and Captain Burn. During the service we sang Marion's favourite hymn, "When He cometh to make up His jewels." Pastor Dando brought an anointed word of comfort for the loved ones and a challenge to the young people present. Many were greatly moved.

The service at the graveside was conducted by our previous minister, Pastor K. J. Cave, who knew Marion well. To our young sister we have not said farewell, only "Goodbye! See you in the morning!"

London pre-Easter crusades. The Evangelistic Committee has planned a series of short crusades in several of the London churches just prior to our great Royal Albert Hall and Trafalgar Square meetings. Please pray for these efforts in the following districts: Barking, Camberwell, Clapham, Coudson, Ealing, East Ham, Ilford, Romford and Thornton Heath.

"HELPS" scheme. We have launched our first call for 1972. It is directed to help to pay for the new church in PETERBOROUGH. We trust that the response will be even greater than for Sunderland. If you have not already joined the scheme please do so now by writing to me immediately. There are a number of big projects ahead.

Family affairs. Our warm congratulations go to Pastor and Mrs. J. Newman (retired), who celebrated their diamond wedding in February. Recently babies have arrived at the homes of some of our pastors: a girl to Pastor and Mrs. D. Beresford; a boy to Pastor and Mrs. D. G. Woodfield; a boy to Pastor and Mrs. P. Daw.

We regret that honorary Pastor L. S. Jackson has had to relinquish his responsibilities due to ill-health and your prayers on his behalf will be appreciated.

New appointments. Several of our ministers have been involved in changes of pastorates: J. Borgan to Hull (Mason Street); J. A. Hamilton to Guildford; M. C. Epton to Crewe; J. Crimp to Dowlais; S. Hilliard to Parkstone; A. P. Atkinson to Braintree; D. J. Blake to Harrogate; D. Fenton to Dudley and M. E. Sherwood to Sowerby Bridge.

WANTED. We are planning to open a new work on the south coast and to this end we are purchasing a hall. Some 120 chairs and hymn books are required for this venture and I will be grateful for any offers of assistance.

Date or dimension?

by G. Wesley Gilpin

PRINCIPAL OF ELIM BIBLE COLLEGE

IT is unfortunate that the appendage "Pentecostal" refers to the calendar date of a great, world-shattering event and not to its nature and scope. The use of the date to identify a group of people with the work of the Holy Spirit has a tendency both to inhibit them in their reflections and in their definition of their theological position and to open the door to observers and critics to daub the movement in general with certain extremes and irregularities observable only in fringe or in limited sections of the world fraternity.

I have been impressed in recent times by the use of the expression "the renewal of the Holy Spirit" to describe what is happening throughout the world to people and leaders in all denominations in terms of the Baptism in the Spirit and the consequent manifestation of new life and the Gifts of the Spirit as described in 1 Corinthians 12 and 14.

In connection with the reference in Acts 2:1 to "the day of Pentecost" please note the following.

The date is important

The events of the day of Pentecost marked the fulfilment of prophecy, both remote and immediate. There was significance in the point in time chosen in the Jewish calendar, but, chiefest of all, the event represented God's "new thing."

It was the specific commencement of the Church age and the coming to birth of the New Testament Church as such.

In this connection the Godhead was represented in the direct occupation of the newly formed Church by the Holy Spirit. Until now, the visitations of the Spirit had been spasmodic and only as situations required, but now He had come to remain permanently in the Church politic and in those individuals present at the time.

In addition, the date marked a point in time from which all believers are entitled to seek and experience a personal enduement by the Spirit, accompanied by similar supernatural signs. This is endorsed by the four other occasions recorded in the Acts when, subsequent to conversion, believers were granted similar experiences to those on the day of Pentecost.

The details are inaugural

The location of the event and the phenomena of "a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind" that "filled all the house where they were sitting" and "the cloven tongues like as of fire that sat upon each of them" were not repeated on the occasions described in Acts, nor indeed in the experience of others since. Hence, THE ACTUAL EXPERIENCE OF BEING FILLED WITH THE SPIRIT AND SPEAKING WITH OTHER TONGUES has been identical for all groups or individuals mentioned in Acts (except one) and seems to be characteristic throughout history right until the present for all who receive the baptism of the Spirit.

To put it another way, the phenomena-prelude to the experience has not necessarily been repeated. Indeed there is overwhelming evidence that it has varied widely and, let it be said, it has not always carried the characteristics of the whirlwind and the earthquake, but once the Spirit has touched the individual there are evidence and Gifts akin to those at the beginning. The things of permanence were not the accompanying phenomena, but the transforming change in character and service displayed in living and ministering.

I emphasise the foregoing because ideas and practices have been attributed to those who claim to be baptised in the Spirit according to Acts chapter 2, 8, 9, 10 and 17 that are neither general nor Scriptural. For this reason we say that this experience does not require the setting of any specific form of Church government, nor need it be exclusive to those who have or have not a liturgical form of service, to those who believe in "set ministry" or to those who may replace it by "lay" open ministry. In any setting, recognising the sovereignty of the Spirit, there is perfect liberty.

The dimensions are age-long

On the day of Pentecost the Holy Spirit entered and formed a situation, unique and alone. Immediately, there was no competing group in the field and there was but one address. Peter's adventure into Gentile evangelism, however, produced reactionary groups in orthodox Judaism and required that the Spirit meet the need of both. This He did and the Gentile group were "men, full of the Holy Ghost," with an irresistible ministry, on a par with their Jewish contemporaries, who, too, were filled with the Holy Ghost and "spoke the word of God with boldness."

For all that there was tension (Acts 15), the Spirit indwelt and used both wings of the Church. It has been a characteristic of Church history that neither tradition nor government has inhibited the Spirit in His work. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth" (John 3:8). According to Acts 9:31 "the churches . . . throughout Judæa and Galilee and Samaria . . . walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied."

Amid unceasing change in Church order and government as the situation and age have required, the abiding thing is the unchanging personality of the Holy Spirit and His impact on the lives of those whom He indwells. It has been aptly said by a well-known leader in the charismatic revival: "It is not 'Pentecostalism' that is infiltrating the historic churches, it is the Holy Spirit that is renewing the ministry and the Church." Smith Wigglesworth is reputed to have said as far back as in 1936: "The greatest manifestation of the Holy Spirit in history will come in the second half of the twentieth century through the 'old line denominations.'" He gave Acts 6, 7 as a Bible pattern, adding, "First the fishermen and common people, the laity and then the priests will come into the blessings of Pentecost." This has been the order and today a new wave of spiritual renewal is sweeping into almost all denominations through the clergy.

The history of the Church is the story of successive and contemporary movements when leaders and people campaigned either for new doctrines or reforms. We have reached a position where in the matter of doctrine, what is called "the Pentecostal Church" has called attention to the person and work of the Holy Spirit. This recall has emphasised first century Christianity as a pattern for today. The need is seen for some unifying activity against the materialism and agnosticism of the age.

The way forward lies, not in divisive, weakening denominational programmes, but in the recognition of the latter day purpose of God to pour out His Spirit upon all flesh, in a way that will touch all people at all ages in all walks of life throughout the world. "Holding fast to the Head, from whom the whole body, nourished and knit together through its joints and ligaments, grows with a growth that is from God" (Colossians 2:19).

THE POWER OF PRAYER

Lord, what a change within us one short hour

Spent in Thy presence will prevail to make;
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take;
What parched grounds refresh as with a shower!

We kneel—and all about us seems to lower;
We rise—and all, the distant and the near,
Stand forth in sunny outline, brave and clear.

We kneel, how weak! We rise, how full of power!

Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,

Or others, that we are not always strong;
That we are ever overborne with care,
Anxious and troubled, when with us in prayer,

And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?

WHEN we say "souls" we often mean "people"!

Our expressions are very dear to us, but we must think of all the facts behind them. Many a prayer meeting waxes warm when someone is urged to lead the congregation in fervent petitions that souls will be saved, and rightly so.

Writing on an evening's television Gordon Gray opined, "The majority of people over, say, thirty-five, brought up on a tradition of escapist Hollywood entertainment, have enormous difficulties in accepting strong drama or honest documentaries." The fact is that many Pentecostal believers are seeing those alleged escapist Hollywood films for the first time on their television sets now! They missed out on them at the time of their initial impact (if that is the word!) and are turning to them on television because so much of the modern output is mediocre, undesirable and violent. It might have to be confessed that the standards of sanctification on the part of some might need readjustment in that what was once frowned upon has now become all right—or has it? Television has been a salutary experience as regards discipline.

Look at the underlying truth of our quotation, however. It alleges that older folk cannot face unpleasant facts. Did not the generation of the twenties and thirties live with very highly unpleasant facts? It is terrible that we have over 1,000,000 unemployed now, but what of the pre-war era? Was not a whole generation brought up under the clouds of the dole, the dreaded means test, I.R.A. outrages and rumours of wars?

When we come to evangelical truth we must face it that the souls for whom we pray might well be inconvenient, ebullient, long-haired youths, girls who dress and express themselves in a style outrageously free in the eyes of their elders, middle-aged folk who have no Christian background at all and need to be taught what we would regard as elementary religious observances, even including familiar hymns—in other words, the whole cross-section of lively, emotional people, people, not disembodied spirits or souls. Those inconvenient newcomers who actually dare to sit in the seats we have cherished for years, those untaught converts who do not use ecclesiastical or Authorised Version language when they pray—these are souls! We do well to remember Jack Smith's words: "Love does not go to people in order to do something with them. God does not love me in order to save me. He loves me."

I was a "soul" somebody prayed for once!

Call and crisis

THE young man of Isaiah chapter six was probably still a teenager when he was called to go forth and spread far and wide the message God had given him. We shall see how that call was tested by a severe national crisis.

The call to any service must be able to stand up to the demands of life. It is good, therefore, for any call to be well tried and tested right at its outset. The way a call is tested can vary. In Isaiah's case it was by a crisis.

Think of Isaiah's background. He was born of godly parents, who wished him to enter the Lord's service and so sent him to be trained in the school of the prophets. What is also important to remember is that he was brought up in the overshadowing influence of a great, God-fearing king called Uzziah. Now young Isaiah, who had just completed his training, stood on the threshold of a life of service. There came to him the awe-inspiring vision of the Lord upon His throne.

This is the most important experience we all need if we are to do God's service. It is good to have training in the methods and organisation required in God's work and to acquire knowledge and to be full of enthusiasm, but the all-important thing is to have a vision of God upon His throne. Those who have had a vision of the sovereign Lord upon His eternal throne will be impregnated with the very qualities that that throne represents. They will carry in their very natures the strength, the power, the peace, and the solidity of that throne.

Isaiah bears this out, for he faced a crisis and discovered that he was more than a match for its challenge. The crisis was sparked off by Uzziah. For fifty-two years he had reigned as a great king, and then, in his years of ripe experience, he made a fatal mistake. How true it is that not even much experience is a total safeguard against failure! We must obey as well as know. Uzziah disobeyed

God's Word and was stricken with leprosy, from which he died. That throne, which was so glorious, was now clouded with failure. Isaiah was confronted by a crisis. What was going to happen now? Would an evil king reign in Uzziah's place? What would the people's reaction be? Would they now cast off all restraint and go away from God? Isaiah was challenged—what would he do? What part could he play in maintaining the spiritual life of his country?

He did two things. He identified himself with his own generation: "I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." This young man faced the reality of his times. The people were sinners before God's throne of brilliant holiness. Isaiah did not shrink from the awfulness of his times, nor did he run away and collapse in frustration. He rose to the occasion and went among those very people with the cleansing message God had given him.

This is not all, however, for he did something else that was very important. He was willing to go and tell until there was not a soul left to hear what he had to say.

The answer to the needs of any generation is, and always has been, those who live dedicated, consecrated lives. The call of God must be tested and the proof of its reality is in the constant, regular proclamation of God's truth. Isaiah did not ask for success; he asked only for a permanent opportunity to go and tell "until the cities be wasted without inhabitant." Isaiah could not give up, for he had been called to serve the God who sits upon the everlasting throne. For such a Master there could be no retreat, no laying down of the commission, no turning back.

May it be true of us all!

ARCHIE A. BIDDLE.

The incomparable Jesus

THIS is a vast subject. Innumerable sermons have been preached upon it and numerous books have been written about it. It is inexhaustible. Viewed from a doctrinal, fundamental standpoint Jesus was incomparable in His birth, death, resurrection and ascension, and He is incomparable as the Divine Attorney in heaven pleading the cause of the Christian Church on earth.

In this article practical ways, or ministries, are considered in which Jesus was not only incomparable but by which He exemplified the Christian life. Space permits consideration of only three aspects.

Jesus the incomparable Servant

No one has ever equalled or will ever equal the Saviour in this respect. He was the perfect, obedient Servant of God the Father. In its fullness and extent His obedience cannot be comprehended, especially considering that on all occasions He accepted the Father's will, knowing its full outcome and consequences for Him. He knew that the fulfilling of it meant the laying aside of His kingly garments, leaving the glory and splendour of heaven for a period of about thirty-three years, and taking upon Himself the form of a servant. He said in relation to that stupendous stoop-down when He came, born of a virgin, "I came down from heaven, not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me" (John 6 : 38). The Incarnation was the will of God for Jesus. The doing of God's will was the passionate desire of His soul. He alone in the highest sense could say "Lo, I come : in the volume of the book it is written of Me, I delight to do Thy will, O my God" (Psalm 40 : 7, 8). He found the greatest joy in living in the centre of God's perfect will. "I delight to do Thy will" literally means "I am bent to do Thy will." All His desires were instinctively, distinctively set to do the Father's will. He obeyed God not by constraint or with reluctance but always wholeheartedly.

The doing of God's will was not only a delight to Jesus, it was life to Him. He said to His disciples, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me, and to finish His work" (John 4 : 34). The circumstances were fitting to the statement. Jesus had sent the disciples to buy food, while He awaited their return by Jacob's well. Having returned with the provisions, they found Jesus

conversing with a woman of doubtful character. The disciples offered the Saviour much-needed food, for they had all been without anything to eat for some time. To their surprise and perplexity the Saviour declined their offer with the words, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." The meat He referred to was doing God's will in relation to that rejected, despised woman, namely to bring her salvation. Jesus lived a very active life, and because His activities had their origin in the will of God He was nourished and sustained spiritually and physically.

So is the obedient child of God. The great antidote to a life of spiritual starvation and the means to a life of spiritual strength is to do the will of God. Every Christian should aspire to this, for in so doing the soul is enriched, Jesus is magnified and God is glorified.

Jesus accepted the will of God knowing that it meant obedience unto death, even the ignominious death on the accursed tree. The cross was the final expression of the Saviour's obedience to God. There He said, "It is finished." God's will was to provide a wonderful salvation for humanity and, by His obedience to the death of the cross, Jesus made it an accomplished fact, thank God !

The Christian begins his obedience where the Saviour's ended—at the cross. To be conformed to Christ's death he must follow the same principle of obedience that gripped Jesus and finally took Him to Calvary. Conformity to the Lord's death, in the sense of becoming conformed to the will of God, means denial of self and the enthronement of Jesus as Lord. Only thus can the Christian emulate in a small way Jesus as the obedient, incomparable servant.

Jesus the incomparable Prayer-Warrior

This aspect of the Master's life and ministry was closely connected with His perfect servant attitude, for He lived in constant touch with the Father through the medium of prayer. They were the counterpart of each other. In His prayer life Jesus was incomparable. Prayer had a supreme, pre-eminent place in His life and ministry.

He commenced His earthly ministry in prayer. Luke states that He was praying prior to commencing His earthly ministry and that then the heavens opened and the Holy Spirit descended upon Him in form like a dove (Luke 3 : 21). His life was lived in an atmosphere of prayer. Very often during the ministry of Jesus the Mount of Beatitudes became the Mount of Prayer. His earthly ministry ended with the prayer, "Father, forgive them ; for they know not what they do " (Luke 23 : 34) and later He committed Himself to God in prayer, saying "Into Thy hands I commend My spirit," after which He gave up the ghost (v. 46).

As the great High Priest of the Christian Church, Christ began His heavenly ministry in the same way. The commencement of this ministry brought about the phenomenon of Pentecost, when 120 people were baptised in the Holy Spirit. He had promised to do this before His ascension : "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever ; even the Spirit of truth " (John 14 : 16, 17).

Jesus placed a higher value on prayer than on rest : "And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, He went out into a solitary place, and there prayed " (Mark 1 : 35). The previous day had been very strenuous for the Master and in the evening, when the sun was setting behind the hills of Samaria, crowds gathered around Him clamouring for and claiming a touch of healing from His hand. He healed many sick ones and cast out demons. It must have been very late at night before Jesus retired to bed for a well-earned rest ; yet before it was day He was awake and wending His way to a solitary place to pray. This was a regular occurrence in His life and ministry. There were seasons when not even His disciples were permitted to accompany Him, times when He disengaged Himself from all other duties, no matter how pressing, to engage in prayer. Frequently He never retired to rest, spending whole nights in prayer (Luke 6 : 12). The active and the meditative were wisely, harmoniously blended in His life. He did not live a life of absolute privacy, nor did He live continually in the glare of publicity. The strength and power He received when privately communing with God were transmitted into the many activities of the day in a ministry of blessing to others.

Jesus the incomparable Exponent of Truth

Jesus was not only the exponent of God's truth to men, He was the very embodiment and personification of it. The uniqueness of Jesus as preacher and teacher was that He embodied what He taught and could honestly claim "I am the truth" (John 14 : 6). The Gospel records, revealing so clearly and convincingly the life He lived, confirm His claim.

Despite the unassailable evidences of His claim, the religious and political authorities and the people rejected Jesus as the Truth, the Son of God and the Saviour of men. The words of Isaiah to Israel constitute a picture of what took place in Israel then and of the Saviour's day : "Judgment is turned backward, and justice standeth afar off : for truth is fallen in the street " (59 : 14). Israel had turned away from God and had become degenerate because God's truth had, figuratively speaking, been trampled under their feet. This was so in a startling, literal way for Jesus as He staggered towards Golgotha's hill under the weight of His cross and, because of the terrible weakness and fatigue of His lacerated body, fell to the ground—the Truth literally was fallen in the street, rejected and despised by men and women. Later He was put to death on the cross, but the Truth was not annihilated, for on the third day He rose from the dead, later ascended into heaven, and since then has been received into the hearts of untold millions of men and women as Saviour and Lord of their lives.

How tragic that today Jesus the Truth is rejected by the masses and, figuratively speaking, is being trampled underfoot by them. These are days when, with alarming frequency, new thoughts and fresh ideas are being launched upon society. These are in direct opposition to all that Christians have ever been taught, especially to the teaching of the Lord Jesus and to the New Testament as a whole. The Church needs to pray for a great resurgence of apostolic belief and faith, for Holy Spirit inspired enunciation of the truth of God's Word, and for a mighty ingathering of men and women into the kingdom of God. The Church must continue to engage with greater determination and intensification in an aggressive, dynamic drive against all forms of evil, and must maintain a never-ceasing witness to Jesus the Truth. The Church must emulate her Lord and Master, the incomparable Jesus.

THE STING

By SHEILA PRICE

CAROL and Brian finished their dinner and went out into the garden to play before going shopping with their mother.

"What game shall we play?" asked Carol.

"I know," said Brian. "Let's play hide-and-seek."

"Yes," said Carol. "We haven't played that game for a long time. I'll hide first, shall I?"

"Very well," said Brian. He covered his eyes with his hands and began to count, while Carol ran to the bottom of the garden, looking for a place to hide.

"98 . . . 99 . . . 100," counted Brian. "Ready or not, I'm coming to find you!"

"I wonder where she's hiding," thought Brian. "Perhaps she's behind the greenhouse. I'll go and see." Brian went to look, but Carol wasn't there.

"I'll try the garage," Brian thought, but Carol wasn't there either. "Wherever can she be?" he said to himself.

Just then, Carol ran out from behind a tree at the bottom of the garden. "Oh dear, oh dear!" she sobbed.

"What is the matter?" asked Brian.

"Oh, Brian, there's a big, horrible bee buzzing around and I am afraid it will sting me."

"Stand still and don't move," said Brian. "I'll go and fetch Daddy."

Brian ran back to the house and told his father about the bee. Mr. Brown ran out of the house and down to the bottom of the garden. He held Carol close to him, protecting her from the bee. If the bee had been going to sting at all, it would have stung Mr. Brown instead of Carol!

Isn't this just what Jesus did? By going to Calvary and bearing the sting of sin on the cross, Jesus saved us from sin. He protects us from all harm and danger.

The bee soon flew away and Brian and Carol were able to have a nice long game of hide-and-seek.

JOY COMES TO THE AGARABI PEOPLE

IN the eastern highlands of New Guinea there is a community of 10,000 people, living in some sixty villages, who speak a language known as Agarabi. The Gospel of Mark has just been made available to them for the first time, published by the Bible Society.

One young man at the welcoming ceremony said, "I am very happy and full of joy today. We are thanking God for what He has done for us by giving us the Agarabi language Bible. In one hand I hold the Bible in a foreign language [English]; in my other hand is the Scripture in my own language. May God bless it to us and to many people in our tribe. We pray that God may bless all the people who are working at this book and those who gave money to make it possible."

WELCOME ?

*I went to a service recently,
Met the Pastor at the door.
Said he'd had only one visitor in,
But, of course, he was hoping for more.*

*I entered the service and listened,
And I was a visitor, too,
But, if people were pleased to see me,
Then it certainly didn't show.*

*Some people stirred as I entered,
Some even stared in my face,
But never did any, not anyone,
Say "Welcome to our place!"*

*So I came, I left and remember
The people who stirred and who stared.
I remember the Pastor, God bless him,
For he alone seemed bothered—or cared.*

Book reviews

The Everlasting Nation and their coming King, by Samuel Schor. Published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House. Price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra.

K. Burnett declares in the foreword: "There has been no other book—outside of the Bible itself—that has brought greater blessing to me." Those who read this book will find this to be a sincere comment. What a pity to discover some printing errors as at the bottom of page 20 on to page 21, which I was unable to sort out, and a mix-up of lines on page 70. First published in 1933, a second impression was necessary in the same year, the year of the author's death. The third impression comes with one or two small alterations, as when on page 63 we read, "What? The millennium in 1971, with the world in turmoil . . . ?"

Even so this third impression, coming to us now when the State of Israel has been firmly established, is quite up to date. It is a very readable book, the narrative flows freely and the Scriptures are allowed to speak for themselves, being abundantly quoted without any strain upon interpretation. For the new convert and those just beginning to look into the things pertaining to our Blessed Hope this is a helpful book. Believers of long standing will find the book refreshing and a good choice for reading.

C. J. WATKINS.

Hidden Art, by Edith Schaeffer. Published by the Norfolk Press. Price £1.90, postage and packing 11p extra.

It is refreshing to read a book that opens our eyes to beauty rather than bombs and directs our thoughts from a world set on a collision course with eternity to the world of loveliness near at hand. The ordinary environment contains important art forms we tend to overlook in an age of glamour and exaggeration.

Here then is practical advice for the enjoyment of daily living. Around us all in the commonplace things and events are expressions of art which often go unnoticed. We can all make life more exhilarating if we give attention to talents and possessions we have which are often considered too insignificant to merit our concern. "I would define 'hidden art' as the art which is found in the 'minor' areas of life. By 'minor' I mean what is involved in the 'everyday' of anyone's life." From this opening explanation, the wife of the well-known Christian philosopher Francis Schaeffer goes on to explore through the kitchen, dining room, children's play room, garden and other areas of human activity realms that can be made more exciting if we but take the trouble to search.

Summing up, the author points to the significance of the Christian life as an "environment which is helpful to the people with whom he lives," adding "This is not just a matter of dress and tidiness but also of character and spiritual life. . . . I am sure that there is no place in the world where your message would not be enhanced by your making the place (whether tiny or large, a hut or a palace) orderly, artistic and beautiful with some form of creativity, some form of 'art.'"

H. W. GREENWAY.

The Topham Tiger Hunters, by H. P. B. Benney.

Published by Victory Press. Price 35p, postage and packing 3p extra. For boys and girls, eight to ten years.

Having been a bookstall owner and an active youth worker for fifteen years it gives me joy to be able to recommend this book. The Clarks, a London overspill family, move into a new housing development in the once quiet village of Great Topham. Opposition to their intrusion into the country community is soon evidenced and, mainly through the adventures of the two children, June and Mark, we are led from one delightful surprise to another.

A "Tiger Club," with genuine tiger head mascot, set on making their lives miserable, a nearby canal with canoes to play in, a sea captain, whose home and tale-telling ability keep the children enthralled, breaking and entering mysterious premises, and a good Christian message that is easy to understand, make this a good book for young people.

fronted by different colours of skin, creed or culture, lack of trust, misunderstanding leading to hatred, greed, envy and oppression are the sad results.

I have seen apartheid at work in the Christian Church and, alas, in the local assembly. How cautiously we receive people into our fellowship, how suspect they are, if their ideas or way of worship are a little unusual. If a person should step out of line or seem a bit peculiar we shun them like the plague! Can we never give our fellow believers the benefit of the doubt? Must we automatically avoid those who rub us up the wrong way? Can we never make an effort to get alongside and find out what they are really like underneath? What a pity that the generation gap is tolerated in the Church. A true, loving fellowship should never allow such a barrier to exist.

In Ghana, West Africa, I lived in the mission compound with a dozen Africans. In a very short time I forgot all about their different colour and culture. To me they were human beings like myself, dear friends with whom I could work, worship, talk, travel and share my problems. It cheered me immensely to prove that the Bible-inspired code of conduct in human relationships does work and did so in my own experience.

From the inception of the New Testament Church the apostles were shown by the Holy Spirit that Jews and Gentiles were no longer to be apart. A new, glorious society, the family of God, had come into being and instead of "apart-hate" the law of this great family was "together in love." The whole of Paul's Letter to the Ephesians is a mighty treatise on our unity in Christ and our responsibilities towards those in the body of Christ, His Church. We cannot bypass Ephesians 4 : 24-32 ; 5 : 1, 2. In a world torn by many divisions, hatreds and strife, we must be different. We must be approachable, outgoing in our attitude to those isolated by sin, loneliness and sorrow. We must be forgiving and tender, allowing God's love to fill our hearts and to overflow to others. We must be like Jesus whose "arms of love would all mankind embrace."

READING through a list of schoolboy howlers, I was intrigued to find that examiners had discovered that many scholars explained the word apartheid as apart-hate! Thinking it over I feel that the pupils gave quite a feasible definition of the word. For the uninformed, may I mention that "apartheid" is an Afrikaans word meaning "apartness." South African Government spokesmen thus speak of separate development of the white and black South African communities. To the extremist it means a system of total racial discrimination, which involves a belief in racial purity and white supremacy. It is easy to see that children, hearing on radio and television of unrest and oppression, believe that segregation breeds hatred.

I have a theory that this is often the case. There are examples in the Bible. Ishmael, separated from his father and his half-brother, became the founder of a great tribe dwelling in the desert, and so the ancient suspicion and enmity began between Israel and the Arabs. We read of the isolation of the Samaritans from the Jews in New Testament times, the former being shunned and despised by the latter. The Greeks and the Romans despised the Barbarians, considering them to be second-class citizens.

We could go on citing further instances in history until we arrive at this century's tragic examples—the non-co-operation, non-communication and resultant hatred between those with extreme views, coloured people and white citizens in the U.S.A. and, nearer home, the fear and suspicion engendered in Northern Ireland between Roman Catholics and Protestants, Civil Rights supporters and Unionists. I sometimes wonder how God feels about it all. He must long that all peoples would live in harmony with all false barriers removed. Basically we all have the same needs—home and family, work to do, health and happiness—yet, because of man's tendency to separate himself from his fellow man when con-

Only believe

When you are feeling sorely tried
And know not what to do,
Just think of the words of the Saviour
And simply believe a way through.

All things are possible, said Jesus,
If only you will believe,
Whate'er the things you may desire—
Believe and you shall receive.

Praise, too, will bring deliverance
For in God's Word we see
Paul and Silas were praising God
When they found liberty.

In Chronicles two, chapter twenty
A fine example is read,
They worshipped, believed, and sang praises,
Then found their enemy dead!

Surely the Christian should try it—
For Satan is defeated—
He should believe and praise Jesus,
Who has the work completed.

IVY FREEMAN.

News of two new Film-strips

SCRIPTURE UNION has just released two very fine new soundstrips.

People's attitudes and ways have changed radically in the last fifty years, yet truth is still the same. The problem that confronts the Church is how to present truth in such a way that it receives a good reception. Truth is for People has been planned to help Christians to understand and to assess what is going on around them. Its pivot is the song, "What is Truth?" sung by Johnny Cash. The running time is twenty-two minutes.

The Stranger is a cartoon discussion-starter. It tells the story of a small town in the old "Wild West." Its theme is the topical human tendency to put a badge or label on everyone and everything. It lasts for twelve minutes and probes into the many meanings of the word "freedom."

A stranger's arrival brought a new dimension into the smooth-running life of this "Wild West" town, where the prominent posters displayed by the sheriff made it clear to all that badges must be worn at all times. The stranger is eventually hanged. With him dead and buried, everyone thinks that it is over and soon to be forgotten. Says the sheriff, "That is when the trouble really started."

Both these soundstrips are available on loan at £1.50. Leaders' discussion notes are supplied.

Matthew 19 : 13-30

"If thou wilt be perfect" (v. 21).

The rich young ruler had riches and respectability, but he confessed in his inquiry that he did not have eternal life. The challenge of Jesus as to his standing before God's law brought from him the assertion of his faithfulness to the commandments, yet he fell short of perfection and satisfaction. Perfection was possible. To obtain it he had to surrender what he loved more than God. What he had was the barrier to what he wanted.

All that is perfect in Christian living is denied us only when we crush it out of our lives by our insistence on holding something or someone dearer than Jesus. To surrender everything is to receive all things a hundredfold (v. 29).

Tuesday, March 7th

Matthew 20 : 1-16

"Give them their hire" (v. 8).

Two distinct parties are revealed in this parable: those who worked on the basis of an agreement, and those whose call was on the basis of the Master's grace. Jesus draws a distinction between Israel, who served Him on the basis of the law, and the Church, whose calling is of grace.

There was work for all irrespective of the time of their call. The work occupied all of the labourer's time, for the rewards depended, not on for how long an individual worked, but on whether he faithfully worked within the limits of his opportunity.

God's work needs labourers who will occupy the time until the evening of Christ's coming, giving their best in His service. Our reward can be left in His hands, with the assurance that the Judge of all the earth will do right (Genesis 18:25).

Wednesday, March 8th

Matthew 20 : 17-34

"Behold, we go up to Jerusalem" (v. 18).

For the third time Jesus gave notice to His disciples of His approaching sufferings and death. The events that lay ahead weighed heavily upon him. This statement is the most comprehensive of the three and contains detail hitherto undisclosed, including this information of His resurrection.

Tragically, at the moment of this great revelation, the minds of the disciples were still on rewards and not the cost. How wonderful that Jesus bore with them and gave time to answer their problem and to dispense healing to the blind. He was ever occupied with the needs of others, indeed this was His primary thought during Calvary (v. 28).

Thursday, March 9th

Matthew 21 : 1-17

"All this was done, that it might be fulfilled" (v. 4).

By riding into Jerusalem on the colt, the foal of an ass, Jesus aligned Himself with two Old Testament Scriptures. He was declaring to the people that He was their king in fulfilment of the prophecy of Zechariah (Zechariah 9:9). The people did not recognise Him as king but only as a prophet (v. 11).

The Judges of Israel rode on asses (Judges 5:10). Christ's action was indicative of His humility and of His being the omniscient Judge. Those who did not accept Him as king soon knew Him as their judge (v. 12).

Friday, March 10th

Matthew 21 : 18-22

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive" (v. 22).

Failure is not contemplated by Jesus in this instruction for prayer, yet failure in prayer is common to us all. Success is promised if the rules are observed.

Ask. So often God is the last to be sought when help is needed. James told his readers that they had not because they asked not and received not because they asked amiss (James 4:2, 3). Ask God first.

Believe. Faith is the catalyst that sets God's laws in motion. Earlier Jesus described the quality of faith without which it is impossible to please God. Faith must be without doubt or staggering at the promise (v. 21; Romans 4:20).

Receive. The answer is certain in God's time. What God has promised, He will perform.

Saturday, March 11th

Matthew 21 : 33-46

"The husbandman took his servants" (v. 35).

God shares with men the task of caring for His people. The vineyard of Israel had been planted by God, but let to husbandmen, the leaders of the people (Isaiah 5:1-7). Diligent work for God must be of pure motive. The husbandmen, by their rejection of the servants and of the son, showed that their work in God's vineyard was for themselves, not for their master. God was patient and did not remove the husbandmen without an opportunity to repent.

The rejection of the final message in His Son threw open the door of opportunity to another people, who would be privileged to produce fruit for the master. We can be among that number for "as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God" (John 1:12).

Sunday, March 12th

Matthew 22 : 1-14

"All things are ready" (v. 4).

HILLS OF CONTEMPLATION

By PHILIP E. STREETER

*Among the powdered flowers at the summit of the hill,
Above untrodden skies whence speaking silence spills,
The west wind singing over golden fields of gorse,
And distant waves sigh melodies on ever-changing shores.*

*I could lay here for ever 'neath these cool and scented pines,
Where memories, like birds, nest in branches of my mind.
Tumbling through the arches of those blissful, hazy years,
Places, scenes and loved-ones intermingle with my tears.*

*Dear God! If life here is so beautiful and memories sublime,
O to glimpse those rapturous palaces beyond the hills of time!
Sorrows will be banished, loved-ones all restored;
We will climb the hills together in the garden of the Lord.*

feast. Response to the invitation was all that was needed for men to take advantage of the king's provision. With outright refusal and paltry excuses the formal guests declined. The invitation was broadened, all who desired could come. Acceptance with the king was only possible in the ceremonial dress provided by Him. This applied to the first guests as to the last.

Complete provision for man's salvation has been made in Jesus Christ. The Jews, to whom the invitation was first given, rejected Him, and now the invitation is open to all. A robe of righteousness has been provided. Only in this can men be accepted by God.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Double-wrapped Christianity

by M. Westwood Carr, B.Sc.

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, CALVARY
CHAPEL, KING'S HEATH, BIRMINGHAM

"Your life is hid with Christ in God"
(Colossians 3 : 3).

A TERM new from the world of advertising, but an experience from God, this selling point, "double wrapped," was originated by God long before the twentieth century commenced, only it is not a gimmick.

The Divine idea has been degenerated by the marketing minority to convince the purchasing majority of better value. With God this twofold protection is part of the sacred gift we call salvation. When Christ administers new life He conveys with it a powerful, priceless preservative; we are "hid with Christ in God," the best possible "double wrapping." This solid security is a foundation to life that leads doubting Christians to complete assurance. To be in Christ is good, but to be "hid with Christ in God" is even better. It is said that "Two hands are better than one" and, when you realise that we are clenched in the love-scarred palms of God, nothing else really matters. Why not ask yourself the Romans question: "What can separate ME from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus MY Lord?" Timeful nonentities cannot shake eternity's strength. We are written in heaven and sealed until He that is worthy opens the parchment. You can reckon that that scroll is kept safe in a celestial "cupboard" locked with the key of God's justice.

The next time the Devil slinks up and suggests kidnapping your newborn faith show him the "double wrapping." "Duo-Divinity" is the best form of attack when you are on the defensive, for, although Satan can stand before the presence of God, he cannot stand in it. Only blood-washed saints have this privilege!

This promise of God has specific purposes; it warns of the world and it encourages heaven. It shuts the one out and the other in. No pledge from God is without condition, however, and those whom He has marked off for His own are expected to "conform to His image." How much better, therefore, when you enter into the fulness of the actual position you hold in Him: not only in the shadow, but also in the cleft of the rock. So many are for so long taken up with the granite grandeur of God that they miss the river side, whence mercy's unstaunched flow is ever falling.

What a blessing it is to realise our twin heritage, for, having lodged our salvation in Christ, we are enveloped in the God of ages! Can there be greater assurance than this? We excel in telling of God's provision for fallen, faithless mankind: by one act of supreme love He has turned our seedful faith into vibrant new life that abounds with real protection that keeps us not only mould-proof, but everlasting—hallelujah!

Having placed our trembling faith in the agony and work of Calvary we are "crucified with Christ," having become "dead to the world" and "alive unto God." We carry heaven within ourselves as the Spirit of Christ "dwells in us richly." Our vision becomes caught up with the omnipotent garrison that encircles the life and with the wondrous grace that fills the soul. Outwardly and inwardly the imperceptible work of God transforms us into His likeness, until at presentation time in that "great day," we shall be unwrapped in His image. S

SALISBURY

Pastor : G. L. W. Ladlow

The Lord has been richly pouring out His blessing upon us. At our Sunday evening services during the past month some twelve decisions for Christ have been registered and two believers have been baptised in the Holy Spirit.

A large congregation recently witnessed the baptism of seven young people. It was a thrill to hear them testify how they had found the Saviour during the past few months.

A visit from the Elim Bible College students was greatly enjoyed.

The following is a report from the Salisbury Journal.

A surprise visit by the diaconate to the Crusader meeting, which was attended by forty young people, was greatly appreciated.

The deacons told of their Christian experience which in some instances covered fifty years and answered questions set by Mr. Geoff Pike, the youth leader.

At the weekend a party of seven students from the Elim Bible College visited the church. On Saturday they gave a programme of music and song at a coffee bar in the recently opened upper room. They were responsible for the Sunday services and also spoke at the Milford Street and Bemerton Heath Sunday schools. The preachers for the day were Mr. Ray Smith, from Ballysillan, in the morning and Mr. James Ritchie, from Belfast, in the evening.

The evening service was led by Eric Gaudion, of Guernsey. The college quartet gave several items, accompanied by three guitars. There were testimonies from students from Finland and Barnsley and a talk on "The Jesus revolution," by Mr. Murray Norman, of Bristol Baptist College.

The students gave a programme in the crowded coffee bar after the evening service.

A. COLEMAN.

ROWLEY REGIS

Pastor : D. W. Cartwright

On Christmas Sunday and the following Wednesday our Crusaders took part in a presentation of the story of Christmas from a different angle, namely, how the angels in heaven felt about the birth of Jesus. We took a behind-the-scenes look at how it could have been. Five angels were observed expressing their opinions on what was about to occur. The scenes were interspersed with Scripture readings, singing items, sound effects, and transparencies shown on a screen above the platform. Time passed and we overheard the angels speaking concerning the reception that Jesus was receiving upon the earth. We learned that Jesus was to be crucified and that most of His disciples had forsaken Him. Then came the glorious Easter morning when Jesus demonstrated that even death was no barrier to Him and that He was the Son of God. Through His death on the cross man can have eternal life. May the Lord bring to the remembrance of those who were present the purpose of His coming.

BLenheim, New Zealand Pastor : I. Bilby

We are praising God for the way in which He is leading our small New Zealand movement onwards and for the real progress at Blenheim, a town of 15,000 people near the top of the South Island.

Shortly after the campaign held there in September by Donald Hemingway, the pastor's assistant in Christchurch was appointed to this church. He is Ian Bilby, who grew up in the Wellington church. After gaining his Bachelor of Science degree from Victoria University, Wellington, he moved to Christchurch to take up a teaching appointment.

During the six years he was there Ian opened a branch Sunday school in his home, which was most successful, recording attendances of up to fifty. He was also a member of the Kingsway Four singing group, which ministered regularly with real blessing in churches, in a home for unmarried mothers and in youth services and coffee bars. For the last two years he has been preparing in Christchurch for the Elim ministry.

At the end of January a special weekend's services were held, when Ian and his wife, Margaret, were inducted to their new charge by Les Covic, of Nelson, the current Elim President in New Zealand. He and Pastor Hemingway ministered over the weekend with rich blessing and real anointing.

We are now looking to the Lord to prosper and bless this small work. Please pray for it with us.

M. J. FRITH.

BURTON-ON-TRENT Pastor : R. Morrell

The visit of Joseph Smith was a wonderful time of blessing. Although quite a few of the assembly were unable to attend because of illness, we had good congregations to hear this lively old servant of the Lord expound the Word. We were much blessed by his talk on the emblems at the Breaking of Bread and by his expositions of the Second Coming and the events leading to it. Our timbrels played on all three evenings and solos were rendered by our young folk.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

Hymns of prayer

CHRISTIANITY has inspired many things and not the least of these has been poetry. Much of this has been set to music and is sung in our services as worship to God as well as being a means of encouragement to those who sing it.

There have been many hymns on prayer. Who has not loved and sung "What a Friend we have in Jesus"? Some time ago I came across some poetry on prayer and thought I would like to share it with you.

Through your prayer

Philippians 1 : 19

"Through your prayer" a soul in conflict
Triumph in the strife obtained ;
Fiery darts and fierce temptation
Were by God's great might restrained.

"Through your prayer" sin's chains were broken,
Blinded eyes received their sight,
Souls afar in darkness groping
Found the path of heavenly light.

"Through your prayer" the foe was vanquished,
Doors were opened, ways were made ;

"Through your prayer" the force and fury
Of the raging storm were stayed.

"Through your prayer" new hope was given
To a soul sore tempest-tossed ;
Think not then your work was fruitless,
Deem not that the time was lost.

Not a service God can give us
Will a richer harvest bear
Than this one of intercession,
This blest ministry of prayer.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker,

In his review of the book Be Filled with the Spirit in your issue of January 22nd, M. W. Carr, B.Sc., makes the deduction that the word "after" (Acts 1:8, A.V.) implies that there is an interval between the baptism of the Spirit and the reception of power.

If Mr. Carr will refer to other versions he will soon see that such an argument is untenable. I have before me nine other versions, all of which translate this verse "when the Holy Ghost is come upon you" and there is no Scriptural evidence of an endowment of power at a later date as he suggests.

Mr. Carr's assertion that our Lord only received "power to witness" forty days after His baptism in Jordan finds no support in Scripture.

Yours sincerely,

GERALD L. W. LADLOW.

Michael W. Carr comments:

It is with concern that I read the comments about my closing statements in reviewing David Petts's booklet. It was not my intention to postulate a new doctrine, resurrect an old one or undermine established truth. I joined the Elim Pentecostal Church because I agreed with their sane Scriptural tenets and I have no wish to cause disquiet over apparent erroneous teaching. There may be other readers who are also under the same misapprehension and it would be wise to clear this confusion before matters become exaggerated into provocative proportions.

The word "after" in Acts 1:8 is translated "when" in many instances and I find complete agreement with Mr. Ladlow. I used the Authorised Version of the Bible in writing the review to get across a very pertinent point which appears to be evident today—powerless Pentecostals, a situation that causes me considerable anxiety.

I feel that so many Christians pray through to the "upper room," but never past it. We are faced with undeniable proof that many people who have received the baptism in the Holy Spirit have not won one person to Christ, find witnessing very difficult and have a limited revelation of God's truth. What has gone wrong? If we apply Acts 1:8 they are supposed to have power!

I am not advocating a third blessing or an "after that" experience but a CONTINUAL ONE.

Luke chapter 4 states that Jesus Christ was filled with the Spirit at Jordan and was then led, empowered and anointed (vv. 1, 14, 18) of the Spirit—three different manifestations but the same Spirit. When Christ came forth from the wilderness it was to commence His public ministry and He was thus armed with the power of the Spirit. The fact that this was disclosed forty days after His entering the desert does not indicate an "after that" experience but an "after that" manifestation, and there is a vast difference between the two.

Although I am baptised in the Holy Spirit and have a measure of power, I am not satisfied with what I have and continually seek that I may be used more effectively in winning men for Christ. To this end I earnestly pray that, through faith and submitting to the invasion of the Spirit, more of God's dynamic will flood forth in my life and if that is classified as an "after that" experience then I want it!

To absent friends

We seek in writing you these lines
Our heart's true wish to send you,
That you may know that far or near
Our kindest thoughts attend you.

We cannot find a truer word
When greeting we address you,
No song or poem we have heard
Is sweeter than "God bless you!"

Should trouble surge around you new,
Or grief's dark night oppress you,
These things can never harm your soul,
For 'tis His will to bless you.

Yet it is not the blessing but
The Blesser whom we love,
Transcendent now in glory great
At God's right hand above.

Elim Missionary Society feature TWINNS!

A report from Rhodesia by

Olive Garbutt

WHEN I went from the Congo (now called "Zaire") to Inyanga North, Rhodesia, in 1960 I had the privilege of opening a new church in Kambudzi village. There was a new Elim school there, but until then there had been no missionary free to establish such a work. Everyone was busy elsewhere. I travelled seventeen miles in the lorry over very rough roads, the journey taking about two hours. Mrs. Brien walked to Mbiriyadi village each week, gladly giving up the use of the lorry in order that other people might hear God's Word.

About the second or third time I went there I was asked to go and see a girl who had been bitten by a snake. I thought the casualty had only just occurred, so was surprised to see a thin, obviously very sick, girl with a swollen leg and a huge gangrenous sore. The only hope of saving her life was to take her back to the hospital and the parents gladly consented to this.

The witchdoctor had done his best (or his worst!) by providing a charm which was tied tightly around her leg. This was removed and treatment of a much more effective nature was applied. Response was good, but Dorka had to remain in hospital for a long time until new skin formed over the area and healing was complete.

During this time one of the elder girls in Miss Gwynne's Sunday school class used to call for Dorka and carry her on her back to Sunday school. She also attended the hospital services each morning. The day came when she asked the Lord Jesus to be her Saviour and we rejoiced with her.

Two or three years later a marriage was arranged for her, unfortunately with a man who was not a believer in the Lord Jesus. Still young in years and in the faith, she did not resist. The marriage was not very happy, but it brought Dorka to Penhalonga, where she became a regular attender at the mission church. A little later she asked for baptism and was received into the fellowship of the church. She has gone on with God ever since.

Life was not easy for her. For more than five years she had no children. This was a great sorrow to her. She felt that she was despised both by her husband and by others.

Imagine my joy when I returned to Rhodesia in December of last year to see Dorka still going on with God and the happy mother of twin babies! We rejoiced together and gave praise to God. To me this was part of the reward for those long, tiring journeys to Kambudzi.

Pray for Dorka that in the difficult circumstances surrounding her life she may be able to bring up the little ones in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

KENNY'S NEW LIFE

Words and drawing
by Sheila Price

"WHAT I want to know is this," said Kenny the caterpillar. "Why do we have to change into butterflies?"

"Well," said his friend, Cardew, "we won't all change into butterflies. Some of us will change into moths."

"I don't want to be a moth or a butterfly," said Kenny. "I'm happy as I am."

"But think how wonderful it will be to fly," said Cardew. "No more aching feet, no more walking about looking for things to eat."

"My feet don't ache!" said Kenny. "And I want to stay a caterpillar. I am definitely not going to be a butterfly."

One day, however, Kenny felt tired, so he curled up inside his little cocoon and went to sleep. When he woke up again he had wings!

"Ugh!" he exclaimed. "I've changed into a butterfly, but you won't catch me flying! Oh, dear, no! I shall just sit on this branch and be miserable."

Just then he heard a noise above him. He looked up and saw all his friends flying overhead. They had changed into butterflies, too.

"Hi, there, Kenny!" they called. "Aren't you coming with us? We're off to the country. There are lots of juicy lettuces growing in the fields there."

Kenny's mouth began to water. He really was very hungry.

"It will take me a long time to walk there," he thought. "And by then all the best lettuce leaves will have gone. I think I'll fly, but just this once, though."

Kenny fluttered his wings and soon he was up in the air. "This is wonderful," he thought. "Simply wonderful. It's the best thing that has ever happened to me. I'm much happier now than when I was a caterpillar. Wait for me," he shouted to his friends.

Our lives can change, too, boys and girls. When we let Jesus come into our hearts He gives us a new, wonderful life and, like Kenny, we will be happier than we ever were before.

I have never seen a sad butterfly, have you?
By the way, do you know what a cocoon is?
See if you can find out!

"IF there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Philippians 4:8).

One sees the mud; the other sees the flower.

One bemoans the dirt; the other praises the primrose.

One deplores the muck; the other delights in the daisies.

Attitudes and aptitudes determine a great deal about life. The creative person, the one who can make a thing of beauty out of nothing very much, is to be highly esteemed. The man with the muck-rake has a very vital role—it can be argued that he is essential—but he must stop to admire, stoop to witness the delicate celandine, pause to savour the cowslip's heady scent.

It is true that both mud and flower are real and present. The primrose would not exist without the dirt to grow in. The daisy would be unknown but for the muck in which to develop and bloom.

Christians know that there is no crown without a cross. Since there was "no beauty that we should desire Him" as far as Calvary was concerned, for "He hath no form nor comeliness" in His dying, Christ has become to His followers the altogether Lovely, the Bright and the Morning Star, the Rose of Sharon.

Life for the unconverted can so often be confined to the mundane and the unlovely—same old streets, same old job, same old machines, same old people. For the true child of God, however, life is always full of promise. Calvary was real, terrible, but it accomplished its purpose, or rather Christ, God's only Son, fulfilled the Divine will in making the perfect atonement there, and, on the third day, Jesus rose again! He is alive! Hallelujah! He will come. Hallelujah!

That is thoughtful, relevant advice which Paul, the experienced apostle, wrote to his son in the faith, Timothy:

"The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits" (2 Timothy 2:6).

Labouring is all very well, but we must partake of the results. We must know experimentally what we preach to others.

"Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things" (2 Timothy 2:7).

The story of Abraham

by an Mkweli

THE elders are sitting in the gate. Ibrahimu is testifying before them: "I am leaving this city to follow the call of my God."

"What new god is this? What strange religion has gripped you? Where is He?" ask the elders.

"I do not know," says Ibrahimu.

"Where are you going? What is this God like?"

"I do not know," says Ibrahimu.

"What is His name? What sacrifices does He require?"

"I do not know," says Ibrahimu.

"Is He an ancestral spirit?"

"No," says Ibrahimu.

The elders then turn to Terah, a very old man. "Father of Ibrahimu," they say, "what are you going to do about this?"

"I do not know," he replies.

"You do not know? Are you going to follow this strange superstition so contrary to our customs? The spirits of your forefathers are here. Who will make the offerings for the dead? Who will placate the spirits? You will bring a curse on our land, Ibrahimu," they say, "your crops are ripening, the propitiation beer is brewing. You will not drink or offer the pombe to the spirits, you say? This is madness!"

Sarah's father now speaks. "Ibrahimu, I will not allow you to take my daughter away from her land and people."

Ibrahimu replies, "Mzee, my father paid you twenty camels, fifty cows and ten bulls for my wife. Two of the bulls were the biggest in our land. The ornaments I gave to Sarah were of the finest gold."

"I will return everything to your father."

He turns and says, "Mzee Terah, what do you say?"

"Let us call Sarah," says Terah.

Sarah comes forward, bows and takes her place at the side of the gate-yard. "Sarah," they ask, "do you hear this husband of yours? He wants to journey towards the sunset to serve an unknown God; what do you think?"

"I do not know," says Sarah.

"You will stay with your people. They are all here. You are young and strong. We will find you another husband; perhaps Ibrahimu has no seed because he has offended the gods. With another husband you will soon have children around you; what do you say?" They wait in silence.

"I will go with my husband," says Sarah.

Again the elders speak to Ibrahimu, "Son of our people, your old father's eldest son, every earthly reason holds you here."

Lot is called to the gate. He bows and greets the elders, "I hold your feet."

"Lutu," they say, "your uncle has been seized by the spirit of a strange god. He is going to leave our city and land to wander like a nomad and live like a gipsy. What do you think of this matter?"

"I do not know," says Lutu.

"You were dedicated to the spirit Kungu. You are wearing his protective charms. Will Kungu be there in that far-off land? Who will protect you there?"

"I hear you, Wazee," says Lutu.

"Go and send your wife," says the Wazee.

Lot's wife bows herself to the ground, "I hold your feet, old ones," she says.

"That is well," they reply. "You have heard of your uncle's madness?"

"I have heard."

"What do you think?"

"I am afraid."

"Do you want to go on this mad adventure and be a wilderness dweller?"

"No," says Lot's wife, "I love town life and merry company."

"Your husband seems to be inclined to follow Ibrahimu. See if you can dissuade him from this madness," say the elders.

"I will do my best," she says.

"Good! Go in blessing."

The whole town gathers to watch the caravan go. Eleazar, who later will learn to love his master's God, is only one of many slaves; he must go with his owner.

Lot's wife is filled with sorrow as she takes her place on the kneeling camel. She has done her best with her husband. Her family has tried every argument and persuasion to set her free. She wanted nothing of Ibrahimu's god, but when the marriage settlement was made between her and Lutu, Lutu's father had redeemed the future seed. He had paid the extra cows and goats to her people; the children belonged to him. She must go with him or lose her children, perhaps for ever. Lutu, strangely drawn to the God of his uncle, would go with him, at least for the present.

Ibrahimu goes, not knowing where he is going. We Wakweli who have taken Yesu Kristo as our Lord and Saviour have had to leave everything except our country, to go in search of that city whose builder and maker is God.

The Wakweli are a tribe of 40-50,000 who first heard the Gospel from Elim missionaries.

"Mzee" is pronounced umzay. "Wazee" is the plural of elders. "Mkweli" indicates one person, "Wakweli" two or more.

The welfare of the elderly

by Trevor Partington

THE Assemblies of God of U.S.A. have sent out a publicity handout giving details of a conference held in The White House at the end of last November on the welfare of old people. This included for the first time a section on the "spiritual well-being of the ageing" and, of the two official national delegates representing the Assemblies of God, one was a member of this section. "Spiritual needs" were not thought to be exclusively religious, but, significantly enough, more than half of the national organisations represented in this section were religious groups. In their report to the general session, the "spiritual well-being" section listed fifteen policy recommendations. Six of these proposals called for greater access for the elderly to all avenues of assistance by the government. There would, it was stated, be government co-operation with religious, social and educational agencies to help meet the spiritual needs of the elderly. Furthermore, the government would provide research and professional training for those serving in this field. Adequate chaplaincy services in caring for the elderly, with government assistance where necessary, were also recommended.

How does this compare with the British scene? What concern is there here, on a national scale, for the spiritual well-being of the elderly? A spokesman for the Council of Churches Social Responsibility Department in London admitted to me: "This aspect of old people's welfare [the spiritual] has been neglected." In my research into this subject I soon found out that this was so. Nearly all the emphasis has been placed on the SOCIAL aspect of old people's welfare, with little or no reference to their spiritual needs. Certainly this is true in terms of the government and the concern they have for old people. There are, however, well over 1,000 local committees on old people's welfare in Great Britain, and, while the main emphasis of their work is social, their existence reflects the growing concern for the needs of the elderly. This same growth of interest is evident also in the churches.

In 1967 the National Old People's Welfare Council (now known as "Age Concern") organised a conference on the special responsibility of religious bodies. As a result a pamphlet was published entitled "The role of the churches in the care of the elderly." Under the section headed "The need," mention is made of the bewildering ment and distress of the elderly in the face of bereavement, physical pain, loneliness, neglect, the humiliation that may come with failing powers, the confusion and anxiety that sometimes arise from changing and conflicting interpretation of the tenets of their faith, the feelings of unwantedness and uselessness, and the fear of dying. Under another section headed "The challenge," one of the questions asked is: Is it a good use of church resources on behalf of the elderly to use these solely in the delivery of parcels, in the organisation of entertainments, luncheon clubs, outings and similar activities? These are all, it is stated, important items of service, but there are also the needs of human beings related to faith about life and death, motives, purposes, hopes and fears, joys and guilts, for which the churches have a special responsibility.

As Evangelicals our responsibility in this respect is, of course, even greater. Probably less than ten per cent of elderly people have any definite church connection and therefore the need is tremendous. How many church members make it a matter of conscience to see that lonely people whom they know are provided with comfort and guidance, perhaps by arranging for them to be brought to church in cars? Many elderly people live in residential homes, and here again Evangelicals have a special responsibility. We may well find an opening for visiting these homes on a regular basis so that, through a short service or individual counselling, spiritual help may be given.

Only last week I visited an old man who did not know Christ. On his own admission his life had been quite godless, but, as it was obvious that he was aware of his need, I asked if I might pray with him. With tears streaming down his face he said, "Please do. Mother prayed that this might happen."

Many old people live out their dreary days with nothing to do, with no conscious purpose in life, and with no hope for the future. While welcoming and making the fullest use of all the resources provided by the State for their relief and help, our duty as Christians is to fill in the gaps, as we remember above all else their spiritual needs.

(We are grateful to Trevor Partington, our pastor at Stafford, for his research into this important subject, specially undertaken for THE ELIM EVANGEL.—EDITOR.)

THE COMMON MARKET AND GREAT BRITAIN

by Joseph Smith

THE six nations in the Common Market have now been increased to ten (subject to ratification by the parliaments involved). This will give rise to further speculation as to how this fits in with Bible prophecy and the Roman Empire.

I have been a student of Bible prophecy for fifty years and am conversant with the views of the historicist and the futurist, but I have never been able to build up a case for a revival of the Roman Empire following the same geographical outlines as the old one. The maps in the back of the majority of Bibles show the outlines of the four world empires; not one of them followed the same geographical outlines as any of the preceding empires. The Bible reveals that the Lord gave all the kingdoms of the world to the rulers of each of the four empires (Daniel 2 : 37-40 ; 7 : 23) ; none of them claimed anything like the portion which God gave them. If you think of a revived Roman empire as comprising "all nations" then, of course, this is a different thing.

The Bible says concerning the final conflict which will involve all nations : "For, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for My people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted My land" (Joel 3 : 1, 2) ; "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle ; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished ; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity. . . . Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when He fought in the day of battle. And His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives . . . and the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with Thee . . . And the Lord shall be king over all the earth : in that day there shall be one Lord, and His name one" (Zechariah 14 : 1-9).

The fact that the Bible mentions "all nations" being involved in the attack on Jerusalem sounds more like an attack by the United Nations than anything else. We know that the United Nations, now comprising 131 countries, have agreed that the Jews must hand back to the Arabs the territory which they took from them, including the old city of Jerusalem, but the Jews are determined to fight to the death before they will give up Jerusalem. Surely the prophecy of Zechariah is a perfect picture of what we can reasonably expect to happen—and that before long. The Bible does not say that every soldier belonging to this great company of nations will be there, but a united move by the United Nations would perfectly fulfil the prophecy.

It is evident that America and Great Britain, together with our helpers, will not be able to stop the march of these nations, or save the city of Jerusalem from being taken (Zechariah 14 : 2). See also Ezekiel 38 : 13, where these invading nations are regarded as the victors coming "to take a spoil . . . to take a prey . . . to take a great spoil."

The nations which comprised the Roman Empire are mentioned in the end-time prophecies. The nations which have carried the Church of Rome on their backs as a horse carries a rider will at the time of the end turn against her (Revelation 17). This cannot possibly refer to imperial Rome, for imperial Rome was never destroyed by the nations comprising the empire. It can only refer to papal Rome.

If Russia could deliver a knock-out blow to the United States and Great Britain she could then, with her preponderance of nuclear power, command "all nations," and thus perfectly fulfil the Scriptures. The other nations of Europe could not hold out against her; they would do as the Bible says: "agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled" (Revelation 17:17). These latter words refer to the Old Testament prophecies referring to this time. The destruction of the beast to whom the nations of Europe give their power is further referred to in Revelation 19:11-21. The great Victor in that dreadful war is none other than Jesus Christ—the King of kings and Lord of lords; it is neither Great Britain nor America.

Revelation 19:17, 18 and Ezekiel 39:17-22 refer to the same great conflict. There is only one ending of the Gentile age, one coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to take over the government of the nations, one glorious restoration of the whole house of Israel—though they are referred to by many writers in both Old and New Testaments. In Ezekiel 39:22-29 you read of ungodliness being turned away from Jacob and in Romans 11:26 you read by whom it is turned away—the Deliverer, the Redeemer when He comes (see Isaiah 59:20, 21).

I believe that as God allowed the Assyrians to chastise the Israelites because of their many sins and then turned and punished the Assyrians because of their mighty sins, even so will He allow Russia to chastise both America and Great Britain and then He will turn and deal in judgment with all those anti-God nations, including Russia, which have come, not only against His land but "against the Lord and against His anointed" (Psalm 2:1-12; Daniel 2:34, 35; Isaiah 34:1-3; 63:1-6; 66:15-24; Jeremiah 25:29-33; Revelation 16:17-21). As Billy Graham once said: "If God allows Great Britain and America to escape from judgment then He will have to apologise to Sodom." We will certainly not escape, nor will the Jews escape the judgments of God, according to the Bible. In Zechariah 12:9 we read: "And it shall come to pass in that day that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem." Thanks be to God we are not included in that company; neither Great Britain nor America is coming to fight against Jerusalem. We may suffer at the hands of Russia before that day comes, we may be knocked out of the fighting, and therefore not included in the "all nations" which come again Jerusalem, but we will not be joined to the Common Market countries in that day. They will either be destroyed or found on the side of Russia. Mgr. Ronald Knox, a devout Roman Catholic writer, said in 1950: "But the thing is going on; more and more the shadow of atheism is falling over the whole of eastern Europe. France, Spain, Italy, Belgium—you can't bet what is going to happen there. It's quite probable that you, later on, will find yourself having to pull your socks up, and help to save the Catholic Church, humanly speaking, from going under."

Whether our country goes into the Common Market or stays out of it will in no wise affect the sure word of prophecy. We look forward to that glorious day when "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun does his successive journeys run." In that day there will be a common market for all nations and one King shall reign over them all. I am glad that "There will always be an England" and that the great King of kings will accept in that day gifts from our rulers (Psalm 72:10, 11).

ELIM CONFERENCE 1972

The pastor of our Bourne-mouth (Springbourne) church, J. OSMAN, one of the speakers at this year's conference.

(See advertisement on page 7)

From T. H. Stevenson

A FORMER secretary of the Medical Research Council, Sir Harold Himsworth, inaugurated what is described as a "whole body-monitoring unit" at the Southern General Hospital, Glasgow. Speaking of the remarkable advance in medical research and resources, he said :

"Clinical medicine is leaping forward. We may all contemplate the resources around us now with gratification, but there is a danger in this field of work which I might call 'Pygmalionism.' There is a story about the sculptor who created the most perfect statue of a woman. He fell so much in love with the statue that he had no time for the real thing. THE EQUIVALENT OF THAT STORY IS THAT OF A MAN WHO FALLS SO MUCH IN LOVE WITH HIS MACHINE THAT IT BECOMES HIS MASTER AND HE LOSES SIGHT OF ITS PURPOSE.

"When one considers the skills needed to produce some of the machines now required in clinical physics and bio-engineering one would be well advised, I believe, not to disregard the possibility that these, by their very existence, could exert an undue influence upon the research problems and indeed on the research workers. WE MUST ALWAYS BE ON OUR GUARD NOT TO MISTAKE MEANS FOR ENDS."

I have purposely put the closing sentences in each paragraph in capitals, for they are words of deep meaning and worthy of note by Christians, churches and church leaders.

The same note of warning is more direct than the foregoing in an item from the Anglican Evangelical Journal. Written particularly concerning the Church of England, the words have an import for all. The article declares that the Church of England is steadily becoming "an organised machine and less and less an instrument of spiritual power and leadership in the nation." It continues : the "complicated machinery of committees and commissions continues unabated. The expenditure in time, money, nervous energy and manpower is the Devil's ingenuity in keeping us from our real work." The writer states that the time has come to cut the cords of bureaucracy and return to "THE SIMPLICITY AND SANITY OF PAROCHIAL BIBLE MINISTRY." Here also the final words are the vital words.

Over the years I have served on committees within Elim and without, but though such machinery is necessary, no one can dispute that to be a committed Christian—committed to Christ and to His commission to you—is much more essential than to be a committee Christian !

DIVINE HEALING PRAYER PARTNERSHIP

OVER 300 people have joined Elim's Divine Healing Prayer Partnership and have agreed to pray for those who send their prayer requests. Every morning around 9 o'clock the partners meet around the throne of grace and bring the needs before the Lord. We send details of the requests to those who have covenanted to pray.

You are welcome either to send in prayer requests or to join in intercession with these faithful prayer-warriors. Write to Elim Divine Healing Prayer Partnership, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

Here is a letter sent by Mrs. L——. A similar letter was received from Mr. G—— by the same post.

I'm just writing a line to thank all those who prayed for me during my illness. I had a stroke and was seriously ill and in hospital for over three months. I couldn't walk by myself when I came home. I do praise the Lord for all His goodness and lovingkindness to me. Now I can walk, get about, do a little work and get to the meetings.

We get your prayer letter for others who are sick and I do pray that He will do the same for them as He has done for me. Hallelujah !

CHRISTIAN HILARITY

I HAVE always enjoyed the study of words and from my schooldays have read dictionaries and found pleasure in acquiring new words and meanings. I am no linguist, however, and much as I marvel at the wonderful structure and development of languages old and new I have to rely on another's scholarship to learn of root meanings and particularly so when searching the Scriptures.

I am usually a cheerful individual and an advocate of cheerfulness and I have always felt a heart-warming response when reading Romans 12:8 and 2 Corinthians 9:7. These two verses are the only occasions in the New Testament when a word with such an audacious Greek meaning is used. In Romans the word is hilarotes, meaning "hilarity," and in Corinthians hilaros, meaning "hilarious"! In both instances the word is used with reference to giving.

In 2 Corinthians 9 Paul is dealing with the question of financial help to be sent to the church at Jerusalem. He visited the Gentile churches and took up offerings for the relief of the poor, persecuted believers in Jerusalem and he writes this amazing sentence: "The Lord loveth the hilarious giver"! This statement, this conception of Christian generosity is exhilarating and challenging; there is nothing cold, calculating or grudging in this attitude! Hilarious means "boisterously mirthful," so the Christian in his giving should overflow with obvious joy and spontaneous liberality. Turning to Romans 12, you will see Paul's list of very practical rules for Christian conduct. In verse 8 the old English noun "mercy" is used. The original Greek word signifies "kindness with beneficence." So we are to show kindness with hilarity! No condescending, half-hearted charity is here but loving, sparkling, full-blooded concern which expresses itself in self-sacrifice and practical help given gladly and with gay abandon. If the unsaved could see more of such hilarious giving in the Christian Church they could not but be challenged and attracted to our fellowship and eventually come to know the bountiful Giver of all good gifts.

Many years ago at a missionary meeting held in a negro church in the West Indies these three resolutions were agreed upon: (1) we all give something; (2) we all give as God has enabled us; (3) we all give willingly. As soon as the meeting was over a leading brother took his seat at a table with pen and ink before him to put down what each came to give. Many came forward and gave, some more, some less. Among those who came was a rich old negro, almost as rich as all the others put together, who threw down upon the table a small silver coin. "Take dat back again," said the man at the table, "dat may be according to de first resolution, but it's not according to de second." The rich man accordingly took it up and hobbled back to his seat in great rage. One after another came forward and, as all gave more than he had offered, he was fairly ashamed of himself. Again he came forward and threw down a piece of money on the table, saying "Dere! take dat!" It was a valuable piece of gold, but it was given so ill temperedly that the brother answered again, "No, dat won't do yet! It may be according to de first and second resolutions, but it's not according to de last." He was obliged to take up his coin again. Still very angry with himself and with all the rest, he sat for a long time, until nearly all were gone and then he came up to the table with a smile on his face and very willingly gave a large sum to the treasurer. "Very well," said the brother, "dat will do; dat's according to all de resolutions." Paul says "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of neces-

A spiritual holiday amid luxury

By Alexander Tee

IT is easy to backslide when on holiday and away from the church. On the other hand, a seaside holiday, coupled with a glorious seven-day Pentecostal convention, will do a great job for both body and soul. Satan is still subtle in luring us into his garden of temptation. The forbidden fruit is so much easier to nibble when you are miles away from Christian influences.

The choice of holiday is most important. It can affect others as well as ourselves. How much wiser it is to come home with your soul on fire for God, having met scores of enthusiastic Christian friends, than to return spiritually the poorer.

For those who are not keen on being under canvas the ideal situation awaits them at Mundesley. It is open to all ages. The main emphasis will be on youth, especially with Hans Koornstra coming from the Continent.

There will be no workshops; we will be glad to leave behind all connected with work. Morning discussions on the Gifts of the Holy Spirit and ample opportunity for those seeking the baptism in the Spirit will be available. The rest of the day will see us either splashing in the heated swimming pool or in the cool sea, or, if you wish, enjoying all manner of outdoor activities. A visit to the famous Norfolk broads is proposed. The evening rallies will be well worth attending.

The quality of the camp is similar to Butlins and Pontins, only we will have four meals per day in the dining hall at the all-in price of £16. The dates are July 1st to 8th—right at the peak of the sunny season.

Send for a booking form to: E.Y.M., P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, Glos.

Remember this is a family camp and open to all ages, including those with young families.

THERE ARE STILL VACANCIES OPEN TO ALL AGES!

Monday, March 13th

Matthew 22: 15-33

"Render unto God the things that are God's" (v. 21).

The Herodians, supporters of Herod and of Rome, were enemies of the Pharisees, but they formed an unholy alliance to trap Jesus in His speech by asking a question. Jesus confounded them by His answer, but He also established a principle which applies to all His followers: When the demands of the State do not conflict with the demands of God, then the State must be obeyed. Civil disobedience can only be countenanced when God's laws contradict the State laws.

The principle is simply expressed in these other words of Jesus: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God" (Matthew 6: 33). Is He really first in all our thinking?

Tuesday, March 14th

Matthew 22: 34-46

"Neither durst any man from that day forth ask Him any more questions" (v. 46).

The first recorded, independent action of Jesus was in the Temple in the midst of the doctors of the law astonishing them with His understanding and with His answers to their questions (Luke 2: 46, 47). He closed His life's chapter by silencing men with His answers and with His questions. His glorious omniscience is supreme. He not only knew the answers—He discerned the motives behind their actions (Matthew 22: 18).

Nothing is hidden from the Lord. He knows all things: the motives that cannot be seen, the matter before it is spoken. All can confidently surrender their way to Him, knowing that no details will be overlooked. Nothing can overtake those who trust Him for which He has not made provision.

Wednesday, March 15th

Matthew 23: 1-22

"To be seen of men" (v. 5).

We can rest comfortably in Christ and revel in His denunciation of the Scribes and Pharisees, but we should examine our lives against theirs. Could the same things, perchance, be said of us? The "woes" recited against them are not so much curses as expressions of pity; "Alas for you" is probably a better rendering.

It is tragic when men do not enter Christ's kingdom by accepting Him as their Saviour, but it is far worse when they stand in the entrance (as the Pharisees did) and keep others out. Even Christ's disciples can keep others from Him (Luke 8: 44, 45). May this never be said of us!

Thursday, March 16th

Matthew 23: 23-39

"These ought ye to have done" (v. 23).

There are dangers common to every generation.

The Pharisees succumbed to temptations which are prevalent today. Take note of the pitfalls and you will recognise them when they appear on your pathway.

Wrong emphasis (vv. 23, 24). It is easy to be taken up with trivialities and to neglect fundamental issues. In the course of clearing the important issues the smaller matters are often rectified.

Pretence (vv. 25-28). Everything the Pharisees did was for show (v. 5). God is not concerned with outward appearance; He looks upon the heart.

Judging others (vv. 30-36). The mistakes of others will be no protection in the Day of Judgment. The only covering which will prevail in that day will be that afforded by Christ, the very covering the Jews refused (vv. 36-39).

Friday, March 17th

Matthew 24: 1-14

"What shall be the sign of thy coming?" (v. 3).

Familiarity often robs the words of Scripture of their impact. False Christs, wars, famine, disease, earthquakes, persecution, betrayal, hatred and apostasy could be found in today's newspapers, yet this record is almost 2,000 years old. To many it is but a recital of the all-too-familiar pattern of everyday life in the twentieth century. To Christians it is the fanfare which heralds the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. Despair and perplexity seize the minds of unbelievers, but peace and calm reign in the hearts of believers. These happenings declare that God keeps His word; He is coming back again. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Revelation 22: 20).

Saturday, March 18th

Matthew 24: 15-31

"They shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory" (v. 30).

The great tribulation (vv. 15-29). There is no doubt that Christ expounded details of a series of events quite distinct from any other in the world's history. The tribulation envisaged is unique and intense (v. 21). For the elect, there is comfort in that God controls even this period. He will not suffer them to be tempted above that which they are able to bear, even should it demand the shortening of the time when evil rules (v. 22).

The glorious triumph (vv. 30, 31). The trial of the days of suffering will be eclipsed by the expectation and realisation of Christ's coming. The joy of being gathered unto Him will overwhelm the sorrow. "Earth's trials will seem so small when we see Christ."

Sunday, March 19th

Matthew 24: 32-51

"My words shall not pass away" (v. 35).

The principal sign (vv. 32-35). Summer is forecast when the fig tree shows signs of returning to life after a winter of death. The fig tree of this parable is generally interpreted as the Jewish nation, which has already begun to show life after centuries of death. Could this generation, which has seen

God the provider

by John Hyde

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SCARBOROUGH

WE have on record in Genesis 22 : 1-14 the amazing sacrifice of Isaac, one of the greatest made by man. It is true that God intervened when He saw the step of faith on the part of Abraham, but intense love, loyalty and obedience toward God were revealed without any hesitation whatsoever.

Isaac is a type of Christ, who was obedient unto death. Abraham depicts the Father, who spared not his own Son but delivered Him up for us all. The ram was a substitute.

Abraham and Isaac travelled up the hill. The son, bearing the wood, began to say : "Where is the lamb for the burnt offering?" The father, thrusting down his emotions and steadying his voice, said : "My son, God will provide Himself a Lamb." How true were those words and Abraham, remembering later, named that place by a name that spoke nothing of his own great trial, but everything of God's provisions : "The Lord will provide : Jehovah Jireh."

What did God provide for Abraham? What does God provide for us? My reply is that God provides a way for us to discharge the difficult duties which seem to be impossible for us. When we are obedient, there opens up before us a possibility provided by God, and strength comes to fulfil the task. This is the main provision that God can and does make.

The Lord provided the lamb for the burnt offering. When we see that God provided the ram which became the appointed sacrifice through which Isaac's life was preserved, we have a faint picture of the great truth that the only sacrifice that God accepts for the world's sin, is the one that He Himself has provided.

It could be said that God asked from Abraham less than He gives us, but Abraham's love was sealed because he did not withhold his only son from God. God's love is certified, too, because He has not withheld His only Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, from us.

"Jehovah Jireh" contains the truth that we have the outward supply of outward needs. We have the means of discharging the most difficult duties. The highest of all was the spotless sacrifice which alone avails for the world's sin. These are the three things that God provides.

It must be understood that provision of any kind has certain conditions as to when, where and to whom it will be granted. So if we desire to have our outward needs supplied, our outward weaknesses met, strength sufficient for duty, wisdom for perplexity and a share in the sacrifice which takes away the sin of the world, we must have complete trust and believe that God is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him.

What are we to do with the provision when we get it? When you look back on the past what do you see—times of trial or times of deliverance? Which side do we choose to look at—the one that is brilliant with sunshine or the one that is black and purple in the shadow? Let us name the heights that lie behind and those visible to memory by names that commemorate, not the troubles we had, but rather the deliverances that we received from God.

things begin to come to pass, be the generation which will see all fulfilled?

The principal sin (vv. 36-51). When our Lord returns the predominant attitude will be preoccupation with the things of time. A small number will be in the attitude of mind (ready) and in the activity (working), which will receive commendation from Him.

May we be found waiting and watching for His promise and working for the kingdom when He returns!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Breathing : Natural and Spiritual

by Henry Proctor, F.R.S.L.

BREATHING is of the first importance to both natural and spiritual life. From birth to death there is but one thing that we do practically without ceasing, and that is breathing. There is nothing more essential to the maintenance of life and health and there can be nothing earthly more worthy of our attention.

The things on earth are typical of things in the heavens, as the Bible clearly teaches, the natural world being a working model of the spiritual, natural law and spiritual law being the same law, as Professor Drummond taught. Breathing must therefore be the highest essential in both worlds.

It is said of Adam in Eden that God breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives and what Elohim breathed into him should be inbreathed by man every moment of his life through his nostrils, as at first, and not through his mouth, for "one who breathes habitually through the mouth is usually mentally or physically weak and lacking in powers of concentration. The mental powers are weakened because the brain suffers from poor nourishment; the physical powers are weakened owing to the poor quality of the blood, due to insufficient oxygen to purify it before it courses through the body."

Cold air inhaled through the nose is warmed during its passage before it enters the lungs, whereas when breathing through the mouth "the cold air strikes the throat and upper air chamber and has a tendency to induce tonsillitis and other throat diseases, and to open a path for consumptive germs." Nasal breathing, on the other hand, induces a stronger, fuller expansion of the entire lung. The lesson of nasal breathing, though the simplest, is what man has to learn on the natural plane.

Breathing is of vast importance from a spiritual standpoint, for the spiritual man has a spiritual organism as certainly as the natural man has a psychical one.

The inward man has organs in every way corresponding to the organs of the outward man, so the spiritual man has lungs in which to breathe the spiritual atmosphere in which he lives and moves and has his being.

If then correct breathing on the natural plane is a duty, a privilege and a means of maintaining natural health, so also must correct spiritual breathing be essential to the maintenance of spiritual life and health, for the same means is used for imparting spiritual life as that for natural life. At our first birth we began to breathe the atmosphere of the world; at our second birth the spiritual lungs are ready for the Divine breath. The same conditions apply to both.

Just as certainly as the natural man has forgotten how to breathe, and must learn, so the spiritual man is usually deficient in this most vital matter. He also must learn how to breathe. Doubtless there is in him a lower kind of breathing, but the highest kind is inbreathing the breath of God, which we term "inspiration," for in the Book of Job we are told that "The breath of the Almighty giveth me understanding."

Here then is the parallel with nostril breathing, by means of which the brain is nourished, and the mental powers are strengthened. Also the correct rendering of John 3 : 8 imparts the same truth : "The Spirit breathes where He pleases, and thou hearest His voice." The hearing of His voice, the voice of the silence, comes in silent waiting upon God until we receive the thoughts of God, which are as high above our thoughts as heaven is above the earth. As we practise this inbreathing it becomes the habit of our lives and we are always inspired, being filled with the knowledge of the Divine will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding. By man who had attained a life of complete surrender and entire devotion to God the Scriptures were written, which are styled : "God-breathed."

This is inspiration, corresponding to the in-drawn breath on the natural plane, but there must be respiration to complete the parallel : "The Spirit pleading for us in yearnings that can find no words; sighs that are beyond words" prays in us the prayer of God, which is carried on by spiritual respiration, even (and perhaps much more so) during sleep (Romans 8 : 26, 27), for on the natural plane breathing, acquired by habit, is carried on during sleep. God can use those who are consecrated to this Divine purpose as prayer dynamos for the indwelling Spirit without ceasing, as continuously as we respire the natural breath.

This outbreathing, expressed as sighing, yearning or groaning, is not only for the saints, but, as the context shows, for the whole creation. Read the whole passage (Romans 8 : 18-27) in Weymouth, Rotherham, Moffatt or any new translation. It will then be made plain that the deliverance of the whole creation from the bondage of corruption is waiting for the redemption of our bodies, for it "waits with eager longing for the sons of God to be revealed. To this day we know the entire creation sighs and throbs with pain, groaning together in the pangs of childbirth, the birth pangs of a new creation. And we ourselves inwardly sigh as we wait and long for open recognition as sons, through the deliverance of our bodies."

The believer who waits on God in the silence attains the inner breath, by means of which he continually inbreathes (inspires) the Divine breath and outbreathes from the indwelling Spirit the prayer of God.

All the saints are called to this method of breathing, which will secure to them, as promised in 1 Thessalonians 5 : 23, 24, perfect soundness of spirit and soul and body, and finally the deliverance of their bodies from death, by that "redemption of the body that means our full sonship" (Romans 8 : 23).

Church reports

BIRMINGHAM, Kingstanding

Pastor : R. J. Morrison

We have been greatly blessed of God during the last few weeks. This commenced when we had our revival crusade in October conducted by Pastor A. Wilson. Much hard work was put into this by our young people.

There followed special meetings convened by Pastor T. Middleton on "The Second Coming" and these proved to be great times of blessing.

At our annual fellowship tea we praised the Lord for His goodness through another year.

Two special Sundays in December were one convened by the male voice choir and the other our annual carol service conducted by the mixed choir.

The new year commenced with a baptismal service when several candidates passed through the waters of baptism. God's presence was very powerful.

February 5th was the day we were all anticipating, for we were to celebrate the twenty-first anniversary of Pastor and Mrs. Morrison's ministry with us. The special services commenced with a tea when 230 of God's people sat down as one big family. After tea we moved into the church for an informal family gathering. Right from the commencement we knew that the Master was present. Our secretary convened the meeting.

We were very pleased to have with us the eternally young Pastor Joseph Smith, who was responsible for leading our own pastor to the Lord. We were also pleased to have with us Pastor and Mrs. W. J. Patterson, Pastor and Mrs. R. D. Bradley, Mrs. Stanton, Pastor and Mrs. J. Osman and Mr. Polden (Mrs. Morrison's father). Contributions were made by all these and Brian, Gillian and John added their family contribution. Trevor Nicholls sang a solo and added a short word. He was a baby when Pastor and Mrs. Morrison commenced their ministry.

The most moving highlight of the evening was when the pastor's sister was introduced as a special surprise. She was flown in from Northern Ireland to be at this special service. How great were these few moments ! This real family atmosphere was typical of the fellowship that we have enjoyed over twenty-one years with the Master at the head. Thank God for these two dedicated, loving and faithful servants. May God continue to bless them in the days that lie ahead!

Our treasurer, Mr. E. Stanton, presented Pastor Morrison with a cheque on behalf of all the assembly. Mrs. Morrison was presented with a bouquet by the Sunday school scholars. Pastor Smith and the deacons then laid hands on God's two servants.

Special thanks are due to Mr. W. E. Long, our secretary, and his wife for their hard work behind the scenes.

H. ALLIES.

The following report comes from the local press:

Surprise for the minister

"Rev. Robert Morrison—this is your life." When parishioners of Warren Road Elim Pentecostal Church, Kingstanding, were planning a party to celebrate the twenty-one years their minister had spent at the church, they hit on the format of the "This is your life" television show. Secretly, they prepared a biography of his time at the church, and contacted relatives and friends. The surprise was sprung on Saturday.

An amazed Mr. Morrison arrived to find his sister, Mrs. Annie McDougal, had been specially flown over from Belfast to join in the celebrations. The minister said: "I will never forget it. It was a wonderful idea. I had no idea my sister would be there. I have not seen her for a year."

The "This is your life" book also held some surprises. Mr. Morrison said: "It jogged my memory of a lot of events I had nearly forgotten about."

There were so many parishioners at the party—more than 230—that they had to be accommodated in two halls at the church.

And Mr. Morrison had to visit both to cut the twin "coming of age" cakes which had been prepared.

MANCHESTER, Chorlton-cum-Hardy

Pastor: J. T. Glass

At a recent Saturday night rally we were greatly encouraged and blessed by a visit from Pastor J. J. Glass, the son of our pastor, and a party of his Crusaders from his church in Llantrisant, South Wales. We praise God for their enthusiasm as they testified and sang of the goodness of God. This was followed by the richly anointed ministry of Pastor John Glass.

We praise God for His goodness during the past year in the salvation of souls, in the healing of the sick and in the blessing of His people. It is with joy we recall the visits of Pastors J. T. Bradley, J. Smith and J. McAvoy, who brought great blessing with their deep ministry. On the occasion of our church anniversary our guest speaker was Pastor H. W. Greenway, who ministered with great power and blessing at each service.

Our Crusaders were very faithful in their testimony in word and song as they went with our pastor to the local park every Sunday afternoon during the summer months for open-air services, which gave many non-churchgoers an opportunity to hear the gospel.

We thank the Lord also for the way in which He is undertaking for the financial needs of our church. We were pleasantly surprised when we received a cheque for £22 from the local Evangelical Church, a love gift in appreciation of our pastor's labours over the past eighteen years in the faithful proclamation and defence of the Gospel in our district.

We thank our pastor and his wife for their faithful ministry over eighteen years and thank God for every blessing received.

B. PITT.

DELANCEY

Pastor : A. Anstey

Pastor and Mrs. Derek Le Page, having recently farewelled from their pastoral charge at Merriott, came back among their families and friends as they stood on the threshold of their great adventure, as Mrs. A. Anstey so aptly described it. The weekend gave an opportunity for the Crusaders and for the families of both sides to meet together and to speak about the way in which God had led them over the past four and a half years.

On Sunday morning we had the joy of the ministry of Mrs. Susan Le Page. We were all thrilled by her anointed preaching and by the presence of the Lord. At the evening service the Gospel message was preached by Pastor Derek Le Page. Both meetings were ably led by the resident minister.

The valedictory service on the following Thursday was supported by the Channel Islands Presbytery and by members and friends of other churches in Guernsey.

At the outset of the meeting the presence of God was felt and, in the singing of hymns and choruses, the congregation responded as only Pentecostal people can. Items rendered during the service carried the same message of dedication and call to which our friends were now giving themselves. A. J. Downs, pastor of the Vazon church, gave the message and everyone was blessed by his ministry. He had to deputise at the last minute owing to the illness of the District Superintendent.

The most precious moment of all was the laying on of hands at the end of the service as our two friends were committed to the Lord by the two ministers present and by members of the local diaconate, the senior deacon leading in prayer after the congregation had sung that wonderful chorus, "He touched me."

A cheque was presented to Pastor and Mrs. D. Le Page at the close of the meeting.

Our thoughts go with them and with their families at this time, knowing that the God of all grace and comfort is with us at all times.

T. E. NICOLLE.

DERBY

Pastor : B. G. Edwards

The blessing of the Lord continues in full measure at Derby. At our last annual general meeting increases were reported in every department of the church's work and outreach. Through the steadily expanding Sunday school and junior and senior youth branches, it is estimated that we are reaching upwards of 400 young people each week with the gospel. Nor is the older generation neglected. Normal good attendances become "packed houses" at the monthly "Senior Citizens' Special." At most Communion Services the Gifts are in evidence and the Lord sets His seal on the evangelistic rallies with a steady record of decisions. Weeknight meetings are well attended, as we pray and prepare for a great door-to-door drive in the spring.

Under the energetic leadership of our pastor, the massive church decoration scheme now nears completion.

We have recently been thrilled by the ministry of Pastor John Woodhead, whose preaching on the theme "Revival in the seventies" has been both timely and profitable.

Lightbearers in the Transvaal, South Africa

by George and Betty Gemmell

WE were sad at leaving our African work in Tzaneen, especially Betty's clinics. God knows best, however, and He answered our problems. Most of the work had become indigenous and the Africans are carrying on on their own.

A few weeks after moving, Betty was visiting one of the clinics, as she thought, for the last time, when she was told that one of the doctors had been trying to find her address. He had left word for her to call at the offices in Pietersburg. She was offered the post of Supervisor of Nursing Services for The Transvaal (excepting the cities of Johannesburg and Pretoria). We did not think that this was possible as she could not speak Afrikaans and, though she is fully qualified as to United Kingdom standards, some of the South African standards are different, especially in relation to Public Health Acts. The government headquarters in Pretoria confirmed the appointment.

We feel humbled yet thankful that a child of the Lord should be given this post at this time in South African history. We value your prayers for Betty, especially because full authority over the black areas is being given to the black leaders and these are the people with whom Betty is dealing.

She recently had a meeting with the Prime Minister designate of the Northern Sotho people and later in the week discussed clinics with Princess Thlulare, paramount chieftainess of Sekuhurland, a very highly-educated woman with fifty-seven chiefs under her.

Betty went to various strategically-placed hospitals, where she held refresher courses for her clinic nurses of from one to three weeks' duration. She held services and Bible studies in the evenings, and, practically without exception, decisions were registered, backsliders were restored, healings took place and Christians were helped. Blessings were received by white staff members also, praise the Lord.

When a missionary couple left Pietersburg to furlough for a year in Canada, they asked us to look after their work, which covers a radius of sixty to seventy miles. Their churches are practically indigenous, but they enjoy our visits and ministry and a little advice now and again when asked for.

We are trying to open a work of our own to carry on with when they return. We have already got into one high school to minister to about 350 teenage students and we will be commencing in another two.

When we announced our intention of leaving Tzaneen the S.C.M. in the teachers' training college asked us to continue our ministry there, so we travel back there about once per month, a 160 miles return trip. We include one or two other services in the area.

On one such visit the Lord poured out blessing upon us at Nkowahowa. A large number came out to rededicate their lives to the Lord. The schoolroom was so packed that it was impossible either to count them or to pray individually with them. Some could not even reach the front; they knelt down where they were.

What thrilled us most was a sight I have never seen anywhere in South Africa. There, right at the front, kneeling beside the black people, was a white traffic officer, tears streaming down his face. He was a former Pentecostal believer, who had been used mightily of God, but he had completely backslidden. Pastor Maswangani and Betty had spoken to him repeatedly. He had tried to come back and had failed. For over a year we prayed earnestly for him. He has now resigned his job, is visiting the Holy Land, and will then go into full-time service. Pray for his unconverted wife.

After a quick snack we went to the teachers' training college, where we ministered to over 300 students. As the appeal was given, only two came forward. I knew there were more. I commenced a second appeal, but my voice was lost in the sound of movement as from all sections of the hall there came another twenty-six precious souls.

Much of my time at home is spent with the drawing board. The new Bible college at Tzaneen, consisting of seven main buildings plus usual offices, alterations to the church at Pietersburg, alterations to a missionary's home, additions to a Bantu elder's home and perhaps another Bantu church in the near future—all these plans have to be approved by the various authorities before work can commence and then much of the work has to be supervised while in progress. Lenyenye church is now at the roofing stage. This part could have been completed, but a freak storm did a great deal of damage, which we are now making good.

One advantage of living in Pietersburg is that Ian and Anne are able to live at home while attending high school, where they are doing quite well. Another is that they are able to participate in the white church here, a thing which was lacking in Tzaneen.

Please pray for us as we pray for you.

George and Betty Gemmell went to the Transvaal as Lightbearers in 1968. God has singularly blessed their work and prospered them. There are glorious opportunities for Christians to use their talents and qualifications for God as they have done. The Missionary Secretary, L. Wigglesworth, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, can help you.

Don't forget!

Words and drawing

by
Sheila Price

TIMOTHY was a very forgetful boy. He never seemed to remember to do anything. He was always forgetting to wash his neck, for one thing, but his mother would notice and march him straight back to the bathroom and make him wash properly. If it was raining he always forgot to put on his wellingtons before he went out. This made his mother very angry, because Timothy's feet got wet and his socks became covered in mud.

One day Timothy's father gave him a letter to post on his way to school. "Now, don't forget to put it in the box, Timothy," said his father—but that's just what Timothy did! He walked right past the post-box, completely forgetting the letter. He even forgot about the letter on his way home from school!

"Never mind, dad," said Timothy, "I'll go straight out and post it for you now, before I have my tea." On the way, however, Timothy met his friend John and they stood talking at the corner of the street. Timothy would have forgotten all about the letter again if the postman hadn't passed at that very moment to empty the post-box.

We all forget to do things sometimes, don't we? Perhaps we are too busy, or perhaps we are in the middle of a game and we don't want to leave it. Did you know that Jesus forgets too?—not because He is too busy or because He has too many things on His mind. There is only one thing that Jesus forgets—and that is sin. Jesus says that if we are truly sorry for our sins and ask Him to forgive us, He will forgive them and forget all about them. He will not remember them for ever and ever. Isn't that wonderful, boys and girls?

So the next time your parents ask you to do something try not to forget like Timothy, won't you?

Try not to forget the wonderful promise of Jesus!

TO be in God's service is the greatest privilege we can ever know. Experience proves time and time again how that God takes the weak things of the world to confound the mighty. Which one of us would dare to deny that at best we remain unprofitable servants? The Lord chooses to use ordinary folk like us, however, and the exceeding riches of His grace are multiplied to us in possession, experience, knowledge and ministry.

These thoughts occur to us as we view the present situation as it faces the Church of Jesus Christ. We could be daunted if we reckoned simply in numerical, financial or influential terms, but we do not, thank God! We are engaged in a spiritual warfare. God is the Judge and we can safely, gladly, leave the eternal issues to Him. Ours is to seek to promote His glory by our determined discipleship. The foes around may seem great and even overwhelming, but our God made the heavens!

The apostle Peter must have had a clear glimpse of the situation, as is revealed in his words, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do so as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen" (1 Peter 4: 11). Against the context of fiery opposition and persecution as depicted in this Epistle, this gem of a verse shines all the more gloriously.

Whatever the sphere of your service, let God's power and victory encourage and strengthen you. Sunday school work has many challenges in these days. Youth work has intensely worrying sidelights. Social needs are causing great concern, for who could fail to be worried by the plight of some of the elderly and by the tragic housing needs of some urban families? Many of the well-tried methods of church work are being brought into question. There is a move afoot to pull away from activities based upon church buildings in favour of house fellowships. This rapidly-changing age is not leaving the Church unaffected by any means. We should not lightly and easily abandon time-honoured methods, however, for the well-tried ways often prove to be the most enduring and the most rewarding.

Be encouraged in realising that your service matters, your ministry counts, and the One who calls you and uses you is the Lord God almighty who has promised that His power will come upon you as you seek to serve Him.

THE ALTITUDE OF PRAYER

by T. WOODS

(Hebrews 4 : 14-16)

Born at the beginning of the century, Tom Woods was converted in 1925 in Methodism, Baptised with the Spirit in 1927. Been a preacher of the Gospel ever since. Pioneered and pastored Elland Assembly of God for nearly eight years. Pastored in Wales and Folkestone, then at Hampden Chapel, London, for nearly eighteen years. Retired in 1966 and has since travelled 13,000 miles per annum visiting the Assemblies and conducting Revival and Divine Healing Crusades. Is now the pastor of the assembly at Ripon. Served on the Board of Governors of Kenley Bible College, and is at present a member of the Credentials Council and the Chairman of Yorkshire District Council.

HEBREWS 4 begins with "Let us therefore fear." Wuest's translation lays it down as: "It is a necessity in the nature of the case for us to give heed more abundantly to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should drift past them." It is possible for the heart to become cold, the attitude towards our vocation to become careless, the life to drag in the mire of this generation. We can become worldly in outlook and desire and drift past the best things in the Christian life. Life in the Spirit, as revealed in the New Testament, is lofty, noble, glorious. Angels minister to us in the way. We are termed "the heirs of salvation" (Hebrews 1 : 14)!

We should not be afraid of the heights, for God is there. Campbell Morgan tells the story of a young pilot who killed himself through flying too low. The believer has been quickened, raised in status and rank into the heavenly places with Christ Jesus. To keep in line with truth and to keep up with the Lord, we shall need to betake ourselves to lone vigils with Him and with our poor hearts. It is a glorious fact that all provision has been made to keep our hearts above the low levels of failure and defeat and to elevate us to lives of delight, victory, praise and worship.

The altitude of the Priest

"Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession" (v. 14). The secret of Christian living is an attachment not to a movement or to a fellowship but to a Person. "Seeing" is the secret of it all. From this point, observation must be keen. Interests must be vested in what is to follow. It is all-important that we see in the Lord Jesus all that the Spirit intends us to see.

Hebrews 1 opens up with the mighty emphasis upon who Jesus is. "To us in this last hour of this era, God has spoken in the ministry of His Son, the One whom He made His sole Heir. Age after age, plan after plan, He has dealt with man through Him. In Him, as a ray of light that comes from God to man, His glory is expressed. In Him, as in a word engraved, men read, shorn of all accidents, the basic fact of all God's Deity. He, by His word, endued with God's own power, upholds the universe and He now sits, Himself the Cleanser of sin's foul guilt, at the right hand of God's own majesty in highest heaven, exalted above heaven's angels, by the title-name He bears and by the high authority He wields" (Hebrews 1 : 3, 4).

Christ is Heir of all things, glorious in His possessions. He fashioned the ages. He is amazing in His range and power, the effulgence of God's glory, awful in His splendour, the very image of God's substance, eternal in His duration, upholding all things by the word of His power, Master and Conqueror of all. Love and compassion centre in His redeeming, forgiving grace. He is seated at the right hand of the Majesty on high, elevated with all the might and power of Godhead, the Priest of all priests, the mighty Son, the eternal Creator, the sole Authority for all those who feel their need, enthroned in heavenly splendour, the first-begotten from the dead, carrying through exalted hosts the great seal of our redemption, bearing in His own person the ransom marks for a guilty race, before whom those eternal gates swung open. The once-despised Galilean is recognised by the holy angels as the King of glory.

Christ has entered into the central supremacies of glory. His authority is indisputable as Redeemer and Priest. He paid the ransom price. He has eternally cancelled the debt. He has silenced for ever the loud, condemning voice of law broken and unfulfilled. In the glory of who He is, all has been accomplished; nothing has been left undone. Having obtained eternal redemption for us, He sits a King for ever. To this great Saviour and eternal Priest our homage and devotion belong. Let not our hearts drift by this awful splendour of love and mercy, but let it captivate us every day. Seeing that we have such a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. Let us be strong in the faith we confess.

Believers are linked to Him by the Holy Ghost. The energies now pulsating in our great King-Priest function amid the elect companies of believers by the power of the Holy Ghost. As a temple of the Spirit, every believer should know something of the great power which conquered death, raised Jesus up, carried Him through hosts hostile and friendly, and placed Him above all power, principality, thrones, dominions in time and eternity.

Let the drive be heavenward and not earthward. Let the aspirations of the heart be lifted to where He is. Let the affections of our hearts be ever towards Him who loved us and washed us from all our sins. Do the infirmities of the flesh dog our steps? Are we conscious of great need and great infirmity? Is the battle for righteousness strong and stern? God has not left us desolate and frustrated. The feeblest saint can win the day! Provisions are for triumph and not for defeat.

The attitude of the Priest

Prayer lifts the feeble saint to the altitude of power, all power. When the infirmities of life seem to oppress, when the tides of evil sweep around us, when there is a menacing threat of coldness and despair, "We have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (v. 15). Yonder exalted throne-room houses the Monarch of all monarchs, the only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords, and He lifts our oft feeble appeals to the heights of His sovereignty. He cares, though He is robed with light unapproachable. He loves, for the sceptre in His scarred hands is eternal. His love and compassion never abate through millenniums. Age after age came into being through Him. Dispensations were laid down as He travelled towards His Golgotha and our eternal redemption. He carries in His noble Person all the feelings of tenderness, love and sympathy as He ranges His triumphant work against all the tirades of the foes of the Church.

The attitude of the suppliant

Verse 16 indicates: "Let us therefore be coming—and coming again and again." Let our prayers be ascending to where He is. Robed in awful splendour, moving in His own sufficiencies, all-powerful, all-gracious, plenteous in mercy, abundant in grace, compassionate without degree, knowing all the vicissitudes of life which we have to pass through, He will engage His energies and abilities on our behalf. From this mighty area the Church receives her mandates and the saints receive power.

The age in which we live is fast coming to a close. The forces of evil, which populate the heavenlies with dark and sinister intention against the Church and the human race, will not retreat before the plausible statements of men, but prayer elevated by faith to the throne-room of the Almighty can turn the tide, affect kings and the high stations of men, rout the foul intents of Satan, and bring the Church into her glorious inheritance of all-power and shake the foundations of evil. Let us be coming all the time. Take your place, O saint of God, in this elevated enterprise. Be at your stations. The last bastions are falling around us. Society crumbles before the awful tread of permissiveness, young folk are being adulterated amid the passions of a generation wrecked morally, spiritually and physically, but our cause is not lost; THERE IS GRACE TO HELP IN THE TIME OF NEED. The ranks of the redeemed are under pressure. The panzer movements of darkness are energetic, but help is coming! "Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees and looks to that alone, laughs at impossibilities, and cries, 'IT SHALL BE DONE.'"

Former Belfast member dies in New Zealand

by Malcolm J. Frith

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
CHRISTCHURCH, NEW ZEALAND

The sudden tragic death of Mrs. Margaret McClelland in Christchurch, New Zealand, on February 6th had a profound effect on our church. Mrs. McClelland, who had been a member of Ulster Temple, Belfast, for many years, came to New Zealand just under two years ago. We soon grew to love her. All of us in the church felt her passing very keenly.

She had gone to town with her daughter-in-law to do some shopping on the Friday evening and, while waiting to cross a busy street, she was offered a pamphlet by a demonstrator. This told the British to get out of Northern Ireland. She refused to accept it and was subsequently hit over the head with a hardboard placard. She sustained head injuries from which she died thirty-six hours later without regaining consciousness. After the funeral her ashes were flown to Belfast, where Pastor D. J. Ayling conducted the service at which she was laid to rest beside her husband.

Within two hours of hearing of her serious condition the church was called together to pray for her and some said that they had never been in a meeting like it. Certainly the Lord met with several in a remarkable way.

Although we were all saddened on the Sunday to know of her passing, the services had great depth and meaning as the memory of her life, witness and steadfast stand for the truth challenged us all.

Soon after he was told of Mrs. McClelland's injury, one of our deacons was given the following Scripture in prayer in a remarkable way: "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts" (Isaiah 55:9), and, praise God, several people already have put their lives right before Him or are showing a new zeal for the things of the Lord.

The funeral service, conducted by the writer, was attended by over 900 people, many of whom were Irish friends and family acquaintances who did not know the Lord. Even through her death, in a sense, Mrs. McClelland preached to many about the Lord and asked them whether they were as ready as she was to leave this life. Her testimony now lives on as an example to us all and we praise God for the remembrance of such a godly person. Our prayer is that still others will find the Lord as a result of this tragic death.

For days the whole sad incident was clouded with mystery and it certainly made one doubt the truth of mass media reports. Publicity given to the incident first claimed that Mrs. McClelland was a demonstrator, and later claimed that she was involved in an argument in a milk bar. These were later corrected under pressure, but not before the general public had gained the wrong impression on many aspects. These things added to the grief about her death, but nevertheless we believe that the Lord's will has been done and we know that one day the whole story will be told by the Lord. When it is, we will praise God for His wisdom and plan!

Book reviews

Ecology Crisis, by John W. Klotz. Published by Concordia Publishing House Ltd. Price 60p, postage and packing 5p extra.

Only by the sub-title is there a hint that this book is written by a Christian and we wait until page 132 for clear evidence of this. Regrettably, only three of the fifteen pages of the final chapter—"What is needed"—bring forth the Biblical viewpoint. Viewed basically as a secular science book which, apart from a few pages, is written in everyday language, however, then it is excellent and is crammed with up-to-date information and data on this all-important topic of the seventies. Every branch of environmental pollution is covered including the obvious "Air and water pollution," "Radiation damage" and "Upsetting of the balance of nature." Originating from America, many of the examples are, unfortunately, not as forceful to a British reader as local illustrations would have been.

While the book's title shows that moral pollution was not intended to be included, one cannot help but feel that, had the author written on this aspect of pollution with the same intensity and efficiency as is given to its present technical contents, then it would have made tremendous, no doubt, character-changing reading.

With the LONDON CRUSADER CHOIR

A report of recent activities

THREE visits to the top security hospital at Broadmoor with its 900 patients were no mean feat for the members of the London Crusader Choir. Braving the transport problems at London's peak travel hour, the choir each night made their rush from everyday employment to Crowthorne to fulfil the kind invitation of the B.B.C. to lead the singing in connection with the "Songs of Praise" television broadcast from this hospital. The occasion marked the choir's fiftieth visit to Broadmoor hospital and their seventh television appearance. The occasion was most exciting and colourful. Most of the hymns broadcast were from The Redemption Hymnal. Such a visual broadcast from a security venue of this kind made history in British television and created great interest and no little appreciation, as revealed from the scores of comments, letters, etc., from every part of the British Isles and from the B.B.C. themselves.

Another venue of security and detention is the grim Wandsworth prison. Nine o'clock on a Sunday morning found the choir moving through the forbidding gates, eyed by guard dogs and staff, into a spacious chapel very soon crowded by hundreds of men, the occasion being the morning service conducted by Pastor Douglas Gray and the choir, instead of the usual matins. Seldom has one sensed such quiet serenity and rapt reception in such an establishment as on this occasion. Vocal and instrumental soloists were outstanding in their contributions, Elizabeth Harland singing "He was wounded for our transgressions," Marie Hamilton reviving a great favourite, "Standing somewhere in the shadows you'll find Jesus" and Vic Johnson (cornet) playing two moving numbers, including "I have heard of a Saviour whose love was so great that He laid down His life on the tree." A beautiful musical finale came when Alf Winnett (deputy conductor) filled the great chapel with the sound of the piece, "Consolation." Congregational hymn-singing was entered into with thoughtful abandonment and enthusiasm. June Spoor read the Scriptures and Pastor D. B. Gray's forthright comments left no uncertain reason for such a coming together and the purpose for the choir's existence—to "sing forth the honour of His name!"

Other evangelical denominations increasingly request the ministry of the London Crusader Choir, whose visits attract capacity crowds in almost every case. Armed with candles, torches, portable gas appliances, etc., the choir made for Trinity Church, Bexleyheath. Beautifully constructed for choral work and blazing with illumination almost matching a television studio, the church promised favourable conditions for a great evening of worship and praise. Such dreams were soon shattered for a power cut plunged it all into darkness. Nevertheless, using the emergency provisions, reasonable light soon penetrated the precincts and a great service followed. Music, song, testimony and a closing message by Albert Ardley (deputy leader), together with uplifting congregational participation, rounded off a great Sunday.

AN OUTLINE

THE BIBLE'S ABILITY

Three things the Bible tells us that it is able to do :

1. To enlighten the mind. 2 Timothy 3:15: "unto salvation." Holy Scripture, with a holy message from a holy God through the Holy Spirit, alone can enlighten and heal the darkened heart (salvation=wholeness).

2. To save the soul. James 1:21: "able to save your souls," not only to enlighten the mind. No other power on earth can effect this. The salvation of the soul is not only instant but progressive. It is the continuous sanctification of the whole man. "Jesus saves me all the time and Jesus saves me now."

3. To build you up. Acts 20:32: "able to build you up." Man, the habitation of God, lies in ruin. The original image has been lost. The "word of His grace" alone can restore the form and the inheritance that goes with it.

A QUOTATION

THE BIBLE

"I have guided my life by the Bible for more than sixty years, and I tell you there is no book like it. It is a miracle of literature, a perennial spring of wisdom, a wonder of surprises, a revelation of mystery, an infallible guide of conduct, and an unspeakable source of comfort. Pay no attention to people who discredit it, for I tell you that they speak without knowledge. It is the Word of God itself. Study it according to its own direction. Live by its principles, believe its message, and follow its precepts. No man is uneducated who knows the Bible, and no one is wise who is ignorant of its teachings!"

DR. SAMUEL CHADWICK.

AN ILLUSTRATION

THE GREAT PYRAMID

In Seventy Years of Archaeology Sir Flinders Petrie tells of a man caught filing away at one of the stones in the interior of the great pyramid. Challenged as to his iconoclastic behaviour, he explained that during years of patient study he had formulated an elaborate theory as to the prophetic and historic significance of the measurements of the pyramid. The measurements of this one recalcitrant stone, however, were quite irreconcilable with the splendid scheme. He was therefore altering the pyramid to make it square with his theory!

In praise of friendship

TODAY many of life's true values are questioned, despised or forgotten. Selfishness and arrogance are so evident that it is good to remind ourselves of the need to cherish the things that are noblest and best. I have been meditating upon the blessing of true friendship. Cicero wrote, "Friendship is the only thing in the world concerning the usefulness of which all mankind are agreed." He was right. The Bible teaches the value of friendship and gives a beautiful example in the story of David and Jonathan. Even the atheist Voltaire wrote, "Friendship is the gift of heaven and the delight of great souls."

Here is a little anthology on friendship and its value. Without it life would indeed be poor.

"A friend loveth at all times" (Proverbs 17:17)—"A friend is a friend always, he is a born brother for adversity" (Moffatt).

"Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart: so does the sweetness of a friend's counsel that comes from the heart" (Proverbs 27:9, Amp. Bible).

"Who's sick in body needeth a physician, who's sick in soul a friend. None's more skilled to heal our sorrows than a kindly friend" (Menander).

"Friendship improves happiness and abates misery, by doubling of our joy and the dividing of our grief" (Cicero).

"Thine own friend, and thy father's friend, forsake not" (Proverbs 27:10).

"The only reward of virtue is virtue, the only way to have a friend is to be one" (Emerson).

"Hast thou a friend? Visit him often, for thorns and brushwood obstruct the road which no one treads" (Eastern proverb).

I want a warm and faithful friend,

To cheer the adverse hour;

Who ne'er to flatter will descend,

Nor bend the knee to power.

A friend to chide me when I'm wrong,

My inmost soul to see;
And that my friendship prove as strong
To him, as his to me.

J. Q. ADAMS.

"My friend is not perfect—no more am I—and so we suit each other admirably" (ALEXANDER POPE).

Here's to the heart of friendship tried and true,
That smiles with us when joys our pathways strew,

And kneels with us when sorrow like a pall Enshrouds our stricken souls and holds through all

The midnight gloom, with human truth and faith.

AUTHOR UNKNOWN.

"No one has greater love—no one has shown stronger affection—than to lay down his own life for his friends. You are my friends, if you keep on doing the things which I command you to do. I do not call you servants [slaves] any longer, for the servant does not know what his master is doing [working out]. But I have called you My friends, because I have made known to you everything that I have learned from My Father—I have revealed to you everything that I have learned from Him—Jesus" (John 15:13-15, Amp. Bible).

One there is above all others,
Well deserves the name of Friend;

His is love beyond a brother's,
Costly, free, and knows no end;
They who once His kindness prove,
Find it everlasting love.

Which of all our friends to save us
Could or would have shed his blood?
But our Jesus died to save us
Reconciled in Him to God:
This was boundless love indeed;
Jesus is a friend in need.

telling the dispersal of the disciples like frightened sheep when He was taken (vv. 31-33). How soon and how quietly he was to fail! It is significant that, returning to the disciples after His first prayer in Gethsemane, Christ's first question was to sleeping Peter (v. 40).

Christ's self-sacrifice was revealed as He humbly submitted to His Father's will—to Calvary. Even the contemplation of His ordeal in partaking of the cup produced sweat as of blood. Surely this cup from which He recoiled was the cup of sin. His love was so great that He even took our sins upon Himself in order to save us (vv. 39-46).

Sunday, March 26th Matthew 26 : 47-56

"But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled?" (v. 54).

The final phase of God's great plan of redemption now commenced. The opening verses of Isaiah's vivid introduction to the suffering Christ were fulfilled. No great beauty distinguished Jesus to the natural eye; it required a hypocritical greeting and a traitor's kiss to mark Him out from the crowd (vv. 48, 49; Isaiah 53:2).

His sense of destiny, His knowledge of the Scriptures and His determination to fulfil the Divine plan to accomplish salvation carried Him forward. Force was available for rescue if He desired it. He did not need Peter's help in this direction (vv. 51-53). He was committed to Calvary because this was the only way by which man's great need could be met. He would not revert to the force of arms to avoid that to which He was compelled by the force of love.

GOD SHOWED ME HIS CHURCH

by ex-Mormon R. C. SHARP

AS I write, I am preparing a series of counselling classes prior to the Elim Medway Towns Crusade. It is wonderful to be actively engaged in the Lord's work, in this case as counselling director, for only just over three and a half years ago I was pounding the streets on behalf of the Mormon Church.

From my earliest childhood I had been a regular churchgoer and had sat through services which had a form of godliness, but which denied the power thereof. At school I was crammed pretty full with liberalism and generally taught that the age of miracles was over. Despite all this, I loved the Lord; but I did not know Him! Only once to my knowledge had I heard an invitation given for folk to ask Christ into their lives—at a Billy Graham crusade meeting and, being with friends, I was not strong enough to step out. After all, I had gone to church longer than many of them. What would they think if I went forward?

In the months that followed my work got progressively worse. I worried over my job and became hooked on one habit after another. I realised what a mess I was in and felt that God ought to be somewhere in the picture. At that time the Mormons were active in our area and I felt that there might be something in this Church, which was so enthusiastically sending young missionaries around the world.

One Saturday, I casually popped into their Hyde Park Chapel to get one or two pamphlets. In the process, my name was taken and I found myself going through a series of lectures. I became a member and later a priest and acting Sunday school superintendent. I was also a district missionary. I studied Mormonism and crammed my head with proof Scriptures and recommended reading, but, despite all its answers to questions, this was not a praying Church, nor did it witness the miracle power of God.

I had to try to find the answers. I purchased the book Mormon Doctrine, by one of the top Mormons, Bruce McConkie. As I read through various sections I came across things which, despite my poor knowledge of the Word, raised one question after another in my mind.

That week I came by VOICE magazine, published by the F.G.B.M.F.I. Each issue contains testimonies by men of all the main denominations testifying to the power of God. They talked of Jesus coming into their lives, miraculous healings and an experience that really set them on fire like those early disciples—the baptism in the Spirit. I was absolutely overwhelmed, for I had always felt so sorry for people who attended their dry old churches. Yet here were folk from those denominations, yet oblivious to them, their eyes set only on Jesus, telling of all that He meant to them!

This was real and I wanted it! Without any "Good-byes" I made straight for an evangelical Anglican church on the following Sunday. I was delighted. In the week I asked Christ to save me, after a hard time from the enemy. Shortly after coming to Christ the curate laid hands on me and the Lord baptised me in the Holy Spirit and I spoke in tongues. In those weeks the Lord performed the most wonderful miracles. He completely lifted all the worries from me.

I was really excited and I began to share with others. About six weeks after my conversion I began going from door to door in my leisure time. The Lord has wonderfully blessed this work and has enabled me to serve in two recent crusades.

I can only say from the bottom of my heart that you need Jesus as your Saviour and Baptist, but to receive from Him you must give to Him and to those around you. You will experience the real thrill of walking with Christ only as you trust Him for guidance and reach out to others.

Matthew 25: 1-13

"While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept" (v. 5).

For the second time in this discourse concerning the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus there is mention of a delay. The Greek word translated in this verse "tarried" and in Matthew 24:48 "delayeth" carries the thought of postponement or deferment. The putting back of the time of the return is deliberate and not as a result of slackness.

Jesus has not forgotten His promise to return. The apparent delay will be for "a little while" (Hebrews 10:37). He has deferred His return out of love for sinful men in order that they will have an opportunity to repent (2 Peter 3:9). For the Christian it is a period of testing. We must not backslide like the wicked servant in Matthew 24 or become tired like the virgins in Matthew 25. We must maintain alertness as we await His return.

Tuesday, March 21st

Matthew 25: 14-30

"After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them" (v. 19).

Responsibility. Collectively the servants were involved in the maintenance of all their master's goods during his absence. Each was responsible only for what was entrusted to him. By discharging their individual responsibilities the servants contributed to the overall success of the servant body.

Reckoning. Judgment was on a personal basis. Each man was required to answer according to his own activities. The master looked for faithfulness, not success, but he who was faithful was successful.

Reward. All the faithful received the same reward: they participated in the joy of their master, which was in the success of the corporate activity of the servants.

May we ever tackle our own responsibilities faithfully and thus contribute to the success of His Church. In so doing we will share in Christ's joy when He presents the Church to His Father.

Wednesday, March 22nd

Matthew 25: 31-46

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me" (v. 40).

Here is the ultimate in the Divine-human encounter. The excursion of God to earth in the person of Jesus Christ identified God with man. In the birth of Jesus God took human flesh (John 1:14), in the life of Jesus God was exposed to human temptation (Hebrews 4:15) and in the death of Jesus God was identified with man at his lowest ebb—as a sinner (2 Corinthians 5:21).

At Calvary the complete relationship of God and man was established and from thence, through salvation, man became identified with Jesus Christ. In Him man is accepted by God (Ephesians 1:6), He lives through us and finally man will be identified with Him in glory.

So perfect is the bond between God and His people that when they suffer He does (Acts 9:4). The nations will be judged as to their attitude to God by their treatment of His people.

Thursday, March 23rd

Matthew 26: 1-16

"She hath done a beautiful thing to me" (v. 10, R.S.V.).

Sandwiched between the prophecy of Christ's betrayal (vv. 1-5) and the account of the planning of this treacherous deed (vv. 14-16) is the record of the act that is to be recited wherever the gospel story is told (v. 13).

Mary of Bethany, in the midst of the celebration for the resurrected Lazarus, realised the need of Jesus in this moment so near to His death (John 12:9,1). Seeing that this was an opportunity to express her faith in and her love for the Lord, she anointed Him with a box of precious ointment, the expression of her feelings for Him. She ministered to the Lord at the moment of His need (Mark 14:8).

Many classified her extravagance as waste; Jesus accepted it as worship. The fragrance of her worship has permeated the centuries. Her contemplation of His coming death moved her to such abandonment as our consideration of His cross causes us to say "Love so amazing, so Divine, demands my soul, my life, my all."

Friday, March 24th

Matthew 26: 17-29

"For this is My blood of the new testament" (v. 28).

This incident stands astride two dispensations. Jesus and His disciples commemorated the Passover Feast, the old feast of remembrance, and during it Jesus instituted the Lord's Supper, the new feast of remembrance.

The old feast recalled to the Jews every year their nation's wonderful deliverance from the bondage of Egypt on the first Passover night. The new feast was established so that the disciples would ever recall their more wonderful, personal deliverance from the bondage of sin at Mount Calvary, where Jesus was about to go. The bread was broken, as His body was, and the wine out-poured, as His blood was. These were, and are, blessed symbols of the love of God. We should ever cherish their message of remembrance until He come (1 Corinthians 11:26).

Saturday, March 25th

Matthew 26: 30-46

"Nevertheless not as I will, but as Thou wilt" (v. 39).

Two attitudes protrude in vivid contrast in this passage. Peter's self-confidence was shown by his shocked response to the announcement of Jesus fore-

HELPS

IT is ten months since this splendid scheme was launched at our 1971 conference. There was a most encouraging response from our faithful members and, as a consequence of our first appeal, over £1,200 was contributed towards the establishment of the new Elim Pentecostal Church in SUNDERLAND.

I spoke to the minister, Pastor D. G. Holmes, the other day and he is extremely happy in his new responsibilities and is working very hard to build up the assembly. He spoke of the local gratitude that their church was the first beneficiary from this scheme and of the number of Sunderland people who have themselves become "HELPS" in order to contribute similar benefit to other new causes.

The second appeal has now been launched and this is for assistance in the purchase of a former Methodist church in PETERBOROUGH (see front cover). This building is proving to be most suitable for housing the converts and adherents who rallied to the founding of the Elim Pentecostal Church following our campaign in the late summer. The minister, Pastor K. J. Cave, is labouring very conscientiously and has recently opened a Sunday school.

We are looking for a ready response to this fresh appeal and believe that our loyal supporters will contribute willingly to the project and help to reduce the heavy overheads involved in this further pioneer venture.

We are convinced that there are many other friends in our ranks who will be willing to join this scheme for the establishing of new full gospel witnesses across the country.

Remember the scheme undertakes that no more than two, perhaps not even two, calls will be made in any year and that the unit called for is only £1.

If you are prepared to lend a hand in this way please fill in this slip, cut it out and return it to:

The Field Superintendent, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire.

I wish to join your "HELPS" scheme.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

THE ONE WHO TURNED AWAY

by Hugh Sawyer

IN Judaea there dwelt a very rich man of noble lineage. With his luxurious living and with many servants at his command he was able to indulge in any desire of the moment. His perfumed body was clothed in the finest soft linen obtainable. He lived life to the full. Nevertheless, he religiously tried to carry out the tenets of the Mosaic Law as taught him from his childhood. He enjoyed all that this world had to offer, but he had a problem which robbed him of his peace of mind. Money can purchase many things, but it cannot buy happiness, nor can it satisfy spiritual needs. This was this man's trouble.

Nearby, Jesus, filled with the dynamic power of the Holy Spirit and accompanied by His twelve disciples, was preaching to the crowd milling about Him, healing and blessing.

To the majority He was a wandering preacher, to the more enlightened a prophet with healing in His magnetic hands, the wondrous power to bring about miracles. They were entirely ignorant as to His true identity. Imagine their amazement were they to realise that, though He had no resting place or visible means of support, he was no mere itinerant, but the only begotten Son of God Almighty, with whom aeons ago He created the universe! As the Creator is greater than the created, Jesus was, did they but know, not only a king, but the King of kings and Lord of lords, having at His command, should He call upon them, legions of angels with supernatural striking power to blast mankind from the face of the earth.

For the love of humanity Christ Jesus forsook all the riches and indescribable glories of His heavenly kingdom, embracing poverty for our sakes to be born into this world, the Divine Babe of a virgin of lowly circumstances. Dwelling among men, He called them to repentance and finally gave His life as a sacrifice to redeem them from their sin, the God-Man, unique, spotless and without sin!

When news was brought to the young ruler that Jesus was in the vicinity hope surged within his breast. He must have heard of the good works of our Lord and was instantly aware that He held the solution to his problem.

So eager was he to meet this Man of God that he gathered his flowing robes about him and ran—a most undignified procedure for one of his high estate. It was customary for those in his station in life to suppress their feelings and to emerge into the outside world with a slow, dignified, arrogant gait.

Temporarily forgotten was his pride as in deep humility he knelt at the feet of Jesus. "Good Master," he cried, "what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" Life was so sweet to him that he abhorred death and its finality.

Calmly Jesus looked down upon him with compassion and loved him. "Why callest thou Me good?" replied Jesus, determined at all times to give honour and glory to His heavenly Father. "There is none good but One, that is God. Thou knowest the commandments," continued our Lord, quoting some. "All these have I observed from my youth," cried the other. "One thing thou lackest," said Jesus. "Go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come; take up the cross, and follow Me."

The young man winced and, in deep dejection, turned away. The sacrifice was too great; he was very rich. Jesus gazed sadly at the retreating figure and said, "It is indeed hard for the rich to enter the kingdom of God!"

So these two men having met, parted . . . for ever—He who became poor for our sakes and he who remained rich for his own sake, He who gave His all upon the cross for man's sake and he who, giving nothing, refused his cross for the sake of social security, He who came to stay and he who turned away!

One went to His reward in glory, the other to a lost eternity in remorse. He whose name is Jesus resounds throughout Christianity in praise and adoration. The name of the other is unknown, unhonoured and unsung.

EVESHAM

Pastor : J. R. Brown

The monthly rally, held in the Masonic Hall, Swan Lane, took the form of a missionary rally conducted by the Missionary Secretary, Pastor L. Wigglesworth. The Saturday evening meeting was a time of blessing when we saw slides and a pageant of young people dressed in the colourful costumes of the various countries where Elim missionaries minister. The meeting was well attended, the room being filled.

On Sunday morning Mrs. Wigglesworth ministered the Word at the Breaking of Bread service. The evangelistic service on Sunday evening was another great meeting, with Pastor Wigglesworth ministering the Word and Pastor Brown convening.

At the after-church rally, a number of Free Church friends from around Evesham gathered with us to see a film of the work done in the mission fields of Africa.

We praise God for the dedicated lives of those whose work is among the people of Africa and we pray that God will not only sustain and keep them but enlarge our visions too.

Evesham church, as yet young and tender, is, under the ministry of Pastor and Mrs. Brown, beginning to blossom. God meets with His people at the Breaking of Bread services, prayer meetings and Bible studies. We look for greater things in the future. Pray for us—an oasis in a spiritual wilderness.

Recently a special baptismal service was conducted to facilitate five members of a local evangelical church in Thornton Heath. This was the second service of its kind within a short time and we were very pleased to be able to help our friends in this way.

The service was conducted by the minister of the church, Rev. Jones. Our pastor preached the sermon and then baptised the five candidates, all young people, including a husband and wife. There was a great sense of the presence of the Lord.

Pastor Christopher G. Smith conducted a series of meetings which were of a very great blessing to our people and, by vision and ministry, some very precious truths were presented.

THE FUNERAL SERVICE OF PASTOR HARRY TOFT

Report by Gerald L. W. Ladlow

THE Elim Pentecostal Church at Westcliff-on-Sea was full to overflowing. The platform was filled with Elim ministers, while many others mingled with the large congregation. We had all gathered to pay our tribute to the memory of a dear servant of God, a beloved colleague and a faithful pastor who, at the age of sixty-one, had been suddenly called home. While our hearts were sad and our deep sympathy went out to Mrs. Toft and to their only son, Philip, the service was one of real victory and triumph through our Lord Jesus Christ.

The hymns chosen were all the favourites of our dear departed brother. Pastor O. G. Miles, of Leeds, conducted the service, which commenced with the hymn "It may be at morn, when the day is awaking . . . that Jesus will come for His own." I recalled how dear to Harry Toft was the subject of the second coming of Christ, how eagerly he looked forward to the return of His Lord. Even in hospital shortly before his death he spoke to the other men in the ward of the coming of Christ, urging them to make ready for that day.

The Field Superintendent, Pastor R. B. Chapman, gave a short address from Hebrews 13 : 20 and spoke of the faithful service rendered by our brother to the Elim Pentecostal Church, first at Ballysillan, Belfast, where he was the pastor for twelve years, then at Westcliff, where he ministered for the past three years, and as an inspiring convention speaker and an able writer in the ELIM EVANGEL. As he spoke I recalled the day when I welcomed Pastor Toft to the ranks of the Elim ministers in Ireland, after he had served for nineteen years in the ministry of the Calvary Holiness Church. I remembered too the very precious fellowship which I have enjoyed with him since that day. I shall always thank God for the privilege of having known him. Mr. Chapman told how, on the last occasion his loved ones visited him in hospital, he urged his son, Philip, who is in Bible college, to be faithful in intercession, preaching the Word and personal witness. These were the things that characterised our brother's own life.

Mr. Roberson, of Leeds, ministered in song and Pastor J. E. Moore, of Leeds, gave a personal tribute, telling of his association with Brother Toft from the time of their youth when they were Crusaders together in the Leeds church. He told of his passion for souls and his fervency in prayer when in those days he led the early morning prayer meetings in the local church and took an active part in open-air witness. That zeal was with him to the end.

As the church rang with the hearty singing of the hymn "I shall see the King" we knew that all shared the conviction of Mr. Moore that our colleague had received the commendation of the Lord, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

At the graveside Pastor H. Burton-Haynes gave a short address and Pastor D. W. Anthony led in prayer.

BOOK REVIEW

Today, No. 7. Published by Scripture Union.

Price 10p, postage and packing 3p extra.

Today is a new-style, fresh-thinking, down-to-earth approach to Bible reading. It is a help to those who are interested in finding out what the Bible means in terms of everyday Christian experience. It is an undated series of eight quarterly booklets covering a two-year period. The series can be used by individuals, but it is ideal for Senior Crusaders, discussion starters for house groups, youth clubs, Bible class and Christian Unions.

The latest issue not only includes study and discussion material on subjects such as abortion, divorce, war, death and Christian radio, but also asks questions on doctrinal subjects, such as the resurrection, sin and eternal life.

I highly recommend the series as a wideawake approach to Bible reading.

DAVID B. TINNIION.

Report by C. J. Howe

United Welsh Pentecostal Youth Rally

PENTECOSTAL young people from all over Wales converged upon Cardiff for what proved to be a memorable occasion, the first joint Assemblies of God and Elim youth rally in the Principality. Power cut threats in no way dampened the fervour of Spirit-filled youth, as early on Saturday coaches began to arrive. The City Temple, Cardiff, acted as hosts, kindly providing an adequate venue for those tremendous meetings.

The afternoon rally, with some 700 present, was convened by Pastor C. J. Howe, of Risca Assemblies of God. The songs of Zion sounded from lips anointed with the spirit of praise. Pastors Ivanson (Glynneath) and Prosser, of Pencoed Assemblies of God, led us to the Throne of Grace. Ministry in song was rendered by Mrs. L. Davies (Swansea Elim) and Duncan Franklyn (Caerphilly Assemblies of God). The Word of God was read by Jeff Statham (Morrison Assemblies of God). An inspiring testimony was given by Rosamund Hoare, of Abergavenny, who is soon going to Afghanistan to serve the Lord. Pastor L. P. Cowdery, Elim Pentecostal Church, Plymouth, brought a truly Pentecostal message, laying emphasis upon being filled with the Spirit, thus assuring the life of continual power that need not be cut off.

During the interval an open-air witness was conducted and invitation cards were distributed.

Following a chorus session Pastor R. Hunston (City Temple) convened the meeting that was to know the sweet anointing of the Holy Spirit upon it throughout. Pastor J. G. Cooper (Elim, Caerphilly) prayed with great fervour. Ray Bevan (Glynneath Assemblies of God) testified of his deliverance from the drug and pop scene and also sang, accompanying himself upon the guitar. The Scriptures were read by Pastor P. S. Brewster, who referred to the thrilling, world-wide news of God's moving. Pastor A. W. Leavesley (Elim, Llanelli) testified and a group from the City Temple blessed us with their singing. Over 1,000 people eagerly awaited the final word in these wonderful meetings. Pastor John Phillips (Kenley Bible College) spoke from Matthew 12:6. The Lord Jesus Christ was exalted and magnified and the glory of His Person revealed in such a manner that all were led upward into heights of worship and revelation. During a time of praise and worship many stood to their feet in humble consecration. As tears were shed and hearts and hands were lifted heavenward the grace of God reached down and raised up. To Him be all the glory! Members and ministers of both fellowships who love the same Lord and serve the same Master rejoiced together upon redemption ground. Pastor Eric Dando prayed in closing that the blessing of God might fall upon our respective fellowships and united efforts that, upon the common ground of Calvary, there would be a mighty move forward in faith.

May this prove to be the first of many occasions that will bring us together until that day when we "gather together unto Him."

Pastor W. E. Dawkins tells how he began the Stevenage Elim Pentecostal Church

I HAVE been asked to give some account of the circumstances which led to the formation of the Stevenage Elim Pentecostal Church, to encourage others in a similar venture.

In the words of the hymn "The hand of God in all my life I see" and, way back in the past, I see the threads in the pattern that finally led this way. It is difficult to know where to start, so I will give some account of my spiritual pilgrimage. I hope sincerely that no one tries to tread the same pathway as I; nevertheless, an account of the Lord's lovingkindness in this matter may encourage others to venture.

I was brought up in the Church of England and was converted when a friend took me to a Salvation Army meeting. Some years later I married a Salvation Army lassie, and I volunteered for full-time service, but the Lord kept me from that, for which later, when I began to understand the Scriptures, I was glad, because I saw that there were many unscriptural practices and doctrines which would have forced me to resign.

We moved from London to Harrow and there I joined the Church of England, but I was out of the will of the Lord and was dissatisfied. One Whit-Sunday, about 1941, I was kneeling in the church; the sunlight was filling the lovely building and flowers were everywhere; a great hunger possessed me for the thrill and the joy which I had once experienced. Suddenly the Lord answered my unspoken prayer and filled me to overflowing. "Heaven came down and glory filled my soul."

So far I knew nothing of doctrine, or of the Word of God, but now it became my meat and drink, and the things which the Lord taught me I had to preach. I had Jeremiah's experience—the Word became "fire in my bones," and I could not contain it. From the start I was called to be the Lord's freeman, and every bit of doctrine I had to hammer out, first upon my knees from the Word, and secondly in my life and experience.

I preached as the Lord opened doors, in every denomination, in doss-houses, in hospitals; I was given charge of the Sunday school and a Bible class and I gradually gathered a band of hungry souls around me. I discovered the thrill of living by faith, and was even sneered at by the religious folk because I gloried in answered prayer.

Then I saw the truth of immersion and was baptised by the Brethren. This was the beginning of the end of my Church of England career, and soon I was given an ultimatum: "Conform or go!" I left with about a dozen others, who were subsequently baptised, some by the Brethren and some by the Baptists. Because I saw for myself the truth of the open form of worship in 1 Corinthians 12:14 I joined the Brethren. I was not yet ready for the exercise of miraculous gifts. That was to come later. I learned in the morning worship meetings to discern the leading of the Spirit and eventually became an elder, which office I held for about eighteen years.

About 1960 the Lord stirred me up and I resigned my office. Immediately a long-suppressed desire to pastor a church came surging back with such power that I asked the Lord either to fulfil it or to remove it, but it was of the Lord and that was how I came to Stevenage.

For the first five years in Stevenage I was co-pastor with a friend in an evangelical church. It was a valuable time of training.

I then began to see that miracles were intended to be a permanent heritage in the church and what I saw in the Scriptures I preached. This caused a cleavage and soon I resigned and left the church to my friend.

A number of people left with me because they believed the things I was preaching. They asked me to start a house meeting, which I did at the other end of the town from my former church.

Just at that time, so wonderful is the Lord's timing, an old friend, Rev. Leonard T. Pearson, stayed with us for a few days. When he learned that I had resigned from the evangelical church he told us of his Pentecostal experiences. The week after his visit to us he was preaching at Pastor G. Hillman's church at Letchworth, and invited us over. Thus we met Pastor Hillman. That very afternoon Mrs. Dawkins and myself had toured the Pin Green area of Stevenage to see if there was a building which we could rent for our little group. Pastor Hillman confided to us that he had long been burdened for a church in the Pin Green area, since he had a number of members who came from this area. His diaconate immediately professed themselves willing for this group to combine with our group to form the nucleus of a new church. Actually it did not turn out this way, for Pastor Hillman's members chose to continue with him.

When, some time later, after prayer together, Pastor Hillman and myself went to the Stevenage Corporation to inquire about available buildings, we found that only the previous week the mayor had opened the Fairlands Community Centre. We were the first to hire it, much to the annoyance of the Stevenage Council of Churches, who had intended using it for an ecumenical experiment!

I was inducted as pastor by members of headquarters staff on Saturday, January 23rd, 1966. We commenced regular services on the Sunday. I remember our first convert, a Roman Catholic from the large church across the way. She came to a dusty community centre where five of us were holding a simple breaking of bread service. Afterwards I asked her, "Was it strange to you?" She replied, "Strange? It was wonderful!" Her husband met her outside afterwards and said, "My dear, I've never seen you looking so radiant." So the Lord has been with us.

I must mention one other incident which took place at the conference at Bracklesham Bay. We had been having a bad time in the church with various difficulties. At the Communion service we were praising the Lord with hands raised. I said to the Lord, "Why don't I have the ecstatic experience that others have?" The next instant I was away in a vision. Everything vanished and I was looking at what seemed to be a television screen. In it was a white road and on the road a throng of white-robed people marching up a hill towards an enormous castle gate. They were determinedly and in unison marching straight towards the gate and, when they reached it, the gate collapsed under the pressure and they marched straight in. I could not help wondering what had happened to the front rank.

The next second I was back in the Communion service and a brother was praying. He was saying, "THE GATES OF HELL SHALL NOT PREVAIL AGAINST IT!"

I told this vision to the church on my return, and it has proved a precious promise from the Lord which has strengthened our hands. The fact that I was included among the young men (Acts

2:17) added to my delight! I am nearly sixty-five. Isn't the Lord wonderful?

The Sunday evening attendances have been between thirty and forty-five during the past year.

It was with considerable reluctance that Pastor Dawkins acceded to our request that he tell the above story. However, we trust that its appearance will encourage others to do likewise.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. Coleman

PALM Sunday was a day of rejoicing for many, but for the Son of God it was tears. He wept over the city of Jerusalem, not because that city would soon commit Him to the most awful death of crucifixion, but because He knew that the city was doomed. He saw the coming of the Romans, a trench cast around her, the slain buried in the city area. All this came to pass forty years later.

There are cities to be wept over—your city and mine. There are the sinful, the lonely, the sick, diseased and bereaved. In all times of rejoicing there are some who weep.

Did Jesus give up in despair? No—He entered the city, cleansed the temple of those who made it a den of thieves and made the temple what it was intended to be—a place to hear the Word of God.

Do you weep over your city? If so, it could mean that God is beginning to answer your prayers. I have not forgotten hearing the story of a woman Salvation Army officer who was sent to a camp in a reputedly hard area. She tried everything to get people saved and into the Army. She was ready to give up and wrote to her commanding officer. She received a precious, kindly reply, but she was told that she had not tried everything. There was one thing she had not done: "Tears—try tears!" It succeeded!

"Blood, sweat, tears" was a phrase coined during the last war. I suspect that the word "tears" was used for those who suffered and who lost loved ones.

The Bible says that those who sow in tears will doubtless come again with rejoicing and in this respect we shed tears for a dying world and not only for those who suffer and lose loved ones.

Palm Sunday is a time for rejoicing, yet it is a time for shedding tears.

THERE were crowds everywhere. You just could not move for people. Pushing, swarming, standing on each other's toes, they jostled and swayed all over the pavement and the road. There were thousands of them. Among them was a group of children. They were wellnigh borne along in the crowd like flotsam and jetsam on the tide. They could hardly have done anything other than go in the general direction which the throng was taking. Soon the little group entered into the spirit of the thing. It became like a carnival, the atmosphere light and jolly. After a while one of the kiddies spoke up. "Who are we going to see?" was the question.

They never did see, for by the time they got to the place where it was all happening—it had finished. The band was packing up its brass instruments, police were already shepherding the crowd away from the dais, ushers were directing a few V.I.P.s into a marquee and soon little was left but the litter and a disconsolate band of boys and girls.

Tomorrow we celebrate Palm Sunday, a rather neglected feast these days. The foregoing musings from your Editor's early days were prompted by the words of Matthew 21:10: "All the city was moved, saying, Who is this?" We never found out who it was whom we might have seen and there were many in Jerusalem who did not appreciate the mystic yet realistic link between the statement, "This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee" (v. 10) and the prophecy "Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt, the foal of an ass." The very use of the place-name "Nazareth" was redolent of the scorn, the curled lips, the rejection. As soon speak of a British sovereign from Scunthorpe, Wigan, Wincolmlee, Pantywaun, Ballybay, the Gorbals, or wherever!

There is none so blind as he who will not see. Our conceptions of God are unlike the reality. Mind-pictures befog our faith. The wonder of it is that He came meekly. The extraordinary ordinariness of it displayed the glory and the condescension of the Incarnation, of "the exceeding riches of His grace."

None is too low for Him to reach. Christ is not, is never, a disappointment. He never promises only to make despite; what He says He means—He is.

"Who is this?"—my Saviour!—and yours?

The prayer for revival

"O Lord, revive Thy work" (Habakkuk 3 : 2)

by H. Burton-Haynes

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, CLACTON-ON-SEA

THE prophet Habakkuk—the Hebrew word means "a wrestler"—wrestled with God about the sad spiritual condition of his people and the impending invasion of his beloved land by the Chaldean armies. The prophet concluded his book with a sublime song in which prayer mingled with praise. In this inspired psalm his prayer in the second verse might be paraphrased as follows: "O Jehovah, I have heard Thy fame and I bowed in reverent worship. O Jehovah, repeat Thy doings of old in the midst of these years of affliction, in the midst of these years of sorrows, demonstrate Thy power; in wrath remember mercy."

This prayer has been taken up by many of the Lord's people in these days of spiritual decadence and national moral pollution. Multitudes in this country and in other lands are wrestling with God for a mighty deluge of Divine power upon the Church of God throughout the world. The burden of our hearts is "O Lord, revive Thy work!"

If revival is according to the will of God—and there can be no doubt about this—what are the conditions governing a visitation from on high?

The first condition is confession of sin. The prophet Isaiah declared: "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid His face from you, that He will not hear" (Isaiah 59 : 1, 2). From this inspired utterance we see that sin is the great hindrance to revival. It must be put away. Sin among the people of God cannot be tolerated by a holy, righteous God any more than sin among the ungodly. Revival in the Church of Christ will break out when there is real heart-searching before God and a clean forsaking of all sin.

"Do you know of any great hindrance to revival?" Edwin Orr asked a friend. "Yes, I know of one very definite hindrance," he replied. "And that is?" "Myself."

In this relentless dealing with sin we must commence with ourselves. Is our spiritual condition a help or a hindrance? Are we clean channels through which the Holy Ghost can pour revival blessing or are we quenching the inflow and the outflow of the Spirit of God?

The second condition for revival is definite, unremitting intercession before God. "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children" (Isaiah 66 : 8). Oswald Smith, in his passionate plea for revival, wrote: "Soul travail is a fundamental element in the work of God. Can there be birth without travail? Yet how many expect in the spiritual realm that which is not possible in the natural!" Prevailing prayer, wrestling with the unseen powers of darkness which would paralyse the Christian Church and reduce her to spiritual impotence and which exercise such a hold upon the souls of men, is not easy work. Finney tells us that he had no words to utter; he could only groan and weep when pleading with God for a lost soul. That was true travail. Every spiritual awakening has been born of soul travail.

The third condition is faith in the promises of God. As we wait upon the Lord He will bring certain promises to our minds and faith will lay hold of His Word. If we remain faithful in prayer we will be rewarded by seeing those promises translated into glorious results before our eyes.

The coming of the Lord draweth nigh! In view of His return let us give ourselves more earnestly to prayer that the Church of God may be prepared for His appearing. In praying for revival God will revive us; in saving others we will save ourselves.

IT is particularly noticeable that, during His earthly ministry, the Lord Jesus on many occasion demanded silence from His disciples with regard to many of His miracles and statements. He never tried to gain great attention for Himself, in fact quite the reverse. When the disciples urged : "Show Thyself to the world" He refused, saying, "My time is not yet come." On another occasion He said, "Tell no man" with regard to the fact that he was the Christ. When He came down from the Mount of Transfiguration He instructed the disciples not to reveal what they had witnessed until after He had risen from the dead. When He raised the daughter of Jairus, He charged them that "no man should know it."

When we come to Palm Sunday, however, the whole picture is changed. The crowds did not stage this event. It was not conjured up by the disciples. In this case Christ Himself took the initiative—and so successfully that the Pharisees were made to say, "Behold, the world has gone after Him." The Lord told the disciples about the animal, where to find it, what to say. He planned it all. The change in His attitude is startling and makes this a unique occasion, so much so that each Evangelist records the incident.

Why did the Lord Jesus change His whole attitude for this almost flamboyant occasion? The answer is quite simple : so that the Scripture could be fulfilled. This was the ever-guiding principle of the Lord Jesus. Over and over again in His life He referred to it. When He took the whip and cleansed the Temple it was fulfilling the Scripture. When He cried "I thirst" it was fulfilling the Scripture and this could be shown to be utterly true throughout His life.

As we think of this day, with all its exhilaration and deep emotion, what part does the Word of God have in our individual lives? How much do we really live by this blessed Book? Remember—we must not only be hearers of the Word, but doers of it.

So many parts of this story call for our attention. When telling His disciples to go and find the colt, Jesus said that if anybody asked "Why are you taking it?" they were simply to reply that the Lord had need of it. Imagine—the Lord in need!

In a sense, this can never be so. He is the Creator of the rolling spheres, the One who can supply our every need. This story, indeed, reveals in an unmistakable way His omniscience. We also believe Him to be omnipotent. Yet the Scripture says that He had a need. There is no contradiction here; it is exactly the same today. He is still all-powerful, there is nothing He cannot do, He is sovereign, but He still has a need. He has chosen to need us! He wants to use the foolish things, the weak things of this world. He needs you in His work. He wants your talents, your life, your strength, your all. It is amazing to think that God needs me!

Meditation for

In Luke's Gospel we are also told that Jesus rode upon an ass on which no man had ever sat. Under the Mosaic economy only those beasts which had never been worked were to be used for sacrificial purposes. Arthur Pink points out that "like His birth of a virgin, like His burial in a new sepulchre, 'wherein was never man yet laid,' so here, on the only occasion when He assumed anything like majesty, He selected a colt which had never previously been ridden." Upon this colt Jesus entered Jerusalem and presented Himself to Israel as their King. No longer were there to be any doubts—Jesus was King, yet, even in this presentation, we can see the deep humility of Christ. He, the King of kings, rode on an ass. Think of all the past kings; you will recall that they rode on the finest horses. Solomon had 40,000 stalls of horses for his chariots. Jesus rode on an ass; He laid aside His reputation and took the form of a servant. Zechariah's prophecy concerning this event has in it the word "lowly" which was omitted by John, but that was exactly it. As we see Him on an ass, let us with the crowd of that day cry and shout, for great is the Holy One in our midst today.

When we look at that crowd it becomes a little perplexing. They seemed to abandon themselves to praise the Lord and they seemed sincere in the acceptance of the King, but we know full well that, very soon, in fact in a matter of days, the same people were more than probably among the crowd who cried out "Crucify Him!" Why did they change?

We can do exactly the same, however. After all, there have been occasions when we have cried out with all our hearts that we really do love

Christ, yet our actions and words have denied this very fact.

The Pharisees were very unhappy about the whole thing. Whenever you find people who want to praise the Lord, there is always someone who wants to stop it. They complained to the Lord, but the Saviour replied in those blessed words that if they did not praise Him the very stones would cry out. I believe that this could have happened and still could literally happen, but the real significance is that Jesus was saying that if they did not praise Him He would turn to someone else who would. Why are we so silent in the presence of this wondrous King? Should we not extol His glorious name? The Lord delights in the praises of His people. Bring that sacrifice of praise to the Lord. Some say that they feel it in their hearts and this is wonderful, but the sacrifice of praise is the fruit of our lips. You will find the Pharisees about somewhere. They will tell you that you are too emotional, that it is not quite the thing to do, but Jesus did not stop the praise of Palm Sunday. He received it and He still welcomes true worship.

I appeal for more praise in our services, for more time for the people of God to worship the Lord and to give Him glory, for more willingness on the part of congregations to be moved upon by the Holy Spirit to worship the Lord of glory.

He is worthy to be praised!

TRUTH IS BEST

By Sheila Price

JANE had accidentally knocked a bottle of milk off the kitchen shelf and all the milk had spilled over the floor. Jane was afraid to tell her mother that she had done it, so she put the blame on the cat. "Tibs did it, Mummy," Jane said. Mrs. Brown knew that Tibs was not to blame, however, because the cat was sitting on the doorstep. Jane's mother was very cross, not because Jane had spilled the milk but because Jane had told a lie.

We have all told a lie at some time or another, haven't we? Perhaps, like Jane, we told a lie because we were afraid, or perhaps to get something we wanted.

This is what Tommy did. He wanted a new cricket bat, so he hid his old bat in some bushes at the bottom of the garden and told his father that he had lost it. His father promised to buy Tommy a new bat on the next Saturday, but when he was digging the garden he found Tommy's old bat. He was very angry because Tommy had told a lie.

Think of Jesus when He stood before Caiaphas, the High Priest. Caiaphas asked Jesus, "Are You the Son of God?" I wonder what was going through Jesus' mind then. Jesus knew that if He told a lie and said "No, I am not the Son of God!" then Caiaphas would let Him go free and He would not have to die on the cross. Jesus also knew that if He answered "No," then He would be telling a lie. Truth was very important to Jesus. He knew that only by telling the truth and going to Calvary could He save His people from their sins.

Jesus told the truth, although it meant pain and death for Him. He loves us all so much that He was prepared to tell the truth and die so that we might all know His wonderful love.

The truth is still very important to Jesus. We will please Jesus and make Him very happy if we remember to tell the truth always.

The Mite that means much from a letter to the Secretary-General

DEAR MR. BRADLEY,

I was interested in the letters in the EVANGEL, which suggested that we might be more exercised in getting involved in helping towards people's social needs. For some time I have felt burdened in this way and I especially feel this at times and in places of disaster, as, for instance, among the refugees of Pakistan, Bangladesh, etc., that the name of Elim should be represented in a special love gift.

I do not advocate that we should consider our neighbour's bodily needs above his spiritual, but do something about his bodily needs we certainly should. Both Old and New Testaments teach us this.

My own leading before decimalisation was to put away 3d. out of each £1 I handled (house-keeping money—my husband and family having previously tithed, of course). Nowadays I put away each week 1½ new pence out of each £1 I handle, just in gratitude to God for the food I can buy and the bodily comforts we have. It is surprising how these coppers mount up. Last year I was able to send two gifts via different channels, towards relieving the underprivileged.

I have pleasure in enclosing what I have saved. I realise that, compared with the need, this is a mere drop in the ocean, but I am writing in the hope that this drop will send out ripples, because others may like to do something similar, or would it be possible to have an annual offering in all the churches for this purpose with special envelopes, as we do for evangelistic purposes?

Every blessing to you all at Headquarters.

Leviticus 19 : 9, 10 ; James 2 : 15, 16.

AN OUTLINE

"RISEN INDEED" !

(Luke 24 : 34)

There were "many infallible proofs" (Acts 1 : 3).

Mary recognised Him by His WORD (John 20 : 16); the eleven by His WOUNDS (Luke 24 : 33-40); the Emmaus two by His WAY (Luke 24 : 31).

John chapter 20 records four appearances. These banished the four great enemies of the human heart—sorrow, fear, unbelief and care. Mary was weeping (v. 11), His followers were trembling (v. 19), Thomas was disbelieving (v. 25) and the disciples were despairing (21 : 3). Christ gave joy, courage, faith and contentment.

Jesus said "It is finished!" The resurrection is the Father's "Amen."

AN ILLUSTRATION

THE CROSS—IT STANDETH FAST

One morning, on his ride through Copenhagen, Denmark's King Christian X noticed a swastika flying over a public building in violation of an agreement which Hitler had made with their country. "Take it down!" the king commanded. The German officer refused. "It's up there by new orders from Berlin," he said tersely. "That flag must be removed before twelve o'clock, otherwise I will send a soldier up to do it," the monarch declared. "Any soldier who tries to do it will be shot," warned the Nazi officer. "Ah, but I WILL BE THAT SOLDIER!" replied the king. The swastika came down, for the Nazis at that point dared not shoot Denmark's king (Hebrews 2 : 14).

A QUOTATION

THE "IRISH" OF IT !

"Do I have to crown Him once and for all, or is it a thing that I have to keep on doing? I think the Irishman's definition is a help to us here. It is, I am given to understand, 'an act committed once and for all, to be repeated daily and for ever after.'"

...when it comes to Music SHARON has the answer

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ★ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ★ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ★ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ★ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ★ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ★ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it.

We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

FROM T. H. STEVENSON

WRITING in the Anglican Church Times, Desmond Fisher, giving "a Roman Catholic commentary," describes something of life in Eire, with the remark: "Once people in the Republic remove the dark glasses which have prevented a true self-examination of their situation this past half-century, some major obstacles loom into view. The Republic is at present in a serious economic crisis, with an unemployment total twice as severe as that in Britain, with a social welfare system much poorer than that operating in Northern Ireland, with a society which is still, in many ways, clerically dominated." There are indeed "many ways" (to take one aspect of life in Eire) in which the Church of Rome dominates. One prominent, important example was illustrated in a B.B.C. television programme seen several months ago. The part I saw while visiting a member of my church was occupied with education of children in Eire. The senior parish priest revealed that, intentionally or not, the whole educational system of that country stands or falls by the interest of the Roman Catholic Church, since almost exclusively the schools are staffed by Christian brothers and nuns. As these are devout Catholics with teaching as a vocation, it is natural that they indoctrinate their Catholic pupils thoroughly and that religious instruction is an important part of the curriculum. It is a poor country, the priest observed, so that the salaries paid to the teachers are ploughed back into the schools by the Church. If this were not done by the Roman Catholic Church, added the priest, the entire education system in Eire would cease within one week. Such is the scene as described by a journalist and a priest concerning their own country. I have often heard, and occasionally have read, the comments of loyalist Protestants in Northern Ireland that if Catholics in Northern Ireland think that the Republic is so wonderful and that Ulster is so awful why do they choose to continue in Northern Ireland? Such thought is over-simplifying the problem and the solution of course, but it is not without a great element of truth. Incidentally, to refer again to education, are you aware that in Northern Ireland the self-chosen segregated Catholic schools receive from the Stormont Government a larger financial grant than Westminster gives to Catholic schools in Britain? To quote Mr. Brian Faulkner, Northern Ireland's Prime Minister: "Approximately ninety-five per cent of the total cost of providing and running schools under Roman Catholic management is paid for out of public funds. These rates of grant are not exceeded anywhere in the world and indeed for very many years were considerably more generous than those in Great Britain."

So, just as many years ago,
Our Jesus comes today.
Although we cannot see His face,
As on that happy day;
But to His holy temples still,
Where little children throng,
He comes to bless us as of old,
He hears our joyous song.

Youthful Praise !

the restored cripples ! As always when something exciting is taking place, the children were there and the teenagers, too, and their enthusiasm knew no bounds ! I like the Amplified Bible translation of Matthew 21 : 15, 16 : " But when the chief priests and the scribes saw the wonderful things that He did, and the boys and the girls and the youths and the maidens crying out in the porches and courts of the Temple, Hosanna [O be propitious, graciously inclined] to the Son of David ! they were indignant. And they said to Him, Do you hear what these are saying ? And Jesus replied to them, Yes ; have you never read, Out of the mouths of children and infants You have provided perfect praise ? "

And now we come to Palm Sunday 1972. Surely there is a link between then and now, for there is a great move among children and young people to respond to the majesty and might of King Jesus. Inhibitions are forgotten and there is a growing enthusiasm for the Lord. Teenagers are proud to wear stickers announcing : " Jesus lives here," " Jesus is my Lord," " Smile—Jesus loves you." There is a noticeable increase in sacred song in the modern idiom. More than all this, there is the worldwide outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which has the effect of setting people free to worship God with unrestrained praise as they did on the first Palm Sunday.

The morning breezes softly blow
O'er Olivet so fair,
And bear the notes of joyous song
Upon the balmy air ;
From out the city gates at dawn,
With palms and blossoms sweet,
The children mingle with the throng,
Their coming King to greet.

Along the dusty road they haste,
Their palms and garments spread ;
There, too, they scatter fragrant flowers
Where His dear feet shall tread ;
While, sweet and clear upon the air,
Their glad hosannas ring—
He comes ! King David's greater Son,
Our Saviour, Lord and King.

I DO not advocate a slavish adherence to the Church calendar, but it does good to be reminded of the events leading up to the most sacred moments in the life and death of our Saviour.

My mind goes back to a scene in Ghana on Palm Sunday, 1970. In imagination I am once more standing in the beautiful grounds of the Ramseyer Memorial Centre at Abetifi, the highest point in Ghana. There is bright sunlight. It is peaceful and still, early on Sunday morning. The bougainvillaea is aglow with colour, a path at my feet is ablaze with a border of zinnias and a little African girl in Sunday-best attire comes tripping across the grass. She is bearing a large dark green palm leaf which is gaily decorated with flower-heads and tells me, when I stop to admire her work, that she is on her way to take part in the procession through the town to the Presbyterian church.

Turning to the Bible record of Palm Sunday in Matthew 21 we can read the detailed account of this deliberate act of the Lord Jesus. He chose to enter Jerusalem riding on an ass. The people acclaimed Him as Messiah, the Son of David, and scattered palm leaves and branches from the trees on the road he traversed. Entering the city, the Lord went into the Temple enclosure, drove out the traders and overturned the tables of the money-changers and the chairs of the pigeon-sellers and sternly rebuked them all. Next, He graciously received the needy, pathetic company of blind and lame who flocked to the porches and courts of the Temple and He healed everyone. Never before had there been such an amazing scene in this sacred place. Here at last was the Lord of the Temple showing forth His compassion and His power at the very heart of the nation. Oh the joy, the delight of those who were healed, the ecstasy shining in the eyes of the newly-sighted and the leaping and dancing of

Till Death us do part

By ALEXANDER TEE

VOWS in the Bible are both serious and sacred. Matrimonial vows are among the most important we ever take during the whole of our lives.

The current trend of not treating wedding vows as God meant them to be treated should not enter the Christian Church. Legal latitude is not a guide for Christian conduct. A Christian couple come to the house of God to take their solemn wedding vows before God, as well as before a minister, a registrar, the witnesses and all who are in attendance. They want God to bless their wedding. Their vows must therefore be taken in all good faith.

Young people do well to ponder the vows they will take before they walk down the aisle. Here are two verses from the Scriptures: "It is better that you should not vow than that you should vow and not pay"; "It is a snare to a man to utter a vow [of consecration] rashly and not until afterward inquire [whether he can fulfil it]." These two references come from the wise man of the Old Testament. The quotations are from the Amplified Version. Serious thought must be given to our vows before we take them. As we ponder the implications of marriage we will readily see the wisdom of some things and the folly of many others.

Unequal yoke

How can we sincerely ask God to bless us if we knowingly defy His guidance or His commandments? Paul lovingly, clearly, reveals God's will through the inspired Word of God when he writes: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." This applies to a much broader field than matrimony, but it certainly applies to a Christian who is contemplating marriage with someone who is unsaved or backslidden.

If we want to enjoy a happy home where love, care, understanding and security abide, we must do all in our power to build a correct foundation. Common interests are vital. Sharing what brings mutual happiness contributes to the success of marriage. A tug of war often starts when spiritual desires clash with worldly ways. Remember that it is usually easier to pull someone down than it is to lift someone up. Few couples think that disaster will ever tear them apart, but alas, it happens all too frequently.

Physical attraction

Romance, courtship, getting engaged, marrying, are all very exciting, but if our association with someone is based merely on physical attraction with all the thrills that this offers, tragedy may well lie ahead. It needs much more than physical attraction to make a marriage a permanent success. When all the emotional excitement has found its level, one's partner has to be lived with in a very down-to-earth union.

Money matters have marred many a marriage. This important aspect needs to be discussed with understanding and after much private thought.

A person's appearance is one thing; their personality is another. Not every "belle-of-the-ball" has a Christ-like spirit. Behind many a strong or a pretty face is a sarcastic tongue; this can cut a marriage to shreds. A person's disposition has to be lived with "till death them do part."

How wise it is to seek for a spiritually-minded partner who will encourage your spiritual growth and bring up a family to love and serve the Lord Jesus Christ. The advice of a very famous minister was to find someone more spiritual than you are yourself and give Christ His rightful place in your home right from the very start. If we do not get off to a good spiritual start, it will be almost impossible to have a good, happy home.

He is no fool who sits down and carefully studies the vows he is proposing to take, then prayerfully, sensibly, soberly makes up his mind in the right spirit and in the fear of the Lord as to his choice.

Monday, March 27th

Matthew 26 : 57-75

"Peter followed Him afar off . . . sat without in the palace . . . remembered the word of Jesus" (vv. 58, 69, 75).

While Jesus faced trumped-up charges, false witnesses and corrupt priests in a trial which was a mockery of justice, Peter stood warming himself (John 18:18). Justice demands that we note that Peter did not forsake Jesus as did others (Matthew 26:56). In following Jesus he maintained a safe distance which prevented his being personally uncomfortable and his being of any assistance to Jesus.

Had Peter fled like the others or walked beside Christ, he would not have been in that in-between place where he denied the Lord. He identified himself neither with the Lord nor with the frightened sheep. All should avoid the danger of luke-warm Christian committal (Revelation 3:15,16). Repentance is available to all who find themselves in that condition if they remember, like Peter, the word of the Lord (Matthew 26:75; Revelation 3:19).

Tuesday, March 28th

Matthew 27 : 1-10

"They said, What is that to us?" (v. 4).

The priests had joined Judas in the plot which culminated in his terrible sin; they would not or could not help him in his moment of unavailing remorse. Peter sinned and in repentance he went out and wept bitterly (26:75). Judas sinned and in remorse he went out and hanged himself (27:5).

Judas portrayed what every Christian knows but that to which every sinner is blinded, that nothing can be compared in value to the Lord Jesus Christ. The silver may have represented the ambition of Judas, his longing for material prosperity, but it turned sour when he realised that he had achieved his desire at the price of losing Christ. We praise God that He has given us a true sense of values: unto us who believe He is precious (1 Peter 2:7).

Wednesday, March 29th

Matthew 27 : 11-26

"I am innocent of the blood of this just person" (v. 24).

The second trial of Jesus was before Pilate; this passage shows that in reality Pilate was on trial. The attitude of Jesus (v. 14), the accusation of Pilate's conscience (v. 18) and the advice of his wife (v. 19), demanded that he should make a decision about Christ. He sought to avoid his responsibility by asking the people to make their choice between Jesus and Barabbas (v. 22) and dramatically displayed his innocence by washing his hands (v. 24).

Pilate made his decision, however; it was rejection by default. He could not place the responsibility on the people. It was a personal matter. No one can evade his personal responsibility to accept or to reject Jesus. Pilate knew what was right but refused to do it. May God help us not to be cowards but to do right whatever the cost.

Thursday, March 30th

Matthew 27 : 27-44

"Sitting down they watched Him there" (v. 36).

The only posture suitable in the presence of our Lord, especially as we contemplate His death on the cross, is that which brings us low at His feet. The majesty and triumph of the cross are here depicted. The soldiers, symbols of Roman military strength, were overshadowed by the magnificent cross of the Saviour. The Roman Empire's power has long since waned, but the glory of His cross sweeps on from strength to strength, redeeming men and setting them free from the tyranny of sin.

*In the cross of Christ, I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime.*

Friday, March 31st

Matthew 27 : 45-56

"Truly this was the Son of God" (v. 54).

As in earlier times in Britain, the public execution of criminals was to the Romans part of the entertainment of the day, but this crucifixion was distinguished from all others. The sun was darkened, the veil of the temple was rent, the earth quaked, the graves were opened, and the soldiers were converted.

Around the cross of Calvary were the most glorious hours of human history. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself" (2 Corinthians 5:19). The great veil, which shut men out from the Holy of Holies, was rent from the top (God's end) to the bottom without the aid of human hands, as a symbol that the way into God's very presence was now open through Christ's atoning death (Hebrews 10:19,20). All may now come boldly before the throne of grace to find help and mercy (Hebrews 4:16).

Saturday, April 1st

Matthew 27 : 57-66

"Sealing the stone, and setting a watch" (v. 66).

A secret revealed. Joseph, a wealthy member of the Jewish Council, had been a secret disciple (John 19:38). He now went boldly to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. The women, who had watched Jesus die from a distance (Matthew 27:55), now came into the open. Calvary inspired them to show themselves bravely.

A sepulchre guarded. There was irony in Pilate's instruction to the Pharisees, who sought for a guard for the dead body of Jesus; he commanded them to make the grave as sure as they could (v. 65). They appeared more afraid of the dead Jesus than they had been of the living Jesus! Hell was not able to hold Jesus, much less the watch set over His tomb. He had promised to rise again and what He promises He performs (v. 63).

Walking in His steps

by Mark A. Drew

ASSISTANT PASTOR,
ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, EASTBOURNE

FROM Matthew 5 we see that Christ's teaching set ideals which are not easy for us to achieve. Nevertheless we must follow Him in obedience to His command. Do we really show forth Christ in all our actions?

Love

One of the first characteristics of a Christian should be his evident love, not only for God, but for other people. How many times have we passed a drunkard without a thought or wished that we could move from a tramp sitting next to us on a bus?

How many times did Christ receive the social outcasts of His day? The woman who was taken in adultery was condemned by those who brought her to Jesus, but He was full of compassion. He said, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." When he looked up, there was none there but the woman. His sublime statement to her was, "Neither do I condemn thee: go and sin no more" (John 8:11).

We see the concern of Jesus when He spoke to the woman of Samaria. Among her first words were "The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans," but to Jesus this distinction made no difference.

Do we love as Jesus did?

Good works

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works" (Matthew 5:16). We often say that our job is to preach the gospel, but we should note that, when Jesus preached, He also met the physical needs of the people. We should show people that we are concerned with the body that the soul lives in. If Jesus cared, then we must demonstrate this love in action (Romans 12:20).

Christians meet people with troubles and, when we try to help them, we get impatient, because we do not see results. Hagar and Ishmael, when they were cast out by Abraham, wandered in the wilderness. Their water had gone and the boy became weak (Genesis 21:15). Hagar cast him under a shrub, possibly so that he could die in comfort (v. 16). She sat down a good way off and said, "Let me not see the death of the child." Perhaps we are like this. We do not give people up altogether, but we sit far enough away not to see them die.

Dorcas was known for her practical Christianity (Acts 9:36). "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men" (Galatians 6:10).

Humility

The supreme humility was that of the Master becoming the servant. Jesus "made Himself of no reputation" (Philippians 2:7; Hebrews 2:9).

The disciples argued as to who was going to be the greatest (Luke 22:24). The question really is as to who will truly follow Christ, with all that is thus implied. Christ showed His humility when He washed the feet of His disciples.

Do we follow Christ? Are we demonstrating these graces in all that we do and say? We often sing, "To be like Jesus." Do we really sing the words from our hearts? As one version of James 4:6 says, "Humble yourselves before God and He will lift you up."

Sunday, April 2nd

Matthew 28:1-10

"He is not here; for He is risen, as He said" (v. 6).

The unexpected had taken place. The guard could protect the tomb from the intruder from earth, but they were powerless against the visitor from above (vv. 2-4). The women anticipated a sealed tomb at which to mourn, but they found an empty tomb at which to worship. Angels announced Christ's birth; now they heralded His resurrection.

There is evidence for our belief that Jesus is alive. The angel invited the women to inspect the place where the Lord had been. The tomb was empty. Jesus revealed Himself to the women. The evidence for His victory is not only negative—an empty tomb—but also positive—a glorified, risen Christ who revealed Himself.

Sin, death and hell have lost their power to harm those who believe that Jesus has triumphed over them all and that He ever lives to save by His intercession (Hebrews 7:25).

JESUS, HIMSELF
DREW NEAR

A GROUP FROM THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND YOUTH GROUPS AT ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

I STOOD IN GETHSEMANE

I STOOD in the Garden of Gethsemane. It was very different from what I had expected, but, as I walked through that sacred spot, it seemed as if the whole scene changed—call it the flight of a Welsh imagination if you like. The excited tourists had gone and in their places were soldiers complete with swords and staves and lanterns. The sound of laughing children gave way to an agonising cry as a solitary Figure bowed low and pleaded, “Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me.”

I thought of another garden; they called it Eden. There amid all that garden’s glory and joys paradise was lost. Here, through the anguish of Gethsemane, it was regained. Blood-coloured perspiration dropped on Gethsemane’s flowers as the greatest battle of all time was fought. The big trees cast black shadows against the brilliance of the full moon. The shadow of the cross, so long darkening His path, was now closing in and enveloping Jesus.

It was a strange and bewildering struggle to any who saw it. Sin was trying to strangle God. The dust of earth was getting into the throat of Jesus. He, the pure Son of God, who only knew sin as He saw it in others, was coming into closest contact with sin, and sin at its worst. It was all there in the cry, “this cup.” “This cup” revealed the uncomprehending, fearful disciples, denying Peter and treacherous Judas, rejecting Jewry and twisted justice, filthy sin and corruption, and awful separation from the Father. That separation formed the last agonising dregs of the bitter cup.

We are here able to understand more fully the meaning of Isaiah’s strange declaration, “It pleased the Lord to bruise Him; He hath put Him to grief: when Thou shalt make His soul an offering for sin”; it is all here—in “this cup.”

Here, too, in Gethsemane with its blood, sweat, tears and bitter cup, the greatest battle of all time was won. “My Father, if this cup cannot pass away from Me except I drink it, THY WILL BE DONE.” No mere storm in a teacup pressed Him to the earth; here was temptation raging in all its tempestuous fury. From Him we learn

by W. Ronald Jones

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
THE CITY TEMPLE, BRISTOL

that the only way to meet any temptation is not to yield to it, or merely seek to evade it, but to resist it, even if it has to be with tears and sweat of blood.

There then is Gethsemane with its Saviour and its soldiers, but this is not the complete picture, for there were disciples, too. Only three followed closely on the heels of the Master. This was for them also the most challenging moment of their lives. I remembered reading somewhere about the “fellowship of His suffering.” This was why these three were in the garden; Peter, James and John had come to share the fellowship of His suffering. Jesus had chosen these three and charged them to watch with Him while He went apart and prayed, but when He went to pray they went to sleep.

If you really want to find an excuse for them it is fairly easy to do so. It had been a taxing week, the pressures were on, and it was getting rather late, but these men were used to being awake during night hours. There was that memorable morning occasion when they greeted Jesus with their problem, “Master, we have toiled all night and have caught nothing.” Failure was not due to lack of effort on their part. Those nets had been carefully repaired and washed. They had taken note of the weather conditions and had set off on that night’s fishing expedition feeling assured of a good catch. “Lower the nets” someone commanded. They watched, they waited. One hour passed, then two. “Haul in the nets,” came the cry—but there was not a fish in sight! No one suggested going home or having a nap; no, those nets must be put out again. Everyone was alert. These men had never been more wide awake. The hours passed, the nets were in again, but they were fishless nets! “We have toiled all night”—and they certainly had!

How different was the scene in Gethsemane. “Simon, are you sleeping? Could you not watch with Me one hour?” The very same men who could stay awake all night when it was for their own business gains and for their own bread and butter fell asleep when it was for Him and the fellowship of His suffering.

There in the Garden of Gethsemane, I knew that I was as guilty as they. I stood there again just three weeks ago and prayed with a deep longing in my heart, “Lord that I might know You and the fellowship of Your suffering.” Come to think of it, there is no better time than now for all of us to pray that prayer.

Church reports

The President visits the Channel Isles

The visit of the President, A. A. Biddle, and his wife to the Elim Pentecostal Churches in the Channel Isles was awaited with eager anticipation. After the customary welcome at the airport by the three resident ministers and their wives, there followed four days of joyous Christian fellowship and united services.

The first meeting was held in our Delancey church. As the people streamed into the building one wondered if they would all get in; however, everyone managed to get a seat and then followed a service buoyant with Pentecostal power and blessing.

The next service was held in our new church building at Vazon. In services of this kind we always expect the tide of blessing to rise higher and we were not disappointed. As the large congregation joined in the stirring singing and listened to the ministry of God's Word by the President the blessing of God flooded our hearts.

The final meeting was at the Eldad church in St. Peter Port. What a joy it was to listen to the singing of the united youth group, all Elim Crusaders dedicated to the cause of Christ. Then there was the singing of the united choir which delighted everyone. The President's message from the Word of God was in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. A great service came to a close with all hearts rejoicing that God is still moving by His Spirit.

Afterwards the large congregation retired to the minor hall, where a buffet supper had been prepared. This gave the people an opportunity to meet the President personally in an atmosphere of fellowship and friendship. At an appropriate moment in the proceedings Helen Penney, on behalf of the Channel Islands Presbytery, presented Mrs. Biddle with a bouquet of flowers.

Reporting on the visit of the President to the Elim Pentecostal Church in our sister island of Jersey the minister informed me: "We have had a marvellous time!"

BELFAST, Ulster Temple Pastor: D. J. Ayling

The strong links between Elim in Ulster and in New Zealand have been strengthened over the last few weeks with the tragic death of Mrs. Margaret McClelland already reported in the EVANGEL. She was a member of the Ulster Temple for forty years before emigrating to New Zealand two years ago, where she joined our church in Christchurch. She died after head injuries sustained from an assault by an Irish Nationalist demonstrator in Christchurch. Her funeral was taken first in the Elim Pentecostal Church in Christchurch by Pastor M. J. Frith, there being much press publicity of this tragic event. After cremation her remains were flown to Ulster for burial. Another service was held in the Ulster Temple. Through cablegrams and telephone links both services were similar and the same hymns were used. We felt brought together in Christ with our brethren across the world by the personal impact of the tragedy of Ulster.

Following the service in the Temple, her remains were laid to rest, as she had requested, in the soil of Ulster. The service was a triumphant one. Pastor Ayling spoke on "To be with Christ, which is far better." Amid the daily carnage which is Belfast today we felt the victory that is the Christian's hope. It seems a twist of irony that the first Elim member to suffer in this way should be so far from the centre of Ireland's violence, but it makes us realise that our whole world is living on a knife-edge in these days. The final hymn in the service sums up our feelings:

*And when life is ended, when the victory's won,
When I hear from Thee, Lord, the glad words,
"Well done!"*

*With what joy and rapture shall I sing of Thee
Who from sin's dark chains didst set my spirit free!*

Many weeks of rehearsal, sewing and sawing culminated in a nativity tableau presented by our Sunshine Corner. The action was by younger children and recitations, carols and readings of the Word were by older children. An appreciative audience of parents and friends completely filled the minor hall. We thank the leader, Mrs. Joy Bourgaize, who wrote and directed the tableau, the ladies who served, the many who arranged the lighting and most of all the children who took part.

TORQUAY

Pastor: H. Quay

The visit of the President, A. A. Biddle, coincided with the completion of the alterations to and redecoration of the church—transformation indeed!

The Lord has been good to us. Every week seems to bring more answers to prayer. On a recent Sunday a lady wept her way to the foot of the cross and was truly born again. Her own words were: "If it is not too late!" "Today if we will hear His voice" says the Bible.

We rejoice with our pastor and his wife that their son, Roger, has rededicated his life to Christ and has been gloriously filled with the Spirit. Roger is at Keele University.

READING

Pastor: F. Shadlock

Last year started with a feeling of our wanting to do more for Jesus Christ, especially in the saving of souls for eternity, so two half-nights of prayer were arranged before a campaign in March with Pastor Eddie Thomas, which lifted our church to a high spiritual position, a few souls being saved, of whom we have seen lasting results.

1971 also saw a new opening for the London Crusader Choir in their visiting Reading prison to take services in February and September. They were also a blessing to the church in the evenings.

The year saw our pastor's fortieth anniversary in the Elim ministry. The church provided a tea and a gift for our pastor and his wife. Mrs. Shadlock was also presented with two bouquets. Letters and telegrams were read including a telegram from the pastor's previous church at Selly Oak, Birmingham. Special services were arranged and Pastors L. W. Green and J. C. Smyth came with great blessing. Pastor Green stayed until the Thursday, preaching on the Holy Spirit, and six people received their baptism in the Holy Spirit.

On the following Sunday we held a baptismal service when eight candidates followed the Lord through the waters of baptism, one of them a man who was saved in the March campaign.

As 1971 came to a close the church and branch Sunday schools and youth meeting joined together for a united carol service.

During the last year eight of our members have covenanted to the Lord and it has brought in over £400. Since then two more have started covenanting. We thank God for this and would like to encourage more of God's people to do likewise for the Lord and for their church.

Pastor: I. R. Hall

Elim Pentecostal Church Young Adult Fellowship recently celebrated its first anniversary. Formed last year to cater for the growing number of young adults attending services, the fellowship has served the age group well and seen a number of additions to its ranks. On Saturday evening Mrs. G. Burgess, Miss C. Gerring, Mr. P. Kershaw and Mr. D. Diggins spoke on different aspects of Elim's "Foursquare Gospel."

Mr. B. Parkman sang, accompanied by Miss P. Ashley and Miss C. Gerring, and was also the speaker at the Sunday night service. On that occasion Miss Ashley sang, Mr. P. Kershaw accompanied chorus singing on the accordion, Mrs. S. Hall gave Christian testimony, Mrs. B. Tucker read the lesson and Mr. Diggins offered the opening prayer. The young adult choir sang at both services, accompanied by Mrs. J. Rowe, pianist. The minister was the chairman and on Sunday night paid special tribute to the older members of the congregation who had baby-sat so that young parents could attend the fellowship's monthly meetings.

Calvary

by Edward F. Cole

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GRAHAM STREET, BIRMINGHAM

THE story is told of a lost child in Glasgow who was asked by a dutiful policeman where he lived. The little chap did not know, but said he: "If you take me to the Cross [a well-known spot in the City], I can find my way home from there." We sometimes sing the hymn "The way of the cross leads home" and I am reminded of the night when I knelt at the communion rail in the little Methodist church at Barking and found the way home to God.

The miracle of the cross is overwhelming. We sit at the Lord's Table and, by the aid of the Holy Spirit, we discern in the emblems the broken Body and shed Blood of the Saviour and, by simple faith, we are changed—how amazing! The Bible speaks of our being "transfigured." We are renewed in every part of our being through the virtue of Calvary's cross. This is why Jesus said "Do this in remembrance of Me." We would impress upon the mind and heart of every young Christian that, with this infinite unveiling of the Passion of God and our receiving of His love and grace, there comes from the heart of God a call for identification with Christ, a complete surrender of our will, which at once presupposes self-will and selfishness. We do not understand the love and passion of Christ while we stand with the crowd and look at the cross; we must die with Him. This is absolutely essential if we are to interpret the cross to a rebellious world. How often we have sung: "All there is of me, Lord"; I pray that this may be so, so that we may show men that there is a way for men to rise from the quagmire of unholy living.

The message of the cross is so revealing, so convincing, that we dare not attempt to preach it with the words of man's wisdom. There are too many whose faith stands in the wisdom of men and the abounding tragedy is witnessed in the wreckage that floats around our cities, towns and villages. It is an insult to the Holy Spirit to employ human intellect and to depend upon the human spirit to give insight and understanding to those who are in darkness. It is the Holy Spirit's portrayal of the cross against the background of the everlasting love and justice of God that removes the scales from men's eyes that their understanding might be enlightened. To attempt this with the resources of human will and intellect is futile, "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Corinthians 2:14). Let every preacher be aware of this: the message of the cross of Calvary is the unveiling of the heart of God. It is the Holy Spirit who looks into God's heart and "speaks not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth." He produces faith that stands in the power of God.

This is wisdom, for the message of the cross is the only hope of mankind. It destroys sin and overthrows evil men with their diabolical works. It brings peace to the penitent and reveals the love of God for the vilest sinner and the proudest religionist. We live in a crazy world of criminals and computers and every day some new crisis arises to confuse and frustrate the victims of a permissive society. The princes of this world crucified the Lord of glory because they knew not the wisdom of God. Today we preach to this world the message of the love of the Lord Jesus according to His wisdom, knowing that Calvary is the answer to all its crushing need.

THE MAN ON THE CROSS, the Lamb slain before the foundation of the world, made atonement for the whole race. We can never understand the sinner's plight until we see the measures God had to take that He might redeem fallen humanity. The only way was "through the body of His flesh through death." To many the cross is a supreme tragedy, but to the redeemed believer it is the greatest triumph of all time. "The sting of death is sin" and it has been removed. The Man of Sorrows acquainted with grief understands the sorrows and sufferings of mankind. He was tempted in all points as we are, but He never sinned. There is in the heart of the Man of Calvary an everlasting source of mercy and grace that is sufficient for all who will come to Him. Our indebtedness to the Son of man is realised as we draw from this source. This helps us to fix our attention on the gaping wounds of a dying world, for He alone can wash the bleeding sin-wounds and pour in oil and wine.

*That Man of Calvary
Has won my heart from me
And died to set me free—
Blest Man of Calvary.*

THE BIGGEST PART

By Sheila Price

SOON after Jesus had been crucified an argument took place at the bottom of Calvary's hill.

"I played the biggest part in it all," said the Cross. "Without me they would not have been able to crucify Jesus."

"Stop boasting!" said the Nails. "We held Jesus in place. You would have been no good without us. We played the biggest part."

"You didn't!" said the Crown of Thorns. "I did. I crowned Jesus the King of the Jews. Everyone noticed when I was placed on the head of Jesus. I played a bigger part than any of you."

The Sword was nearby and he wasn't going to be outdone. "Listen," he said. "I am the sharpest sword in all the land. I was thrust into Jesus's side. I played the biggest part in the crucifixion."

"I disagree," said the Tomb. "My owner, Joseph of Arimathea, gave special instructions that Jesus was to be buried in me. That is a great honour. I must be more important than any of you."

"Oh no you are not," said Barabbas. "I am the centre of attraction around here. Everyone preferred to have me—not Jesus—me, the most wicked man in town. They crucified Jesus instead of me, so surely I played the biggest part of all!"

"Nonsense," said Judas, who had appeared on the scene. "No one played a bigger part than I did. Wasn't it I who told everyone that they would find Jesus in the garden? Wasn't it I who went up to Jesus and kissed Him? Besides, I've been closer to Jesus than any of you. I was His disciple. I followed Him for a long time. And another thing—I must have played the biggest part of all because I was paid thirty pieces of silver as a reward."

Just then a little boy and girl ran up to them. "We have been listening to your argument," they said, "and you are all wrong. Oh, yes, you all had a part to play, but none of you played the biggest part of all. That was played by sin. If there had been no sin in the world Jesus would not have gone to the cross at all, but He loves us, every single one of us, boys, girls, men and women. That is why He was prepared to die—to pay the price of our sins so that we might all have forgiveness and everlasting life."

THE beautiful bird mounted ever higher into the air, borne aloft by an occasional flap of its wings, but more often by the magic of the air currents which instinct led it to ride. The sun glinted on its delicately-hued feathers, revealing ever new reflections of colour, a variety of spectra which no artist could paint, no photographer fully capture.

Somehow many a Pauline flight of revelation seems like this. "He must be at the top!" you think, but up he goes, higher and higher into the rarified atmosphere of utmost revelation.

The first chapter of Colossians is like this. In the Authorised Version there are only six full stops in twenty-nine verses. The pen, it seems, could hardly keep pace with the flow of truth. Language lapsed into insufficiency.

Take that purple passage which is really a prayer—vv. 9-17—and a continual prayer at that. Every phrase demands a poem, every clause a sermon, and the juxtaposition of so many parts defies human authorship—it stamps the Divine imprint so clearly. The demand of verse 10 is followed by the sheer glory of verse 11. The reference to thanking the Lord precedes a glorious description of what He is and what He has done and does (vv. 12-17).

At this lovely season of the year, Easter, these words stand out in all their wonder: "In whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins" (v. 14). The tender portrayal of Christ as "His dear Son," as the margin expresses it, "the Son of His love," focuses a special aspect of redemption's story, for immediately after v. 14 we have that mountain range of revelation with every peak an Everest . . . "the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature" . . . and so on through from v. 15 to v. 20. The beloved Son and the almighty God, the all-powerful Son and the loving Father, the superb glory of it all makes Gethsemane, Calvary and the empty tomb so poignantly, breathtakingly glorious!

The blood of Jesus Christ is at the very centre of our faith. It is our sufficiency as to our experience of salvation. Upon it depends our assurance. As we worship and adore the risen Lord, we remember—how could we forget?—that He remains the Lamb as it had been slain!

The Trials of Jesus

by Stephen Hilliard

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
PARKSTONE, POOLE

JESUS was arrested in the Garden of Gethsemane. The quietness of the evening in that retreat beyond the city walls was broken by the tramp of feet and the rattle of armour at the approach of a "great multitude with swords and staves."

From the garden He was taken to the high priest's palace. Here began the ordeal of inquisition that was to culminate in the cross. His captors brought Jesus first before Annas, a former high priest himself and father-in-law of Caiaphas, then holder of that office. Annas was the power behind the throne in Jerusalem. Corrupt and insatiably greedy for power and wealth, he stands as the archetype of the churchman for whom religious office is but the means to personal advantage. Jesus Christ was a threat to Annas and had to be silenced, in his view. What passed between those two—the worldly priest and the lowly Nazarene—is not recorded.

From the apartments of Annas, Jesus was taken before Caiaphas. Hastily, under cover of darkness, the high priest presided over a secret, illegal trial. According to John, he pressed two lines of inquiry—"of His disciples and of His doctrine." The witnesses could not agree. Implacable in his hatred of Jesus, but anxious still to cloak his murderous designs in a mantle of legality, Caiaphas sought "false witnesses." These could not agree either. In the face of their accusations, Jesus remained silent. His serenity aroused the high priest to fury. Confronting Jesus, he demanded, "I adjure thee . . . tell us whether thou be the Christ the Son of God." Silent no longer, Jesus said "I am." With a cry of triumphant horror, Caiaphas rounded on his fellow-conspirators. What need had they of further witnesses? The Prisoner stood condemned by His own words—guilty of blasphemy.

The verdict of that illegal court had to be ratified by the main body of the Sanhedrin. For the rest of that terrible night Jesus was kept under guard, abused and derided by the soldiers. At first light on Friday morning, Passover Day, the council assembled. The verdict was agreed and the death sentence was passed. Now they were faced with the galling necessity of seeking permission from their Roman overlords to carry out the sentence.

Temporarily resident in the sumptuous palace of Herod the Great was Pontius Pilate, the Roman procurator of Judæa. Caiaphas knew that a charge of blasphemy would have no interest for Pilate, so the accusation was changed. It was now claimed that Jesus had been a rabble-rouser, had urged the ordinary people to withhold their taxes, and had, indeed, claimed to be a king Himself. Galilee was mentioned and immediately Pilate saw an opportunity to evade personal responsibility. Herod Antipas, ruler of Galilee, was in Jerusalem. Let him decide the fate of Jesus!

Herod's experience is a solemn reminder of the folly of dealing lightly with God. He was glad to see Jesus. Curiously, he plied Him with questions, but Jesus "answered him nothing." Herod, in killing John the Baptist, had for ever silenced God's voice to himself. There could be no further message.

Pilate resumed his examination of Jesus and publicly declared Him innocent, but the priests had collected a rabble from the city who vociferously demanded His death. Barabbas could live, but Jesus must die! Pilate had Jesus scourged—would this satisfy them?—but the fury of the mob knew no bounds, "Crucify! Crucify! If you let this man go you are not Cæsar's friend!" Pilate, fearing lest word of the affair should come to the ears of his mad master, the emperor Tiberius, gave sentence as they required.

No men have brought such obloquy upon themselves as have those who contrived the death of the Lord, yet the truth is that in all of us there lie evil passions that would have made us betray and kill Him, too. We would have howled "Crucify" with the crowd. The measure of God's love is that "while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

Behind the machinations of evil men, inspired by Satan, God moved to bring to fruition His own redemptive purpose: "Herod and Pontius Pilate . . . were gathered together for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done" (Acts 4:27, 28).

The crisis point of faith

by Michael W. Carr

JEHOVAH JIREH was a title ascribed to God by Abraham. It was the result of a full heart that had witnessed the hand of God moving in substitutionary provision. The sheer wonder of God's intervention at the place of ultimate sacrifice burst through the patriarch's soul as the mount was transformed into a sanctuary of covenant revelation.

This same expression of expectancy has been borne upon the lips of countless saints through passing generations with equal reward and assurance. The Moriah message has meant so much to so many for so long. Desperate conditions have been relieved by the omnipresent God who has stridden into the circumstances and lifted trembling saints on to His governmental shoulder and has then stood in the place of adversity Himself.

Even so, in the midst of this comfort, let us not forget that the promises of God are only given to those who can receive them. This particular facet of God's character can become like a lucky mascot to many who walk in suspect sincerity. When mountain trials shadow daily experiences, this blessed appellation is all too easily used. A hasty prayer, "The Lord will provide" is not an automatic solution for dubious discipleship. Defiance of known spiritual values can never win accolades from God and may well bring just retribution in the flesh to the saving of the soul.

Not every bequest in the Bible is suited to our individual needs and we must therefore allow the Spirit to direct us in an acceptable way. The gay assertion that the Divine hand will amply furnish an answer in every circumstance may well be true, but often it needs Omnipotence to extricate our wayward feet from snared pathways. The commands and judgments of God ride at the side of the promises and are there like warning lights to caution revelation.

The events that led Abraham to Mount Moriah were unique. They have never been repeated. This Genesis man towers above his fellows as his life expands in sublime trust. What other contemporary man dared so much having seen so little? His revelation was partial, but his dedication was full—a lesson to be learned by us all!

In looking at this story we notice that God brought Abraham into the situation: it was not the result of self seeking. The circumstances were designed by God. That fact is very important. How often do we bring ourselves into difficult places by wilful rebellion and yet expect God to deliver? In spite of us, He does! Wisdom always considers seriously the happenings that lead to a crisis and checks to see if this is the planned work of a heavenly Father. Foolishness on our part can be interpreted as severity by God, when this need not be so.

Abraham once strayed into Egypt against the Lord's will and the outcome was Ishmael. God had promised that his seed would exceed the star-spangled sky, but the present outshone the future and patience was seduced by doubt. God never delivered Abraham from that mistake, but He did deliver him in it. That rash act of Abraham engendered a war in the home. All he could do was to stand and recall the word of the Lord as it stabbed his conscience. Nowhere does God pledge to remove our Ishmaels, but He will through tender mercy turn them to our advantage.

The drama of the provision was that it came when death was but an arm's length away. Only when Abraham's heart exceeded his hand did God grip the grasp that held the knife and sighs were turned to singing. The One who sifts eternity also measures time and He is never too late for those who reach THE CRISIS POINT OF FAITH. As the spiritual eyes of Abraham stared out into the seemingly dark will of God the shadows parted and the Almighty stood at the altar. Not until the sacrificial steel had circumscribed the heart could God move. He always waits until we rest upon the fulcrum of positive faith and at that point responds to the sob of intercession.

The answer to Abraham's faithful plea was quietly munching in the will of God and fled frightened into His captive hold. The Divine finger, thicket-shaped, caught the ram as the audible anguish of a soul broken in the depths rent the air. The substitute was only a shadow's length away. The patriarch had but to turn to see the vicarious animal. How near is the provision to those who reach the end of self! It is just a glance away.

In these circumstances God became "Jehovah Jireh." Weigh, therefore, the encroachment of the test and see if it is planned by the Potter's hand.

Tributes to Pastor Harry Toft

Part of the tribute paid by Pastor J. E. Moore, of Leeds, at the funeral service at Westcliff-on-Sea.

ON February 18th, 1972, Harry Toft was called Home. His illness and passing have moved the hearts of the fellowship at Bridge Street, Leeds, and farther afield, for his ministry as a pastor and convention speaker made him widely known and greatly loved. We were concerned as news of our brother's serious illness reached us, yet, through it all, God drew us closer to Himself, that we might face, and accept, and find peace in His will.

Almost the last words our brother uttered were these: "I am convinced more than ever before that the old paths and old wells are the right ones—intercession, preaching and personal witnessing." These things were the governing principles of Harry's Christian life and ministry. His father used to tell me of frequently finding him at all hours of the night, kneeling by the side of his bed, a heavy overcoat over his pyjamas, as, for protracted periods, he poured out his soul to God. He led a prayer band which met at the church each Sunday at 6 a.m. and waited on God until the 10.30 a.m. worship service.

Preaching and witnessing were always high in his priorities. He had no place for gimmicks, but he wholeheartedly believed that it is through "the foolishness of preaching" that men and women are saved.

We honour a true servant of God who was also a good husband and father, whose life it was to serve his family with joy. His influence on his family must be recognised, for he was a tower of strength to his wife and his son, in sharing their burdens and in giving them godly counsel.

Harry burnt himself out for God. Often I have heard him pray "Don't let me sink to be a clod, make me thy fuel, flame of God!" The stresses and strains of the Christian warfare, plus the care of the churches, eventually wore him out. Such is the price of carrying the gospel into the enemy's territory. For Harry there will be no quiet years of retirement to ponder God's mighty deeds in his life and to apply innumerable lessons in wisdom to the generations following him. He has paid the full cost of a life laid upon the altar of sacrifice.

We salute you, Harry Toft, even as we offer our tenderest sympathy to your sorrowing relatives and acknowledge that you are one of those who, having been "faithful unto death," have won a "crown of life."

DAVID ANDERSON, of Belfast, has sent the following tribute:

I believe in the lives of many Christians that there is someone who has been a deep source of help throughout their Christian experience. To me, such a man was Pastor Harry Toft. He was the very first Elim pastor whom I had ever met and well I remember that I had been saved for only a few days when I had the privilege of meeting this genial Yorkshireman. He was then the minister of Ballysillan Elim Pentecostal Church, Belfast. From the moment I made my decision at a tent campaign when Fred Squire was preaching, Harry Toft undertook to explain so patiently the fundamentals of what was expected of me now that I was a Christian. After all these years I have never forgotten his kindness, his Christian fellowship.

Years later, when I had church responsibility placed upon me for a short while, Pastor Toft was always on hand ready with advice. Quite often he would come and take a series of Bible studies for us.

He had many qualities, but I think that above all he possessed a humility that endeared him to so many hearts. We, of the Elim family in Ulster, mourn the passing of such a wonderful Christian and our heartfelt sympathy goes out to Mrs. Toft and to her son, Philip.

I will never forget the Elim pastor who took such pains to keep someone in the way of the Lord.

The Gardener of the Heart

"Supposing Him to be the gardener"
(John 20 : 15)

THE crucifixion was past, reverent hands had removed the cruel nails from the hands and feet of our blessed Lord and had borne the body to the sepulchre in the garden. The third day approached. To whom would He disclose Himself first when He had burst the bands of death and escaped from the prison of the grave? Would He appear in the high priest's palace or in Pilate's praetorium to confront His enemies and fill them with dismay? No, He saw a woman whose sorrow over Him and whose longing for Him were unspeakable. Her deep appreciation of His value, her intense hunger for a glimpse of His face, her matchless devotion to His person, her carelessness about everything else, drew Him irresistibly. The sense of need always appeals to Christ.

As Mary Magdalene drew near to the tomb she was troubled with the problem as to who would roll away the stone, but, when she arrived, she found that the stone had been rolled back, it no longer hindered, but, alas, the grave it guarded was empty. "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid Him," she complained with sobs to One whom she failed to recognise, but whom she supposed to be the gardener.

Christ was this woman's Friend and nobly did she repay His love. In life she was His comforter, in death His chief mourner, in resurrection His herald and foremost helper. Woman's faith and woman's work are among the Church's chief assets. One of the contributions Christianity made to history was a new womanhood. The Church in every age and in every clime has been adorned by the consecrated service of women. These are the women who lead the world, not the noisy, rude, self-assertive, self-styled "leaders of women," but those whose gentleness makes them great.

Christ is the Gardener of every soul that yields to Him. The glory of the skilful gardener is that

by H. Burton-Haynes

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
CLACTON-ON-SEA

he is able to take common plants and develop them into forms of beauty and usefulness that the ignorant gardener would never dream of producing. Dr. W. L. Watkinson said that, on visiting an art gallery, he noticed that some of the greatest pictures had not a splendid thing in them. The ordinary artist, when he wants to be effective, paints in a breadth of golden harvest or portrays a kingfisher or some other iridescent bird, or a tree in bloom, or that captivating thing a rainbow, but some of the greatest painters never touch these things. They take common things—a railway cutting, a ploughed field, the red earth—but their touch is supreme, so that you can see the blossom in the dust, and the rainbow in the cloud, and their pictures, although they contain no brilliant things, are bathed in imagination, poetry and beauty. So Christ can take the most common human plant in His garden and develop it into a thing of indescribable beauty and interest.

Think of some of the human plants that grew in Christ's garden—a man who had a legion of devils, Mary Magdalene who had seven, fretful, peevish Martha, an old beggar like Bartimæus, a grasping tax-gatherer like Zacchæus, a handful of fishermen without education or standing. Jesus picked up people like these—and how they blossomed beneath His exquisite touch!

"They have grown," says a writer, "into the heart of the world for nineteen centuries, and the sweet fragrance of their Christian graces blesses humanity in every land."

The great Gardener, the risen Lord, is still at work in the world today!

He is risen!

I believe in Jesus Christ who was crucified, dead, and buried, He descended into hell; the third day He rose again from the dead, He ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead. Apostles' Creed.

The Cross

He died, saith the Cross. My very name
Was a hated thing and a word of shame;
But since Christ hung on my arms outspread,
With nails in His hands, and thorns on His head,
They do but measure—set high, flung wide—
The measureless love of the Crucified.

He rose, said the Tomb, I was dark and drear,
And the sound of my name wove a spell of fear;
But the Lord of Life in my depths hath lain
To break Death's power and rend his chain;
And a light streams forth from my open door,
For the Lord is RISEN, He dies no more.

ANON.

We thank Thee, Lord

For that supremest token of Thy Love,
Thyself made manifest in human flesh;
For that pure life beneath the Syrian sky,
The humble toil, the sweat, the bench, the saw,
The nails well-driven, and the work well done;
For all its vast expansions; for the stress
Of those three mighty years;
For all He bore of our humanity;
His hunger, thirst, His homelessness and want,
His weariness that longed for well-earned rest;
For labour's high ennoblement through Him,
Who laboured with His hands for daily bread;
For Lazarus, Mary, Martha, Magdalene;
For Nazareth and Bethany; not least
For that dark hour in lone Gethsemane;
For that high cross upraised on Calvary;
The broken seals, the rolled-back stone;
The Way;
For ever opened through His life in death;
For that brief glimpse vouchsafed within the veil;
For all His glorious life; and for His Death,
With low-bowed heads and hearts impassionate,
We thank Thee, Lord.

JOHN OXENHAM.

Resurrection day

She had grudged the Syrian day its dawning,
For life held no more light, and love no joy,
Now that her Master lay within the tomb.
She had not heard the birds' full-throated songs—
Nought, but the sobs made of her own heart's grief;
This dew-touched garden had no beauty then,
For bitter tears were veiling sleepless eyes.
Cruel was the grief, and cruel the clawing fear
Lest, with her Saviour dead, the seven fiends,
Those hounds of hell that once had gripped her life,
Return, and no one else could set her free.

But now, how different! She had seen Him here!
Had He not spoken, and infused her name
With all the strong, warm love that only He Could give to such as Mary Magdalene?
How different now! Each common garden bush
Burned with His presence and the lilies tall,
Standing in rows of royal dignity,
Proclaimed the glory of the miracle
With radiant whiteness. Bird songs had never Brimmed so gloriously with pure delight
And, as she sped to tell the news abroad,
Her own heart sang in answering ecstasy,
For this was Resurrection Day—and peace!

JANET SMITH.

Ye faithful souls, who Jesus know,
If risen indeed with Him ye are,
Superior to the joys below,
His resurrection's power declare.

Your faith by holy tempers prove,
By actions show your sins forgiven,
And seek the glorious things above,
And follow Christ, your Head, to heaven.

For who by faith your Lord receive,
Ye nothing seek or want beside;
Dead to the world and sin ye live,
Your creature love is crucified.

Your life with Christ concealed,
Deep in the Father's bosom lies;
And, glorious as your Head revealed,
You soon shall meet Him in the skies.

SIR JOHN GOSS.

Two Solicitors converted

writes ALEXANDER TEE
NATIONAL YOUTH DIRECTOR

LORD Littleton and Gilbert West were two eminent lawyers. They were known to be among the strongest debaters at law. Both were strongly opposed to Christianity. They met by appointment and agreed to spend a full year in comprehensive research to compile irrefutable evidence against the resurrection of Jesus Christ. They went their separate ways. Unknown to each other, they went to the Middle East to pursue their findings. Archaeologists were interviewed, museums, libraries and other places were visited in order to find material with which to crush Christianity once and for all.

The day came on which they had agreed to meet to compare notes. From these notes they proposed to write the book which would be devastating to the doctrine of the resurrection.

They met as agreed and each had a case full of papers ready to submit to the other. Said Lord Littleton to Mr. West, "Just before we begin, I have a confession to make to you. The more I have probed into the question of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, the more I have convinced myself that it is true."

"Strange," said Gilbert West in reply, "I have found exactly the same and what is more I have become a confirmed Christian as a result of my findings."

The result of this research by these two men led to Gilbert West writing one of the best books ever written in defence of the Christian faith. It is accepted today as a standard work. The book is entitled Proofs of the Resurrection.

Evidence and argument are very interesting, but experience is always more convincing. There are millions of sincere people who gladly testify to the transforming power which came into their lives when they asked Jesus Christ to become their personal Saviour. Something actually takes place in a person's inner spirit when he asks to be born again by the Holy Spirit. It is not some psychological reflex in the subconscious mind. A supernatural infusion of Divine life comes within a person and he knows he is born of God.

A holy God could never substantiate a hoax and build the Christian Church on a lie. If Jesus did not rise from the dead, the Bible is the biggest piece of deception ever written and its revelation the greatest calculated piece of dishonesty ever composed. When its claims are put to the test, however, they are proved to work. Drunkards, thieves, liars and others found the supernatural entering their lives when they asked Jesus Christ to forgive their sins and to make them new men by His resurrection power.

They found that what they totally failed to do in their own strength was possible in the strength of the living Saviour. No psychological analysis can undermine a person who knows this spiritual power in his life. Neither theory nor philosophy can replace moral weakness with a force so overwhelming that a person can know daily victory over the very things which once dragged him down.

It takes a living Christ to transform a man's life, but Christ can do just this because He is alive! Filthy motives and wicked habits can only be changed from inside a person. Moving people to better social conditions with a few lectures on behaviour cannot put a new person inside the body of an individual. Jesus Christ can do just this by His Divine Spirit. He plants His Holy Spirit with His peace, His joy and His love inside people and transforms minds and motives. This is the greatest need in our modern society where the tree of selfishness grows bitter fruit on its many branches. Christ is the answer. With all His resurrection power He can meet and transform men and women today.

Matthew 28:11-20

Monday, April 3rd

"All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth" (v. 18).

The priests' agitation. The news of Christ's resurrection produced such consternation among His enemies that they conspired to rob the world of the glorious message of the event by lies (vv. 11-15).

The personal appearance. Jesus dispelled most of the doubts of His disciples about His reported resurrection by coming to them Himself. Jesus never revealed Himself to His enemies; He appeared only to His friends. A revelation of the risen Lord is available only to those who believe and are spiritual (vv. 16, 17; 1 Corinthians 2:14).

The powerful application. The result of the resurrection of Christ can be seen throughout all ages and all the world. All power was vested in Him and He shares it with us, thus enabling us to carry His saving message to all the world. In discharging our great commission we are always assured of His presence (vv. 18-20).

Ruth 1:1-18

"Whither thou goest, I will go" (v. 16).

This lovely story following the turbulent scenes of Judges is like calm after a storm, but it reveals famine in the Promised Land! The pathway of the will of God is not always smooth. God never tempts, but He tests. Provision is never automatic, even in the Promised Land. Elimelech means "My God is King." He decided that the faraway fields of Moab were greener. A Moabitess, Ruth (means "Friendship") was taken in marriage by a son of Elimelech. The migration of Elimelech proved disastrous, but God overruled his failure and enhanced the friendship of Ruth to expedite the sovereign purpose of the coming Messiah.

O Lord, help us daily to keep our eyes on Thee and cause our feet to walk in Thy paths.

Wednesday, April 5th Ruth 1:19-22; 2:1-7

"Let me now go . . . and glean" (2:2).

Naomi's return was a sad experience. She had previously spoken of her grief (1:13). The city of Bethlehem was moved by her return. There is a play on words; "Naomi" means "pleasant," but "Mara" means "bitterness" (1:20). Elimelech's family must have been well known and much loved in Bethlehem. The devotion of Ruth (1:16) was proved practically: "she has continued from early morning until now without resting even for a moment" (2:7, R.S.V.).

Lord, grant Thy grace that we may work unceasingly for Thee.

Ruth 2:8-23

"It hath fully been shewed me, all that thou hast done" (v. 11).

The evidence of Ruth's love for Naomi was in her heart but also in her hands. From Boaz's statement (v. 11), it seems that he compared Ruth's venture of love with Abraham's venture of faith. Boaz not only granted to Ruth the full privilege of gleaning, he also provided for her personal comforts. We may judge the great quantity which Ruth would gather as a result of the liberal orders given to the servants of Boaz (vv. 15, 16). Naomi rejoiced not only in the favour shown to Ruth but also in the grace of God in guidance: "Blessed be he by the Lord" (v. 20, R.S.V.).

Truly, O Lord, Thou art mindful of Thy children.

Friday, April 7th

Ruth 3:1-18

"All that thou sayest unto me I will do" (v. 5).

Singular as the directions to Ruth may appear to be to us (vv. 3, 4), there was no impropriety in them. It was a method, conforming to prevailing ritual, by which a claim such as Ruth's was made. Boaz recognised Ruth's claim and spoke of her "kindness," using a Hebrew word which also means goodness, thus denoting her character. Ruth chose to accept the teaching of Naomi concerning the law of God (Deuteronomy 25:5-9), rather than seeking after a young man. Naomi imparted wisdom to Ruth (v. 18), inferring "Having done your part, rest in God!"

I would know Thy Word, O Lord, that I might obey Thee.

Ruth 4:1-22

"Blessed be the Lord, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman" (v. 14).

The gate, where business transactions were made, was the meeting place of Boaz and his kinsman who eagerly grasped at the opportunity to gain more for himself (v. 4). Not being willing to fulfil his obligation to Ruth, he handed the authority of redemption to Boaz, who was the

The empty Tomb

by F. F. L. Frost

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
CARLISLE

LET me strike the note of triumph with the words of J. S. Monsell's hymn :

Christ is risen ! Hallelujah !

Risen our victorious Head.

Sing His praises ! Hallelujah !

Christ is risen from the dead.

There was no thrill and ecstasy of resurrection in the hearts of the women who set out for the tomb before break of day ("when it was yet dark," John 20 : 1) in order to anoint the crucified One with sweet spices (Mark 16 : 1). The darkness of the early morning was consistent with the darkness of their own hearts as they journeyed toward the garden, but they were approaching the light of a day far beyond their expectation. Their unnecessary anxieties were expressed as they got nearer to the place of burial: "Who shall roll us away the stone?" Evidently the words of our Lord had not registered in the hearts of His followers as they had with His enemies. He had told them earlier that He would die and be raised again on the third day. The chief priests and Pharisees took this to heart. Going to Pilate they said, "Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while He was yet alive, After three days I will rise again" (Matthew 27 : 63). The tomb was sealed and watched on the grounds of these words of the Lord. From the darkness to the dawn these women came. They arrived when the sun was shining (Mark 16 : 2), to discover a miracle.

The miracle of the empty tomb

"And when they looked they saw that the stone was rolled away" from the door of the sepulchre. The effect of this miraculous opening of the tomb was terrifying to the sentries who had been keeping watch over the solitary resting place. The natural reaction one would expect from the soldiers would have been to close the tomb, but they had been disarmed of their military power by Divine intervention. "The angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it . . . And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men." With one great sweep of Divine power, man's elaborate precautions were cast aside. The angel sitting and the soldiers lying prostrate as dead men seem to bear out Psalm 2 : 4 : "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh : the Lord shall have them in derision."

The necessity of the empty tomb

This was not to release the Saviour, who had triumphed over death, but to show that He was no longer there. Matthew records, "And behold, there was a great earthquake"; the margin says "there had been a great earthquake." This seems likely to have coincided with the moment when the Lord of life burst the gates of Hades, to retentant His glorified body. The closed-up tomb could not prevent His escape. In that glorified state He burst in upon His disciples: "When the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in their midst." Could a sealed tomb hold back the risen, glorified Christ? To leave the stone in position when the tomb was empty would only conceal the truth of the resurrection, therefore an angel descended and rolled away the stone to give evidence that Jesus had risen from the dead as He said He would. The empty tomb revealed the graveclothes still in position. From these the Lord had extricated Himself ere He departed. Two angels sat, one at the head and the other at the foot, to prevent the evidential clothing from being removed, so giving the lie to the proffered excuse, "His disciples came by night, and stole Him away while we slept" (Matthew 28 : 13).

The glory of the empty tomb

The angel said to the women, "Fear not ye." The soldiers were out cold—"as dead men." Then came the good news, "He is not here : for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." The thrill, the assurance and the glory came when they saw that He was alive from the dead : "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." Mary's response was "Rabboni"; Thomas's was "My Lord and my God." The glory of the empty tomb is our justification: "and was raised again for our justification" (Romans 4 : 25).

JESUS CHRIST—LORD!

Notes of a sermon preached at a recent united baptismal service.

THERE are many points of emphasis in a baptismal service. It is a way of declaring that the candidates have already made the great decision and have accepted the Lord Jesus as Saviour and of testifying that they have died to the old way of life and have been raised in Christ to a new, richer one. The point I wish to emphasise is that the declaration is being made that Jesus Christ is to be LORD in the lives of these candidates.

The Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles show that this note was sounded clearly and insistently by the Early Church. On the Day of Pentecost Peter declared: "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Paul wrote to the Romans, "This word of faith is our message, that if you acknowledge that Jesus is Lord, and if you believe in your heart that God raised Him from the dead, you will be saved."

Thus the Early Church emphasis, but Dr. Scroggie said of the twentieth century Church: "There are many Christians who know Jesus Christ as Saviour, but do not know Him as Lord."

What does the Lordship of Christ mean? What are its involvements its implications? These are questions of vital importance for us, as they certainly were for the Early Church!

Tullie House, Carlisle's museum, holds many interesting discoveries connected with the Roman occupation. For me, the centre of interest was the room containing altars which had been excavated, this one dedicated to Astarte, that one to Jupiter, another with the words, "To Astarte—thou seest me." My imagination conjured the scene when a Christian in some part of the empire faced a Roman governor. Something like this ensued: "Burn incense to Caesar and call him Lord." "I cannot—Jesus Christ is my Lord!"

For refusing to do such a simple thing thousands were tortured and martyred. It was so simple and so dangerous. The lordship of Christ meant much to that Early Church and therein lay part of the secret of her power. We have neglected this, hence this is a reason for our weakness.

What are the implications of that Lordship? This may be answered by considering four ways in which the word "Lord" was used in Bible days.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

A title given to a husband

Peter tells us that Sarah called Abraham Lord. The word was not used in cowering fear, but in deep affection by a wife who loved her husband. The hall-mark of the marriage bond is an undivided affection: "and forsaking all other, cleave thee only unto . . ." There are broken hearts and homes across our nation because of divided affections. The book of Hosea reveals a broken-hearted God because Israel loved someone else and could no longer adoringly call Him "Lord." There are happy homes in Britain because of undivided affections and marriage bonds with no other rivals.

In the Psalms a singer breaks out, "I love the Lord"! Do we? Are there no other rivals, no divided affections? Can we sing:

Thee will I love, my Strength, my Tower;

Thee will I love, my Joy, my Crown;

Thee will I love with all my power,

In all Thy works and Thee alone;

Thee will I love till the pure fire

Fills my whole soul with strong desire.

Their wedding was near and she said to her grandfather, "Tom and I have agreed that Jesus will have first place in our lives." The old man smiled, and said gently, "And second?" "Well, yes," she said. "And third?" he went on. "But, grandpa, where do we come in?" "You don't," was the reply!

The title given to a master

It was the accepted rule of that time. The hall-mark of the slave/master relationship was unquestioning obedience. The slave had no will but his master's; he could not say "I'll please myself." Paul, after his conversion, took a new interest in the slave/master relationship with the result that he commenced his letters: "Paul, a slave of Jesus Christ," and he gave his Master unquestioning obedience. With pride he spoke of his Master to the passengers and crew of a ship—"whose I am, and whom I serve."

During a battle Napoleon saw that an enemy-occupied farmhouse was hindering victory and he ordered up a battery of artillery to demolish it. As the salvoes were being fired he noticed the battery officer's face was tear-stained and, after the engagement was over, he sent for him and asked, "Why the tears, captain?" "Sire, that was my home," came the reply.

Is He really Lord? He says to us, "If ye love Me, keep my commandments." Can we say with David, "I delight to do Thy will, O my God"?

The title given to the emperor

"My lord the king" was the accepted mode of address in those days. The vital factor in the king/subject relationship was unswerving loyalty. How important that a king should have round him subjects who will be loyal in all weathers and on whom he may depend, subjects in whom there will be no fickleness. In one of the blackest hours of his reign subjects of David came to him with the word, "We are ready to do whatsoever the lord our king shall appoint" (2 Samuel 15:15).

In 1745 Charles Edward Stuart returned to Scotland in a bid to regain the crown for the House of Stuart. After the shambles of Culloden the prince was a wanted man with a £30,000 ransom on his head, yet during the succeeding months he moved among his wretchedly poor Highlanders and not one thought of betraying his prince. There was undivided loyalty!

The night in which He was betrayed Jesus voiced one of the most moving of all His utterances: "Ye are they which have continued with Me in all My tribulations"—words addressed to the eleven after Judas had gone out to betray Him. Could He say such words to us? We may sing, "In all my heart and life, Lord Jesus, be altogether King," but would it ring true? Are we true to Him in the home, office, factory, shipyard, school, college, where we are surrounded by His enemies? It is far from easy. Can we sing:

*True-hearted, whole-hearted, faithful and loyal,
King of our lives, by Thy grace will we be?*

The title given to Jesus Christ in recognition of His Deity

Dr. William Barclay points out that in the Greek translation of the Old Testament "Lord" "is the regular translation of the sacred name Jehovah" and he shows that in taking this title and applying it to Christ the early Christians worshipped and revered Him as co-equal with the Father and the Holy Spirit. This was pointed out by Pliny the Younger in a letter to the Emperor Trajan, in which he stated that the Christians sang hymns that were "addressed to Christ as God." It meant, and this was why the early Christians could not burn incense on the altar to Caesar, that Christ could have no rival. It meant this also: an unconditional surrender! In the words of Michael Green, "They would not bow the knee or sprinkle incense to Caesar. How could they? They belonged to another divi filius; they owed allegiance to another imperator; they were securely related to God through another pontifex maximus. Both Christ and Caesar claimed world dominion. A Christian could not consistently say 'Caesar is Lord' if he professed 'Jesus is Lord' (Evangelism in the Early Church).

Like Thomas, they said "My Lord and my GOD" and they both worshipped Him and gave themselves to Him in unconditional surrender. In that room in Jerusalem, just after the first Easter, the apostles are all there. Jesus appears and, turning to Thomas, shows him the wounds of Calvary. It is enough for Thomas—it is too much for Thomas! The love "so amazing, so Divine" overpowers him and the words burst out, "My Lord and my God!" He is captivated by the Christ of the cross.

So was Jim Elliott, who, seven years before he was martyred in Ecuador, concluded a letter: "Yours in the clutches of the cross."

Has He captivated us? "In His hands and feet are nailprints"—but do they mean anything to us? Said the late Dr. S. D. Gordon, "In every heart there is a throne and a cross. If self is on the throne, Christ is on the cross. If Christ is on the throne, then self is on the cross."

Is He LORD ?

ELIM NEWS

GREAT YARMOUTH Pastor: J. Flowers

"My friend wants to be saved" was the request from one of our Crusaders after a meeting recently. How thrilling to know that young people testify to school friends and what a joy to lead her friend to the Saviour! The new convert has been a regular attender, has started taking part in worship, and has invited a further friend. "Each one reach one" is often God's way to multiply His Church! It is a joy to see the young people being led on by God. We recently held a baptismal service when five people followed their Lord through the waters.

The church now has its own bookstall, which has brought about a real interest in Christian books and has been a help in witness. We are reaching 100 homes a month with Challenge and already a number of good contacts have been made. We praise God for every manifestation of His blessing.

Plans are now well in hand for our campaign in April with extra prayer through to the campaign date. Will you please join us in asking God for a real breakthrough in the area?

J. FLOWERS.

HADLEIGH Pastor: R. F. Stripp

We praise God that there is the spirit of expectancy in the fellowship as we seek to press forward for God in this needy area.

We were privileged to have a Twenty Town Crusade led by Pastors Alexander Johnston and John Harrison. The ministry of these brethren was a great blessing and eternity alone will reveal the lasting results achieved. In particular the children's work was greatly strengthened, children being added to the Sunday school and a mid-week Children's Special being established under the leadership of Mr. John Pease.

Two important projects are in hand at present. These give us great encouragement: the installation of a baptistry and the building of a garage to house the new minibus which we hope to acquire later this year by the Green Shield Stamp method. To date we have nearly 300 books out of a total of 1,200 required!

The activities of the church are now circulated regularly in the area by a newsletter, edited and produced by Mr. Russ Reid.

Our Sunday school teachers and a group of fifteen children recently sat for the Scripture Union Bible contest. Four teachers also took the teachers' paper.

BOURNEMOUTH, Winton

Pastor: G. N. Backhouse

At a recent Presbytery rally our church was filled to overflowing. Not only were there members of the Elim churches in the Presbytery, but it was also good to see friends from other churches.

The hearty singing by the congregation and by the united choir drawn from those who had sung in campaigns by Don Summers and organised by Joe Fudge, who conducted, helped the rally to go with a swing. We were pleased to welcome the group from Yeovil, who contributed several items in song. Our speaker, Pastor Felix Lloyd-Smith, well known in Elim circles, ministered at the rally in his own inimitable way.

Pastor Lloyd-Smith was at the Winton church for a series of meetings during the week and on the Sunday following the Presbytery rally and his challenging ministry was a means of blessing and encouragement. (MRS.) D. F. KEMP.

usher at the communion services and passes on "a wee word" for the Lord, despite his ninety years.

Their home has always had an open door to all pastors past and present and many must look back with gratitude and thanksgiving for their fellowship and hospitality. We want to thank them again for their contribution to the church in the past and to wish them God's richest blessing for the future.

HULL, City Temple

Close on 250 people gathered at the farewell service of Pastor and Mrs. J. McBurney, who ministered faithfully to us for three and a half years. No doubt one of the outstanding memories he will have of the City Temple is the number of babies he dedicated—645!

Many in the church today came to know the Lord during His ministry and many will remember him for his help.

The choir which he formed sang four of his favourite pieces and other items were given by Mrs. McBurney and church members. The pastor ministered the Word and left us with the verse 1 Samuel 12 : 3. A retiring love offering in appreciation of their ministry was taken up.

WESTCLIFF-ON-SEA

Pastor : J. J. B. Hounsome

Despite the semi-blackout, with many of the street lights still turned off, the Westcliff church was well filled for the induction service of Pastor J. J. B. Hounsome.

Mr. Hounsome had arrived in Westcliff in sad circumstances, as our previous minister, Mr. Toft, had been laid to rest only a week earlier.

Friends from sister churches in the borough of Southend-on-Sea joined with us in welcoming Mr. Hounsome to the church. The service was conducted by Pastor H. Burton-Haynes, the District Superintendent of the Eastern Presbytery, in his usual gracious manner. The church secretary, Mr. W. C. V. Loveland, on behalf of the church, welcomed Mr. Hounsome and pledged the support of all officers and members in endeavouring to extend the cause of Christ in Westcliff. Pastor D. W. Anthony, the presbytery secretary, gave a warm welcome on behalf of the presbytery. Mr. and Mrs. R. Tween from Chelmsford ministered in song.

In giving the charge to minister and church, Pastor L. Reeves reminded the church of the story in the Book of Samuel when the people of Israel were challenged to put away strange gods and to prepare their hearts. When the people responded to this challenge, God answered with power and "thundered with a great thunder," so that the enemy was discomfited. The same God can thunder in Westcliff today!

At the close of the service the ladies of the church provided refreshments so that members and friends could have a time of fellowship with their new minister.

Pastor and Mrs. Newman's diamond wedding anniversary

"I HAVE never chased a girl in my life," boasted the young soldier, proudly parading his smart Coldstream Guards uniform before the inhabitants of a Sussex village.

"You will have to now," blurted a cheeky young girl called Kate Underwood—and she grabbed his bearskin hat and ran off down the road.

Private John Newman swallowed his pride and set off in pursuit. He returned not only with his hat but with the heart of seventeen-year-old Kate as well. The courtship flourished and within two years the couple were married. That was in 1912. Rev. and Mrs. J. Newman recently celebrated their diamond wedding at their home, Epple Cottage, Corscombe. More than twenty relatives and neighbours gathered for a thanksgiving service and most of them stayed on for a special celebration lunch.

The Newmans received over fifty cards and telegrams, including one from the Queen, and another from the Corscombe villagers. Both Mr. Newman (eighty-two) and his wife (eighty) were born in Sussex. She worked in domestic service until their marriage. Mr. Newman's military service lasted from 1907 to 1919, during which time he did four years' war service in Europe and rose to the rank of sergeant.

His service to the Elim Pentecostal Church has been equally loyal. As long ago as 1924 the couple founded a church at Horsham, Sussex. They spent eleven years there and later did church work at Chichester (seven years), Chesham, Buckinghamshire (three), Rye Park (one), Merthyr Tydfil (three) and Andover (two).

They retired to Corscombe sixteen years ago for the benefit of Mrs. Newman's health.

The couple's formula for a happy marriage is: "Have respect and consideration for each other and put your trust in God at all times." Their sons, Jack and Bert, agree with that. They are both Elim ministers, Jack at Coventry and Bert at Sale, Cheshire.

Said Jack: "My mother has been a semi-invalid since they came to Dorset, but her health is better now than it has been for years. We can thank father for that. He has been terrific in his dedication to her."

Mr. and Mrs. Newman have four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Rest

I must know Thy perfect will ;
Only then my heart is still,
All my wonderings must cease
As I journey on in peace.

Jesus, be my Guide just now,
Only Thou canst show me how
To determine where I'll walk
And with Thee as Friend to talk.

Nothing human I can do
Will make me to be like You.
Thy Spirit only—sent from Thee—
Makes this wondrous change in me.

When my heart in torment sighs
To the secret place it flies,
Only there its peace can find,
For Thou alone art always kind.

Malchus—The last miracle of Christ's earthly life

Matthew 26 : 47-56

Notes of the address given in the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday

THE events of Easter are well known, but there are two which are known better than any other : Calvary and the Resurrection. Let me capture your thoughts on a lesser-known incident which is an important part of the Easter message.

Many things took place just before Jesus died on the cross to bring us forgiveness. In the Garden of Gethsemane—the place of prayer for Jesus—the scene was set for the final acts of Jesus as a free man. From there he was taken as a prisoner, hypocritically given a trial in Pilate's hall and from thence He walked the Dolorosa road to Calvary.

Let us turn our minds back to an incident in the garden. Jesus had resorted there to pray, but, on rising from His knees, a band of soldiers and civilians led by Judas approached Him and His disciples in the darkness of the night.

One can imagine their flickering torches and the clang of their weapons as they moved into the peaceful atmosphere of that place of prayer. Their intent was clear to Peter. They had come to arrest Jesus, but he was not going to let that happen without putting up a fight. A flash of his sword at the nearest person to him and there fell to the ground the severed ear of Malchus, the high priest's servant. In the meantime, Jesus was held prisoner by the soldiers, but, seeing what had happened to the unfortunate servant. He asked for release in order to place that ear back where it belonged. This, then, was the last healing miracle Jesus performed before He died on Calvary's cross.

What compassion Jesus had for this man ! Can you think of anything which was more likely to cause a violent reaction than the position Jesus was in at that time ? There He was, being brutally treated and violently assaulted. The reaction of most of us would have been to retaliate with as much force as possible so as to make our escape, but not Jesus ! Malchus was full of hatred and bitterness, but that did not reduce the concern of Jesus for him in his stricken condition. He stopped all that was going on around Him in order to ask permission to perform this, His last miracle, before going to die for us all at Calvary's cross. This incident clearly teaches three facts.

Jesus loves all men

Malchus is a type of us all. Undoubtedly he had certain qualities and abilities for which he was chosen to be a part of that house of religion at whose head was Caiaphas the high priest. Malchus must surely have been a religious man. I was that very religion which had prejudiced him against Jesus to the point where he boiled over in enmity against Jesus and resorted to brutality and violence in order to put Jesus out of his life and consequently that of others. Is there anything quite so cruel as that spirit which a cold, formal religion can produce ? But Jesus loved him for all that. What kept Malchus from believing in Jesus was religion. It could be that and other things with us, but make no mistake about it, Jesus will go on loving us and will always seek to bring us into the orbit of that love. It does not matter what is the colour of our skin, the length of our hair, where we live, our rise or fall in society—no matter what we are, who we are, where we come from—we may be gripped by drugs, alcohol or pornographic filth—Jesus loves us and wants us to be saved from ourselves and from our sins and to be lifted to a place of joyful living. “Love has a face” and that face is the face of Jesus. Yes, Jesus loves all men. Paul was overwhelmed by the love Jesus had for him, for he said : “The Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me” (Galatians 2 : 20).

Jesus rebukes force

Look again at the scene. In John 18 : 3 we read that the approaching crowd “cometh with lanterns and torches and weapons.” To such a display of force Peter answered by force and, by so doing, wounded and maimed Malchus. It is significant that Jesus said to Peter "Put up thy sword." Love is a greater force than weapons of any kind and Jesus loves people so much that it cuts Him to the heart to see them hurt, broken, sick or sinful. The latter part of that verse is Jesus's answer to force: "the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" The cross of Calvary is Jesus's answer to force. Men can grow long spiked thorns and hurl them at Jesus, but He will wear them as a crown and say, "Father, forgive them"! Men can spit upon Jesus, ridicule and laugh at Him, leave Him to die, and all He will say is, "Father, forgive them." That is the calibre of His love and such love is so amazing and so divine as to demand our souls, our lives, our all.

Napoleon said "I have built an empire on force and it has fallen in ruins at my feet, but Jesus built His kingdom on love and it stands for ever."

Jesus asks to help, to heal and to save

The healing of Malchus was not only the last of Christ's miracles in His earthly life, it was also unique, because He had to ask to be allowed to perform it. Those hands which had been stretched forth to touch and heal the leper, the blind and the lame, to raise the dead, to perform miracles of provision and multiplication were now bound behind Him. Jesus asked His captors to release their hold for a while so that He could heal the wounded man. How true to His outlook this was. He still asks for our permission to save us from sin. "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him" (Revelation 3:20).

Omnipotence stands unable to help until we open the door. There He stands, able and willing to forgive the past, fill our lives with joyful purity, set the peace of God flowing into our hearts and all that is necessary is for us to ask Him to do it. His love cannot be put off, but it can be refused. All that stands between us and a new life with Him is the frailty of our own human wills. Malchus was healed, but after that blessed moment there is an ominous silence, for he is never mentioned again. Did he go out of that garden the same man as he came into it? He may have done, but let it not be true of you. Give your life into His sacred hands for all He wants is YOU, and all you need is He.

CRUSADE IN BOLTON

JUST after the second world war Elim sent its pioneer evangelist, P. S. Brewster, to Bolton for a major crusade. Many felt that it was a bad, hard time for a crusade, yet the Holy Spirit moved in a mighty way and many were saved and healed in the marquee in Moor Lane in 1948.

The church, despite hard times in recent years, purchased a magnificent church building right in the centre of this large town.

Elim has accepted this new challenge and evangelist John Cooper is to hold a crusade in the town hall. Pastor Cooper was converted at Pastor Brewster's church and was guided into the ministry by this servant of God, so a pupil of the pioneer evangelist is to campaign in the same town as did his father in the Lord twenty-four years ago.

Everything seems similar. Everyone agrees that this is a hard unresponsive generation, just as it was then, but the same mighty Lord will also be there and we believe that He will do the same mighty things.

We ask that you will please pray for the all-Bolton crusade at BOLTON TOWN HALL conducted by Elim evangelist JOHN COOPER from April 16th to 30th.

OUR Easter meetings have now passed into history and we thank God for them and for all that the Lord does through these marvellous annual festivals. Now we look forward to our Conference at Blackpool beginning on May 6th. There is every sign that we shall have record crowds this year and we invite your prayers that God will be pleased to bless us in a wonderful way.

One of the galaxy of inspiring things about the gospel is the startling way in which Scripture makes the victories of Christ a personal matter for the Christian. There is something breath-taking about the sublime statement in Colossians 3:1, "If ye then be risen with Christ." All the teaching of the remainder of the book derives from this.

Because of our personal knowledge of and sharing in the Resurrection of our Lord and Saviour, we are exhorted to "seek those things which are above"—naturally, because this is "where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." As we share the Resurrection it is only to be expected that our eyes will be upon Jesus, the risen, glorified Lord, therefore it is perfectly reasonable to advise: "Set your affections on things above."

The difference between living the Christ-life and not doing so is expressed in terms of death and life, with the backward look: "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God," and the forward look: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory." This is the abundant life of which Christ spoke—full of promise and therefore truly eternal, a life of challenge and blessing, the Christ-life.

Yes, it all comes out of the Resurrection—"If ye then be risen with Christ"! Our Saviour is unique. Of no other so-called god is there even an attempt to prove that he died and rose again, but our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, is alive! Not only are there the authentications of Scripture, but Christians know Him in a vital, personal way.

It is a proud thing to be a Christian, for "Christ . . . is our life"!

More Williamu

WILLIAMU is now living with his third wife.

"What happened to your second wife?" I asked.

"Her father took her from me. I decided to poison him," said Williamu.

"Put poison in his food?" I asked.

"Oh, no," he said, "this is what I did. I rattled my bao (board) and called my spirits to a consultation as to the ingredients of the poison I should use. I caught a kinyonga (chameleon), killed it and stretched it. I then wrapped it in a piece of dark cloth, which served as a shroud to bury it in. After several days I dug it up and boiled it with two tree medicines until the mixture was dry and then pounded it into a fine powder. I compounded an antidote which I used whenever I handled the poison, which was very dangerous, even penetrating the skin through the pores. Then, for seven days, I concentrated all my spirit powers and personal energy on cursing my father-in-law. Just before dawn each morning I stood facing the direction of his village and, for half an hour, I called his spirit into my power. Finally, all was ready. At 2 a.m., in complete darkness, I took my horn of poison, stripped myself naked, washed all over with the antidote, and slipped stealthily through the bush to his village. I went to the windward side and sprinkled some of the powder in the air, cursing my father-in-law by name. I had no desire to hurt any of the family. The next day my father-in-law was very ill and eventually all his skin came off."

"But he lived?" I asked.

"Yes," said Williamu, "he called in an mtambuzi (diviner). The diviner called his spirit for a consultation to discover who had bewitched my father-in-law. The spirit replied that it was I (Williamu). 'Can I be healed by herbs?' the spirit was asked. 'No,' said the spirit, 'you must consult a certain witch-doctor (naming him). He will help you. Go to him quickly.' He was healed after three months," said Williamu, "but it cost him quite a lot in fees for the spirit consultations. He became very afraid of me and my fame spread far and wide."

Because he has become such a good servant of Yesu, Williamu is now away from his church among the Masai. He is in Bible school. A future pastor?—maybe, for nothing is impossible to this mighty Yesu whom we preach!

Letter to the Editor

DEAR MR. WALKER,

Pastor Tee's further article on the "Jesus Only" theme has prompted the question: Has the rise of this teaching been encouraged by the trend of evangelicalism over the past few decades? Spurgeon saw the danger in his day and warned: "Nowadays there appears to be in some minds a forgetfulness of the Father. Christ is loved, for He died, but many seem to look upon the Father as having no share in the wondrous work of redemption" (Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit, 25, 170).

Commenting on Spurgeon's observations Iain Murray writes: "This unbiblical Christ-centredness came to have a serious effect not only upon the content of the gospel message, but also upon the manner in which it was presented to men. The 'winning' of sinners became more important than the declaration of the divine glory which is revealed both in His grace and in His wrath. Such a premium was put on 'successful evangelism' that the truth that God is honoured in His judgments upon sin almost ceased to be heard. As Spurgeon saw, if the true revelation of God in His holiness and righteousness is not maintained, a type of 'concern' for sinners which is contrary to Scripture may easily be encouraged" (The Banner of Truth, page 15, January 1972).

While, as in other matters, it is dangerous to

Christian ethics

by W. J. Maybin

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
CROYDON

THIS series deals with Biblical ethics, though it should be remembered that there is a system of non-Christian ethics. The term "ethics" is a derivation from the Greek ethos and has reference to manner of life or conduct. The English word "manners" denotes good conduct and corresponds to the Greek word in 1 Corinthians 15:33 when Paul refers to "good manners." It may be argued that non-religious ethical speculation, in a sense, paved the way for a restating of Christian ethics, by its inquiry into the source and nature of moral obligation. Christianity, rightly understood, answers the fundamental query of all schools of thought: "Why must I act rightly?" It also supplies the only adequate answer to the problem: "How am I to do right?" Natural ethics tend to ditch this latter problem, but Christianity points to the moral wherewithal.

Christianity sets the standard and then provides man with the ability to adhere to that standard. Such is the transformation, that Christ becomes part of us, thus giving us a new, Divine nature, which not only longs after spiritual things, but also provides the Divine enabling to achieve what God requires. One writer points out that Christianity's contribution to the problems of personal and corporate behaviour does not lie merely, or even chiefly, in the teaching of Jesus, but in the significance of what God has done for man in the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Sydney Cave writes in The Christian Way, "To know what God would have us do, we need to remember what God Himself has done."

The word "ethics" can be used to designate a way of life, but the New Testament uses this term with distinct reference to the way of Christ, who said, "I am the way" (John 14:6). The early believers were at length referred to as "the people of the Way." So comments John Murray in Principles of Conduct, "If ethics is concerned with manner of life and behaviour, Biblical ethics is concerned with the manner of life and behaviour which the Bible requires and which the faith of the Bible produces."

Definition

The definition is found in the name: it is a science of ethics expounded in the light of the Christian gospel. John Murray goes on: "Biblical ethics has paramount concern with the heart, out of which are the issues of life." The heart of every problem is the problem of the heart and the Christian gospel makes it resoundingly clear that God undertakes to pardon the sinner and to restore him to fellowship with Himself. The great task of Christian doctrine is to examine and to elucidate these tremendous facts of redemption and reconciliation, while it remains the task of Christian ethics to show Christians how to live in the light of what God in Christ has accomplished. Thus doctrine and ethics are very closely related. The Gospel is always verified in human relationships and has far-reaching implications.

Dynamic

The total impotence of fallen nature is written clearly across the pages of the Word of God and in daily life. The sinner cannot please God since he is out of harmony with God and, as a result, out of harmony with himself and his fellows. Man cannot live with himself, therefore he cannot live with others. One theologian writes: "World wars are nothing but macrocosmic signs of the psychic wars waging inside microcosmic, muddled souls." War is but a projection of the conflict within the heart of man, as James wrote: "What about the feuds and struggles that exist among you—where do you suppose they come from? Can't you see that they arise from conflitting passions within yourselves ? ” (4 : 1, Phillips).

A long, hard look at the professing Church today shows that, to a very large degree, she has lost her impact upon society. One writer argues very succinctly that the Church should not just be a barometer echoing the views and assumptions of public opinion, but a thermostat which regulates the morals of society. We must become concerned about ourselves and the Church of which we form a part and seek to get back to the power which we have undoubtedly lost.

Many varied remedies are suggested, differing according to the theological positions of those who make them. Traditionalists advocate a return to age-long ritual. Some see hope in keeping the Church in step with modern trends, until we are left with a Christianity that is so unlike its New Testament counterpart as to be almost unrecognisable. Others are prepared to pin their hopes to modern ecumenical trends. Many are still convinced that their “social gospel” is the way to proceed. Tolstoi, however, blundered in applying the Sermon on the Mount practically without insisting on the need for spiritual regeneration and he gathered around him a conclave of intellectual faddists, mere “spring-cleaners.” The Evangelicals have concentrated on personal evangelism, seeking to reach the individual with the gospel, knowing that the conversion of society rests with the conversion of the individual. In this respect “Christians cannot contract out of their civic and corporate responsibilities” (Jost De Blank, This is Conversion). Righteousness must prevail in every department of our lives, within and outside the Church, otherwise we renounce our responsibilities as Christian citizens.

Demand

God is an ethical God and His holiness demands righteousness in the entire realm of man’s personality. This righteousness is not inherent, or due to a natural process ; it is communicated by a good, righteous God. So Christian morality finds its starting-point in theology. Thus argues Charles F. D’Arcy in Christian Ethics and Modern Thought : “Goodness, in order to be real, must be from the heart outwards.”

If the sum total of the Bible ethic is the sum total of the Bible revelation, then it is essential to direct our thinking first to the Old Testament.

Judaism formed the primary soul out of which Christianity grew and in this respect the Ten Commandments form the core of the Biblical ethic. They are concise, exhaustive and complete. There is not one duty of man upon which they do not offer guidance. They concern themselves with the most fundamental of our relationships—first to God and then to our fellows. For the Hebrews, ethics were, from the first, set in a theological framework.

The Writing Prophets proclaimed Jehovah as the Lord of morality. For those great pen-men of the prophetic section of the Old Testament, belief must behave. The key verse is Micah 6 : 8, where Jehovah demanded righteousness from His own people.

When certain verses in Isaiah and Jeremiah are considered, liberal theologians argue that these prophets were denouncing sacrifice (Isaiah 1 : 11, 66 : 3 ; Jeremiah 6 : 20 ; 14 : 12). The school of Wellhausen held that the prophets and the priests were working in opposition one to the other, that the prophets were more concerned about ethics and behaviour. A fair investigation of the situation reveals that it was not sacrifices that the prophets denounced, but the perversion of the system, for the Israelites were linking iniquity and worship in an unholy alliance.

Jesus condemned this state of affairs and He found Himself in direct opposition to the religion of the Jews in His day.

In the New Testament “the Ten Commandments are not abrogated, but deepened in their demands” (Sydney Cave). Jesus made it clear

Living Letters

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

ON most mornings when Timothy and Amanda went to school they walked to the end of the road with the postman. One morning the two children noticed that his sack was more full than usual.

"Your sack looks heavier this morning!" said Amanda.

"It is indeed," said Mr. Postman. "I have many more letters than usual to deliver."

"Do you like being a postman, carrying that heavy sack on your back every day?" asked Timothy.

"I like it very much," said Mr. Postman. "All the people who write their letters to relatives and friends are relying on me to deliver them safely and it makes me very happy to know that someone somewhere is waiting eagerly for me each morning, hoping that I will drop a letter through their letterbox. We all like to receive a letter or a birthday card, don't we?"

"Yes," said Amanda. "Our grandmother writes to us every week and we are always pleased to hear from her."

"Did you know," asked Mr. Postman, "that God sends letters too?"

"How can He?" asked Timothy. "I've never seen any of God's letters!"

"Well," said Mr. Postman, "we are God's letters and God's letters are very important. He doesn't use pen and paper as we do in case His letters should get lost or destroyed. God uses us—boys, girls, men and women. When we give our hearts and lives to Him He makes us pure and free from sin and He tells us to go into all the world and tell others what He can do for them too. We find God's letters all over the world, for Christians in every country are telling God's message to those who do not know Him."

"I would love to be one of God's letters!" said Amanda.

"And so would I," said Timothy. "But what is this message from God that we must tell to others?"

"It's just this," said Mr. Postman. "That God's only Son, Jesus, loves us and died for us. If we believe this and tell others this wonderful news we can be living letters for God."

that He did not come to destroy the law, but to fulfil it (Matthew 5:17). Examination of the Sermon on the Mount shows that Jesus interpreted and applied several of these commandments as relating to the kingdom He came to establish. The law did not cease to have relevance when the Mosaic economy passed away, indeed "love is the fulfilling of the law" (Romans 13:10). Love does not take the place of the law, but fulfils it. Augustine was wide of the mark in one phase of his life when he said, "Love and do what you like." Love will do what God likes, for when the love of God is operative in a life it creates affinity with and affection for the Object. So we find the Epistles depicting a broad ethical pattern.

Christianity must emerge from the sacristy to the place where men toil and do business in order to verify Christian life in the whirl of the secular. The principles of the eternal city must be lived out in the cities of the world, since the saint is "in Christ" and "at Philippi" (Philippians 1:1)—the Christian life is lived positionally in Christ, but practically at Philippi, Croydon, Cardiff or Carlisle. We have to live in two worlds at the same time. May God give us grace!

Book review

Pathway to Power, by Leslie Davison. Published by Fountain Trust. Price 50p, postage and packing 5p extra.

In this study, comprising four lectures, Dr. Davison examines Early Church thought on the Doctrine of the Spirit and traces the development and use of the charismata through the centuries up to the modern outpouring.

The author sees as one of the factors of the Pentecostal awakening as we know it today the eighteenth-century revival of interior religion. He is satisfied that the Wesleys had in their own way received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit. Quoting John, "The testimony of the Spirit is an inward impression on the soul. . . . Let it be observed I do not mean hereby that the Spirit of God testifies this by an outward voice; no nor always by an inward voice. . . . But he so works upon the soul by his immediate influence and by a strong though inexplicable operation, that the stormy wind and troubled waves subside, and there is a secret calm, the heart resting as in the arms of Jesus, and the sinner being clearly satisfied that God is reconciled, that all his iniquities are forgiven and his sins covered." Dr. Davison concludes that it would be difficult to find a better description of the experience now called the Baptism in the Spirit.

To my mind the book confuses the witness of the Spirit, the Fruit of the Spirit and the Baptism in the Spirit and judges the manifestation of one or of all three to be the Baptism. There does not seem to be any clear emphasis on tongues as being the major evidence.

There is confusion, too, on the subject of the Gifts of the Spirit. The nine listed in 1 Corinthians 12 were not intended, in the author's view, to be exhaustive or schematic. Commentary on one gift, that of the Word of Knowledge, will suffice: "For long ages the human mind was in blinkers and progress painfully slow, but in these last centuries and especially in these last decades the gift of the Word of Knowledge has been poured out on our sons and daughters as never before. But how dreadfully we have abused the gift! We need desperately to reclaim it, to show its spiritual origin, and to proclaim that only as we use it sacramentally, under the guidance of the Spirit, will it bring the immense blessings God wants to give us. I long to see the Charismatic movement producing great scientists, skilled technicians, fine artists and teachers who value knowledge and use it as a charisma, a gift of God." This is not the gift of the Word of Knowledge as I understand it to be!

A repeated call is made for adequate research to be conducted by competent, experienced investigators. It seems to me that this Neo-pentecostal radiates sincerity in his search for the truth. There is, generally speaking, much that we can learn from Neo-pentecostalism, but on the reading of this book I feel that there is a need for them to draw on the experience of the "old" Pentecostals, those who have held to and fought for the truth of Pentecost when it was not "à la mode," and when the way to survive was to form Pentecostal churches or assemblies.

This book is as disturbing as it is thought-provoking.

THE FAMILY ALTAR

The comment for April 8th ended as follows:
son of Rahab of Jericho (Matthew 1 : 5).

This was the beginning of the Messianic family within the Messianic nation, the marvel of God's grace in establishing the family which was to produce our Saviour—a beautiful heathen girl was led to Bethlehem and made the bride of Boaz. Gentiles were adopted into Christ's family!

Help us this day, O Lord, to live for Thee.

Ephesians 1 : 1-14

"That we should be to the praise of His glory" (v. 12).

After his introduction, Paul reveals the working of the Trinity in a threefold manner: the purpose of the Father (vv. 3-6), the redemption by the Son (vv. 7-12), and the sealing by the Spirit (vv. 13, 14). Note "hath blessed" (v. 3)—the past tense; it is completed, therefore it is there for us to accept. The provision is for all spiritual blessings, yet we often seem content to claim a meagre portion. Paul, time after time, brings us back to the cross to remind us of the price of our redemption—"His blood" (v. 7). The seal of the Spirit, the empowering for service, is the "earnest," meaning the instalment or proof, of our full inheritance (vv. 13, 14).

Lord, fulfil Thy purpose of redemption through us by Thy Spirit.

From T. H. Stevenson

THE Vatican, in a new publication, claims that the number of Roman Catholics increased from 526,500,000 in 1969 to 534,000,000 in 1971. In the same period, the number of Roman Catholic priests decreased from 350,000 to 347,000. I would consider that the latter is of more importance to the Vatican than the former and is rightly described as "one of the Church's major problems" discussed at the World Synod of Bishops held in Rome last year. In addition, the controversy concerning celibacy was discussed. Thousands of requests from priests to be released from this vow arrive each year and the hierarchies of countries, including Holland, officially urge a change in this law to be made within the Church of Rome. This has been refused, but Rome admits to another problem on this same subject: the established fact that, in many Latin South American countries and in other lands outside Europe, many priests live married lives under what might be described in our country as "common law."

Nevertheless, the immensity of members within the fold of the Vatican looks impressive and almost awesome to many people. There is, however, another side of the coin, when one looks at conditions in countries that are almost exclusively dominated by Rome. In Spain, for example, the chief prosecutor, Fernando Herrero Tejedor, has stated that six per cent of Spanish women between the age of fifteen and fifty are prostitutes, 2,000,000 of the country's 33,000,000 are alcoholics, and drug taking has doubled in the last year. In France a group of young priests from six dioceses recently met to discuss the problem which worries many priests more than the growth of unbelief: that of the baptised Catholics who are indifferent to their faith. They find particularly worrying the number of parents who send their children to Mass on Sundays but who do not go themselves. Gorgi Berent, the Dominican sociologist, divided French Catholics into four groups: the devout, whose religious observance goes beyond what the Church prescribes; the regulars at Sunday Mass; the paschal Catholics who only turn up at Church on Easter Sunday; and the seasonal Catholics who wish only to be baptised, married and buried in the Church. Priests are sometimes shocked by the casual attitude of this last group. "They ask me for a sacrament as one might ask for a drink in a pub," observed one priest. Come to think of it, Catholic France seems very similar to Protestant England.

We may glance also at Catholic Eire and consider the words of Dr. Noel Browne, a former Minister in the Republic's Government: "Why should any Northern Protestant in his sane senses

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. Coleman

JESUS is alive! He ever lives to make intercession for His people. His priesthood is unchangeable. Under the Aaronic priesthood, priests took office and died a few years later. Jesus lives for ever and so we have a Priest who remains for always.

Without doubt the temperaments of the priests would differ. Those who had suffered much would be more sympathetic with the sufferers who came to them. Did anyone suffer like this Man? He suffered in His body and in His Spirit. He understands all about us. Are you suffering in body? Go to Jesus, for He understands. Are you suffering temptation? He knows and He cares, for He was tempted in all points like us, yet without sin. Do you feel like giving up the fight? Remember that He was despised and rejected of men, a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, but He set His face like a flint to go to Jerusalem. Consider the High Priest, who loves you and makes intercession for you.

The hands of Jesus never grow weary. When the hands of Moses grew heavy with tiredness it was essential for Aaronic priests to hold them up. Jesus is never weary, He never slumbers or sleeps. If we go to Him at midday or midnight He is there to hear us.

Do we thank God for such a High Priest? He cares, He understands, and He is the same, yesterday and today and for ever.

"The shining ones"

OUR copy of The Pilgrim's Progress was presented to my husband in 1929 as an award for passing a Scripture examination set by the Wesleyan Methodist Sunday School Department. I came across it the other day and turned to my favourite passage, namely the crossing of the river of death by Christian and Hopeful. I read again of their encounter with "two men in raiment that shone like gold, also their faces shone as the light" and of the encouragement these "shining ones" gave to the pilgrims.

I have always included Moses the deliverer and Stephen the first Christian martyr in my personal category of "shining ones," for the Bible tells me that "When Moses came down from Mount Sinai he did not know that the skin of his face shone and sent forth beams by reason of his speaking with the Lord" (Amplified Bible). As for Stephen, we are told that the very Sanhedrin saw that his face had the appearance of the face of an angel. There have been and still are others who, to my mind, qualify as "shining ones." Our very dear brother the late Pastor Harry Toft was one of these.

I first made his acquaintance when he and his wife came to take over the pastorate of Ballysillan Elim Pentecostal Church in 1956. A very loving friendship developed between our two families and the more we got to know Mr. Toft the more we realised that his shining face was the result of his close communion with his Lord and his disciplined life of holiness. He truly had a beautiful shining face. I think he was like my conception of Jesus. I'm pretty sure that many of us know some well-loved Christian and in some real and yet intangible way we feel that they possess that rare radiance and beauty which we associate with Jesus. It is not so much a natural beauty of facial structure, complexion or colouring but the character of the Lord from within the soul revealed through the eyes and the gentle nobility of expression.

It is said that "the eyes are the windows of the soul" and this is true. Do you ever sit in a bus or train and look at the faces of your fellow passengers? I do and I speculate as to which ones are Christians, for I am convinced that there is an indefinable something about the true believer who abides in Christ. With many there is a positive radiance which lights up the countenance and which is indicative of a life of close fellowship with the Lord.

There is a verse in the hymn "The secret of His presence," by Ellen Lakshmi Goreh, from which dear brother Toft used to like to quote, which sums up beautifully the thoughts I have been seeking to convey:

Would you like to know the sweetness of the secret of the Lord?

Go and hide beneath His shadow; this shall then be your reward;

And whene'er you leave the silence of that happy meeting place,

You will bear the shining image of the Master in your face.

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"A shining face caused by contact with God! Shall not we, to whom the Master has said 'Follow Me,' get alone with Him and His blessed Word so habitually, with open or uncovered face, that is with eyesight unhindered by prejudice or self-seeking, that, mirroring the glory of His face, we shall more and more come to bear His very likeness upon our faces?" (S. D. GORDON).

LETTER TO THE EDITOR (continued)

generalise, one cannot help but feel that this "unbiblical Christ-centredness" ably dealt with by Pastor Tee in his articles is not entirely confined to the "Jesus Only" teaching. The Christian Church has to be constantly on its guard these days to present a balanced as well as a doctrinally true message.

Your very sincerely,

H. J. FISHLOCK.

The Cross

By Mark Blackford

Crusader secretary

THE cross of our Lord Jesus Christ is the central theme of Christianity, but it is also the most misunderstood.

The Wonder

When we think that God's very own Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, endured capital punishment publicly under the torture of the middle eastern sun at the hands of sinful men it fills our hearts with wonder. If we think that we have never sinned remember that God's Son would not have died had it not been for man's sin. Is not this the wonder of God's love for us?

The Warning

The cross demonstrates God's hatred of sin, for God is holy and His demands on men are holy. The cross portrays the judgment of God on sinful man, for when Christ took our sins His Father's wrath fell upon Him. He said "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Consider His words as He hangs there, His wounds invaded by flies and other insects, and not even the comfort of a hand to wipe the sweat from His brow.

The Welcome

To become a Christian one does not have to understand every doctrine of the faith, or even the sermons and miracles of the Lord, but no one can become a Christian without some knowledge of the cross. It has no "magic" on its own, for it stands for the price that Jesus Christ paid for us. Our sins are washed away only by the blood of Christ; NOTHING ELSE AVAILS! To accept the work of the cross means to be made whole and thus to learn to worship, but to reject it means weeping and wanting.

How do you stand?

A Prayer

By Terry D. Mullitt

who recently came to know Christ as Saviour

Lord Jesus look down on me, a poor sinner, and lead me into Thy kingdom. Let Thine eyes be attentive towards me. Take away from us our iniquities, we beseech Thee, O Lord, that we may be worthy to enter with pure minds into the Holy of Holies through Jesus Christ our Lord. We pray for the young people and we pray that the people of God will see the light of Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Message of the Cross

By Stephen Clarke

'Twas His love and my sin
That crowned Him with thorns.
'Twas His love and my sin
That made Him carry His cross.
'Twas His love and my sin
That nailed Him to the tree.
Yet 'twas His love for me
That made Him pay for my sin.
'Twas His love and my sin
That took Him there to the tree.
'Twas His love and my sin
That kept Him there on that cross.
'Twas His love and my sin
That pierced His dear side.
Yes, 'twas His love and blood
That saved me from my sin.

want to join the republic? In our record of fifty years of failure we cannot justify asking them to join us on political, social, or religious grounds. We have a Church as authoritarian as any South American republic, with a hierarchy as rigid as any in Europe. It has been totally unscrupulous in blocking desperately needed legislation and it has acted as an important contributor to the fact that we are a country with bad health services, dreadful housing and appalling neglect of old people."

Notes
by

J. R. Brown

Monday, April 10th Ephesians 1 : 15-23

"That ye may know" (v. 18).

Paul lifts us above the mundane into the super-abundant realm of life in the Spirit. We are given insight into the prayer of Paul (vv. 17-19), the power of God (vv. 20, 21) and the promise to the Church (vv. 22, 23). Paul prays "That ye may know." Knowledge, Scripturally speaking, is no mere mental appreciation of facts, but "being related to." To know God is to be related to Him. Only as we know do we grow in God. The power of God was demonstrated at Christ's resurrection and ascension to glory, where He reigns supreme. The promise to His Church is tremendous: He is the Head, the Church is His body and ALL things are under Him for the benefit of the Church.

Let us walk in Christ by the power of the Spirit.

Tuesday, April 11th Ephesians 2 : 1-10

"And hath raised us up" (v. 6).

Paul compares our past condition (vv. 1-3) with our present position (vv. 5-10). The poverty of the old life cannot be compared to the riches of the new life. Once we were bound to the world and the will of the flesh, now in Christ we are quickened (made alive) and raised up, faith being the means of communication and God's grace the power of salvation (v. 8), a power that not only creates us but also motivates us to service. Paul views with anticipation the prospect of God demonstrating the limitless riches of His unmerited favour toward us in Christ Jesus (v. 7), for God not only saves us, He also sustains us.

We can look up and stand in Christ who is our life.

Wednesday, April 12th Ephesians 2 : 11-22

"Made nigh" (v. 13).

Remembrance (v. 11) sharpens our gratitude and strengthens our faith. We are reminded of our past ungodly state—no hope, no citizenship of God's kingdom. "But now in Christ Jesus" is the bridge that spans the gulf of darkness and leads men to light and life, though it meant death for Christ. The Jew and Gentile are reconciled—changed from one condition to another—so as to remove all enmity and leave no impediment to unity and peace (vv. 16, 17). Paul uses the metaphor to describe the growth of Christ's Church of a temple being built, a dwelling-place for God (vv. 21, 22).

The indwelling of the Spirit is our strength and our glory.

Thursday, April 13th Ephesians 3 : 1-13

"The prisoner of Jesus Christ" (v. 1).

Paul's imprisonment in Rome was little more than house arrest (Acts 28 : 16, 30). In this calm atmosphere the Spirit revealed more clearly than ever before the high purpose of God and the glorious destiny of the Church. The course of thought begun in verse 1 is broken at the end of the verse and is not resumed until verse 14. Verses 2-13 contain a logical digression, a noble, majestic utterance of the highest things. The mysteries and glories revealed to Paul so overwhelmed him on recollection that he esteemed himself less than the least of all saints (v. 8). Paul's gospel was not simply teaching, nor a mere indication of a way of life, but "riches in incalculable measure," the riches of one bound to Christ.

The more tightly bound we are to Christ, the clearer is His revelation to us.

Friday, April 14th Ephesians 3 : 14-21

"Strengthened with might" (v. 16).

Paul speaks of our relationship to God as a family, united to one another in fellowship (v. 15). His five petitions (vv. 17-19) are to strengthen our experience: the working of the Spirit in the life of the believer by might, power; that Christ may be at home, "dwell," in our hearts that we might take root in love; for our ability to perceive with all saints, for no one saint can grasp the fullness of Divine truth; to know the love of Christ, a humbling thought, for it passes knowledge; to be filled, to "make full," with God in a deeper experience. Paul prays thus that God might work, literally "be active," in us (v. 20), for we cannot strain God's resources.

When we are weak then are we strong in Christ.

Saturday, April 15th Ephesians 4 : 1-16

"Walk worthy of the vocation" (v. 1).

Paul handed on the torch to others. He could write and preach, but the sphere of his Christian service had been narrowed to a prison-house. Others must take up the task: "I beseech you," he said, with garments of holiness—"all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering." Here are our banners and battle-cry: "one Lord, one faith, one baptism." There glisten the brilliant gems of the grace given to us (vv. 5-7). A "walk" is not a path or a way of moving about the earth; it

God our peace

by John Hyde

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SCARBOROUGH

(Judges 6 : 11-24)

GIDEON, the youngest son of Joash, was a mighty man of valour. One day he was engaged in threshing out a little wheat in a hollow in the rock, where he might hide it from the keen eyes of the oppressors, the Midianites. While he was doing this, an angel of the Lord appeared to him and said, "The Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valour." He questioned this, because so far it had seemed as though his nation had become captives of the enemy. The Lord assured him of victory, however.

Gideon's offering of kid's flesh and unleavened cakes was consumed and the angel disappeared. These events assured him that it was God who had spoken. Finally came the words, "Peace be unto thee, for thou shalt not die." In joy and gratitude to God, he built an altar, not for the purpose of offering sacrifices, but for a monument, to which he gave the name, "Jehovah Shalom—God is peace."

The sight of God is not death, but life and peace. Gideon was a plain man with no deep religious experience. Up to the moment of this vision he had taken part in idolatrous practices which had spread over the country. He had heard about God, but to him it was a name, a tradition of which his ancestors had told him. Like a flash, there came this conviction that the hearsay God was beside him, speaking to him.

God is nearer to you than any human being ever can be. He is no mere name, but a living Person and there He stands!

Just imagine how Gideon must have felt when hearing this. His thoughts would be of the sins he had committed, his unfaithfulness, and of judgment to come. Whenever a lightning edge of conviction like that cuts its way through formalism, traditions, hearsay and repetitions, there will come what came to Gideon.

The swift thought comes that if this be true and if I really touch God and am touched by that living Person, what is to become of me? This will be accompanied by concern, yet, when there is no sin, there is no fear. A dying to self and sin in our lives will lead to the happy confidence of the peace of God.

God's peace is the best preparation for, and can be experienced in the midst of, intense conflict or trouble. The purpose of Gideon's vision was to raise up a man to fight a desperate enemy. He was summoned to years of hardship, but the preparation for the conflict consisted largely in the revelation that God is peace. Some may get the impression that God is a God of war rather than the Lord of peace, but this is not so. The peace of God is the best preparation for strife. It gives courage and enables the heart to fling all its power into the conflict.

The altar with its significant inscription expressed the aim of the conflict and the hope which sustained. Gideon was fighting for peace. The hope that urged him on was that God would prosper his work. Christian warfare aims at securing that peace which cannot be broken by self-willed passions and desires.

Let us pass from tradition into personal relationship with God, from doubt into the sunshine of the conviction that God is peace. S includes the Christian's conduct, attitude, consecration. It is a way of living before men to God's glory.

Let us so walk, by His grace.

Sunday, April 16th

Ephesians 4 : 13-32

"Put on the new man" (v. 24).

Paul maintains the metaphor of the Christian life as a "walk" and in verses 17-19 presents the injunction in a negative form: "not as other Gentiles walk." This is shown to be vain, dark, alienated, ignorant, and the reason is the hardness of their hearts (v. 18), indicating a loss of sensation—"being past feeling" (v. 19). The positive aspect was taught by Christ (vv. 20, 21). It leads us to "put off . . . the old man" and "put on the new man," the result of Divine, creative work in us (v. 22, 24). Paul details things that must be forsaken (vv. 25-31), warns that the Holy Spirit can be offended (v. 30), and enjoins us truly to forgive one another.

As Christ forgave us, so may we forgive others.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The lonely God

by Gerald W. Chamberlain

Gerald Chamberlain was saved in the great Birmingham campaign conducted by Principal George Jeffreys in the Bingley Hall early in 1930. After a mighty baptism in the Holy Ghost at the age of fifteen, he commenced intensive ministry in the open air. He was for a time Crusader Leader at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Sparkbrook, Birmingham. He later pioneered from a Sunday school the Hall Green Assemblies of God Church. After nearly seventeen years there, he ministered for four years at Moston, Manchester, and then moved to Upper Gornal, where God has signally blessed his ministry. A nation-wide convention speaker, he is also in demand as a Sunday school teachers' and youth leaders' lecturer. He has served on the National Youth Council of Assemblies of God for the past eight years. His recent ministry includes a five-week preaching tour of the South African Pentecostal churches.

Together with Alex Tee he will be speaking at the United Elim and A.O.G. youth rally in the Bingley Hall, Birmingham, on June 24th, 1972.

INNUMERABLE angels, archangels, cherubim and seraphim, beautiful to behold and glorious in their ministry, bathed in light and full of colour, charm and praise above the imagination of the human heart, strangely failed to satisfy the heart of our great eternal God. His fiery messengers were as soft as doves yet as powerful as atomic energy, but God yearned for a fuller fellowship until, long before creation days, the Master Plan of our triune God was conceived, blue-printed and perfected.

"Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness" (Genesis 1:26). The unquenchable yearning of His holy heart materialised into a few feet of red clay, fashioned by God and breathed to thrilling life by the Lord Himself. Never have the preparations of an expectant mother compared with the deliberate planning of the loving Trinity.

"Come, light!" cried the Lord, and the earth was bathed in warmth and brilliance. "Come, sun and stars," and galaxies rolled at His bidding to shine by day and night for the benefit of the lithe, lovely Adam, who sprang to life to commune with God. The earth, a blaze of light, responded to the Creator's touch and brought forth moss-covered peaks, blue mountains and a million glassy streams edged with trees bedecked with every coloured berry and fruit. Birds of voluptuous hue symphonied their delight as dappled fawns and harmless leopards joined in the frolics of lion and lamb.

Man had arrived and God was glad!

When the Deceiver tempted Adam and Eve, the broken fellowship was felt from the smallest of creatures to the Lord Himself, and His garden-cry "Where art thou?" was more the cry of a distressed, broken-hearted Father than the command of the drill sergeant. We were born for God. The mighty craving of His soul was expressed in creation and we have no right to hold back from Him that for which He so passionately yearns.

Can it be that, in all the sin and distress that mankind endured, God again leaped for joy when He found Enoch, who was willing to walk with Him? Enoch walked so far with God that he reached the point of no return, and was not, for God took him.

God committed Himself to humanity for better or worse, and when He rose from the earth, having completed this fearful, wonderful body, He knew that from then on He would be at the call and service of puny earth-dwellers.

The Alpha of Creation demanded that eventually there would be the Omega of Calvary, and so it came to pass that the lonely God came to Gethsemane. "Tarry ye here and watch with Me" (Matthew 26:38), He implored, knowing that the travail of Gethsemane was to be a bloody struggle by Satan to murder the Saviour before He achieved that eternal victory at the cross. Satan feared more than anything else Christ's death on the cross. He would have delighted in the expiration of Jesus in the garden, realising perfectly what Christ's disciples failed to grasp: Calvary was the "must" in the heart of God. To destroy Christ in the garden, to eliminate the possibility of Golgotha's triumph, one can imagine that the Enemy of Christ called on every demon, devil and imp that was at work above the earth, on the earth or under the earth to crush our Lord, but the Master prevailed and, unspeakably exhausted, He staggered to His beloved disciples, and, finding them drugged with sleep, cried out with anguish, "What, could ye not watch with Me one hour?" Sad beyond measure at the failure of His disciples, His throne-ward glance brought help from heaven and angels came and ministered unto Him. How much more would He have been thrilled with the understanding gaze of John, the touch of Peter or the voice of James, but they failed in the finest hour of their opportunity.

The creation and the new birth were integrally prepared to ensure fellowship—and God yearns for you. Calvary was the great outpouring of God's love for the purpose of complete fellowship. The passion of our Lord to have you for Himself registered itself upon the earth in a blood-red stream that photographed its efficacy in the mind of God and supplies to all the basis of fellowship—peace, peace through the blood of His cross.

The purpose of Calvary was not primarily to snuff out hell's flames for you, but that you might daily, moment by moment, look into the face of Jesus and enjoy the spiritual sustenance of His smile.

The lonely God yearns for you, not your service firstly, not your new plans, your contemporary organising ability, not for cashing in on cheap labour to do His work, but, in the first instance, to fulfil the dedicatory prayer of Jesus, "That they also may be one in Us" (John 17: 21).

The young, triumphant Prince of Glory descended on a preaching tour to release the multitude of Old Testament godly captives. During the three days and nights He displayed His wounds. His Calvary victory caused the inhabitants of the Pit to cringe and shake in terror. The underworld of devilry paled and fainted before the invincible Saviour, yet, when risen in glorious might, the yearning of Jesus was for His own little flock. One would have imagined that His world-reaching success would have intoxicated Him to a forgetfulness of the faltering few, the ragged remnant, who "all forsook Him and fled," but He sought them on the sea of their own backsliding.

What love was this that He should resort to 153 shimmering creatures of the sea to use as a visiting card to reveal His identity to carnal fishermen! As Peter stood before Jesus, drenched and bedraggled, His searching gaze again sought that fellowship that was denied Him at Gethsemane's garden: "Tell Me plainly, Peter, do you love Me? Give Me a straight answer—is the travail of Calvary fruitful? Are the agonies of Gethsemane availing? Are we now one? Have I restored what father Adam lost? Am I more to you than success, than reputation, than this fishing business, more than these voiceless, companionless, visionless, passionless cold fish?"

"Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee" burst from the grieving Peter. It was enough! The heart of Jesus leaped like a young hart. Peter loved Him! The formula for changing faltering, frightened, cursing, sinful humanity into sons of God had been tested and proved.

There was no thought in the heart of the triumphant Master to look round for a more faithful, loyal, consistent team. The weakest of earth, who would fly to Jesus for refuge, and with abandoned determination set the kingdom of God first, who would make the worship and adoration of Christ their priority, were the acceptable choice of the Redeemer.

He has totally committed Himself to the sons of men and demands in return a total committal. He demands a love for Himself above everything and everyone else. An hour with the eternal Christ, the Creator of the ends of the earth, who faints not, neither is weary, will give power to the faint, and into those who have no might will pour torrents of increasing strength. The fainting, weary youths and the falling young men will emerge from the trysting chamber renewed in strength; mounting up with wings as eagles, they will run and not be weary and they will walk and not faint.

O soul, starve not the heart of the eternal God of your love! O fainting one, do not restrict your devotion to such a Redeemer! Risk your reputation and burst forth into rippling praise that will thrill the heart of the lonely God!

and His promises are still yea and amen in Christ Jesus! To all who have prayed with us we say thank you.

(MRS.) DILYS TAYLOR.

LISBURN

Pastor : W. McCandless

Recently we were visited by Pastor Christopher G. Smith, who thrilled us with a week of lectures on the theme "The Bible and the Middle East." The lecturer skilfully illustrated his talks with colour slides, a sound-movie film and other special exhibits. Topics ranged from the Assyrian invasion to the Second Coming of Christ and the emphasis throughout was on how prophecy had been and is being fulfilled.

The meetings attracted considerable local interest and every night friends from other churches joined us. On the closing night there was an attendance of some 100 people and comments such as "There have never been meetings like these in Lisburn before" were heard.

Pastor Smith's use of visual aids really made the Scriptures come alive and his ministry of the Word was both scholarly and spiritual. At the end of this special week our faith was both strengthened and challenged and we had much for which to praise God.

PORT TALBOT

Pastor : A. J. Taylor

For many years the saints at Port Talbot have prayed for a building of their own. God confirmed through the ministry Gifts that such a place would be possible, although there would be difficulties and hindrances. We were thrilled to be offered a building site on an established housing estate where there is no real witness and for months our enthusiasm and our building fund have grown. Plans have been processed and we have been waiting to start building, but Satan is a real enemy and we had notice of a petition of protest being organised against the building of a church in the area. Much prayer was made and Pastor A. J. Taylor and three other delegates were invited to attend a meeting where the protesters would make their views known. After waiting for twenty-five minutes, the delegation was called into the council chamber to be told that the petition was invalid and no real objection had been established. God had been there before us and, without a word being spoken by us, we understand that shortly we will be able to commence work. God is still on the throne

LOUGHBOROUGH

Pastor : J. H. Hunt

Damage running into several hundreds of pounds was caused by arsonists who made a determined attempt to set fire to the Elim Pentecostal Church, Ashby Road, Loughborough.

Three smouldering piles of wool, paper and wood were discovered in various parts of the eight-roomed building by the head usher, Mr. George Wilson, when he arrived for the morning service.

Loughborough firemen and police were called and although the fires were quickly extinguished heat and smoke damage to the lounge, minor hall, kitchen and sewing room were considerable.

Mr. Wilson threw buckets of water on to the main fire in the lounge before the arrival of firemen.

Floors, ceilings, furniture and decorations were affected. The main hall, however, was least affected but the minister arranged for the morning and afternoon services to be held at the Congregational Church, Frederick Street. A shortened Sunday school service was held in the Ashby Road church.

The main seat of the fire was in the lounge. One fire completely destroyed a cupboard which contained all the church's Communion equipment. Cups, saucers and plates were also destroyed.

"I cannot understand what sort of person would want to do this," said the minister. "Fortunately the main hall is only affected by smoke and once we clean it up and get the central heating operating again we should be able to hold services as normal at the weekend.

"Unfortunately, all our Communion equipment has gone and this will take some replacing."

Floorboards in the lounge were completely burnt through near the cupboard and collapsed on to the central heating boiler situated in the basement. It is thought that the fire was prevented from spreading by water which flooded from a head tank over the cupboard.

A fire had also been started in another cupboard in the lounge. In the sewing room was a pile of wood and paper which had obviously smouldered but failed to catch fire.

Commented Mr. Hunt: "Possibly the only thing that saved the church was the fact that the windows held and thus prevented air rushing into the building and fanning the flames."

—Loughborough Echo.

It is a miracle, the fire officer reports, that the whole building was not burnt down. Though we have lost much we have great cause for praise. We are back again in the church, the heating system having been restored, and, thanks to a splendid effort by members, the smoke damage in the church has been considerably reduced.

S. G. PARTRIDGE.

EASTLEIGH

Pastor: M. Jones

A time of blessing was experienced at the fifth anniversary service of the Sisterhood. The building was almost filled with visitors from other ladies' fellowships, including Southampton and Romsey Elim Sisterhoods.

The message was given by Mrs. M. M. Ladlow, wife of the minister of the Salisbury Elim Pentecostal Church. It was a challenge to everyone to witness for the Lord and to be up and doing.

Two beautiful solos were rendered by the wife of the minister of Emmanuel Baptist Church, Eastleigh, Mrs. Broadhurst. A recitation was ably given by Mrs. Prentice, the President of the Hardy Pentecostal Church, Southampton.

A buffet tea was provided by the ladies of the Eastleigh fellowship.

(MRS.) E. LAWES.

GRANGETOWN

Pastor: A. L. Hawkes

The following appeared in the Teesside Evening Gazette: "Internationally known evangelist John Woodhead, who is holding a fortnight of meetings at Grangetown Mission, claims to have had 'outstanding success' in his first week. 'We are getting large numbers every night, many people never having been in a church or mission before,' he said. 'There have already been fifty-five converts.' Mr. Woodhead says that many sick people have been helped."

We have now had ninety decisions. A little girl who had severe asthma (aged 2½ years) and a lady who had acute arthritis were the most outstanding among many who said that they had been healed.

A. L. HAWKES.

MERRIOTT

Pastor: P. J. Thompsett

Despite the appalling weather, the church at Merriott was packed to capacity for the induction of the new minister, Pastor P. J. Thompsett. The service was ably convened by Pastor E. J. Thomas, of Yeovil, and one immediately sensed the Lord's presence. Pastor T. P. Mullen, of Weymouth, one of the new pastor's colleagues at Elim Bible College, opened in prayer, while two others gave a welcome on behalf of the presbytery, Pastors R. T. McDonald and Maldwyn Jones. Mr. J. King, the church secretary, expressed a welcome on behalf of the church. After a singing item by some of the young people of the church, Pastor J. Osman, the district superintendent, gave a challenging word to both Pastor and congregation. A very wonderful meeting came to an end on a note of expectancy and thanksgiving.

MALDWYN JONES.

HEREFORD

Pastor: R. Griffiths

The Shirehall, the venue for the pioneer crusade twenty-one years ago, was used for our celebration rally.

The pastor led a "carcade" through the city. Amplifiers were attached to his car and invitations were extended to the folk.

It was a thrill to see hundreds of local folk assembling with us for this great service. The ministering brethren who conducted the original crusade joined us to return thanks to the Lord for His goodness over the past twenty-one years.

After our pastor had welcomed everyone to the service he invited Pastor Alexander Tee to lead the meeting. Pastor J. McAvoy, a previous minister, prayed. The Caerphilly choir thrilled the meeting as they ministered beautifully in song. Pastor W. M. E. Plowright sang. Pastor P. S. Brewster invited the congregation to stand as he read the Scriptures and then inspired faith in the hearts of those who listened with a timely message. In response to the appeal, a number of hands were raised.

Pastor Brewster expressed the wish to our pastor that God would continue to bless the church in Hereford.

The day concluded with the hymn "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine."

Tribute must be paid to our sisters who kindly provided the necessary refreshments and to all who helped to make the day such a success.

The labours of our pastor and his wife are much appreciated. We have seen the work increase and are encouraged to expect much from the Lord in the coming days.

Christian ethics and the individual

by W. J. Maybin

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
CROYDON

Last week we looked at the definition, dynamic and demand of Christian ethics. Now we are to explore how it affects the individual who professes to be a Christian. If a Christian is one who testifies to Christ living within, then his life should be different and this difference will become self-evident.

WHEN the founder of the Salvation Army welcomed the Revised Version of the Bible in 1885, he added: "Christian scholars have translated the Bible and retranslated it, and then translated it again. There seems to me only one thing left to be done and that is to give a literal, faithful, understandable translation of it in practice." Carl F. Henry comments in Christian Personal Ethics: "Christian morality is nothing more than Jesus Christ in His followers. They live as He lived, for He now lives in them. What the Christian means by a virtuous life is really Jesus Christ, as the incomparable example of the Divine ideal realised in the flesh." If Christianity is the reproduction of the Christ-life through the power of the indwelling Spirit of God, then our lives should be translations of the Gospel we believe into gracious patterns of daily living.

The blessed Gospel none can doubt Revealed in holy lives.

It is general to classify the requirements of morality into two groups, one comprising private and personal duties, the other relating to a man's relation to others. The latter consideration will occupy the final article (see next week's EVANGEL).

One of the fundamental principles of the New Testament and of Christian ethics is the absolute value of the individual. In this Christianity was truly revolutionary, since ancient civilisations were founded on slavery. The slave was merely an animated tool, bereft of any value or human rights. The coming of Christianity disturbed this warped sense of values. When the Roman empire became nominally Christian, one of the first results was an improvement in the lot of slaves, indeed Constantine made the killing of a slave with malice aforethought to be murder.

Jesus taught in the Sermon on the Mount and in the parables of Luke 15 that the individual was precious in the sight of God. The value of one lost sheep over the ninety-nine is stressed, one lost piece of silver against the other nine, and the wastrel son in the far country against a self-righteous prodigal who failed to leave the shelter of the homestead. Joy is expressed over the one being found and is experienced in heaven over one sinner repenting. The truth of this was exhibited in our Lord's ministry; no human being was too sinful to benefit from the Divine compassion. Calvary stands as God's greatest guarantee that, beyond the cosmic scope of such love, the "whosoever" is most certainly included. The best-loved text in the Bible, John 3:16, was called by Dr. Carnegie Simpson "The superb commonplace of Christianity." While God loved the world, all without exception or distinction, He singled out the individual as the special object of His love. Truth is relevant when it is personal. "God cares for each of us, as if He cared for us alone; and for all of us as if all were but one" (Augustine).

Man by nature

It is imperative in any consideration of the individual that we should think of him first by nature and then what he is through grace.

That something is wrong with man is plain for all to see. He is like a bird with a broken wing and God does not make birds like that. "The Bible revelation about man is that man as he is is not as God made him" (Oswald Chambers in Biblical Ethics). One of the fundamental, undeniable declarations of the Bible about human nature is that at its roots there is a profound, permanent perversity, but the Bible also emphasises that God in Christ has invaded human history to do something for man that he could never have done for himself. Jesus Christ was "God as a man on two legs" declared D. R. Davies and at the cross it was "God in Christ reconciling" (Paul). God did not observe with detachment the mess mankind was in; He came and took our flesh at Bethlehem and our sin at Calvary (1 Timothy 3:16 and 2 Corinthians 5:21). This statement concerning God taking hold upon sin and making it His own is "the most overwhelming, the most profound in the New Testament. On that cross He was made sin, and therein He passed to the uttermost limit of sin's outworking" (Dr. G. Campbell Morgan). In a way that we shall never fully understand, Christ stood connected with man's sin and, knowing it, He accepted it as His, and man is thus delivered from it.

*Amazing love! How can it be
That Thou, my God, shouldst die for me?*

In this age of sophistication, when man feels, as he has never before felt, that he can extricate himself from his moral mess, it is still true that self-redemption is doomed to failure. Thomas Spurgeon wrote: "Away ye merit-mongers from the Cross, where the sword of justice is scabbarded in the jewelled sheath of grace." Our self-righteousness cannot thrive on the slopes of Calvary. We cry with the poet:

*Oh, bring no price; God's grace is free
To Paul, to Magdalene, to me!*

Man through grace

The grace of God is the activity of the love of God for mankind. It sums up everything that God has accomplished for man in Christ. Mofatt says: "The religion of the Bible is a religion of grace or it is nothing . . . no grace, no gospel." God in grace has provided redemption for man and man is "shut up to this redemption" if he is to be freed from self-will and sin, and thus liberated to live as God intended that he should live. Man needs conversion and there is no hope of this change apart from co-operation with God. While God has taken the initiative, man is also responsible for this amendment of life.

Conversion is the subjective side of the change that grace works within us, while regeneration is the objective side. The former is what man is called upon to do, while the second is what God does for him. Conversion is synonymous with "turning." There are two steps in this great transaction.

Repentance may be defined as a conviction of guilt brought about by the operation of the Holy Spirit. Being a Presbyterian born and bred, I recall my drilling in the Shorter Catechism, and among the many varied questions was this one: "What is repentance unto life?" The answer, which I recall to this day, runs: "Repentance unto life is a saving grace, whereby a sinner, out of a true sense of his sin, and apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ, doth, with grief and hatred of his sin, turn from it unto God, with full purpose of, and endeavour after, new obedience." There is not much wrong with that concise answer! Christianity was introduced into the world with a call to repentance, by John the forerunner, and then by Christ Himself. Says one writer: "Christianity must begin as it began in the history of the world."

Oswald Chambers in My Utmost for His Highest points out that repentance is the bedrock of Christianity and is the threshold of an understanding of God. Paul speaks of it as "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 20:21). This is the second great transaction—faith for salvation. Repentance is toward God against whom all mankind has sinned, whereas faith is toward Jesus Christ who was made sin for us. If we are to understand the New Testament aright there can be no salvation without repentance, while the complementary truth is that we are saved by faith. As one writer puts it: "There can be no true saving faith in Christ until there has been a genuine repentance towards God. Repentance is heartbreak for sin; saving faith is heartbreak with sin." The subjective and the objective are closely, indissolubly linked. Conversion is a human act with which are linked repentance and faith, while regeneration is the Divine act of God in the soul. As one writer explains: "Regeneration is the inward expression of which conversion should be the outward expression."

One of the most revolutionary statements Jesus ever made was that to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again" (John 3:7). Unless this miracle of inward renewal takes place there can be no

IT has been necessary to refer to Ulster a number of times over the months, but surely all our readers will agree that there was never before a greater need for our loving compassion to be shown than there is now.

We were interested in Mr. William Whitelaw's remark that he did not regard himself as a "gauleiter." The description was very unfortunate. Those old enough to recall the Nazi gauleiters of the 1939-45 war almost shudder at the infamous title. To use the word even in a denial was most unhappy.

Our sincere prayers will be with the folk in the six counties of Ulster. They are flesh of our flesh, bone of our bone. It could be that many of us will sympathise with Dr. Ian Paisley's statement in the House of Commons that he would be happier if the Government had brought about the total integration of Ulster with the rest of the United Kingdom. In any case it must be faced that what has been done is an expedient. It obviously cannot last and can never be the final answer.

One of our Headquarters officers, when leading us in prayer at our central offices, made reference to the truly moving experience of hearing our Ulster Elim friends intercede with God for their own country. One cannot be in the company of our brothers and sisters there for long before one appreciates that they are looking for a spiritual answer. There are many commentators, not least among Irish Protestants, who have expressed fears that the terrorism of Ulster today might be the experience of England, Scotland and Wales tomorrow. Such fears must carry weight and must be faced.

We would like to show, however, that the wonderful restraint and exemplary attitude of the vast majority of our Ulster Christians and, above all, their diagnosis that the need is spiritual and that the solution will be spiritual, are marvellous results of their fiery trial which we would like to see crossing the Irish Sea. It would be wonderful if the fervent prayers of true believers in beleaguered Belfast and elsewhere in Ulster were to bring a revival not only there, but in all the British Isles, including Eire. The fears that violence might spread are real, but the hope that revival will spread is also real!

We would do well not only to pray for our Irish friends, but also to pray WITH them. They are right. God alone can meet the need and provide the answer.

... Where Jesus walked

by W. RON JONES

The recording for this broadcast was actually made at the crossroads in Bethphage. Before the words of the broadcast began there was an introductory braying of a Bethphage donkey.

I am walking along the road over which Jesus rode on his borrowed donkey into Jerusalem about 1,940 years ago. The sounds are very different these days; the constant bray of the donkey has given way to the hoot of Mercedes taxis and an abundance of private cars. Most people call that particular incident in the life of Jesus "The triumphal entry into Jerusalem," simply because crowds of people lined the route and shouted "Hosanna, you are a King and you have come to us in the name of God!"

As one moves along this road one finds that there are still a few folk lining the route. Some young Arab children want to sell me packets of sweets at inflated prices. Men push coloured slides into my hands and hold out their hands for payment. Moving along in front of me is a fellow who must have taken fifteen photographs of me already. I do not even remember booking a photographer, but doubtless he will be around to my hotel with his displays before very long!

The crowd certainly gave Jesus an enthusiastic welcome on that first Palm Sunday. There was good reason why they should acknowledge Him, for there were people there whom He had healed of all kinds of diseases. No wonder everybody cheered! You would think that all this would have thrilled Jesus, but that very evening Jesus went out alone, knelt down and wept over Jerusalem! I wonder why. Simply because Jesus knew the truth about them, just as He does about you and me. He knew that there was much about that show that was not genuine and because it was not He knew that it would not last. In only a few days' time the cry would change from "Hosanna" to "Crucify." From "You shall be our King" to "We will not have you to reign over us." You cannot think of a much quicker change of affection than that, but that is human nature—so fickle, so changeable—and twenty centuries of history have not changed that. Ask a hundred and one football managers who have been sacked simply because of the fickleness of the crowd. Ask political leaders who have fallen almost overnight from the heights of national popularity to the wilderness reserved for political outcasts. Many sang "Hosanna" on Palm Sunday, but tomorrow we will be declaring, in effect, "Crucify Him" by our greed, selfishness and determination to have our own way.

Jesus hates sham wherever it is and so do we in other people. How about asking God to make us more genuine, more sincere?

The practice of Divine healing

Points from an address by GEORGE CANTY before a private audience of 120 members of the Students' Medical Society of Liverpool University on a non-religious occasion.

My interest in Divine healing began with my first-hand acquaintance with suffering. The problem haunted me. In my earlier sermons my congregations suffered more from the problem of suffering than from any other form of trial. It was a challenge God must meet, I felt. Instead God challenged me to reach a position where I could be an instrument of His will to heal.

☆ ☆ ☆

Healing has not brought me fame or wealth. We Pentecostals charge nothing. Most people greatly admire our philanthropic spirit and encourage it by giving us nothing.

☆ ☆ ☆

Some doctors think we are encroaching on their field, but like it or lump it, doctors are having to do the parson's job—telling folk not to worry. We obviously have overlapping spheres. Ministers are interested in people's ills and, physically at least, so is the doctor.

☆ ☆ ☆

When the Bible has been studied it has always resulted in a new concern for the sick. As medieval ignorance ended, the priests doing nothing by way of healing. Luther recommended prayer as a cure for illness. The present widespread public interest arose when the founders of the Pentecostal churches here took the message of healing to the masses. Unfortunately about 10,000 "healers" are cashing in—and cash is the word today, with every weird method being used.

I used to reason about God, proving it all by modern dialectic. When I became more logical I saw that I was really trying to make the supernatural look natural, which is opposite to what I was ordained to do.

Christians recognise new conditions and move in a realm within which the so-called laws of nature are not applicable. You cannot fly the Concorde by the Highway Code. Christians are beings born of the Spirit who move in the plane of the Spirit.

You do not become a Christian by weighing the evidence and agreeing intellectually with a set of arguments. You do not say, "On balance I think Christianity is true." You say, "I am trusting Jesus. I know Him."

☆ ☆ ☆

I do not preach healing because I have read Descartes, Kant, Locke and Berkeley and have concluded that God is a reasonable hypothesis. You must be where people were in New Testament days when they said: "We know Him that is true."

☆ ☆ ☆

Ask me why the all-powerful Being whom reason suggests might be behind creation still allows suffering, and what do I say? I reply that I have no brief for such a hypothetical God, a mere Q.E.D. God adapted to human thought. I am not defending an equation. Ask me why the God and Father of our Lord Jesus permits suffering, however, and I will ask you why the B.M.A. permits it. My God heals most sickness that invades people at large and I point to the cross. Is that God "allowing" suffering?

☆ ☆ ☆

Only a percentage today are Divinely healed. Why? I need not talk to you as medical students about this. Why don't your cures achieve 100 per cent success? Because we are dealing with that strange stuff human nature, not skins full of chemicals with predictable responses. God has individual arrangements with each of us.

☆ ☆ ☆

Not everybody wants to be healed. Those who make the biggest fuss about their not getting better are sometimes only disguising their enjoyment of the privileged position bestowed on them by their sickness.

Not every doctor gives up when medical means fail. He takes his patient to God. There is always hope. In fact nowadays, with the National Health Service, few come to us for healing unless medical science has failed. We only handle the incurables in the main. But we still produce healings.

☆ ☆ ☆

When heart trouble and cancer have been conquered, you doctors need not worry about being unemployed. Sickness is a concomitant of sin in this evil world and will always manifest itself, but Divine healing is likely to be the great resource then, since it reaches to the deeps of sinful nature.

☆ ☆ ☆

I am more interested in Divine health than in healing. Christians live far healthier lives. Their responses to trouble are those of peace. They enjoy purpose and gusto. They do not even have as many car accidents as other folk—being more considerate, patient and abstemious. I think that ministers ought to be able to issue “certificates of Christian living” so that we can get a refund of our contributions to the National Health scheme!

☆ ☆ ☆

Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, but thank God he did not use their medicines. He received Divine enlightenment. The methods of the Egyptians with their sick people may explain why there are so many mummies in Egypt. If doctors had followed Moses’ advice there would have been a higher survival rate here in the nineteenth century and even in this century, for fifty years ago personal anxieties were never examined as a source of illness, which the Bible indicated 2,600 years ago. Proverbs said: “Passion makes the bones rot.”

☆ ☆ ☆

Famous Dr. Abernethy summed up all symptoms in one word—“stomach,” but what causes “stomach”? The treatment of patients as mere human machines is now seen to be ridiculous. What a pity they did not follow the Bible in 1925!

☆ ☆ ☆

In sickness an underlying cause has to be sought. Hypnosis only removes symptoms, but may not this be true also of your drugs? In Divine healing we treat the whole being, which makes it the greatest form of healing.

☆ ☆ ☆

The most important part of my healing ministry is to preach, to create Divine awareness and consciousness of sin in the inward parts. Repentance is all-important. Unless people set up a permanently happy relationship with God they cannot really be well. Through Christ they can.

☆ ☆ ☆

Salvation is the great Bible subject and it means salvation of man—body, soul and spirit. The Greek and Hebrew words indicate physical health along with spiritual holiness; health and holiness are the same word.

☆ ☆ ☆

How do we practise healing? By ministering the Bible, by prayer, by anointing with oil, by laying on of hands, by Communion, by the presence of God, by confession of sin.

☆ ☆ ☆

Every Christian minister is ordained to preach Christ. If we preach a Christ who does not heal He is not the Christ described in the Bible.

☆ ☆ ☆

The Gospel teaches us to care, not merely to collect converts.

☆ ☆ ☆

The healthiest are not always the happiest, nor are the sick the most unhappy. All need Christ’s Gospel because at some level we are all in need of His healing. I tell people to get well by any means they can. This is God’s will for them: wholeness in body, mind and spirit.

appreciation of spiritual things. The doctrine of regeneration must be thought of always in the context of man’s condition through sin. Such are the effects of sin on the human that the only remedy possible is that of a new birth, a complete new creation. This is a task commensurate with God only, so the operation is ascribed to God (John 1:13), it is from above (John 3:3,7), and it is of the Spirit (John 3:5,8). As Dr. Binney writes: “By regeneration we understand the commencement of the life of God in the soul of man, the beginning of that which had not an existence before.”

This miracle of God in man brings him into harmony with God and at the same time into fellowship with those of mutual faith within the Church. That fellowship within the Church, the local point of meeting with kindred minds, cannot be divorced from life in the anonymity of the city or town where we work, teach or legislate. They will be our consideration in the final article.

The Christian life cannot be lived in isolation.

BEN the camel awoke one morning and thought about what he was going to do that day. "I think I'll take a little walk after breakfast," he said, "and then sit in the shade of a palm tree. Yes, I'll have a nice, lazy day."

Just then his master came up and said, "Up you get, Ben! We have a very busy day ahead of us. I want you to carry some goods over to the market for me so that I can try to sell them."

"Oh dear," said Ben. "Just when I had planned an easy day for myself!"

Ben's master knew that they would not reach the market-place until the following day and that he and Ben would have to travel many miles over the hot, dusty desert to get there. He led Ben over to the waterhole and said, "Now Ben, have a good long drink before we leave because we won't be passing any waterholes on the way and you might get thirsty before we reach the market."

Ben had a long drink of the cool water and, when his master had loaded the goods on to Ben's back, off they went on their journey.

They had travelled all day and now as it was nearing night time Ben was thirsty. He was glad that he had stored up enough water in his stomach, for now he could draw on the supply and quench his thirst. Ben, like all camels, had a wonderful storehouse, a special lining in his stomach in which he could store water for the long journeys.

God has given us a wonderful storehouse, too.

We call it memory and here we can store all we need for the days ahead. We can store all the truths and promises of God's love and His plan of salvation. Then, as we grow up, we can draw on our supply day by day, and find the help and strength we need to be true, worthy Christians. The camel can store enough water for three days, but we can store in our memory wonderful truths of the Bible to last us all our lives.

Ben and his master reached the market-place and Ben was able to have a rest while his master prepared to sell the goods to all the people who had come to buy.

COMMUNICATION is the word in the context of Christian witness today. Emphasis was there in the Radio Seminar convened recently at Elim Bible College, when some twenty interested people conferred and planned in a situation where facilities were to hand for the preparation of radio programmes. The Principal directed operations and Mr. Tony Ford, B.Sc., Dip.Ed., a candidate for posting to the team operating The Far East Broadcasting Association's radio project in the Seychelles, gave guidance on script writing, etc. Helmet Kaufmann supervised studio activities and gave expert guidance on the use of equipment. The whole was set against the background of the foundation and phenomenal development of the Seychelles Radio Station, Elim, with its plans to participate in the programming, was represented by the Missionary Secretary, Leslie Wigglesworth, and the scheme was presented by Douglas Malton (Director, F.E.B.A.) with the help of coloured slides.

A do-it-yourself production of a magazine programme was made by each of the three teams involved in the seminar. At 4 p.m. on the final day (despite a power cut) the "moment of truth" revealed considerable skill in these efforts and called for qualified commendation in Mr. Ford's adjudication. More of this type of thing is planned.

Book review

Howard Carter—Man of the Spirit, by John Carter. Published by Assemblies of God Publishing House. Price 60p, postage and packing 8p extra.

It was a privilege to read this lively account of the life of one of the comparatively few fathers of the Pentecostal Movement in Great Britain. What a man of God Howard Carter was! Reading of the revelations which God gave him and of their fulfilment is a moving, inspiring experience. The history of the famous Hampstead Bible School, which had such an influence on so many pastors and missionaries, and of our sister fellowship, Assemblies of God, are integral parts of this absorbing story.

Insight is given into the private life and devotions of Howard Carter, yet his brother has written of these and of all else in a self-effacing way which makes the account all the more compelling. Who better to be the author of this much-needed book than the beloved brother who played such a giant part in the happenings recounted?

Howard Carter's ministry became world-wide.

Eternity will surely reveal that he, Donald Gee and Smith Wigglesworth have left behind them a tremendous global record of service well done, of influence for good and for God. This book will help us to realise that faith in and simple dependence on God can make 1 Corinthians 1:26-29 alive in experience.

AN OUTLINE

THE WIND AND THE SPIRIT

(John 3 : 8)

The action of the Spirit of God upon the life is compared to that of the wind. The word for "wind" is the same as that for "Spirit."

1. The wind bloweth : the ceaseless activity of the Spirit.
2. Where it listeth (likes) : the sovereign freedom of the Spirit.
3. Thou hearest the sound (voice) : the indisputable evidence of the Spirit.
4. Thou canst not tell : the inscrutable origin of the Spirit.
5. Whither it goeth : the unknown destiny of the Spirit (in our lives.) Who can tell whither He can take us ? Compare the monk, Martin Luther, the mill-boy, David Livingstone, the servant girl, Gladys Aylward. In the freedom of the Spirit lies the soul's true expression.

AN ILLUSTRATION

THE MAGNETISM OF THE UNSEEN

"Whom having not seen, ye love" (1 Peter 1 : 8).

In an earlier generation it was the custom among women to wear gold lockets as necklaces. Heart-shaped, they usually contained a small photo of a loved one. Professor William Drummond tells the following : "I once knew a very beautiful young girl who possessed a splendid character. Christian joy radiated from her face and her actions were always exemplary. She constantly wore about her neck a little locket, which was not remarkable in itself except for the fact that she never allowed anyone to open it. Even her dearest friends did not know what it contained, until one day when she was laid aside with a dangerous illness. Then one of her closest companions was granted permission to look inside. Instead of seeing the photo of the girl's mother or of some male admirer, she found inscribed the words of the text, "Whom having not seen I love." Finally the secret of her consecrated life was revealed. She had given her full devotion to the Lover of her soul and all her actions had been beautified by His presence and coloured by His grace."

his release at the downfall of Nkrumah, Mr. Afori-Atta became a keen Christian worker and took an active part in the work of Bible House, eventually serving as president of the Bible Society. He was a speaker at the opening of the Scripture Union Bookshop in Accra last November in his capacity as the Minister of Foreign Affairs. We learn that, as a result of the recent coup, once again he is in prison in preventive detention. According to reports he was seen entering prison with a walking stick in one hand and a Bible in the other !

The Gideons

At the time of writing, the Scripture Union Portions have been in the book of Judges and I have enjoyed reading the story of Gideon once again. Three hundred men with their trumpets and pitchers containing lighted torches followed Gideon and surrounded the enemy camp and with a mighty cry, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," put the Midianite army to flight. It was a notable victory and the highlight of Gideon's service for God and for Israel. To this day many a humble group of Christians has been inspired by this story and has become a Gideon band determined to put the enemy of souls to flight.

When in 1949 my husband wrote to me from Canada telling me that he had been invited to give the morning meditation on a programme sponsored by the Gideons on Radio Peterborough, Ontario, I was puzzled and wondered whoever the modern Gideons could be. I was to learn later that this was an association of Christian businessmen brought together for the purpose of placing a Bible in every hotel bedroom in the continent of North America. No mean task, you will say, but this determined, dedicated band of men believed the Bible to be the sword of the Lord and a very effective force against sin and evil and, like the first Gideon's pitchers, to contain a light to lighten all men. Their original vision has been fulfilled, to be followed by another—to place a Bible by the side of every hospital bed. The scope has widened and now they endeavour to put a New Testament and Psalms in the hand of every school child of reading age. The Gideons are now an international association. They came to Britain in 1950. God has blessed their witness in our land and now the placing of scriptures in H.M. prisons is another enterprise which is being wonderfully blessed of God.

I have before me a number of Gideon testimonies from school children, from a prisoner in Parkhurst jail, from a girl who found comfort in reading a Gideon Bible in a youth hostel, from a soldier at Catterick camp, and from farther afield as well. 1971 was a year of triumph and achievement under the good hand of God. Cliff Richard received the five-millionth copy of the Bible to be given in the British Isles since the Gideons commenced here twenty years ago. In Ethiopia, Emperor Haile Selassie received a presentation Bible and publicly recommended the reading of God's Word. On August 5th, 1971, United States President Richard Nixon was presented with a special gold leather Bible to commemorate the 100-millionth copy of God's Word distributed by Gideons International since its inception in 1908!

We can all thank God for the work of the Gideons and their practical faith in the power of the Word of God as the sword of the Spirit. The Bible is an invincible weapon and highly effective in itself, because it is the very Word of the living God. Psalm 68:11 reads: "The Lord gave the Word; great was the company of those that published it." As usual, the Scriptures hit the nail on the head! What are we waiting for? We have the God-given, God-inspired Book—let us not hesitate to flood the world with such a glorious messenger of salvation and light, such a powerful weapon against evil.

During the regime of the dictator, President Nkrumah of Ghana, Mr. William Afori-Atta, a leading Accra lawyer, was imprisoned for his opposition to the government. The only reading matter in his cell was a copy of the Bible and so, with nothing else to do, he began to read it and the miracle of conversion took place. After

The Story of Christmas, by John W. Peterson.

Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott.
Price 50p, postage and packing 6p extra.

This latest of a series of Christmas Cantatas composed by John Peterson could prove to be a delightful musical experience for choirs and congregations in their Christmas services. It is of the same high musical and Scriptural standard as his earlier works. Its duration is approximately forty minutes. The voicing is SATB and there are pleasing variations throughout, including parts for women in unison, men in unison, a solo for high voice, two solos for medium voice and an optional solo obbligato for soprano. The narrator's text—ten Scripture portions at various stages of the Cantata—are taken from the Authorised Version.

The Cantata gives plenty of scope for choirs of some musical ability, but it is perhaps beyond the range of smaller singing groups.

Hasty vows

By Alexander Tee

NATIONAL YOUTH DIRECTOR

"I have opened my mouth unto the Lord and I cannot go back" (Judges 11 : 35).

MANY a wonderful missionary meeting has come to a climax with the atmosphere charged with the power of the Holy Spirit. Men of God have called for young people to dedicate their lives to the service of the Master. Emotions have been stirred as desperate situations have been explained. At times like these God can begin to move upon us, but we must remember that vows are very serious in the eyes of God. Before making any vows we must think very carefully of the far-reaching implications they can have, particularly when the lives and futures of others are involved. Catastrophe can overtake us even when we are sincere if we make hasty vows.

Careless

A man in the Book of Judges made a vow to God and lived to regret it. He was the leader of Israel's army and he was going out to fight the Ammonites. Here is what he said to God: "If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me . . . I will offer it up for a burnt-offering" (Judges 11 : 30, 31). God very graciously gave him the desire of his heart. His army enjoyed a wonderful victory and he was full of joy when he returned home. Suddenly the blood drained from his face as the doors of his house opened and his only daughter came out with a timbrel and began to dance with joy because of her father's victory. He trembled as he told her of the vow he had made and added the words of our text: "I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back." This incident stands out like a sombre marble monument to remind us how serious can be the consequences of hasty vows.

Conditional

Many people in times of illness or in serious situations have made vows to God concerning what they would do in the future if God would deliver them from their problems. It is seldom, if ever, the will of God that we should base our consecration on a bargain, particularly when we want to lay down the terms. After all, it is God who is almighty, not we. Who are we to lay down conditions to God before we will wholly yield ourselves to do His will? God has been very gracious and has delivered His people from distressing situations many times, but this does not give us a licence to lay down terms to the One who has done so much for us.

Costly

Many young people feel that it would be wonderful to be, or to marry, a pastor or a missionary. The apparent glamour of such a privilege seems to them to outweigh possible privation and sacrifice. Disaster lurks for all who make vows to God with such thoughts in their mind. So-called glamour is no ground for making vows or for entering any form of Christian service.

To be unequally yoked to an unbeliever either in business or in matrimony is to go right against the Word of God. Seldom does lasting happiness derive from disobedience to God. Matrimonial vows are not to be made lightly with the idea that divorce is much easier nowadays.

Another danger is to press someone to accept Christ as Saviour with the threat that if they do not the wedding is off. A spurious decision can boomerang and a lifetime of regret and tears can result.

On the other hand God's promises and covenants are very stimulating to read. He loves entering into covenant relationships with us. He never will break His word. This gives us a great sense of assurance and reliability. It must be to God's glory when we make vows of dedication to His will and service and stand true to them amid every circumstance.

Ephesians 5 : 1-20

"Walk as children of light" (v. 8).

In verse 1, literally rendered "Be ye therefore imitators of God," Paul points to the supreme Example. The possibility of fulfilment is indicated by the reference to sonship—"as dear children." The metaphor of walking (v. 2) is carried forward from chapter 4. The measure of the believers' love is set at the greatest possible height "as Christ also hath loved us." Love, the chief quality characterising God's people, is derived from Christ.

Paul now deals with purity of desire (vv. 3-6), showing that giving of thanks is the opposite of self-centred acquisitiveness. Thanksgiving is the recognition of God's generosity and of God Himself. The positive aspect of the Christian life is depicted as walking in light (v. 8) and in the Spirit. We can be on fire, yet not consumed. Christ's light in us cannot be extinguished by the darkness all around.

Tuesday, April 18th

Ephesians 5 : 21-33

"Subject unto Christ" (v. 24).

From the unity and purity of God's people Paul turns to their domestic lives. In the intimacy of home life, Christian ethics are often put to a stringent test. Harmony (v. 22) and the love of husbands (v. 25) are paramount and rooted in Christ, for marital unity reflects the greater unity that binds Christ and His Church. Many seemingly insoluble problems in marriage would be solved if the principle laid down here were applied to them. The husband is the head of the wife (v. 23), not in any despotic sense, but in that the pattern of his conduct should be as the conduct of Christ towards His Church (v. 25). The heavenly pattern is still applicable today, so that the relation of a Christian husband to his wife is not one of domination but of self-sacrifice.

May we seek so to live in Christ that we love as Christ did.

Ephesians 6 : 1-9

"Doing the will of God from the heart" (v. 6).

The relationship of parents and children, in past generations so closely knit, has now lost much of its influence and solidarity. These verses are now more important than ever before. Right obedience by children is largely dependent on the proper exercise of authority on the part of the parents (v. 4), which "discipline and instruction" (v. 4, R.S.V.) will be fitting and right if the true example and guide is the Lord. The servants were really slaves or bondservants (v. 5), but only in the flesh; in spirit they were free (Galatians 3 : 28). Modern slavery aims at the total subjection of the mind and will as well as the body to the mastery of the dictator, but the servant, or the master if he is in Christ, is literally the "bought one" (1 Corinthians 6 : 20) and Christ is the Master. Conquered by Christ, we follow in His triumph and share His glory.

Ephesians 6 : 10-24

"Be strong in the Lord" (v. 10).

Paul returns to what lies behind the whole of his message—the supreme lordship of Christ and its bearing on the Christian life in the world. This inspiring exhortation was addressed to those embarking on the Christian life. Paul had spoken of Christ's victory over the evil powers of the cosmos (1 : 20-23) and now speaks of our warfare being directed against the same evil powers, not against humans. Men are under the enslaving power of evil and need liberation. Only God's armour will equip the Christian for the fight. The warfare is spiritual and requires spiritual weapons. Prayer and the Word are linked in the purpose of God and are needed in this warfare—our words to God, and God's word to the enemy.

Let us gird ourselves for battle and fight in the might of the Spirit!

1 Samuel 1 : 1-18

"Go in peace . . ." (v. 17).

The long period of the rule of the Judges ended with Samuel. The people had practically rejected God and were in a sad condition when Samuel came to power. This Book begins the 500-year period of the kings of Israel.

In his prophetic office Samuel was faithful. Henceforth the prophet, not the priest, was conspicuous in Israel.

In this chapter we are introduced to Hannah, whose great desire was for a son (v. 11). Eli the priest misunderstood her silent prayer to God. After his rebuke she poured out her grief to him. Hannah's acceptance of the word of Eli as the representative of God showed the measure of her faith in the Word of the Lord (v. 17), for she believed and immediately acted according to her faith (v. 18).

We do not have to pray about God's Word; we must believe and let it work in us.

ANOTHER SLANT

by Ken Smith

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

I ACHIEVED a minor ambition when I visited the Austin motor works to interview the purchasing director, one of the top few in the "Kremlin," the nickname for the exclusive headquarters of B.L.M.C. at Longbridge, Birmingham. I wanted to congratulate them on their products, as my Austin A40 well topped the 100,000 mark last year and is well on its way to a second 100,000 now. It has certainly been used for the Lord's work, having been in Elim through Alan Brewster and myself throughout its life! It certainly has been "sanctified by the word of God and prayer," having been the means of witnessing to people in every walk of life, and often my pulpit to preach to one, as the Master did by the Samaritan well. They cannot escape when you are doing sixty miles an hour!

I asked the director at B.L.M.C. my profession and went on to give him a tract and speak of the Lord Jesus Christ. He made it obvious that he appreciated my conversation, assuring me that I ought to mention my real vocation to every executive I meet, which I do, of course. He felt that many of them needed pastoral interest and I have found this to be true. He was moved, I felt, when I told him that, although I had never met him, I had prayed for him before meeting him, that God would use me to speak a word in season. I felt that it touched him to realise that someone had prayed for him. I guess that he will never forget my call. I stayed for well over an hour after completing the interview to talk about the Lord and, although I missed other calls, I felt that it was in the will of the Lord to stay. How one has to be sensitive to the leading of the Spirit, for the "stops" as well as the "steps" of a good man must be ordered by the Lord!

My next call was very different, for the man continually used the Lord's name in vain. I did not have a chance to speak to him, but I gave him a Gospel tract. I guess that when he looked at it he would think that I felt he needed it, and he certainly did!

My final call to Chrysler, formerly Rootes, at Coventry, meant another opportunity to witness to one of Britain's top management executives, who received a word of witness and a Gospel tract. It is obvious to me that these men never hear the true presentation of the gospel. One feels a great yearning to tell them of the Lord Jesus Christ, for they are the "poor rich" men of our generation, having everything in this life and knowing nothing of the next.

One is conscious of the prayer interest among Elim friends as one takes the Gospel into uncharted seas.

Saturday, April 22nd 1 Samuel 1:19-28

"The Lord establish His word" (v. 23).

The last of the Judges was God's answer to Hannah's prayer. Samuel, literally "asked of God," was God's man. He was pre-eminently a man of prayer. Although the corruption of the priesthood was appalling, Samuel was protected and grew up in the fear of the Lord (vv. 24-28). Fungus growth in a tree is not usually detected for a long time, but when the crash comes the state of the tree is clearly seen. Israel had been sinning for a long time and the catastrophe was nigh, but in the midst of decay and destruction God was training a boy who, in manhood, would lead His people into purity of life.

May we ever be kept by the power of God to walk in righteousness.

Sunday, April 23rd 1 Samuel 2:2-11

"My heart rejoiceth in the Lord" (v. 1).

Prayer and praise (v. 1) are inseparably conjoined in Scripture (Colossians 4:2; 1 Timothy 2:1). This beautiful song was Hannah's tribute of thanks for Divine goodness in answering her petition. "Mine horn" seems to be an allusion to the dress of eastern women, that of wearing a tin or silver horn on the forehead on which the veil was suspended. Wives who became mothers raised their horn a few inches higher and the observable change in their head-dress made known their maternal status.

The blessing and provisions of God cause us to rejoice and to magnify the Lord, so that not so much our apparel but our demeanour is changed and others note the difference in our lives. The joy of the Lord is our strength!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Potentially powerful pots !

by Daryl M. M. Richardson

"But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, to show that the transcendent power belongs to God and not to us" (2 Corinthians 4 : 7, R.S.V.).

IN a very explicit way Paul, in the section on the ministry in 2 Corinthians, emphasises the nature of this high calling and points out that the treasure has been committed to earthen vessels. Being the latter though is no excuse for men failing in the responsibilities God's commission demands. So "having this ministry by the mercy of God, we do not lose heart," because God upholds the ministry Himself. The treasure is therefore valued the more, because the weaker the vessel the more powerful "the transcendent power" appears.

The containers

Even though the earthen vessels may be polished or painted up, their true identity cannot be hidden; they are still simply pots. Emphasis is often placed on the power of man, especially with regard to atomic power and the devastation he can produce, but basically he is characterised by his weakness as an individual. No wonder the psalmist said, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man, that Thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that thou visitest him?" (Psalm 8 : 3, 4). We are so weak, but He is almighty.

While emphasising the weakness of these vessels it must be remembered that they were made by the expert Craftsman. In no way should the work of our God be undermined. "O Lord, thou art our father; we are the clay, and Thou our potter; and we are the work of Thy hand" (Isaiah 64 : 8). Individual care, thought and design are expressed in each one. Each vessel is sustained by Him as it remains in His hands. Just as a potter has a sense of satisfaction in seeing his finished work, so God feels the same as a vessel shows forth His glory, though at present in a limited way.

The concept

Earthen vessels are implements, not china ornaments. An earthen vessel or a baking-tin would not be on someone's mantelpiece! Vessels are not made to be looked at; each vessel is made to be useful in a specific task. The Lord told Ananias that Paul was "a chosen instrument of His to carry His name before the Gentiles and kings and the sons of Israel" (Acts 9 : 15, R.S.V.). The Greek word translated "instrument" here is translated "vessel" in the Authorised Version and in 2 Corinthians 4 : 7 in both A.V. and R.S.V. It can refer to any instrument or utensil. A vessel needs to be "unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work" (2 Timothy 2 : 21).

Earthen vessels are vulnerable and easily scratched. If Paul was thinking of the small pottery lamps found in Corinth at this time, as some assume, the point is even more applicable. These lamps were cheap and fragile and therefore easily shattered.

All those engaged in the Lord's work are especially vulnerable to attacks from Satan and to temptations to sin, yet we can be assured not only of the covering of Christ's blood but of the everlasting God above and the everlasting arms beneath us (see Deuteronomy 33 : 27).

The contrast

People speaking of Paul had said, "His letters are weighty and strong, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech of no account" (2 Corinthians 10 : 10, R.S.V.), yet the weakness of the vessel in no way undermines the authority of the Gospel which is preached. Just as a darkened room emphasises the brightness of a light, so a weak vessel magnifies God's power. God always has something in reserve.

Without God man can do nothing, the power being entirely of God, but with Him anyone comparable with David can conquer any formidable giant. The greater the problem or difficulty, the greater the fall when it is conquered, the greater the resultant victory and the greater the glory to God. No attention must be drawn to the vessel; the vessel should point only to Him.

2 Corinthians 4 : 8, 9 shows this contrast applied to certain situations. The present tense is used, showing that Paul knew that these experiences occurred regularly and not just as isolated incidents.

"We are afflicted in every way but not crushed." Though we are trapped in a small corner, heaven's throne can still be reached. Often the way of escape is visible only when we find ourselves in a corner.

"We are perplexed, but not driven to despair." We may not know all the answers, but we know the answer. We are sure of the One on whom we depend, both for the present and the future.

"We are persecuted but not forsaken." Even when abandoned by everyone we are alone with God, a blessed experience shared by many Early Church and present-day martyrs.

"We are struck down but not destroyed." Even if an individual battle is lost we are assured of the final victory. We both have it and can apply it now.

Often only when human extremity has been reached do we allow God to take over, yet even then He is more than able. The problem is then often worsened by our feeble attempts at trying to solve it. It is much better to let Him take over in the first place. So even earthen vessels, treasure-filled, can be MORE THAN CONQUERORS IN EVERY SITUATION. S

WEDDING IN MADRAS

THE eldest daughter of Pastor and Mrs. Henry Joseph has married Mr. Victor Philip, who has completed three years of study at Hohner's College and has two more years to do to complete his finals in music.

The couple were married by the bride's father and the bride was given away by our missionary John Prentice. Because of the crowd they had to hire one of the biggest churches in Madras. A company of 2,000 gathered for the reception. It was a great Christian and Pentecostal witness, a major event for our Madras church. Our picture, sent by John Prentice, shows the happy couple with Christian friends and particularly Johnny and Roy Prentice suitably attired!

WESTCLIFF-ON-SEA

Pastor : J. J. B. Hounsome

In his report on Pastor Harry Toft's death, Pastor Gerald Ladlow made reference to those witnessed to in hospital by our brother. You will be delighted to know that one of these same men surrendered to the claim of the Lord through the direct influence of our brother's testimony.

On the previous Sunday evening he came to the service through a gale, a distance of over four miles by taxi, obviously under old-time conviction. Much prayer was made on the Tuesday following and his decision for Christ was made on the Sunday.

BLACKPOOL, Jubilee Temple

Pastor : L. E. Lambert

There were children everywhere! Every seat was full and Jubilee Temple is a large place. On the steps, on the platform, on the carpet in the aisles, for five nights kiddies crowded the church. They queued for an hour before we started. On three nights we had between 410 and 440. On Tuesday and Friday we touched 500 children.

It was hard work, but an answer to prayer, and the second stage of our endeavour to build up the temple. We started by decorating the building from top to bottom inside, then we tackled the outside, then the children's campaign came and next a major crusade to reach this great, needy area with the Gospel will be held.

The main motive was to build up the Sunday school. The week before the Sunshine Corner week we had twenty-two children; on the last two Sundays sixty-five—not yet a big Sunday school, but a 200 per cent increase. On the first Wednesday after the special week we had 200 to Sunshine Corner. We know it will settle down, but we really believe the Sunday school will settle up!

Please pray for us. We believe that what God has started He will complete. We start our main effort soon.

L. E. LAMBERT.

Pastor : J. Harrison

During a week's children's campaign an average attendance of 178 children showed how much they enjoyed themselves by their lively singing, enthusiastic response to the questions asked and attentiveness during the showing of the coloured films. A feature of each meeting was the Bible verse, each night a different "I am" of Jesus. The children were encouraged to read and to bring their Bibles and by the end of the week nearly every child had a Bible.

Sunday night was "prize night" and this theme was carried through into the message given by the campaigner, our pastor, when he spoke on Psalm 130:3. The "I am" texts were well recited at the prizegiving by different children, including a four-year-old girl. Several children took part in the service in Bible readings and singing. Four prizes were given in each age group for the highest marks awarded during the week and prizes were given for colouring texts.

Nearly two dozen children were counselled by Sunday school teachers during the campaign and a good number have come to our Sunday school. Over twenty now attend Junior Crusaders. At the weekly children's meeting immediately following the campaign 127 were present.

We thank God for blessing us with fine weather, for a good attendance of children and for saving souls.

(MRS.) BRENDA WICKS.

INGATESTONE

Pastor : P. K. G. Rose

Always looking for ways to bring people under the sound of the Gospel, Pastor Rose suggested that we should try a new venture at Ingatestone on Mothers' Day. The day before found us busy looking for flowers and the ladies making small posies. During the Sunday evening service the Sunday school, Sunshine Corner and Crusaders rendered musical items. Scenes of happiness followed as each younger child received a posy of flowers from the visiting preacher and presented it to his or her mother.

The challenging Gospel message by Pastor

Robert Mathews, of Blean, Kent, contained a timely word to parents emphasising the need to have God in the heart, in the home, and to meet with Him at the family altar. It was good to meet a number of parents who do not normally attend.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. HAZEL McKIBBIN

By Ron Jones

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT OF THE WEST OF ENGLAND PRESBYTERY

IT was my privilege to be present at the funeral service of our sister Mrs. McKibbin. I can forgive you if you think it strange of me to talk about being at such an event as a privilege, but let me explain.

The church was filled with people of all ages. Many were obviously members of the Swindon church who had grown to love Mrs. McKibbin because they had seen her at work and at worship in their midst. Others had come from Bon Marché. They were her workmates, who, through her witness, had seen Jesus at work in the life of a real Christian, for there was no sham about Hazel McKibbin. Pastors J. T. Bradley and H. W. Greenway joined with them all in paying tribute to this dedicated child of God.

Our sister had suffered more than most during the past few years and in the short space of twelve months had been in hospital three times. When I think of all this, I feel that I should repeat something I said at the funeral service: "Mrs. McKibbin must have been a great woman, for anyone of lesser calibre would have crumbled beneath the stresses of such constant affliction. One thing is sure, Hazel McKibbin's house of clay caused her much pain, but now she has taken up a new abode—'a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.'"

The wonder of it all is that what the world calls death is the very means by which we are released from our restricting house of clay in order that we might take up our dwelling in that eternal home. Hazel McKibbin has changed her house and her address.

Our prayers and Christian love are with Pastor W. R. McKibbin and his three daughters, Dorothy, Muriel and Rachel. God bless you, brother! It won't be all that long before we change our address too!

People come to Christ in Ireland

WE are justly proud of our Ulster brethren who have contended for the faith for so many years. We are deeply grateful and mindful that our Elim Movement began in Ireland. We give thanks to God that Ireland has made such a generous contribution to the Elim Movement in giving so many able men and women to the Elim ministry. Today many are in high positions of spiritual and executive leadership.

The 1972 Irish Annual Conference was held in the Melbourne Street, Belfast, church on the very edge of a troublesome area. Barbed wire and soldiers' posts are outside the church, and yet in this atmosphere the conference took place. It was a quiet, thoughtful, prayerful conference and one could detect the atmosphere of tension and some distress. This was to be expected, with the tragedy of so many bombs blasting homes and central properties down, with the loss of so much life and limb. Then came the disturbing and, to many, the distressing news of the suspension of the Stormont Government. A genuine sense of apprehension and a real fear for the future gripped the people.

It has driven the Elim ministers and churches to prayer and to an ever upward look to God for help. It seems that lawlessness has won at least temporarily, but God is surely on the throne.

The business of the conference went smoothly and the results of the voting for the conference committees and executives showed the confidence of the ministers in that their executive were all re-elected and our revered superintendent, Pastor A. Wilson, was also re-elected. Outstandingly noticeable was the genuine interest and attitude towards our missionary work. The spiritual tone of the conference was high and delightful.

The public conference rally held in Ulster Temple was well attended and there was a rich anointing of God's Holy Spirit upon the whole service. I detected a deep spiritual note, and though there was a natural expected tenseness among the people because of the political situation the presence of God was pronounced.

On Sunday night the Ulster Temple was again filled and twenty people made decisions for Christ. It is surely amazing that the Holy Spirit can awaken the hearts of people in the midst of deep national trouble. The excitement of Pastor David Ayling, the minister, and the joy of his countenance as he led the service so ably were contagious.

We commend our brethren for their example in maintaining the spiritual glow during tribulation and troublesome days. We assure them of our prayers and constant interest.

P. S. BREWSTER.

Easter with the

LONDON CRUSADER CHOIR

ON Good Friday morning at nine o'clock the choir enters the grim precincts of Wandsworth prison. Over 300 men voluntarily gather in the spacious chapel for this special service of remembrance. Introduced by the prison chaplain, the Crusader Choir shares with the governor, staff and inmates the message of Good Friday. Four prisoners read the lessons and the choir contributions include "Man of sorrows," "He could have called ten thousand angels," "No name has meant so much to me," "Blest are all who find salvation," etc., all of which fit in well with the great theme of the day. The singing by the congregation is a moving experience on such occasions. Pastor Douglas B. Gray's commentary and message bring everyone present face to face with the meaning of Calvary. The great prison chapel echoes as men file back to dreary cells to think and, we trust, to pray, with the choir singing

*Then how much more shall God our Father
In love forgive, in love forgive,
Then how much more shall God our Father
Our wants supply and none deny.*

ON Easter Day we are on the road at seven o'clock, bound for the Church of the Good Shepherd in Cambridge. At very brief notice the B.B.C. requested the choir to provide the choral contributions for the People's Service on Radio 2. Such events are not unusual, as the London Crusader Choir is on call for the B.B.C. The early departure is more than a worthwhile effort and many express thanks for the blessing on this unique broadcast service. Back we go to London for choir members to attend their own Easter Day evening meetings.

ON Easter Monday we are back on home ground in the Royal Albert Hall—and what a day! It is full of spiritual thrills, blessing and fellowship with other singing evangelists. It is the London Crusader Choir's forty-second Easter Monday in the Royal Albert Hall.

...Where Jesus walked

The second in a series of Holy Week broadcasts over B.B.C. Radio Bristol given by Ron Jones. The recording of this broadcast was made by the Sea of Galilee.

The writer recording by Galilee

WHAT is your opinion of the new halfpenny? There are many people who would like it to be withdrawn from circulation. It is not worth very much, because you can get 200 for a pound. I have just come out of the Israeli Discount Bank in Tiberias and have made my way to the shores of the Sea of Galilee, just 200 yards away. I wish you could be here with me to share its delights. I went to the bank because I wanted 500 agarot. They are dainty little Israeli coins with scalloped edges, and there are over 1,000 of them to our pound sterling! In other words, they are almost worthless. It might well remind us of the widow's mite, about which Jesus remarked, "She has given more than all the rich folk put together, because she has given everything she possessed."

Most of you never knew that there was such a coin as an agara; neither did I until this week! As I sit here checking my coins and listening to the gentle lapping of the Galilean waters at my feet, my thoughts turn to the part money played during the last week in the life of Jesus before Calvary. There were the thirty pieces of silver, the money Judas Iscariot received for betraying Jesus, the average price for which a slave was sold on the open market, the price of betrayal—blood money! I would not have been in Judas's shoes for anything, would you? I tried to "con" myself into thinking that if I had been there I simply would not have done such a thing, but it was mainly greed that caused Judas to become a quisling, and, if we are honest about it, that same sort of greed is causing havoc in our world. Greed among the nations leads to war. Greed in industry leads to unreasonable profits and unnecessary strikes. Greed among neighbours is mainly responsible for the crazy effort we make to "keep up with the Joneses." Most of us have this greedy streak and it is amazing how easily we can pick it out in the other fellow. As far as Judas is concerned, it stands out like a sore thumb and, even to this very day, we show our utter contempt for him, for while we readily call our son Peter, or James or Andrew or John, we would not even call our dog Judas.

I cannot help feeling, however, that we have missed one of the greatest tragedies in the story of Judas. True, he had an awful weakness in his make-up, but what a terrible thing that there were those who unscrupulously exploited that weakness. I can almost hear those religious leaders discussing him: "He is easy prey for us, the glitter of a bit of silver, the jingle of a few coins and we will have him just where we want him." Even in our so-called enlightened twentieth century we have an over-abundance of such traders on human weakness, that is why we have the increasing problems of drug addiction and alcoholism, the get rich merchants who push their pornographic wares at every opportunity and those who make fat bank balances as a result of their fellow men being involved in the blood and sweat of war. There are even those who dare to trade in holy things, knowing our tendencies to an assumed piety in a religious atmosphere. I call it religious commercialism. It happens every Christmas and it is happening more and more at Easter. Nothing could be further from the real meaning and purpose of Easter, for Jesus did not come to trade on our weaknesses, but to give us His strength and courage.

When we find ourselves in difficulty because of our weakness, remember that it only takes a short prayer to reach God if we do not live too far away!

Words and drawing by

PAUL'S mother and father had given him a nice, red watch for his birthday. Paul was pleased with his watch. He had always wanted one. He wore it wherever he went—to school, at play, at the seaside, in the park. Whenever he went out his mother told him to be back home by half-past four and, with his watch to tell what time it was, Paul was never late.

One day, when Paul was playing with his friends, he looked at his watch to see if it was time to go home. It was half-past three. Paul decided that there was time for one more game. When he looked at his watch some time later the watch still said half-past three!

Paul's watch had stopped! He held it up to his ear, but he could not hear it ticking. He shook it and shook it, but it just would not go.

When Paul arrived home he told his father what had happened. His father decided that there was just time to take the watch to the watchmaker at the end of the street.

"Your watch is not broken," the watchmaker said. "It just needs a clean. There is a lot of dirt inside it."

Soon the watchmaker had cleaned Paul's watch and Paul was pleased to have his watch ticking away merrily on his hand again. "Fancy that, Dad," Paul said to his father. "There were only a few little spots of dust inside the watch!"

"Yes," said Paul's father. "But those little spots of dust were enough to make the watch useless. Do you know, Paul, that the same sort of thing can happen with our hearts? Every time we say a sinful word, every time we are selfish and disobedient—there goes another spot on to our hearts. We never notice these little spots, just as you never noticed them getting inside your watch, but very soon these spots grow bigger and bigger and our hearts get so dusty with sin that there is only one thing to do. We must ask God, our heavenly Maker, to make our hearts clean and pure again. Before we go to sleep at night we can ask God to remove all the spots of sin and selfishness that have collected during the day. If we ask Him to forgive us and help us to be better boys and girls for Him, He will make our hearts as good as new."

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

A FEW Sundays ago a stranger came to one of our evening services, which was, from start to finish, entirely a Gospel service. I talked with him later and found that he was a visitor from overseas. Though he was a born-again believer he was not a member of a Pentecostal church. He expressed surprise that the Gifts of Tongues, Interpretation and Prophecy were not in operation. I pointed out to him that the service had been for preaching the Gospel to the unsaved and that the Gifts of the Spirit were usually in evidence in other meetings mainly for Christians, such ministry being a continual source of inspiration.

The following was sent to me by a senior minister, a past President of the Elim Pentecostal Churches:

When the handmaid of the Lord said "Be it unto me according to Thy word," by her prayer and consecration she made a way whereby God could be born among the sons of men.

When the Son of God said "Nevertheless, not My will, but Thine be done," "Father, forgive them," "It is finished," He split the veil and so made a way for sinners to come into the presence of God.

If He, by His prayer and consecration, tore the veil, so you by your prayers and consecration can cause the omnipotent power of God to pierce through the Iron Curtain and penetrate beyond the Bamboo Curtain.

Your prayers and consecration can cause walls of opposition to crack and barricades of rebellion and unbelief to be broken down and so the mighty power of God can rend the veils and tear the curtains and thus make a way to the heart of man, that man can find a way to the heart of the Eternal.

GOOD news is always an encouragement and, as those who were privileged to attend will testify, attendances at the great Easter meetings in Trafalgar Square and the Royal Albert Hall, London, were well up to average, to say the least. A lovely spring day enhanced the occasion, especially in the Square, and we rejoiced as souls were saved both in the open air and in the hall. It was heartwarming to see the response and to be aware of God's presence in blessing the preaching of the Word of God. It was announced in the evening service that over forty had received the baptism in the Holy Spirit between the afternoon and evening services.

Details of the meetings will be highlighted in our reports and pictures, but we must remark on the magnificent congregational singing. It is always an inspiration to share in this, but somehow this year new heights seemed to be reached.

Douglas B. Gray excelled in guiding the music of the massed choir and "What a lovely name, the name of Jesus" will surely be heard in our churches for months to come. It was superb.

The singing of the German choir and of the Coventry choir in Trafalgar Square was outstanding. The strains of Gospel song echoed across the famous spot with splendid harmony and sincerity.

There were so many high points, however, that we must leave details to our reporters. May we thank all those who ministered in every way—and the number is great, for there are many backroom workers and organisers behind our Easter festival. We salute you in the Lord's name and praise God with you for God's blessing upon your efforts.

On we go now to our conference and we are encouraged by the response. Bookings are already up on last year's final figure—and the end is not yet. We would make a very special plea for much prayer. We all know what a tremendous effect there would be if there was a wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Blackpool. Many will not be able to be with us. Our earnest request to you is that you will be much in prayer for us and for our beloved movement, particularly during conference week. Share with us by praying for us and for our fellowship as a whole. We used to have the slogan, "Power for the hour." We still need it!

A TRAIN JOURNEY TO ETERNAL LIFE

By MARILYN FORSTER

ON a recent train journey, after I had finished reading the newspaper, I noticed that the gentleman opposite to me was reading the Bible and looking rather perplexed. I leaned over and asked him if he was a Christian. He blushed at the question and said that it was very difficult to answer that sort of question, but he had felt earlier in the journey that he should speak to me about it. He was a sports teacher and had been seconded to a course in London which involved theology, hence his reading the Bible on the train. He was studying for the course, but could not understand what he was reading about. I asked if he was interested in theology and he said, "Only if it is relevant to life today."

I was thrilled to have the opportunity of explaining about the living Jesus Christ and how the Bible is relevant. The joy must have showed, because he said "I can tell it works for you—you are beaming!" Tears were in his eyes as I showed how it could work for him, too. The Lord's presence was so powerful in the train compartment, I did not realise how our voices must have carried through the whole compartment because by the time we came to the end of the journey all the passengers had stopped chatting and were listening to us and staring at us. There seemed so much more to explain, so I left him with the book The Jesus Generation, by Billy Graham, which shows how relevant the Bible is.

Last week the gentleman contacted me at my place of employment to return my book and I could tell that he had changed since I last saw him. Over a cup of coffee in a London restaurant I said to him, "Last time I asked you if you were a Christian. You said you found it hard to answer. What would your answer be now?" His reply was, "Yes, I am a Christian now, but I still have so much to learn!"

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

DEAR EDITOR,

The Daily Telegraph of February 25th reported that four officers of the Bristol University Students' Union have resigned because fellow students refused to allow a £100 gift from union funds to go to the I.R.A.

It is unthinkable that British taxpayers' money can even in an indirect way be channelled into the coffers of the I.R.A. funds. I feel that it is appalling that such a proposition should even be thought of in the first place. I am greatly disturbed by the seemingly increasing support that this illegal organisation is receiving from British university students.

I call upon all Christians and responsible citizens who have a concern for the maintenance of law and order in our country to join me in condemning any encouragement given to the I.R.A. by British students. Newspaper and television reports seem to suggest that our universities are producing a diminishing number of responsible citizens and an increasing number of anarchists. My prayer is that the Holy Spirit will move in convicting and converting power upon the student population of our country and thus channel their militancy into the cause of Christ.

Yours sincerely in Him,

MALDWYN JONES.

Black Churches

by George Canty

PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICER,
BRITISH PENTECOSTAL FELLOWSHIP

"Many of the West Indian Pentecostal assemblies would never have come into existence if their founders had been welcomed into local English Pentecostal communities. (They) tried many English Pentecostal assemblies and always found themselves unacceptable. Finally, in desperation, they set about establishing their own congregations. I have this in recorded statements made to me nearly ten years ago in the early formative days of the West Indian sects."

THIS serious indictment comes from Clifford S. Hill in the booklet Black Churches, just published by the British Council of Churches. I want to say that there is little truth in it. The same statement was published in Race Today, by the Institute of Race Relations. Despite my objections the author has repeated it in this book.

Colour prejudice is highly objectionable to Pentecostals in Britain and contrary to our ethical teaching. Any sign of it would have been rebuked within our own ranks. I have approached many Pentecostal leaders, all with strong feelings on the subject. None of them has found any evidence of anti-black prejudice, nor have I, though I have preached in Pentecostal churches everywhere and have spent years in immigrant areas.

The first pastor of one group had previously held office in my own church and I assisted their new work when it was established. I helped another group to acquire premises and have written on their behalf in my work as a free-lance journalist.

In my present church we have many West Indians whose colour is not so much as noticed. Our God is colour blind.

In London, a worker in race relations came to one Pentecostal church and went away saying that it had no colour problem and that she was not needed. Another has a fifty per cent coloured membership.

The largest section of the West Indian Pentecostal assemblies is the New Testament Church of God. It is part of the British Pentecostal Fellowship with membership of its central standing committee.

While the booklet describes it as affiliated to the Church of God, Cleveland, U.S.A., this is only half true. It is actually the Church of God; the name difference is to cover certain complications about the use of the original name outside the U.S.A.

The General Overseer of the Church of God, U.S.A., Dr. Ray H. Hughes, has issued a statement denying the allegations made by Clifford Hill in Black Churches. He states that the New Testament Church of God was planted in Britain because of the decision of the U.S.A. General Executive to keep together their people who had been members in the West Indies and who were migrating to England. The Church of God is the strongest Pentecostal movement in the West Indies. He also says: "It was not because of racial prejudice encountered in English Pentecostal churches that the West Indian Church began."

The first N.T.C.G. assembly was in Wolverhampton. There was no Pentecostal church in that area then, and therefore it could not be said that the local Pentecostals had rejected the black people.

Certain differences in culture show themselves in the services of white people and black people. English Pentecostal churches have worship styles which do not always appeal to West Indian believers. This is another reason why they began their own churches. It would be truer to say that they "rejected" our type of service than that we "rejected them," but we never found their behaviour in our churches objectionable. The greatest concord exists today between the black Pentecostals and the established English churches.

This makes it regrettable that the British Council of Churches should issue a booklet which is likely to be read by migrants and which would give them false impressions and create possible bitterness against the churches in Britain. Whatever value the booklet may have for the sociologist, it is hard to know what purpose it can have in improving race relations.

Black people are very welcome in all our churches and I assure them they will find things quite different from the way they are described by Mr. Clifford Hill.

Correspondence with Mr. Hill contained his remark that the power of Christ can cleanse us of the sin of racial prejudice. We not only believe that it can, but that it does. My opinion is that the cause of Christ would have been better served in this booklet if, rather than alleging to the world that the effect was missing from British churches, evidences of that power had been included.

There is abundant evidence of this type in our Pentecostal churches, for from the beginning we have always rejoiced in the world unity brought about through the Pentecostal blessing. We are proud to say of all families of the earth, "These are our brethren!"

Book review

Dare to Discipline, by Dr. James Dobson, Published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., hardback—price £1.25, postage and packing 11p extra; paperback—price 60p, postage and packing 7p extra.

Here is research of the highest order. Dr. James Dobson in a thorough, painstaking manner tackles the laissez-faire philosophy so prevalent in modern society and makes no mistake in declaring such philosophy to be the root cause of much of the heartache and misery that blight the happiness of so many parents and children.

Dr. Dobson's insight into the prevailing dilemma enables him to speak with practical understanding of a discipline, tailored and designed to produce happiness unsullied by "sassiness." The book shows clearly the need for character and moral fibre that fit young people for their share of life's responsibilities. The section given to "Discipline and Morality" and that given to drugs—"Discipline gone to Pot"—will be extremely valuable to all who participate in the work of rescue.

We recommend this volume, written by so eminent a psychologist, to all social workers, teachers and parents. I would like to see it in the hands of all our ministers.

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ★ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ★ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ★ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ★ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ★ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ★ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it. We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church. With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

The community of Christian ethics

by W. J. MAYBIN

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, CROYDON

WE have already seen that there is a Bible ethic and that therefore there is a science of human behaviour befitting the Bible Christian. If that ethic is a standard of character, then the standard for the Christian is Jesus Christ. The headline in the Christian's copy book is not a patron saint of yesterday, but "Jesus Christ the same yesterday and today and for ever."

We cannot live our lives "as anchorites, but in society" comments Sydney Cave. As Wesley was taught in his formative days as a young Christian: "The Bible knows nothing of solitary religion." It is not possible to live the Christian life in solitude; if it is to be effective for God it must be lived in the context of our social surroundings.

Dr. H. Wheeler Robinson in The Christian Experience of the Holy Spirit, argues: "The reality of religion is never possessed until it is a first-hand experience of God, unfettered by the conventions of the crowd, unique as is every voluntary product of personality. The reality of religion is not known until it is socially tested and developed; we do not know how we are reacting to God until we know how we are reacting to man."

The Christian must live in the Family, the State and the Church, and the task of Bible ethics is to relate our Christian doctrines to the perplexities and opportunities which these communities present.

The Family

One cannot mistake the stress that Christianity lays on the simplicity, grandeur and sanctity of family life. In this age of permissiveness, when it is almost a cliché in religious circles to assert that family life is breaking down, we can but affirm that this is the result of the breakdown of our religious life. The national gallop from the Christian obligation within the framework of marriage can be assessed in terms of the mounting divorce rate, increased illegitimacy, broken homes and juvenile delinquency.

Jesus was a member of a race in which the family had been a great institution. It is not surprising to find that it figured largely in His teaching. Family life involves the marriage bond and Jesus spoke clearly and without fear or favour on the subject of marriage, indeed He laid the foundation of the family by His plain teaching on the indissolubility of marriage.

It is common to speak of "Christian marriage," but it must be pointed out that "there are not two different kinds of marriage, there is just marriage, as there is birth and death, and there is a Christian approach to and interpretation of all of them" (F. R. Barry in Christian Ethics and Secular Society). Whether the marriage ceremony is performed by the State or by the Church, it is a permanent, exclusive union between one man and one woman for life. This is made clear in every civil marriage ceremony, therefore, marriage, as recognised by the law of the United Kingdom, is, in essence, Christian marriage. Jesus made it clear that He was opposed to polygamy. The original plan of God, as seen in Eden, was monogamy, and even free-thinkers in our western civilisation would admit that this was the best for the partners concerned, for the offspring and for society.

Divorce is a much debated problem. If a careful study is made of Moses, we find that the Law did not provide for divorce in the case of adultery, since such a sin required the death of the adulterer and the adulteress, yet, if we refer to Deuteronomy 24:1-4, it is clear that some form of divorce was allowed and that afterwards a form of contract was handed to the wronged wife, after which she was free to remarry, but "we must remember that Moses is not here professing to state the grounds of divorce, but accepting it as an existing fact" (J. S. Wright in The New Bible Commentary).

The seventh commandment is God's defence of the marriage tie. It flings up ramparts round the home by declaring the sanctity and inviolability of the marriage bond. Adultery is in truth an invasion of the household, a destruction of the tie which unites the family.

When we turn to the New Testament we hear Jesus saying (Matthew 10:2-12) that it was necessary to get beyond the Mosaic permission, to "the beginning" when we see in the Genesis story that there was no thought of divorce. In Luke 16 : 18 it appears that our Lord's teaching made no provision for divorce and Paul in 1 Corinthians 7 : 10, 11, states the tradition of our Lord's teaching. When we look at Matthew 5 : 31, 32, however, we find that He was prepared to permit divorce for one special reason, namely fornication. The same is found in Matthew 19 : 3-11, and "fornication" in both instances is taken by many as being equivalent to adultery. The reason why Matthew's Gospel includes this exceptive clause, while Mark and Luke omit it, has been explained by one writer by suggesting that the latter wrote for the Romans and the Greeks, neither of which races ever questioned that adultery established grounds for divorce. Fornication could, of course, refer to unfaithfulness prior to marriage or the discovery of nearness of kinship after the marriage ceremony.

In view of the modern tangle in the sphere of matrimony, the only possible principle of marriage, which alone consists with its essential nature as Christians understand it, is that it should be approached as indissoluble. "On the whole, it is clearly right that Christian influences of every kind should aim at restricting divorce in every possible way and raising public opinion to the level of the great ideal set before us by our Lord." (C. F. D'Arcy).

It is not difficult to see that marriage is necessary for the preservation and promotion of godly families, so the elevation of marriage will elevate the concept of family life. When the home is guarded by the great moral principles which have just been considered, there is created an atmosphere of purity and holy love. In these surroundings the basis of character can be truly laid and the children can be nurtured in the knowledge and fear of the Lord. Thus parents are God-given guardians of their offspring and, in the discharge of their obligations as parents, they succeed in endowing their children with a noble heritage and are securing the maintenance of the Christian faith from one generation to another. Barry suggests that "to share in the common life of a truly Christian family is the nearest approach to the kingdom of God on earth that anyone is likely to find in this world." Marriage is not only a matter of procreation, but also of educating the children to be obedient to Jesus Christ.

The State

Like the family, the State is a Divinely ordained institution, Christians are called to a life of love in the fellowship of the Church, but they must recognise the authority of the State.

The relationship of Christianity to the State has been a vexed question at different times and in various countries, yet as we acquaint ourselves with the teaching of the New Testament we reach the conclusion that "Christ was no State revolutionary" (Lindsay Dewar in An Outline of New Testament Ethics). Palestine in the time of Christ was a hot-bed of political discontent. Judea was under a Roman procurator and Galilee subject to a subordinate from Rome. Jesus had to show that there was a vital, essential distinction between the kingdom He had come to establish and the secular State. There is no doubt that He could have led a great revolutionary movement. When the Pharisees tried to trip Him up by their question concerning the payment of tribute to Caesar, He said that they were to "render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's" (Matthew 22 : 21). For the Christian today "there is no doubt about the absolute right of the State to raise taxes, whether it is democratically elected or in an alien tyranny" (H. F. R. Catherwood in The Christian in an Industrial Society). Our Lord's words were a clear recognition of the Christian's duty to secular power and were a guide to His early followers as to the true doctrine of the relation of the new faith to earthly politics. The teaching of the Epistles completely endorses this attitude (Romans 13 : 1-7; 1 Timothy 2 : 1, 2; Titus 3 : 1).

State interference with the freedom of the individual, especially in his spiritual life, brings before us a serious consideration. On the one hand it could breed anarchism, while on the other it could render some so inactive that they come to look on the State as a mortal god. Jesus, in teaching that the Christian must render to Caesar the things that belong to him, was not suggesting that these included conscience. Where the State interferes with human conscience resistance of some kind is demanded. Both State and Church are under the sovereignty of God and, where circumstances call for it, the Christian must be prepared to say "we must obey God rather than men" (Acts 5 : 29).

The Church

In witnessing to Christ, the Church presents to mankind the highest moral truth and presents to impotent humans a power to live as God would

From J. H. Stevenson

ONLY some weeks ago I wrote concerning the importance of each Christian being a witness, using as an illustration the words of a judge in a prominent trial some years ago. When the leading witness spoke his first two words, "I think," the judge immediately stopped him and said, "You are here as a witness, tell us what you know."

In the recent trial at Manchester concerning the murder of Police Superintendent Richardson, of Blackpool, when the Crown Prosecutor began his important speech against the accused, he also stressed the importance of a true witness when he remarked "An ounce of personal eye-witness is worth more than a ton of speculative scientific theory." The language is almost extravagant, especially to a scientist or to a mathematician, but the learned counsel was skilfully advocating that the simple testimony of an eye-witness is irrefutable.

In my student days I recollect one of my colleagues, testifying to his conversion, would invariably say "He that hath an experience is not at the mercy of him that hath an argument." The prosecuting counsel's words led me to think of an all-important Scripture concerning the second advent of Christ, a glorious doctrine but debatable to many because it is future and we have not yet seen the event with our eyes. In 2 Peter 1:16-19 Peter, assuring us of the certainty of the event, declares that, with James and John he was an eye-witness of Christ in His majesty when our Lord was transfigured upon the mountain. To those men, the transfiguration of Christ was a preview, a rehearsal, of what we also will see one glorious day. I delight to read in the Gospels about the transfiguration: our Lord's countenance as the sun, and the disciples prostrated as dead men, manifestations repeated on the Damascus road and on the Isle of Patmos, both as to the appearance of Christ and as to the reactions of Saul and John. Yes, there have been eye-witnesses of the glory that awaits us.

An eye-witness is not the only valid witness, however, which we may learn from Peter witnessing to Christ's return as he adds: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy," concluding with the final evidence: "until the Day-star arise in your heart." I have often thought that Peter's threefold declared witness would assure me beyond doubt of the truth of the second advent of Christ as he, inspired by the Holy Spirit, reminds us of those who were eye-witnesses, of the written witness of God's Word, and of the witness of Christ Himself, the Day-star, within the heart of the believer. Which of these wonderful witnesses could be declared to be the most important I do not know, but if there had been no eye-witnesses, or if we were not fortunate to have our Bibles, the words of the hymn-writer would still ring true: He is not a disappointment! He is coming by and by,

In my heart I have the witness that His coming draweth nigh.

All the scoffers may despise me and no change around may see,

But He tells me He is coming and that's quite enough for me.

have man live. This is the task, but are we prepared for it? Is the Church failing to offer solutions? We must be saved to the utmost if we are to put ourselves out to be faithful to God's call. Von Hügel used to say that "concern" was the distinctive Christian emotion. We sing "Jesus, Thou art all compassion," but how very little of that surging emotion motivates our service!

Perhaps it might be honest to admit in these late days of this parenthesis of grace that we fail in mediating Christ by life and lip. The weakness of Christianity is not so much its poverty of numbers, but the fewness of those who really care. The truth is that we are not prepared to live dangerously: too few are willing to carry their Christianity instead of being carried by it. It is easy to deride the failure of the Church, to think in the words of Swinburne's caustic remark "I could worship the Crucified if He came to me without His leprous bride, the Church," yet the Church, with all her blemishes and failings, is the instrument in God's hands for the salvation of society. God has no other plan. We recall Calvin's words about Christians, "We have not yet attained to the rank of angels." She may be an imperfect instrument but, in the hands of the Holy Spirit, she can become a power for God. This can happen only when individuals who profess the name of Christ are prepared to be used by the Holy Spirit to do the work of Christ on earth. May God help us all before it is too late!

Let it shine !

WHEN our charming Swedish guest visited us last Christmas she presented us with a gift of candlesticks. I received a pair of small wooden ones shaped and beautifully coloured to look like poinsettias in green and scarlet. My husband was given a tall candelabrum with a centre stem and four holders on the horizontal support, in wood of a delicate cream colour and skilfully turned, a most satisfying ornament to the eye. They were complete with deep red candles and little rings of beech-nut husks wired together to decorate the bases of the candles and hold them firm. My dining table looked most attractive when the candles were lit.

How glad I was of these additions to our home when the power cuts were in operation and candles and oil lamps came into their own again. Jam jars and odd saucers may be just as effective as candleholders, but they are not very decorative.

The Lord Jesus uttered words of sound common sense when He said, "Ye are the light of the world . . . Men do not light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick and it giveth light unto all that are in the house."

A light must be prominent to be effective. As in Bible days, during our power cuts we placed our candles in the tallest candlesticks we could muster and positioned them high up where they could give maximum illumination. There has been in Christian circles a rather peculiar idea that Christians should shine discreetly, humbly and almost apologetically, not too glaringly brightly or annoyingly obviously, but Jesus finished His discourse on the shining Christian by saying, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." This command certainly suggests positive, effective witness through active service to God and to man, which cannot be missed or easily ignored.

The children's hymn, "Jesus bids us shine with a clear, pure light, like a little candle burning in the night" is quite Scriptural. True shining is costly. An ancient seal bears the effigy of a burning candle and underneath it "I give light by being myself consumed." True shining involves the total sacrifice of self and self-interest.

There are many kinds of candles, as we discovered during the emergency. Some were of good quality and lasted well, others, though brightly coloured melted unevenly and were soon finished. To our cost, my husband purchased two elegant candles eighteen inches long, only to discover that they were very deceptive and were hollow inside !

What is my witness like ? Do I maintain a clear, bright light ? Am I willing to be consumed, to be a willing sacrifice, offering time, talent, energy, every fabric of my being in the service of God ? I would hate to be a hollow sham, a make-believe Christian of poor quality.

In Luke 11 : 33-36 Jesus gave a further discourse on the child of God who must shine like a candle. We must be filled with the light of God, given over wholly to the business of shining, alight for God and lighted by God. David writes in Psalm 18 : 28 : "For Thou wilt light my candle, the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness." Isn't that just what He does at conversion ? Then, as the wise man says in Proverbs 20 : 27, the spirit of man becomes the candle of the Lord, with His glorious light burning within. Still using the same metaphor, Solomon gives a warning in Proverbs 24 : 20 that "the candle of the wicked shall be put out."

Great truths can be expressed simply and the Lord Jesus, the Son of God, imparted His teaching so that all could understand. I am quite content to try to be a candle shining for Him !

THE FAMILY ALTAR

Scripture

Union

Portions

Monday, April 24th

1 Samuel 2 : 12-26

"They knew not the Lord" (v. 12).

"Sons of Belial" rendered literally is "sons of worthlessness." They were careless, ungodly, loose-living, vicious, scandalous men despite their sacred office. Though professionally engaged in sacred duties they were strangers to the power of religion in the heart. Eli's sons, unsatisfied by the breasts and shoulders of the offerings, claimed part of the offerers' share also, rapaciously seizing it previous to the sacred ceremony (Leviticus 7 : 31-34). They insulted God by demanding their portion before His portion was burnt on the altar, thus degrading the pure, true sacrifice.

"But Samuel ministered before the Lord" (v. 18). May we, like Samuel, grow in the knowledge of the Lord and live not unto ourselves, or to please men, but to the glory of God.

Tuesday, April 25th

1 Samuel 2 : 27-36

"There came a man of God" (v. 27).

Even in that dark day the Lord found a man, a prophet, to send to Eli to remind him of the high honour of his family from Aaron onwards and to prophesy against Eli's house. In the east, so much importance has always been attached to old age that it would be a calamity and a disgrace to any family which could boast of only few or of no old men. The prophet speaks of judgment upon Eli's house regarding age (v. 31) and degradation (vv. 32-36). This was confirmed by afflictions, degradation, poverty and many untimely deaths. God would be merciful, however, and would not utterly consume Eli's family. In their poverty they would seek Samuel's help (v. 36).

In these dark days may we be found faithful in the service of God.

Wednesday, April 26th

1 Samuel 3 : 1-18

"It is the Lord" (v. 18).

Verse 1, literally "The word of the Lord was rare in those days, there was no vision published openly," gives a true indication of the darkness in Israel's spiritual experience. The Word was rarely known and there was no recognised prophet through whom God spoke. Only two prophets are mentioned during the whole administration of the Judges (Judges 4 : 4 ; 6 : 8).

There appeared a ray of light, however. Breaking His silence, God revealed Himself and spoke to Samuel (vv. 4-14). Eli, having drawn the painful secret from the child Samuel (vv. 17, 18), received the severe judgment of God in a spirit of meekness and un murmuring submission.

Notes by

May we ever be alert to the Spirit and to the Word of the Lord.

Thursday, April 27th 1 Samuel 3 : 19-21 ; 4 : 4-11

"God is come into the camp" (4 : 7).

The character of Samuel as a prophet was now fully established, yet Israel went to battle against the Philistines without advice from Samuel or a word from the Lord, hence their defeat. After the first slaughter of 4,000 Israelites they turned neither to the Lord nor to the prophet but to the ark. In so doing they put the symbol before the substance. They had the ark, but not the God of the ark. To serve their own ends they took the symbol out of its proper place—as though it could bring victory !

We proclaim the cross, but it is the Christ of the cross who delivers us. His life in us is our victory.

Friday, April 28th

1 Samuel 4 : 12-22

"The ark of God is taken" (v. 17).

The aged Eli sits pathetically on his official seat awaiting tidings, his eyes dim ("set," R.V., i.e. totally blind), his heart trembling. A runner arrives from Ebenezer, twenty miles away, bearing the symbols of disaster (v. 12). The messenger's successive statements increase Eli's agony until, on hearing that the ark has been taken, the ninety-eight-year-old judge falls backward and breaks his neck. God had indeed departed from them (vv. 16-18).

Equally touching is the death of Phinehas's wife. As she dies she calls her son "Ichabod," meaning "Where is the glory?" and adds "The glory is departed from Israel." The narrative suggests that the loss of the ark was a greater tragedy to her than the loss of her father-in-law and her husband.

Our glory is God Himself and His presence in temples of flesh.

Saturday, April 29th

1 Samuel 5 : 1-12

"Dagon was fallen . . . before the ark of the Lord" (v. 3).

While the ark was in the Philistines' hands, Samuel must have saved the sacred vessels of the Tabernacle, reorganised the government and taken steps to maintain the flame of religion. The ark was at Ashdod, later called Azotus (Acts 8 : 40), where, approximately 1,200 years later, Philip proclaimed the gospel. Dagon's temple and

Another Slant

by Ken Smith

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

ELIM EVANGEL readers reading my "slants" over the past few years will know that witnessing for the Lord Jesus Christ is a major theme, which seeks to encourage Elim members to look for opportunities for personal witness. Here is a most unusual opportunity in no way connected with research surveys.

Having recently come to Erdington, the staff of our two Sunday schools felt that I ought to speak at the annual prize distribution. I looked everywhere for a model pig to use in my talk and eventually one of the deacons suggested that I telephone Marsh and Baxters, a well-known Midlands pork products firm. I explained why I wanted to use a model pig and an appointment was made to collect one.

Along I went, to find that the pig was nearly six feet long! The box was too big to go in my car and too heavy to go on to the roof rack! We carefully manoeuvred the pig into the car after putting the back down, having signed to pay £60 if the pig was lost, stolen or broken!

The event created much interest among the staff and one of the directors and the works manager came to meet the preacher who wanted to borrow their model pig. They asked what I would say, as a preacher, to children, through the pig. What an opportunity to give them "a word in season," which of course I did, with a Gospel tract to each. I explained that I would tell of "Porky" at school, having his lunch, at a football match, not being much success, having "a pig's heart." I spoke to the director and to the works manager of a sinful heart, pointing out that they had one, if outside of Christ, mentioning a black heart, a red heart, speaking of the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ and the significance of the cross, a white heart through His blood, and a gold heart speaking of heaven, and finished up by giving them a rendering of a chorus to the tune of "Fight the good fight" relative to the four hearts. I guess that they never thought that they would get a children's address that afternoon! Although I did not get a rasher of bacon, I went away happy that once again the Lord had let me see an opportunity to witness for Him, without pressing or offending those who asked.

I do want these incidents to encourage readers to witness for Christ. Always have a suitable tract and word for every opportunity.

image were here. This god was highly honoured by the Philistines. God vindicated His own glory by defending His ark and breaking Dagon in pieces. Terror and destruction followed the ark and God caused confusion in the Philistines' ranks until they were forced to let the ark return to Israel (v. 11).

The mighty fall before the Lord of hosts, but He is our victory and strength.

1 Samuel 6:1-16

"They . . . saw the ark, and rejoiced" (v. 13).

After consultation the priests and the diviners—men who professed to tell the future—stressed the need for a trespass offering to be made to atone for the wrong that had been done. To bear the ark, a new cart was ordered to be made and to be pulled by two untrained, unyoked cattle (v. 7), a sign of reverence (compare 2 Samuel 6:3; Numbers 19:2). Untrained cattle would normally jump about and break the cart and would not leave their calves. They went straight along the highway to Beth-shemesh, an Israelite priestly city, turning neither to the right nor to the left, thus revealing the hand of God, because the Philistines followed and did not lead them. Reaping was always a time of rejoicing. The joy of the men of Beth-shemesh was intensified by the return of the ark (v. 13). Immediately, the Levites offered up sacrifices to the Lord.

Our greatest joy is knowing God is with us and that we are doing His will.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

From the President's pen

In journeyings oft . . .

ANOTHER chapter in the book of my life will be concluded in a week or so. This Presidential chapter records how another opportunity to serve the Lord has been filled with much travel, an ever-enlarging experience of the work, and a greater enjoyment of the fellowship of a large circle of the Elim family. Now the time has come for me to lay down this office and to make way for my esteemed colleague, Tom Walker. I am sure that he will serve you well, for he is a beloved brother who will find his own place in all your hearts. It would be good if we all prayed for him as we wish him Godspeed in his year of office.

It would be ungrateful of me if I did not express thanks to the ministers and laymen who have made me feel so much at home in their churches, with a special thanks to all who opened their homes and made things so comfortable for me.

I have managed to visit 150 churches. Everywhere I am asked this question, "What is the condition of the Elim work as a whole?" I have no reserve in stating that something is in the air—a fairly widespread consciousness of another outpouring. Wherever I have gone something is happening: an outreach for youth, a crusade already planned, a building expansion being considered; all over there is preparation for a move forward. An expectancy is among us and there are some definite signs of revival, praise the Lord! Elim is on the march and consequently the citadels of sin are about to be overcome. Victory is certain as long as we follow and obey the Captain of our salvation.

It was a great privilege to visit the missionary work in Guyana. It was such a marvelous experience that it still lives with me as I write this column. Thanks a million to John and Gladys MacInnes, Ian and Valerie MacInnes, Brothers Ramon, Ali, Trotman and Ramdeen, not forgetting that great woman, Sister Ten-Pow.

It is not an easy thing to be the pastor of a large church like Portsmouth and be a touring President at the same time. I am sure that it would have been almost impossible but for the continual support of the diaconate and members. To my people in Portsmouth I express my deepest gratitude.

Then, too, I want to thank my brethren on the Executive Council for the fellowship, kindness and encouragement they have given me during the past year.

Finally, unto Him, my Saviour and Lord, be all praise and glory.

ARCHIE A. BIDDLE.

(We take this opportunity to thank our President for his typically forthright, heartfelt contributions to the ELIM EVANGEL during his year of office. We trust that he will NOT lay down his pen!—EDITOR.)

A little member ?

My typewriter has fifty-two keys, each of which is working perfectly, except one; nevertheless, I hope to be able to communicate this message to you. One letter is missing. The sooner it is restored the better. Its contribution, though seemingly insignificant, is invaluable.

Similarly, each member of every congregation is invaluable . . .

INCLUDING YOU !

"Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary" (1 Corinthians 12 : 22).

The open-air meeting in Trafalgar Square on Easter Monday

Report by P. Daw MINISTER OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, RYE PARK

AS I set off in my car it was thrilling to realise that I was just one of many from all parts of the country converging on Trafalgar Square to take part in a great witness to the truth that Christ is risen! Joining the crowd gathered around the plinth, my attention was caught by a banner with "Peterborough" on it. It was good to see a fine representation from Elim's newest church.

The sun shone on us and the fire of God's love burned in our hearts, so it was fitting that we should sing "Heavenly sunshine" under the able leadership of Pastor H. W. Greenway. We had already listened to the Coventry choir proclaim "He lives! All glory to His name!" How nice it was to hear our friends from Hanover, Germany, taking part in song so well.

Casting my eye around the large crowd, I tried to form an impression of the atmosphere. An old tramp at the front of the crowd stood, mouth gaping, as he seemed to drink in everything that was being said. Some people indifferently continued their pleasurable pastimes. Tourists stopped in their tracks and, out of curiosity, listened to the Gospel message. In adjoining buildings people gathered on the balconies to witness what was happening.

Mrs. Wall from Wells thrilled us with her anointed ministry in song as she sang "This love is mine" and "Something He cannot see."

The Gospel was forcibly and plainly preached by Pastor Frank Lavender (Gloucester) as he gave a challenging message on "Four reasons why you should receive Christ."

The German choir sang again and we all sang the choruses "The need of the world is Jesus" and "He's alive, He's alive." Pastor Bryan C.

H. W. Greenway convening.

Vidamour (Jersey) brought the closing message, powerfully proclaiming the truth of the resurrection of Christ. We trust that those who heard were challenged and that many discovered in their own experience that the living Christ was indeed present to save.

The meeting was brought to a close as the Coventry choir sang "And can it be that I should gain an interest in the Saviour's blood." Then we all joined in singing "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun." We were reminded again that that day cannot be far away when the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our God and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever. We know that, for those who have received Christ as our Saviour, He reigns now on the throne of our hearts.

B. C. Vidamour proclaims the gospel.

F. Lavender preaching in the Square.

Leaving Trafalgar Square, I felt pleased to have taken part in this witness on Easter Monday to the fact of the resurrection. We had sung about it, preachers had proclaimed it, the sinner had heard the message—and there on the lapels of many coats and jackets was the truth again: "JESUS LIVES TODAY," "JESUS SAVES TODAY." Indeed HE DOES!

“Glory, glory be to Jesus”

A report of the afternoon meeting on Easter Monday in the Royal Albert Hall, London

By John A. Hamilton PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, GUILDFORD, SURREY

Mrs. Margaret Wall testifies.

EASTER MONDAY once again found the Elim family gathering from far and near in the Royal Albert Hall. For some, like myself, it was the first visit, while others were there for the forty-seventh time, but everyone came with hearts full of rejoicing in the glorious truth that Jesus is alive.

The massed choirs under the leadership of Douglas B. Gray provided an excellent musical introduction, then the chairman, Pastor Eldin R. Corsie, invited the congregation to join in the opening hymn, “I will praise Him.” This set the tone for the meeting throughout. The Principal of Elim Bible College, Pastor G. W. Gilpin, led in prayer.

Chorus time followed; what rally of Elim folk would be complete without it? Pastor Alexander Tee, our evangelist and National Youth Director, conducted the choruses with infectious enthusiasm. Following the reading of Matthew 26: 47-57 by our Field Superintendent, Pastor R. B. Chapman, the Gospelaire, three charming ladies from Plymouth, sang “This little light of mine” and “When I survey.” The anointing on their singing was truly wonderful. The congregation exulted in “O happy day.”

Mrs. Wall, the wife of our minister at Wells, testified to the healing power of the Lord Jesus. She had suffered for a number of years, finally being told that no effective treatment could be given. Mrs. Wall sought the Lord with fervency. After further tests at the hospital, the specialist was puzzled by the results and personally supervised a second series of tests, which served only to prove that our sister had been healed. Appropriately, the choir followed with “What a lovely name, the name of Jesus!” and Pastor W. R. Jones briefly told of an Easter wedding at Bristol two days previously when twenty-four people including the best man found Christ as Saviour.

The Coventry choir sang two pieces reminding us of the Man of Sorrows and, after another rousing congregational hymn, Mr. Gray led the London Crusader Choir in “Bound for the promised land.”

Our President, Pastor A. A. Biddle, turned our attention to the last miracle of Christ during His earthly ministry, viz. the healing of Malchus. You will have read the notes of this address in an earlier EVANGEL. Many people of all ages responded to the invitation to give their hearts to the Lord. It was most moving to know that hands went up all over the great hall.

After a spirited rendering of the hymn “Glory, glory be to Jesus!” by a happy congregation, veteran evangelist Pastor John Woodhead brought a tremendous meeting to a close with a typical fervent prayer.

"I will pour water on him that is thirsty" was our experience as we celebrated the sixth anniversary of our Ladies' Fellowship. With great enthusiasm, Mrs. Huw Jones, our President, led the opening hymn on the Saturday afternoon. Several ladies thanked the Lord in testimony and in song for His faithfulness through the past year. We sang our Sisterhood theme chorus: "Surely goodness and mercy."

Mrs. Ellsworth, from Emmaus Fellowship, Lampeter, exhorted us to look back, forward and up. We all looked forward to that wonderful day when we will see the Lord Jesus face to face. We then sang from the depths of our hearts "Praise the King of Glory, He is God alone."

On the Saturday evening Mr. David Oram, of Back to the Bible Broadcast, challenged our hearts as he pointed out the costliness, the timelessness and the pure motives of devotion to our precious Lord. A singing item was given by students who have recently found Jesus as Saviour and who are bubbling over with joy in Him. Mr. Huw Jones, the convener and our church secretary, drew the meeting to a close, but no one seemed to want to leave the house of God where we had truly met with Him.

After we had gathered around the Table of the Lord on the Sunday morning, Mr. Oram left us in no doubt as to what should be the extent of our loyalty to the Master whom we serve.

On the Sunday evening our own quartet brought the message in song and once again we felt the presence of the Holy Spirit challenging us and thrilling us as we listened to God's Word from Mr. Oram.

LANE END

A congregation of sixty people attended the farewell service of Pastor and Mrs. E. T. Carter before they departed to take up their new appointment at Grimsby. The service was followed by a fellowship tea.

They will be much missed in the Lane End area for their work in the church and for their youth work in the village.

BRIGHTON, The Lanes Pastor : F. A. Hodge

The induction service of our new minister was a great time of blessing. It was grand to see over 280 present from nearby Presbyterian churches and from the locality. Pastor T. W. Thomson was the convener. Pastor J. M. Reeve-Baker gave a stirring address. The Dagenham Crusader Choir gave us the Gospel in song, ably led at the piano by Ken Oldfield Hodge. The church secretary, Mr. John Beardsley, welcomed the new minister. Pastor John Lancaster preached the Word. Pastor F. A. Hodge gave his testimony as to how God had brought him back from death's door to come to minister to us.

We have a great and wonderful Saviour who has done great things and who is going to do great things.

PETERBOROUGH

Pastor : K. J. Cave

"The Midland Road Chapel has come to life again" was the comment by one person in Peterborough and we praise God that this is true, although in a much greater way than the commentator realised.

It is only six months since the opening of our church, but that has been sufficient to establish an assembly where the bonds of Christian love and fellowship are very apparent. We are thankful to the Lord for all His blessing. We have witnessed our first baptismal service, when nine candidates were baptised on confession of their faith, and two meetings when new members were received into fellowship. After much hard work the minor hall was redecorated, enabling a Sunday school work to be started. On the first Sunday seventeen children were present inside the hall, though outside there were several inches of snow. We are encouraged as week by week new children are brought in.

We were privileged to have the London Crusader Choir with us, when the church was filled to capacity for the afternoon service. Their ministry was much appreciated and will be talked about for a long time. Their visit was the start of a week's film crusade, which was an effective way of bringing the gospel message to many people both in the church and in one of the local schools.

People throughout the country have prayed for the work in Peterborough and God has answered prayer. Many now testify of the change in their lives and of the peace and joy they now enjoy. In an expanding city we look for an expansion on the work of the Lord as others come to experience this new life in Jesus.

JOHN STEWARD.

BURTON-ON-TRENT Pastor : R. Morrell

Our Sisterhood rally was a time of blessing. There was a real anointing of the Holy Spirit upon the whole weekend. Our speaker was Mrs. Margaret Ladlow from Salisbury and her ministry was greatly enjoyed by all and was greatly blessed to our hearts, as was the anointed ministry in song by Mrs. Jean Broomhall from Cheltenham. Various items were given by the members of the Sisterhood. The timbrel group gave a demonstration. These young people deserve great praise for their hard work.

At an after-church rally on the Sunday night Mrs. Ladlow showed us a film of Ghana, which we all enjoyed immensely. We give God all the glory for a blessed and wonderful weekend.

Our church is still in blessing under the sacrificial ministry of our beloved pastor and his dear wife.

SWINDON

Pastor : W. R. McKibbin

Graham Bowd feels people just do not talk to each other enough, and he is helping with this problem as the organiser of the Elim Crusaders, who have just opened their coffee bar, called "Top Deck."

"It is just one way of trying to make people talk to each other, and perhaps come here and discuss any problems they may have."

But the aim of the club is not only for young people to come with their troubles—it is also a social place.

"We have built the coffee bar where we can also serve soft drinks. There is taped music, and we hope to have live performers or speakers in for the evenings."

Graham, with friends Chris Coombes, Ken West and others, spent eighteen months converting the long narrow upstairs room at the Elim church into a club. Graham really sees the coffee bar as an evangelical way of presenting Jesus Christ to the young people.

"For instance, if we had a church service advertised I don't think we would get the same kind of response as we do with the club. We want people who come here to feel there is always a warm atmosphere where they're welcome."

In an effort to see that the Elim church club's doors are always open, the young people use their club's minibus to go and look for people in Swindon and ask them to come along for a coffee and a chat.

The pastor of the church, William McKibbin, said the young people would also use the bus to take old folk from their homes to church on Sundays.

The club is for people in the 14-to-25-year age group and will be open every Friday and Sunday, possibly more when the club has been established a little longer.

The club is a reminder of the work which the pastor's late wife, Hazel, who died recently, did for the church.

"In fact," explained Pastor McKibbin, "the last thing she did for the church was to ring the Evening Advertiser and say the club was opening.

"But the club is for any young person who wants to enjoy an evening out, and where there is help if they need any."

ESCALATING costs are all too well known to us. We have passed through a period when the price spiral has caused real worry to very many. Despite official hand-outs showing that wages and salaries have also increased in general, the average person remains convinced that we are on to a bad thing, that prices are galloping away with us. Housewives are preoccupied with the everlasting challenge of making ends meet and we wonder whether some of the earnest ideas reported in newspapers and in magazines are really of much use since they seem to be written by people who have large private incomes!

We have to say that Christian people give splendidly and Pentecostal folk set a wonderful example. It is only fair, however, that we should take stock of the situation. Our experience is that when our fellow labourers are appraised of the position that actually obtains they are ready to make their giving a matter of even greater concern and to take the whole position before the Lord in prayer.

The fact is that the Christian Church as a whole is confronted with many painful choices because of the inflationary trend. The proportion of the income of churches which has to go on stipends and manses is on the increase even though the salaries of the majority of Free Church ministers tend to fall below the national average, and in many instances well below; indeed it is not unusual to find younger ministers qualifying for family income supplement.

Then the costs of printing and postage have increased at what seems to be an alarming rate. In some cases charges have doubled and more than doubled regarding postage and carriage in not much over a year.

Those who were in the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday will have heard that the fees are being increased again. Evangelists will soon tell of the almost daunting figures they are expected to pay for halls, advertising, printing, everything. Ask the missionary department and they will be quick to point to their financial challenges.

We declare these things not simply to bemoan facts but to raise for your prayer and thinking the great challenge of Scripture. We know what it is, for we can read it in Malachi 3:10. Special appeals have to be made, but there is no real substitute for the regular, systematic, proportionate giving of the Lord's own people. After all, if we do not support God's work who will?

THIS was a wonderful meeting. From the start we were conscious of God's presence. Pastor W. M. E. Plowright, in his opening remarks, quoting from Philippians 2:9-11, set the tone for this great evangelistic rally, then led the vast congregation in the opening hymn, "All hail the power of Jesu's name."

Prayer time was taken by Pastor John Lancaster, of Eastbourne, when we prayed in particular for God's blessing upon the meeting and upon our fellow believers in Northern Ireland. The congregation were again on their feet for the hymn "I serve a risen Saviour." With great voice and certainty we declared that Christ is alive and lives in our hearts.

Our attention was brought to the Word of God by Pastor W. R. Jones, reading from Acts 10:34-44. With what joy we listened to a fine body of men from Selly Oak, Birmingham, singing "Jesus is coming again" and "I want to be there when they crown Him King of kings."

Our faith was quickened as we heard two young doctors, Christopher Woods and Derek Sadler, of The City Temple, Cardiff, speak of their personal Pentecost. Following these testimonies it was announced that over forty believers had been baptised with the Holy Spirit in the receiving meeting that afternoon. Praise His name!

It was now the turn of the massed choir led by our esteemed brother, Pastor D. B. Gray. What a thrill it was to see so many young people singing for Christ. The congregation were delighted as they sang "Let me touch Him."

Shall we ever forget the three young ladies from Plymouth called "The Gospelairees" who thrilled our souls with their anointed singing of "I'll go to Calvary."

We came now to the family spot. When our missionaries were given the opportunity to speak, Pastor and Mrs. P. Griffiths from Rhodesia introduced a dear young sister, Miss Rosemary Mawutsa, from our mission station at Inyanga North, Rhodesia, who is training to be a midwife at Woolwich and to whom a very warm welcome was given. Pastor and Mrs. A. D. Bull from Tanzania also thrilled us with reports of great blessing and of answers to prayer among the Masai tribe. Greetings were received from Pastor L. Wigglesworth, Pastor and Mrs. D. L. Mills and the churches in Ghana, and from the national pastors and church members in Tanzania. A special welcome was given to the contingent from the recently opened church in Peterborough.

We returned to the choir, who sang "What a lovely name"—and what a lovely blessing it was to our hearts! This was followed by a Gospel solo sung by Mrs. J. Chapman, "Give Him your heart," which was greatly appreciated.

One of the moving highlights of the meeting was the presentation of an album of L.P. records of music by J. S. Bach to Mr. Ronald Cooper by Pastor D. B. Gray in recognition of our brother's services as organist at the Easter meetings from 1926 until his retirement in 1970. We praise God for such dedicated talent. May God's blessing be the portion of our brother and his wife for many years to come. What a joy it must be to Mr. Cooper to see his son, Geoff, taking his place at the organ.

Mr. Gray conducted the London Crusader Choir in the final singing item, "O Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth," creating a blessed atmosphere for the final message of the day, which was brought by our much-loved and highly-esteemed brother, Pastor P. S. Brewster, who spoke forthrightly from Luke 4:18,19 on the ministry of Christ to the poor, the broken-hearted, the bruised, those bound in sin and those oppressed by the Devil. At the close many decisions for Christ were made.

Pastor H. W. Greenway brought a wonderful day to a close with prayer. We thank the Lord for souls saved, for His healing touch and for Pentecostal blessing. We made our way home with the words of the last chorus ringing in our hearts: "Christ is the answer to my every need."

D.B.G. says THANK YOU to all choirs and those participating in the ministry of music at the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday. Your sense of vocation and enthusiastic co-ordination under the anointing of the Holy Spirit resulted in finesse, spiritual wealth and musical artistry to the blessing of thousands.

A GREAT LIFE

Do not try to do a great thing; you may waste all your life waiting for the opportunity which may never come. But since little things are always claiming your attention, do them as they come, from a great motive, for the glory of God, to win His smile of approval and do good to men. It is harder to plod on in obscurity, acting thus, than to stand on the high places of the field, within the view of all, and do deeds of valour at which rival armies stand still to gaze. But no such act goes without the swift recognition and ultimate recompense of Christ. To fulfil faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the uttermost the gifts of your ministry; to bear chaffing and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people who try to molest you; to put the kindest construction on unkind acts and words; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in the midst of a wild valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life.

... Where Jesus walked

No. 3 of a series of Holy Week broadcasts on B.B.C. Radio Bristol given by Ron Jones.

WAS Terence Hanratty guilty of murder or not? I confess that I do not know, but there are many who are convinced that there was a mistake made in his particular case. I suppose that the fear of a miscarriage of justice is one of the main planks in the platform of all who have constantly campaigned against capital punishment. Sitting where I am I cannot but recall what must have been the greatest miscarriage of justice of all time, for I am right inside the palace of Caiaphas the high priest, actually in the dungeon where Jesus probably spent many hours during his last night before going to the cross. Caiaphas was one of the main persons who set in progress the so-called trial of Jesus. If any trial anywhere was rigged, it was this one. There were so many who managed to get their fingers in the pie. Cruel Pilate, sly Herod, the traitor Judas, the religious leaders—they all combined to condemn Jesus Christ to the judgment meted out to the very worst of criminals. The Bible says that Pilate gave Jesus to them to be crucified. They made Him pick up the cross bars as they shouted at Him the most dreadful of all things, "Take up Your cross!" That meant just one thing: He was to die. A cross was only for dying on.

I feel as I sit here at the very spot where that awful crime was perpetrated that I would like to conduct my own inquiry into the case. Let us recall some of the folk who were heavily involved.

Now, Pilate's wife, what do you think about Jesus? "Haven't you heard? I sent a note to my husband, pleading with him not to have anything to do with condemning that just Man."

How about you, King Herod? You mobbed Him, you had your bit of fun out of Jesus Christ: what was your real opinion of Him? "Why, haven't you read that when I sent Him back to Pilate I made it clear that I could find no fault in Him?"

What about you, Judas Iscariot? You sold Him for a miserable thirty pieces of silver. You must have concluded that He was a deceiver before you would do such a thing. What guilt did you find in Him that made you feel compelled to turn Him over to the authorities? "Don't mock me! When it was all over I could not find any peace because of my own guilt. I took back that blood money and told them that I, Judas, had betrayed the innocent."

What about the judge himself? Pilate, how do you feel about the verdict? "Everybody knows that I felt He was not guilty, I said so plainly many times, I even went to the trouble of taking water and washing my hands before the people—sure He was not guilty."

In the face of all this I am bound to ask myself, why then did Jesus Christ die? The people who mattered most declared Him not guilty, but my sin and my greed and my selfishness have made me terribly guilty. Ah yes, that is it, Jesus took my place and yours, and that is the reason why He died.

Book review

Prophecy's Last Word, by Frederick A. Tatford.

Published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House. Price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

This is a useful book for those who are interested in and thrilled by the subject of eschatology. From chapter four to the end the author aptly unfolds the abundant symbols of the Apocalypse to the reader's mind on "the things which are about to be after these," prophecy's last word on the impending time of God's wrath and judgments upon the nations of the earth.

It is significant that one-third of the book is taken up with the Church age from the date of the vision until the rapture and it is characteristic of the author to give pre-eminence to that majestic Figure, the living Head of the Church, in chapter one before elucidating the instructions given to the seven churches in chapters two and three.

The lion-like Lamb who opens the book of Seven Seals is the qualified Executor of the designs of God, with legal and legislative power to put into execution the counsels of God concerning the earth.

MORTIMER was a very lazy leopard. It was ten o'clock and he was still fast asleep under a tree. "Come along, Spotty," called a little bird from a nearby branch. "It is high time you were up," Mortimer opened his eyes, yawned and stretched. "Oh dear," he said. "I suppose I had better get up and look for some food. I am feeling quite hungry. Now where did I put that bone I found yesterday?"

"You left it by the rock, Spotty," said the little bird.

"Stop calling me 'Spotty,'" said Mortimer.

"Oh, we are grumpy this morning, aren't we?" said the bird.

"I will teach that bird a lesson," thought Mortimer. "I shall get rid of my spots and then he will not be able to call me names."

Mortimer walked down to the stream and jumped into the water. "I will soon wash these spots off," he thought to himself.

Well, Mortimer splished and splashed about in the water, but the spots stayed firmly on his body. "This is doing no good," he said, getting out of the water. "I will try and rub the spots off on that rock over there."

He rubbed himself backwards and forwards on the rock, and the only thing he succeeded in doing was to get his back bruised and sore. Mortimer rolled over and over in the dust, he shook himself, and he even tried licking the spots off, but they were still stuck to his back.

Mortimer has a lesson for us all, boys and girls. We too have spots—spots of sin in our hearts. Like Mortimer, however hard we try, we cannot get rid of these spots by ourselves. We cannot wash them off and we cannot scratch them off; but when we love Jesus and know Him as our Saviour, He cleanses our hearts from sin. Mortimer and all his leopard friends must remain spotty, but there is no need for us to be spotty, is there?

BOOK REVIEW

Paulossie, by Carole Briggs. Published by Scripture Union. Price 35p, postage and packing 5p extra.

This book gives a simple, interesting outline of the life of an eight-year-old Eskimo boy. The unusual setting and sequence of events have an appeal of their own. It is not easy to anticipate what comes next, as in so many adventure books. Each chapter is an individual story and an object lesson both moral and spiritual. I like the way the lesson is carried through and personally applied in a simple, clear way. In the closing chapter Paulossie gives his heart to the Lord. The map and frequent illustrations catch the eye, and clear print makes easy reading. This is an ideal Sunday school prize and useful for children's meetings, etc.

Sidik finds his faith

An urgent request was received at Bible House, Wellington, New Zealand, for a small supply of Indonesian Scriptures to be sent to Noumea, New Caledonia. Sidik, a young Muslim of Indonesian parents, was in hospital being treated for tuberculosis. The missionary, who had written to New Zealand for the Scriptures in Indonesian, was able to give Sidik a Bible in his own language.

The following letter just received from Sidik speaks for itself: "Each day I find fresh joy in reading the Bible. 'Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God.' I thank the Lord for having given me this desire to follow and understand His words of truth. We are now having three meetings a week for prayer and Bible reading. There are ten of us around the table at each meeting, praying and reading the Word of God. May God bless us and help us to understand His Word, and open the hearts of those who have not sincerely accepted the Lord. It is our prayer and hope that the One who said 'I am the Way, the Truth and the Life' might be glorified."

To this the missionary adds: "Praise God for the assurance of full salvation which God has imparted, not by constant fellowship with others who have found Christ, but by the Word of God."

But he who makes a sacrifice, so another may succeed,

Is indeed a true disciple of our blessed Saviour's creed;

For when we "give ourselves away" in sacrifice and love,

We are "laying up rich treasures" in God's kingdom up above.

And hidden in gnarled, toilworn hands is the truest art of living,

Achieved alone by those who've learned the victory of giving;

For any sacrifice on earth made in the dear Lord's name

Assures the giver of a place in heaven's hall of fame.

And who can say with certainty where the greatest talent lies,

Or who will be the greatest in our heavenly Father's eyes?

FIGHT EVIL

This is the Last Will and Testament

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

One pair of hands

I WAS given a book for my birthday and have enjoyed reading it immensely. Take My Hands is the remarkable story of Dr. Mary Verghese, of Vellore Christian Medical College, India. After years of intensive study and practice this dedicated young surgeon was terribly injured in a car accident. Her spine was so damaged that she has been confined to a wheelchair ever since, yet, after two years of suffering anguish of mind and body and after several operations, she was able to resume her work and to specialise in restoring the damaged tendons in the hands of her leper patients and correcting their foot-drop deformities.

I was deeply moved by all I read and particularly by the chapter telling how God revealed to her that, with a trained brain and a strong pair of hands, He had work for her to do. Thus she prayed, using the words of F. R. Havergal's hymn of consecration: "Take my life and let it be," especially "Take my hands and let them move at the impulse of Thy love." One pair of skilful, consecrated hands used by God, a source of blessing and healing, reveal the love of God, preach unspoken sermons, the compassion of Christ flowing through sensitive, trained fingers.

What amazing instruments are our hands! Slow of speech though he was, God used Moses' hands on many occasions. We remember his grasping the rod and, instructed by God, using it to perform mighty wonders, culminating in his hand outstretched over the Red Sea to divide it. His willing hands were held high on the day of battle against the Amalekites. Moses' hands fashioned and carried the sacred tablets of stone to Mount Sinai on the second occasion and wrote on them the ten commandments of the Lord. Those laws have been a guide and an untold blessing to many nations and civilisations down the years. At the end of his life he laid his hands on Joshua and God used His servant to impart supernatural wisdom and power to his successor. Wonderful actions were done by Moses' hands, because they were willing, consecrated ones.

How often a harassed mother, a shop assistant or a workman at his bench cries "Steady on! I've only one pair of hands!" But the cry should be uttered in triumph and thankfulness, for if we have given our lives to God we can use our hands in so many ways in His service. Are your hands strong, skilful, capable and willing? Then God will instruct you how to use them, for practical Christians are such a blessing and are often in short supply.

The "Praying Hands"

BY HELEN STEINER RICE

The "Praying Hands" are much, much more than just a work of art,
They are the soul's creation of a deeply thankful heart;
They are a priceless masterpiece that love alone could paint,
And they reveal the selflessness of an unheralded saint.
These hands, so scarred and toilworn, tell the story of a man
Who sacrificed his talent in accordance with God's plan;
For in God's plan are many things man cannot understand,
But we must trust God's judgment and be guided by His hand.
Sometimes He asks us to give up our dreams of happiness,
Sometimes we must forgo our hopes of fortune and success;
Not all of us can triumph or rise to heights of fame,
And many times what should be ours goes to another name.

A crusader in Israel

by Hazel Pannell

I SPENT nearly six months on a kibbutz in Israel and, having come home to England for last summer, I was very much looking forward to my return in the autumn. The journey was a long, interesting one. I flew to Ostend and went from there by train to Munich, where I spent a few days while waiting for the coach to Istanbul.

The first day in the coach was spent travelling through Austria amid really beautiful scenery. The first night we stopped at a small town just inside the Yugoslavian border. Next day we were off to a very early start, reaching Belgrade in time for lunch. Now, in contrast to the mountains and lakes of Austria, we began to see the very poor living conditions in the small villages and farms. We crossed the border into Bulgaria, arriving at our hotel in Sofia for the second night. The next morning, when we woke up, it was snowing heavily, although it was still only October. As we drove east through the Bulgarian hills the Communist influence became increasingly obvious. In all the small towns and villages we could see huge billboards and pictures of Communist leaders, all with the letters "CCCP" on them. Here, too, I saw extreme poverty and women working on building sites and doing digging and labouring jobs. After a very thorough search at the Turkish border—I was told this was mainly for drugs—we finally arrived in Istanbul. Its thousands of mosques and minarets give it an unmistakably eastern atmosphere.

The next day I boarded the boat that was to take me to Haifa. It was a Turkish boat and the conditions were very bad, but we all decided to grin and bear it, even though there were bugs in some of the beds!

We were in New Testament country. We stopped briefly at Izmir (Smyrna), at Rhodes and at Cyprus, and on the fourth day we came to Haifa. From there I went straight to Jerusalem, as I had been invited to stay for a few days with Pastor and Mrs. L. V. D. Tiller, after which I had planned to go to a kibbutz for a few months to improve my knowledge of Hebrew.

On the boat, however, I met some Israelis who advised me, if possible, to get a job in one of the towns and study Hebrew at evening classes. Mr.

and Mrs. Tiller suggested a few places where I might be able to get a job. I decided that, unless everything was arranged within a week. I would forget the whole thing and go to the kibbutz.

Instead I found myself, within three days of being in Israel, with not only a job but also a flat! The day after I arrived I was offered a job in the college library of St. George's Cathedral. I knew that it would be very difficult to find accommodation in Jerusalem, but here again Mr. and Mrs. Tiller were able to help me. They took me to see a Canadian girl they knew. She had been living on her own for a couple of months, having shared her flat with another girl before this; now they thought that perhaps she would be wanting somebody else to share with her. When we saw her she told us that only the night before she had been praying that God would either send someone to share the flat or else open the way for her to live with an Israeli family. So, in this way, both our prayers were answered.

It is a great thrill and privilege to be living in Jerusalem surrounded by the places where Jesus walked, yet this is modern Israel and I am beginning to realise how difficult and often discouraging the work is for Christians in this country which is not only anti-Christian but anti-Christ. There is also a very real threat of another war before too long.

Please pray for this land, that the Jewish people will accept Jesus as their Messiah and that the Christians here will be even more united in their witness for Him.

THE FAMILY ALTAR

Scripture

Union

Portions

Monday, May 1st 1 Samuel 6 : 17-21 ; 7 : 1, 2

"Israel lamented after the Lord" (7 : 2).

Having joined in a sacrifice with the Levites over the ark's return to Israel, the men of Bethshemesh were so overjoyed that caution and reverence for godly vessels and God's Word were thrown aside. They looked (literally "looked with profane curiosity") into the ark (6 : 19). This was forbidden on pain of death (Numbers 4 : 19, 20), and so God smote them. God showed the Israelites as well as the Philistines that He would vindicate His honour. The ark was sacred and not to be touched (Numbers 1 : 50, 51).

We need to come into the presence of God with reverence, for He is holy.

Tuesday, May 2nd 1 Samuel 7 : 3-17

"Israel . . . served the Lord only" (v. 4).

A great national reformation was effected through Samuel's influence. Convinced of their errors, Israel renounced idolatry and the re-establishment of the faith of their fathers was inaugurated at a great public meeting at Mizpeh (v. 6). When the Philistines attacked, Samuel offered up a lamb, burnt wholly as a symbol of Israel's dedication to God ; no part was reserved, all was for God. God answered swiftly, and on the very battlefield where Israel had been defeated twenty years before He wrought a victory that secured peace and independence for Israel for twenty years.

Let us lay all on the altar today and thus see the hand of God at work.

Wednesday, May 3rd 1 Samuel 8 : 1-22

"Samuel prayed unto the Lord" (v. 6).

Samuel was old and unable to continue his circuit journeys through the country. He confined his magisterial duties to Ramah, delegating the administration of justice in the southern districts to his sons. They did not inherit their father's high qualities and, having corrupted the standards of justice, they attracted complaints against themselves and caused a request for a king to rule Israel to be made. God was displeased at this request, as was Samuel, because it sought to replace the Israelites' unseen King and Head.

It is far better to seek God and to follow Him than to be like the world—indifferent to God.

Thursday, May 4th 1 Samuel 9 : 1-14

"The asses . . . were lost" (v. 3).

Notes

by

J. R. Brown

Saul's physical attractions were remarkable. He had an athletic frame and was only a little under seven feet high. In the pastoral regions animals roamed at large during the grazing season and were rounded up later. Saul's ramble was not unusual, but its superior directions and the outcome turned its uncertainty into certainty. Samuel is acknowledged as being literally "an honoured man," obviously by Israel, but more importantly by God. Saul sought Samuel's guidance and honoured the position of the man of God with a gift, thus honouring the God who called him.

When problems and difficulties arise, the wise man seeks the guidance of God.

Friday, May 5th 1 Samuel 9 : 15-27

"Now the Lord had told Samuel" (v. 15).

The description of Saul, the time of his arrival and the high office to which he was destined had been secretly revealed to Samuel. The toilworn, but noble, traveller, on accepting Samuel's invitation to hospitality, found himself in the parlour (v. 22), literally "the chamber"—a room used for sacrificial feasts—where the chief place was offered to him. The shoulder the cook had taken up (v. 24), literally "heaved" before the Lord, was the priest's portion. Its being set before Saul indicated a great honour. Saul's life had a new meaning, a greater vision, because he gave ear to the word of the Lord through Samuel.

So will our lives, if we give ear to the Word of God.

Saturday, May 6th 1 Samuel 10 : 1-16

"The Spirit of the Lord will come upon thee" (v. 6).

The vial of oil used for anointing the priests and in investiture to royal office was used by Samuel for Saul's anointing. He kissed him as a salutation and as an act of respectful homage to the new king. The three signs given to Saul (vv. 2-6) were to confirm his reliance on the Word of God and to encourage him. The character and stature of Saul did not transform him. The Spirit of the Lord endowed him with a capacity and a disposition to act in a manner superior to his previous habits or character, turning the rustic farmer's son into a statesman and a warrior.

The unction of the Spirit is the power for our lives.

Sunday, May 7th 1 Samuel 10 : 17-27

"He held his peace" (v. 27).

The people were reminded that, until then, God had been their King and that, although one from among them would reign as king in splendour,

David—Shepherd, Singer, Sovereign

by J. OSMAN

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

WHEN Saul was anointed king over Israel, God gave him all the equipment necessary to be an outstanding success as Israel's first ruler. His physique and capabilities made him an obvious choice and moreover God gave him a new heart to ensure that he lacked nothing, provided that he was willing to submit to God's leading. Then, as now, however, obedience was the essential factor required in the man of God. Never was there a more graphic illustration than the life of Saul to show that God desires obedience rather than sacrifice (1 Samuel 15:22). From Adam until 1972 this has been the most difficult lesson of all to learn. Saul failed the test most miserably and he knew it, for he said of himself: "I have played the fool, and have erred exceedingly" (1 Samuel 26:21). The record shows that he was exceedingly foolish and self-willed. He intruded into the priestly office, made stupid vows, followed his own inclinations instead of listening to and obeying the voice of God and, as a result, was rejected from the kingdom.

The mistakes of Saul are a study in themselves. May the Lord save us from similar foolishness! Said Samuel: "The Lord hath sought Him a man after His own heart." He found such a one in David, as yet a young shepherd lad with a gift for music and an extraordinary courage in face of danger. This was an amazing testimony from God about such a young man! Would you not like God to think about you in such a way? God takes delight in those who live righteously (Job 1:8).

The ambitions of Christians are varied. Many have their sights on legitimate targets of material advancement, a lucrative career, educational qualifications, even marriage. Many, having caught a vision from some biography, will have ambitions to preach like Spurgeon, to pray like John Hyde ("Praying Hyde"), to conduct great campaigns like some of the great evangelists.

Here is something that eclipses every other ambition. The praying, the preaching and the service we render to God take their rightful place if, first and foremost, we desire to be people after God's own heart, indeed God Himself could desire no more of us than this. On a practical level, it would certainly make the pastor's lot an easier one, as well as increasing our own spirituality and stimulating our zeal for God.

What made David a man after God's own heart? Since he is so described in the Word of God and especially as so much of the historical books of the Old Testament is devoted to the events that transpired in his life, it is natural to suppose that some clue might be given in the sacred record.

It is impossible to go into every detail of David's life and actions, but it is clear that they lift him out of the rut of ordinary humanity into such an elevated place. Essentially, some things seem completely out of character, nevertheless, even in the seamier events in his life, which the Bible records faithfully, it is possible to trace certain noble traits and extraordinary reactions that do not follow the normal human pattern of behaviour. These can prove to be of help to us if we pay them heed and if we use David as an example of how God might expect us to behave in comparable situations.

If you would like to be a man (or woman) after God's own heart, follow with me the six pen pictures I have selected for perusal: songs; strength; sorrow; service; sacrifice; sin. The first of these will be in next week's "Evangel."

with bodyguards and chariots and horsemen like the kings around them (1 Samuel 8:11-22), the law of God and His covenant were still binding and must be observed (10:25). Both king and people would find no way of securing the prosperity and peace of the nation but by walking in God's ways. The children of Belial rejected Saul, yet he bore the insult with prudence and magnanimity, which were of great use in the beginning of his government.

Let God's peace rule our hearts!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Preparations for personal revival

Jeremiah 4 : 3 ; Hosea 10 : 11, 12

by Frank Lavender

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

FALLOW land is ground which was once cultivated, but which has been allowed to lie idle and has become covered with weeds. The Lord said that the people of Israel were like fallow land, because they once produced fruit for His glory, but they had turned from Him and were producing weeds of wickedness instead. By our frequent cry for revival we confess our similar condition. In personal, Church and national life we once sought the honour of the Lord, but, almost everywhere we look now, we can see desolation and wickedness. If we have any real concern the Word of God shows us how we can prepare for the personal revival we need.

To begin to prepare for revival we require vision and violence. We need vision so that we do not see things only as they are but, rather, how they may become. If we see our lives only as they are we might despair, but the Lord will show us how we can become fruitful for Him and be made like Jesus. Violence is necessary because fallow ground cannot be broken up except by violence. The hard land, which is so daunting, is a picture of the indifference with which we so often regard the things of God. If we are to see the fulfilling of the vision, if we would rid ourselves of our apathy, we must be violent with ourselves and attack with energy every habit which brings spiritual indifference.

Hosea 10 : 11 tells of the next step toward personal revival: the breaking up of the clods of earth. There are two reasons for this: to remove the roots of the weeds from the soil, and to make the ground fit to receive the seed we wish to sow. These are the reasons why the weeds of sin must be removed and the ground made ready for the seed to be sown in our lives.

A man tried to clean up a piece of ground by double-delving the weeds which marred it. When he had finished it looked good, but within weeks the weeds were coming through again more prolifically than ever! It is no use double-delving the weeds which spoil our lives: prayerlessness, pride, unbelief, stubbornness, worldliness and the many other evils which mar Christian lives must be removed, not hidden under the surface.

Jeremiah shows us (4 : 3) that it is useless to sow good seed when thorns are hidden in the ground ready to spring up and choke the good seed. If we want our lives to be clean and ready for the Master to use, we must bend our backs in humility and prayer in order to remove these noxious weeds. When these things are taken away our lives will be ready to receive the seed and to produce good fruit.

What is the seed which must be sown in our hearts in order to bring a good harvest? The Lord Jesus, in the parable of the Sower, shows that the good seed is the Word of God; this Word, faithfully sown, will produce the fruit of righteousness. It is supremely important that we should do the will of God, but we can only know His will by means of His Word applied to our hearts by the Holy Spirit. We must, therefore, have a deep hunger in our hearts for His precious Word, a passionate desire in our souls to do whatever He commands us.

One final requirement is to seek the Lord until He comes and rains righteousness on us (Hosea 10 : 12). No fruit can be produced without the showers of rain; similarly, if we are to produce fruit to God we need the refreshing "rain" of the Holy Spirit upon our lives. "Seek" implies an earnest crying to God for the supply of the Holy Spirit, for only those who are conscious of thirst have the assurance of the supply of their needs. The Word of God promises that, if we seek Him with all our hearts, He will be found.

Do you really want revival in your personal life? Are you sincerely longing to produce a harvest of good fruit for the Lord? Then catch the vision of what God can do in your life! Begin

SOUTH SHIELDS' CRUSADE

▲ Part of the crowd at the opening service

◀ The mayor giving his welcome

There was a great start to this soul-saving effort. Over 400 people were present for the opening service. The Bolingbroke Hall was jammed to the doors. The mayor gave a splendid welcome to Alexander Tee and the team. There was a wonderful spirit of joy and blessing. Forty-one signed decision cards at the close.

There were 225 there on the second night, Monday, and twenty signed decision cards.

Thank you for your grand prayer support.

EALING

Pastor : A. S. F. Horne

The eight-day crusade by Pastor John Woodhead made a great impact on the district, the meetings growing in power and increasing in blessing. Pastor Woodhead's powerful ministry, anointed by the Holy Spirit and backed by his wealth of experience, had as its theme and centre the cross of Jesus and His resurrection. Thirteen persons found their way to Calvary. The sick were prayed for and many testified to relief from pain and from other burdens.

The Saturday evening service was relayed by live television to the church porch, when passers-by were able to see and hear the service.

Mr. Woodhead had many things to say to believers and the church was stirred to fuller consecration and service. As our pastor, who led the meetings, pointed out on the closing evening, the crusade should only be a new beginning in the history of the church. There was a variety of contributions in song, including those from Mrs. Dorothy Watson, Mr. Woodhead's daughter, but special mention must be made of Mrs. Woodhead's solos. Her beautiful voice blended with and prepared the way for her husband's ministry.

As the crusade proceeded, Ealing became a pre-gathering of the great Elim Easter Monday meetings as we welcomed friends from Carlisle, Chesterfield, Eastbourne, High Wycombe, Kensington, Leicester, Reading, Rowley Regis, Sheffield, Swindon and York.

Pastor Woodhead had made only two fleeting previous visits and it was a joy to have him with us for a whole week. We express our appreciation for his wholehearted ministry, for the uplift it gave to the church, and above all for God's kingdom being increased.

We are also indebted to Mr. Stephen Blake, from the Elim Bible College, for his talented and brilliant playing on the organ as accompanist throughout.

To God be all the glory !

CROYDON

Pastor : W. J. Maybin

It was a joy to welcome Pastor J. H. Hunt as the main preacher for our Easter convention, together with Pastor C. D. Stockdale from the Clapham convention on the Saturday evening.

The Word of the Lord through these brethren was greatly blessed, as was the singing of Pastor and Mrs. Hunt. The musical ministry of a group of young people from Thornton Heath was also much appreciated.

The meetings throughout were convened by our own minister and by Pastor E. Dainton.

GLOUCESTER

Pastor : F. Lavender

So many factors contributed to the tide of blessing which surged into our hearts during a wonderful Easter convention : the clear, direct ministry of Pastor Ian Hall, which exalted the Lord Jesus, the ministry in song by the choir, male voice group and Mrs. Hall, the exhilarating singing of the congregation, but greater than every other factor was the anointing of the Holy Spirit and the consciousness of His ministry drawing out our hearts in rapturous praise to our mighty God and to our loving Saviour. As ministers and deacons laid hands on needy folk there was an almost overwhelming release of Divine power as people were instantly healed or were filled with the Holy Spirit and burst into spontaneous praise to God both in English and in other tongues and the congregation was swept with joy.

The last meeting was the climax to the convention. We met for the breaking of bread following the Sunday evening revival meeting. Instead of a worship time we had a testimony time. A dozen folk spoke of being healed in the past two weeks from sicknesses as varied as eczema, 'flu, internal disease and depression. Others told of being filled with the Holy Spirit. Deacons spoke in awed voices of their consciousness of the power of God surging through and around them as they prayed for sick and needy people. Little wonder that older Christians went out exclaiming : "This is the best convention we have had for years !" and "It is like the old revival days all over again !"; younger folk saying : "If this is what happens when I go out for prayer, I am going out every time !" and "I have never heard singing in the Spirit before !"

May the Lord continue to fulfil the work which He is doing here so that He will be continually exalted !

ILKESTON

Pastor : F. Waite

The pioneer evangelist of the church, Pastor W. Ron Jones, returned after some ten and a half years to preach inspiring and challenging messages during our recent revival campaign. The meetings were well attended, several made decisions for Christ and some rededicated their lives to the Master. We enjoyed rich blessings as the Holy Spirit's power was in evidence.

Blessing continued as Pastor R. L. Currie ministered at the Saturday evening rally, which was well supported by local churches.

It was evident at the communion service on the Lord's Day that the church had been revived, for which we praise God.

A. E. USHER.

LETCHWORTH

Pastor : G. S. Hillman

The blessing of the Lord rested richly on our sisterhood anniversary when 220 gathered, including five ministers and their wives, among them Pastor Stephen Huntly, a former member, who led the meeting in prayer. We were privileged to have Mrs. Richardson from Barking as our guest speaker and soloist. Our president, Mrs. Hillman, convened and our secretary, Mrs. M. Goodwin, read the Scripture and roll-call. About eighteen sisterhoods were represented.

After rendering two solos Mrs. Richardson spoke on "The glory of the presence of God." Her powerful message ended all too quickly. Pastor B. L. T. Wall closed in prayer. Truly this was our best anniversary ever.

Miss Maud Sable, our missionary secretary, is specially gifted in flower arranging and she had prepared an exquisite floral display which set off a wonderful occasion excellently.

The significance of the ascension

by Norman G. Clark

Let the people of God praise Him for the ascension of Christ, for all that we are and have and hope for are bound up in Christ and become active and perfected only in His ascension!

THE ascension is significant for Christ since His enthronement as the King of glory is the final proof that He is indeed the Christ, the Son of God, and at the same time the Almighty God. When He lay in a manger His kingship was concealed, but now He sits on a throne on the right hand of God (Mark 16 : 19), His kingship revealed. Whereas on earth His name was a reproach, now He has a name which is above every name in this world and in the world to come (Ephesians 1 : 21). As a man He had no comeliness or beauty that we should desire Him, but now He is disclosed in the "brightness of the Father's glory," for "Him hath God highly exalted." The victorious completion of His redemptive work on earth demanded that He be crowned with glory and honour. In his own right He is King of kings, Lord of lords, Ruler of all, having all power in heaven and earth. Did He not vanquish the Adversary of God and man? Had He not overcome the "strong man" and set the captives free? When He ascended on high He led captivity—sin, death, hell—captive, having made these foes of mankind powerless to all believers. Christ now holds the keys of the grave, heaven and hell (Revelation 1 : 18). His authority is absolute and limitless. God said of Him: "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom" (Hebrews 1 : 8).

How sad it is that there are those who continue to flout His authority and to court destruction! Him hath God highly exalted to be a Prince and a Saviour and how willingly and freely He would exercise His best-loved ministry—to save.

This is a jewel belonging only to His crown, for there is salvation in no other name. It is His exclusive right!

Joseph, when in prison, knowing that the butler was about to be restored, said, "Think on me when it shall be well with thee, and shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me" (Genesis 40 : 14), "Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but forgot him" (v. 23). The ascension of Christ is significant for the people of God in that when Christ was restored to the glory which He had with the Father before the world was He received "gifts for men." Christ's gifts have cost Him unimaginable humiliation and suffering, yet He bestows them on us lavishly and freely. They are heavenly gifts, priceless, glorious, eternal: gifts of life, peace, forgiveness, a home above, a body of glory, rewards, yes, even the gift of Himself—and consider: "They are at the disposal of the Son." The chief butler forgot Joseph, but Christ in His love for His own remembers them all now and always and distributes His gifts from glory.

Christ was born of a woman. He hungered, thirsted, grew weary, bled and died, yet "this same Jesus" rose from the dead, ascended into heaven and is now glorified. The ascension of Christ is significant because the Head of a new humanity passed from the earthly scene into heavenly glory. The literal, physical act of Christ's departure guarantees the rapture, ascension and exaltation of "His members" which includes the redemption of the body. "How are the dead raised up?" is not known. Such things are incapable of rational explanation; indeed, the whole realm of the things of the Spirit, even the Divine manifestation of God in Christ in time and place, was supernatural, not contrary to nature but above it. This body, in some mysterious way, is the "seed" of the heavenly body, even as the dull soil or material is related to the radiant jewel out of which it is taken. This mortal shall put on immortality and be freed from the limitations of time and space, for the risen body of Christ is the pattern and type of our future perfected bodies and He has promised: "where I am, there shall also

My servant be." Can the Head leave the members of His Body and fail to draw them after Himself? Has Christ loved His Bride and given Himself for her merely to abandon her? Are not believers to Him as Adam said of Eve, "bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh"?

Everything which Christ experienced is the believers' portion in the Spirit. They are crucified with Him, dead with Him, made alive with Him and sit with Him in heavenly places. Their country is now above, and through His literal, physical ascension will come the rapture and exaltation of His people.

A king must ascend the throne before he can begin to rule. The ascension of Christ is significant for the Church and for the world, for if there had been no ascent of the King there would have been no descent of the Holy Spirit, no animation of the Church, no rule of Christ through the Spirit. Pentecost was the outflow of His kingly office, the spiritual association of the subjects with their King, and the inspiration of the Kingly proclamation. Jesus is no longer confined to Judea and Galilee; He is enthroned and exalted in heaven, from where He is able by His Spirit to be present with His people and to continue His ministry through them. From henceforth the Christ of the Gospels is the Christ of the past, of history; now is the full New Testament picture of the living Christ, of heaven, of experience, of righteousness and love, of the present and of the future, "mighty to save." The Gospel narrative told only of what Jesus began to do and to teach; now the risen Christ continues to save and to heal through His Church and the Gifts of the Spirit, that "greater works" might be done. Even as the middle lamp of the sanctuary gave light to all other vessels, so Christ is the light of His people. He teaches them inwardly by His Spirit (John 16:14). Since His person and work are for ever in them, "He that heareth you heareth Me" and through His people He proclaims "righteousness, joy and peace," confirms His Word and extends His kingdom. A prophet is one who has stood in the presence of God and who goes forth to declare His will. Christ, of whom the woman of Samaria rightly said, "I perceive Thou art a prophet," goes forth in a nation of prophets to declare His life as the righteousness of God, His teaching as the truth of God, His ministry as the power of God and

His death on the cross as the love of God, for, as Austin says, "The cross was a pulpit in which Christ preached His love to the world." Those who see His cross as the ladder by which they ascend to heaven experience the power of His resurrection and find that they have joined the ranks of the redeemed who can sing: "In His glory, I shall see the King."

The ascension of Christ enabled Him to enter on a wider sphere of work as the High Priest of His Church. As priest on earth His work was historical and concluded, but as priest in heaven His work is without intermission.

In the Mosaic covenant the high priest had to kill the animal, enter the holy of holies with the blood, sprinkle the mercy-seat with the blood and see that a cloud of incense covered the mercy-seat. Christ our High Priest exactly answers to this type. He was offered in sacrifice, He has gone up into heaven, He spreads His blood before the Father, and He prays to His Father that for His blood's sake God will be propitious (disposed to be kind or gracious) to sinners.

Christ's offering up of Himself once only as a perfect sacrifice satisfies Divine justice and not only obtains a pardon for guilty man but brings him into favour with God. A traitor can be pardoned yet retain the infamy. Man is reconciled to God for the At-one-ment has been accomplished.

Christ as High Priest "ever lives to make intercession" in the presence of God for His chosen, His members, His own. He is our Advocate. When God's justice opens the debt-book, Christ opens the law-book; "without shedding of blood is no remission," and His shed blood obtains a discharge. A lawyer pleads for profit, but Christ laid down His life freely and with love and sympathy pleads freely, since "we have not an High Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmity."

Christ answers all the accusations of the Adversary; "Who can lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" (Romans 8:33). Christ never lost any cause for which He pleaded. If God could forget that Christ is a priest—which He never can—He could not forget that He is a Son, and what will a father not grant a son "in whom He is well pleased"? "We have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens . . . Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace" (Hebrews 4:14, 16).

Consider Psalm 110:1: "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool." Is Christ your Lord, or are you His enemy? There is no in-between. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36).

Daniel 2 tells of a great image which illustrates the kingdoms of the world. Finally "a stone cut out without hands" smote the image and broke it in pieces so that it became dust, for which there was no place, but the stone became a great mountain and filled the earth. The stone is Christ. Enthroned and exalted in heaven, He awaits the day to come forth conquering and to conquer and to be revealed as Lord of all the earth. Cease to be His enemy and become His friend. Remember, God the Father has committed all judgment unto the Son. If this King condemns, there is no other court on earth or in heaven to which one can appeal.

Christ hung on a cross that we might sit on a throne. His crucifixion is our coronation. If He presents our names in heaven, should we not profess His name on earth? Should He plead our cause above and we not stand for His below? Let us determine that "never shall these things be," but that rather, since He gave His all for us, we will be "All for Jesus, all our being's ransomed powers." The effect of the ascension upon the first disciples was that "they worshipped Him . . . with great joy: and were continually . . . praising and blessing God" (Luke 24:52,53). May the fact of the ascension with its attendant blessings affect us in like manner!

Another Slant

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

I PARKED my "vintage" A40 between two K and J registration Rovers at Lucas's in Birmingham for an appointment with one of the directors. His name had got me through the gate. Up had come the security chief with unmentionable adjectives about this wreck among the executives' cars and I had a sly chuckle when he was told that I was there at the personal invitation of one of the directors! It is not what you know, but whom you know that matters often, for to have friends in the right places works wonders I have found on these occasions.

I interviewed the director, then gave him a word of witness, to discover that he is chairman of the Birmingham Rotary Club, a group of top Midlands businessmen, and I have an invitation to speak at one of their weekly gatherings on my interviewing experiences in the light of my pastoral ministry. The club includes a number of Birmingham clergy, including the bishop, I believe. I was assured that they provided "a good table," so I look forward to the engagement with a measure of delight—spiritually and gastronomically!

Travelling around the Birmingham area also gives me opportunity relative to the office of evangelistic secretary for this Presbytery. One grieves at the churches now used for other purposes or in a state of dereliction.

Interviewing another executive I discovered that he had a personal friend fore-named William Carey by his ardent Baptist parents. Alas, although he became a well-known medical consultant in the Midlands, he died an agnostic and had a secular cremation, a sad end to a life that had, in some respects, an inspiring beginning.

OUR thoughts are very much preoccupied with our conference which takes place in Blackpool, beginning today and lasting for a week. We ask again for your prayer support. No doubt many of our churches will be able to hold special times of prayer during the week.

We would take this opportunity to thank the retiring President, our beloved brother, Pastor Archie A. Biddle, for his indefatigable year of ministry, travel and meetings. He has not spared himself and we salute him and his dear wife for all their sacrifice and for all that they have been able to do during a very busy and very fruitful year. Our fine Portsmouth church have stood behind their minister and have helped our movement very greatly in their willingness to co-operate so splendidly. They have undoubtedly shared the honour afforded to their pastor in his presidency.

The governing body of our fellowship is the annual conference. This is very important and challenging. Meeting only annually, a great responsibility rests upon every delegate. Ministers and laymen from many places in the United Kingdom and from overseas, speaking both as individuals and, in most cases, as representatives of their churches or of the missionary society, they gather for a very intensive week. Elim's policies and procedures are the vital matters which are discussed in the main. A notable feature of our conference is the really precious way in which the spirit of comradeship and Christian love act and react. Opinions differ on approach and sometimes on matters of policy, but the underlying shared experience and knowledge of God's grace as well as the mutual devotion to the movement we all love help us over what could be difficult moments. We can many times thank God for the wonderful way in which we believe that the Spirit of God rules and overrules. May we be guided aright in every decision.

The slogans used for our conferences have been challenging and apposite and this year's seems to us to be absolutely right. We print the whole verse of Scripture with the belief and the desire that God will bless us in our seeing exactly the same glorious outworking of His grace:

"And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen" (Mark 16:20).

The manifesto of Jesus Christ

Luke 4 : 16-20

by P. S. Brewster

THE Bible says concerning Christ the Son of God that "He went about doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the Devil." Jesus had authority and domination over all demon power. Christ came into this world to destroy the work of the Devil.

This unusual anointing was to heal the oppressed. To be oppressed by the Devil is sometimes translated "to be harassed." Daniel uses another phrase: "the wearing down of the saints." Oppression can lead to depression, depression can lead to recession, this causes isolation and ultimately this leads to demon oppression, and even to possession.

The life of Jesus Christ was divided into three. As a boy He lived with His parents and learned obedience up to the age of twelve. Then there were eighteen long, silent but very important years, during which Christ knew what work and labour were. He learned to be the breadwinner of the home. He knew the jealousies and bitterness of home life with brothers and sisters. He probably learned what death meant in the home. He learned also of the deep politics and hatred of the trading life. Then there were three public years of ministry, for which Jesus was prepared by being anointed with the Holy Spirit without measure. The Son of God was so full of the Holy Spirit that it involved a sevenfold power.

Christ had the Spirit of wisdom. He was able to meet every situation with the correct answer.

He had the Spirit of understanding. There was not a situation but what Christ could enter into it and provide an adequate answer.

He had the Spirit of counsel. He counselled men, women and teenagers and He was able to get into the very hearts of those who came to Him for help.

He had the Spirit of might; He had authority and miracles.

He had the Spirit of knowledge. He conversed on every subject—intimate, public, national and social—and was never lost in any situation.

He carried with Him the Spirit of the fear of the Lord. We do not meet too many men today who carry with them this atmosphere of God.

He had the Spirit of a swift perception. He was sensitive to understand. At one glance He diagnosed a whole situation.

The opening words of our Lord's public ministry declared His manifesto: "I AM ANOINTED TO PREACH." This describes the whole of our Lord's public pulpit life. Jesus said, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." For centuries this Scripture had lain silent, dormant, undiscovered. It belonged to Christ; "I am clothed upon by the Spirit to preach," He said. By these words, preaching will always have the hallmark of Divinity upon it; everything becomes subservient to this type of preaching. It is to declare, to contend, to argue. We must never let preaching go out of the Church. The Bible does not bow to trends; it creates them.

There is an ever-increasing freshness about anointed preaching. It carries with it the symbol of divine appointment. One can be anointed, yet remain in the centre of great conflict and controversy. This anointed preaching of the Word of God precedes and produces signs. The Gospel says "these signs shall follow them that believe." Jesus went with them confirming His words with signs following. When our services, preaching and worship are Christ-centred and anointed, we will surely have the promised signs. In the Early Church it was normal to expect and to see the manifestation of God's power. These signs, the healing of the sick, the domination of Satan and the salvation of sinners, are surely to be expected today. They are not playthings or to give preacher status or for charlatans to exploit. The great commission that Jesus gave includes the whole world and every creature. There is no suggestion of nationalism or parochialism; it is as wide as we can make it. This anointing is not for personal enjoyment, but enablement to complete a task. Natural training, gifts and talents are totally insufficient. Some of the greatest churches around the world have been founded and grounded on anointed teaching and preaching.

Jesus Christ was anointed to preach the new birth (John 3:1-13). The three great powers at the time of Christ each had their symbols. The Romans boasted of their conquests and strength, the Greeks of their inner strength and personal culture, the Jews boasted of their religious background, blood and birth. Thus the three great claims were: strength of flesh, strength of will and strength of birth and background. With one mighty statement, Jesus completely undermined them: born not of conquest, nor of the strength of the mind, nor of the blue blood of our parents, but BORN OF GOD, FROM ABOVE.

When Jesus said that the Spirit of the Lord was upon Him, He was implying that the Trinity was setting in motion the machinery for the salvation and the redemption of man. This anointing carries with it a desire to preach and to win souls. Almost immediately after the outpouring of God's Spirit on the Day of Pentecost, Peter stood before the vast assembly and 3,000 souls were saved and cut to the heart. Later there were 5,000 and still later there were multitudes. Pentecostal people around the world are in the forefront of soul-winning today.

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me because He hath anointed Me to preach." The preaching of Christ was not merely a recital of Jewish history, the diluted jargon of liberalism, or the social ethics of a reformer; it was a coming down to meet the needs of the people.

Jesus said, "I am anointed to preach the gospel to the poor." In those days who bothered about the poor? If a man had no work, money or food, he either begged or starved to death. If he had sickness and disease he died in the gutter and his body was burned on the fire heap outside the city. When God sent His Son to preach and to die after a silence of centuries, God said, "Son, let Your first words be to the poor. Tell them the good news of the Gospel!"

The poor heard Him gladly, He was nicknamed in contempt, "The King of the outcasts, the King of hopeless cases." The way Jesus touched people showed His care and concern. He touched their hands, eyes, hair, ears. He could not get close enough to them. This is where Jesus gave to His Church a social conscience. His Church must not sit in remote control, but go out into the highways and byways, the hedges, the lanes and compel them to come in. Our churches must never be our prisons. The poor materially, the poor in health, talent, mentality, spirit and spiritual understanding must be reached.

Jesus said, "I am anointed to preach . . . healing to the broken-hearted." He came to heal hearts that no one else could heal. Very few people seem to be concerned about broken hearts today, yet there are multitudes who, behind closed doors, are slowly dying of broken hearts. There are three types of broken hearts. There are those who are broken because of the treatment of others—wives who daily face the ill-treatment and unfaithfulness of their husbands and the lack of love and money, employees who live an earthly hell because of the ruthlessness of employers, parents who have grown old prematurely because of the treatment of selfish children. Then there are those who have broken hearts because of the poverty of hereditary frustrations—born of drunken parents, led into drugs early in life, some born out of wedlock. There are those who have broken hearts because of personal sin and human weakness. Drink, drugs, greed and lust have completely mastered them.

God said to His Son, "Son, deliver them!" Jesus did just that. He broke the chains of sin and vice of long standing.

Jesus said, "I am anointed . . . to bring deliverance to the captives and to open prison doors." There is a spiritual war going on and many are imprisoned as captives to Satan. They are no longer their own masters. They are held by another power. Jesus said "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me to set you free!" Here we see specialisation in preaching. Paul said that God had made him a preacher, a teacher and an apostle, a preacher with emotion who could cry over the lost, a teacher who could logically, sanely explain the truth, and an apostle who could carry authority and decision. Jesus said "The truth shall make you free."

Jesus said, "I am anointed to open the eyes of the blind." Paul spoke of the minds of people being blinded and of his being commissioned by God to open the eyes of the Gentiles. Here we have the masterly understatement of Scripture. This is not the preaching of a few ethics, the quoting of a little history, or the telling of a few stories, but the skilful portrayal of the Holy Scriptures so that men and women can be saved and see themselves as God sees them—guilty sinners des-timed for hell and the caverns of a lost eternity.

Jesus said, "I am anointed to heal the bruised." This is one of those great portions of holy Truth. God said, "Son, look down at the bruised, the down-trodden, the oppressed, those who started life with a handicap. I want you to heal them." This involves loving the unlovely, caring for those who have nothing to give in return, those who are nothing and never will become anything, those bruised at birth, bruised during the formative years of growing up, bruised in their teenage years, bruised in their marriage. God said, "Son, Your message must be such that You give hope even for those whom Satan has destined for the rubbish heap, those whom people pass by. If no one else cares, tell them that God cares."

I saw in North Carolina a sight I shall never forget. A Presbyterian doctor owned a private hospital where were men, women and children the like of which I have never seen before, most of them totally incurable. Many women of forty and fifty years of age had the mind of a child. They were defective, diseased, broken, limbless. Yet this doctor has devoted his life to loving, caring for and healing these people. He picked them up, cuddled them and kissed them. When he walked into the wards every eye was upon him. The obvious pleasure which they found in his company and in his words is beyond description.

"Son, heal the bruised!"

Jesus said, "I am anointed to offer a jubilee to all." This is the offering of a new beginning to every person in the world, complete forgiveness, sin never to be produced against you again.

"They marvelled at His gracious words." ~

...Where Jesus walked

The fourth in a series of broadcasts given by Ron Jones over B.B.C. Radio Bristol. The recording for this broadcast was made in the area of Gordon's Calvary in Jerusalem.

MOST of us will have had a glance at some of today's sensational newspaper headlines. We say our usual little piece, "Isn't it terrible?"

Truth to tell, we all like a touch of the sensational; it is part of what we call the spice of life. Because of this "entertainments" like all-in wrestling and trapeze acts are popular. The music stops, there is a roll on the drums, and the very atmosphere seems to become sensational. Some folk sit on the edge of their seats, some bite their nails, some turn their gaze in another direction, but the very idea of the sensational grips them all.

Because of our liking for the sensational certain daily newspapers are called "the popular press." For the same reason the Sunday newspaper trade flourishes.

My imagination is running riot on the greatest sensation of all time, for I am standing about twenty yards from Gordon's Calvary in Jerusalem. Before me on a large board I read words that are taken from the New Testament, "Then delivered he Jesus unto them to be crucified. And they took Him and led Him away. And He bearing His cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull." This spot certainly has the appearance of a skull. Below me is one of Jerusalem's main bus stations and to the right is the road that leads through the Damascus Gate into the old city of Jerusalem. As far as I am concerned, there is a shout from human lips that drowns out the drone of twentieth-century traffic. It is the clamour of a crowd, who, as a result of the nearest thing to mob rule, have got Jesus nailed to a cross. Listen to them: "If you are who You say you are, come down from that cross!" What a sensation if suddenly the crown of thorns had changed to gold and the cross itself had become a throne and Jesus had come down! He would have immediately become the sensation of the world, a nine-day wonder, and there it would all have ended. What good would that have been to you and me today? Our real need is not for more of the sensational, but for someone who can give us courage and strength to face today with its problems, tears, challenge and opportunities. Here is the crux of the Christian message: because Jesus did not come down from the cross, but went through to death and resur-

SHEILA PRICE

CHIP the robin woke one morning and peeped over the edge of his nest. He found the ground covered with snow.

"Mother, it has been snowing," he called. "I wonder if Mrs. Brown has put some crumbs on her lawn for us."

"I expect so," said Mrs. Robin. "Mrs. Brown is a very kind lady and always remembers to put a few crumbs out for us, especially in the winter time. We will fly over as soon as I have tidied the nest."

When they got to Mrs. Brown's they saw her two children scattering some nice cake crumbs on the lawn. "Oo, look," the little boy said to his sister, "there's a robin redbreast!"

"Why do we robins have red breasts, Mother?" asked Chip.

"Well, I am not quite sure of that," replied Mrs. Robin, "but my grandmother used to say that, when Jesus was crucified, all the robins flew over to Calvary."

"Whatever for?" asked Chip.

"I expect they thought that, with all the people gathered there, they would be certain to find a few crumbs, for the people would take some bread with them in case they got hungry. Well, grandmother used to say that, when the robins flew near the cross, they got stained by the blood of Jesus and ever since then robins have had red breasts. I think that, though we robins are small birds, we can be witnesses for Jesus."

"In what way, Mother?" wondered Chip.

"Well, I like to think that our red breasts remind people that the blood of Jesus can cleanse their hearts from sin."

"What about the snow, Mother?" said Chip.

"Perhaps that reminds people of how clean and pure Jesus can make them!"

"Yes, indeed!" said Mrs. Robin. "Now, let us go down and eat those nice, tasty crumbs." ~

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ★ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ★ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ★ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ★ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ★ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ★ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it. We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

*Amazing grace, how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me ;
I once was lost, but now am found,
Was blind, but now I see.*

THOUGH it is the lovely tune without the precious verses of this hymn that has reached the top of the pops, I expect that even this should rejoice our hearts, especially to know that not always does "the Devil have the best tunes." Many Scots will share with me in the pleasure that the "pipes" brought the hymn to the pops. I have heard Englishmen say that the bagpipes sound well at a distance, and the greater the distance the better!

I confess to having thought that this lovely melody was a new gospel hymn tune, but it is reported to be an old Gaelic hymn tune, which makes it more amazing still, for when sung by earlier Scottish congregations in the Highlands it would be without pipes, pipe organ or piano, but not without the conducting precentor! As I write I read that orders for the record have reached 70,000 each day. "Amazing Grace" has become an amazing craze.

Such success for a hymn tune among the secular pops would excite some Christians to think that this may be another indication of increasing interest in religion. Those who "clutch at a straw" might include it with other apparent signs of revival. I would welcome such a thought, but it is mere fancy. The truth is that when first played in public by the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards it was as an "inspection waltz" last July at Holyrood Park, Edinburgh, during the Queen's review on a military occasion. That it was played as an inspection waltz may disappoint some, but it looks as if the biggest disappointment is that of the Royal Scots. The record spinner may not be a money spinner as "Jesus Christ—Superstar" and "Godspell" have become and were seemingly aimed to be. The R.C.A. American recording company who marketed the record said that the Army performers had been seen as "just another unknown group" and earnings would be on that basis.

They may finally be little more than £5,000, only enough to cover the recent re-equipping of the band. Where was the Scottish business acumen? There is not much for the pipers to blow about! Good pipers are only such by constant practice on the "drone" (the monotonous humming sound produced by the three lower pipes of the bagpipe). So there may now be more droning than ever!

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. Coleman

SOME weeks ago I asked in this column if readers would like to send a note of answers to prayer which they had experienced. I am glad that some have taken the trouble to write.

This week I publish the first of a number of such testimonies. If you intended to write and have not done so, it is not too late. We would love to hear from you. Write as soon as you can.

The answers differ greatly and all are most interesting. I trust that they will bring blessing and encouragement to all who read them.

Here is the first:

I had a spiritual problem and I visited the local Elim pastor to talk this over. In the conversation I mentioned that, after having the responsibility of running my department at the office while my superior was away. I had an attack of migraine and the after-effects still persisted after some time. He prayed with me and laid hands on me. I had received the baptism in the Holy Spirit only a few months before this. I praise God that He heard and answered prayer and healed me over two years ago.

He also answered another prayer as, after the closure of our Assembly last year, I was able to come into fellowship with the Elim Pentecostal Church. Praise His name!

S. COLLINS.

rection, we have that very Someone whom we so desperately need.

In our age of labour-saving gadgets we want a religion to match, a Christianity drenched in sentimental superstition, but absolutely devoid of sacrifice. God help us to see that such a religion is a farce, for that kind of thing is just not on where the Man who refused to come down from the cross is concerned.

(This fourth contribution to the series was Pastor Jones's fiftieth broadcast over B.B.C. Radio Bristol.)

Oil galore!

"BRITAIN could be on the brink of an oil bonanza promising to produce three-quarters of today's needs in little over seven years. Minister for Industry Sir John Eden said that oil galore is waiting on the Continental shelf. Areas off the Isle of Man, the Bristol Channel, the North Sea and west of the Shetlands are expected to yield high quality oil almost on our very doorstep." When I read this I marvelled at the richness of the world's resources and was gladdened by this further proof of the bountiful provision of Almighty God: hidden wealth, undiscovered supplies of a vital commodity, secrets of the sea and its bed, all there around our shores waiting to be collected, to be used, and turned to good account for the prosperity of the nation.

As Whitsuntide approaches there is a similarity between the discovery of oil round our shores and the rediscovery of the mighty power of the Holy Spirit which is taking place today in the historic denominations. These are days of a worldwide outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Many believers are tapping hitherto unknown depths of power and resultant usefulness.

How foolish it would be if our industrialists ignored the oil supplies which will bring new prosperity to depressed areas and release our country from dependence on faraway Middle East producers. How foolish and failing are we as believers if we ignore or neglect to draw upon the precious anointing oil of the Holy Spirit. Some believers think that because they worship in a Pentecostal church and give mental assent to the doctrine that our Lord baptises with the Holy Spirit and fire this is enough. They enjoy the freedom and the fervour of Pentecostal worship, but they never seek a personal Pentecost. Thus their witness lacks power and their own resources are totally inadequate. It seems sad that believers are poverty stricken and unable to function in the body of Christ as effectively as they should because of reluctance or neglect.

Glorious as the initial outpouring of the Holy Spirit is in the experience of the believer, there must be a constant filling and a drawing of power from the Spirit. If Britain's economy and industry are to benefit and expand from the new source of power, it must be reliable, constant and utilised effectively. Are you Pentecostal in character and experience as well as in name? Are you on the receiving end of the pipeline? Is the oil flowing steadily in your life? Are you being daily filled with the Spirit?

In the 1972 report of the Methodist Church Home Mission Department the introduction, written by the late Rev. Leslie Davison shortly before his home-call, is very challenging. Among other things he writes of the failure of the "modern" message to win men to Christ. He states: "They want to know what Jesus can do for them; they are not interested in our doubts and hesitations; they want to know if there is power in the gospel or not." He tells of the triumphs of the simple gospel message proclaimed by those who have had a Pentecostal experience and concludes: "What the Church needs is more of the Holy Spirit. Of course the Spirit is already in the Church. It could not be the Church otherwise and, of course, the Spirit is in the world active at every point of space and time, the very basis of all change and renewal. But there is what the New Testament calls a 'filling,' which brings joy, peace and power. It floods the whole being with the assurance of God's love and it sets us aglow with Christ's love for every man, woman and child, and for the whole marvellous creation. Jesus baptises with the Spirit and with fire. Without the enabling Spirit we are weak, hesitant and tongue-tied. We are overwhelmed by our doubts and uncertainties. With the Spirit we cannot help but talk about the glories of Jesus, His love, His power. We want more of His Spirit, more and more of God, more of His fullness, more of His love. Still for more on Thee we call, Thou who fillest all in all."

New Bulgarian translation of New Testament and Psalms

After seven years of work, the translation of the New Testament and Psalms into Bulgarian has now been completed. The translation has been done by orthodox scholars. Roman Catholics and Protestant theologians have read and made comments on the translation.

Possibilities for the production of the new translation have recently been discussed. The United Bible Societies have offered to make available paper for the production.

Tract distribution

By ALEXANDER TEE

IN Glasgow there was a man who used to give out gospel literature outside the Central station. Thousands of people received tracts from him, yet no one ever told him they had accepted Christ as their Saviour after reading one of his tracts. The man became discouraged and not only stopped giving out literature, but actually backslid.

One lovely summer afternoon he decided to go to Loch Lomond for a boat trip. Sitting on the deck of "The Maid of the Loch" he saw a man giving out gospel tracts. When the two men met face to face the former said: "Have you ever seen anybody get converted through your giving out tracts, friend?" "Not so far," was the reply. "Then why do you keep on if there are no results?" asked the backslider. "Well, sir, a man gave me a tract almost every time I walked up a certain street in Glasgow and, as a result, I gave my life to Christ," said the man. "Where in Glasgow, may I ask?" said the former. "Just outside the Central station," came the reply. Imagine the conversation which followed when the backslider added: "I am the man who gave you that tract." Can you think how he must have felt?

Some tracts are poorly produced. They do no credit to the precious gospel which was made available at such a high cost. Fortunately, however, there are ample sources from which good quality tracts are available, for example: The Victory Tract Club, Croydon, and Grenehurst Press, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

There are also a number of excellent gospel booklets which present the gospel in a concise, splendid way.

1,600 converts

Dr. R. A. Torrey, the great American evangelist, once testified that the leaflet "Safety, Certainty and Enjoyment" had been the means of winning at least 1,600 people to Christ.

John R. Rice, another outstanding evangelist, wrote a tract that he believes has brought almost 3,500 to Christ.

One Pentecostal church in London claims: "Over the years hundreds of millions of tracts have been sent out for distribution. In addition to the many tracts which we print ourselves, we are indebted to the generosity of Mr. P, who down through the years has supplied us with millions of gospel tracts."

William Penn wrote one tract which became the means of freeing 12,000 Quakers who were imprisoned for Christ's sake.

John Wesley organised 160 tract distributors. Their efforts reformed the Lord's Day habits of the entire city of London.

Wisdom needed

It is never wise to make a nuisance of oneself when giving out gospel tracts. To block a passage way through which people are hurrying to catch a bus, train or underground deters. Anything which could make someone suspicious is to be avoided. While young children may give special gospel literature to others of their own age, it is seldom, if ever, in the best interests to send them round the doors or into busy streets to give out tracts.

It can be most impressive to see a young person who is clean, tidy and smartly dressed giving out good gospel literature. It takes courage and it is very commendable.

A good method is to use a tract per day. Ask God to open up an opportunity for you to use a gospel tract every day. Usually a soul-winning conversation will either precede or follow.

No one will ever be able to tell all the good that has been done by distributing sound gospel literature. You may not be a preacher or an evangelist, but very few young people cannot give out the written message. This can be the means of saving a lost soul from going to a terrible eternity. When did you last give out a good gospel tract?

Notes
by
J. R. Brown

Monday, May 8th 1 Samuel 11:1-15
"The Spirit of God came upon Saul" (v. 6).

The Ammonites had long claimed the right of possession in Gilead and, though repressed by Jephthah (Judges 11:33), now, after ninety years, they renewed their pretensions. Their threatened invasion had hastened the appointment of a king (12:12). Barbarous mutilation was the usual punishment of usurpers in the East. The threat of this caused dismay in Israel, who reckoned without God, thus having no hope. Saul conjoined the name of Samuel with his own in a form of war-summons suited to the character and habits of agricultural people (11:7), but note the emphasis on the Spirit of God (v. 6). The Spirit of God brings a holy boldness which we all can experience.

Tuesday, May 9th 1 Samuel 12:1-15
"If ye will fear the Lord" (v. 14).

Samuel testified to his integrity (vv. 1-5). This public address was made after the solemn reinstatement of Saul and before the convention at Gilgal dispersed. Samuel, having challenged the people with a review of his public life, received a unanimous acknowledgment of his honour and character. He had given them no cause to weary of Divine government, therefore the blame for desiring a change of government rested with them, though it seems that this was insinuated and they did not fully perceive his meaning. Samuel reproved the people for ingratitude (vv. 6-15). The yoke of the Lord is for our training, and if we follow Him with awe we will know His blessing.

Wednesday, May 10th 1 Samuel 12:16-25
"Serve the Lord with all your heart" (v. 20).

God indicated his approval of Samuel (v. 18). Normally there is no rain from April to October about the middle of June. There could not have been a more appropriate proof of a Divine mission than the phenomena of rain and thunder without any warning of their approach. Samuel's prediction of the storm was an attestation that his words were true. The people were awed by the miracle and requested Samuel's prayers. The conduct of Samuel showed him to be a man who sank all personal considerations in obedience to God and for his country's good.

Thursday, May 11th Psalm 24:1-10
"The Lord of hosts, He is the King of glory" (v. 10).

The great occasion in David's life when he brought the ark of the Lord to the captured city of the Jebusites was joyfully celebrated by several chants and psalms (1 Chronicles 15:16-23). Psalm 24 was one of the first psalms to be used as the procession approached the city. The psalm was greater than the occasion, for it is generally interpreted as a prophetic expression of Christ's ascension after victory over death and sin (v. 8, compare Colossians 2:15; Hebrews 2:14, 15). The form of a question (Psalm 24:3, 4) gives vivacity. Hands, heart and tongue are organs of action, feeling and speech, which compose our character. May they be dedicated to God for His glory!

Friday, May 12th Psalm 67:1-7
"Let all the people praise Thee" (v. 5).

This psalm is a prayer that, by God's blessing on His people, His salvation and praise may be extended over the earth. Some commentators consider it to be a harvest hymn of praise, but the psalm is concerned with all nations (v. 7) and the immeasurable benediction of God (v. 6). In verses 1 and 2 Israel is shown as the mirror of God wherein all nations may behold Him. In verse 4 all nations are radiantly happy because God judges (governs) them and they are fully secure in His guidance, even as He ruled and guided His chosen people through the wilderness. The psalm is for the Church an apt expression of missionary aspirations.

Saturday, May 13th Psalm 68:1-16
"Sing unto God" (v. 4).

This is one of the most magnificent songs of triumph in the Old Testament. Its dramatic commentary upon a memorable event, its wide perspective of thought and speech, its spirit of invincible faith in God, and its presentation of the historic past and envisaged future, combine to make it outstanding. The entire psalm is pervaded by the joy of Israel. JAH (a contraction of Jehovah) is the name which invokes protection for the helpless, vindication of the innocent and punishment of the rebels (vv. 4-6). Let us sing praises unto our Lord today!

Sunday, May 14th Psalm 68:17-35
"Thou hast ascended on high" (v. 18).

From the scene of conquest the Lord ascended to His throne, leading a multitude of captives (v. 18). This is an allusion to the triumphal procession by which a victory was celebrated, the captives taken forming part of the procession (compare Judges 5:12). This psalm typifies the conquests of the Church under her Divine leader, the Lord Jesus Christ. He who was with "the church in the wilderness" (Acts 7:38) is the Lord who is highlighted in this ascension. Paul applied this language to describe His actual ascension when, having conquered sin, death and hell, the Lord of glory triumphantly entered heaven. Instead of being dejected, vanquished slaves, roped together to form a procession of triumph for a despotic conqueror, we, having been conquered by Christ, are led by Him and share His triumph (2 Corinthians 2:14).

DAVID—Shepherd, Singer, Sovereign

DAVID'S SONGS

By J. Osman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

DAVID was the sweet singer of Israel. His writings in God's Word are confined to the Psalms. Whether these were ever intended to be sung to repetitive chants is open to considerable doubt. More likely they were sung in a manner in which the music would fit the words, rather than the words being made to fit the music. Sometimes the melody would be plaintive, even melancholy, but at other times it would be strong, loud and victorious. It would probably cause quite a stir if we tried to sing some psalms with the accompaniment and in the style that is suggested by the words and titles!

David's songs are without doubt some of the best-loved portions of the Bible. It is easy to discover the reason, for they reflect every experience to which we are subject. Whatever your mood, difficulty, problem, temptation, trial, depression, desperation, aspiration, jubilation or dedication, there is a psalm for you. Do you question in your heart why the wicked prosper? Read about it in Psalm 37:12 (and Psalm 73 will help, though this is one of Asaph's psalms).

All the Psalms were not written by David, but the majority were, including the best-known of all—Psalm 23.

In some of his Psalms David pours out his soul in complaint. Is your trouble a deep depression of spirit? You are not alone in your heaviness of heart! Read Psalms 42 and 43. Sometimes we are afraid of expressing sorrow of heart or of singing a hymn that touches on grief, but David was not. He set his prayers to music. He made a song out of sorrow. As our chorus puts it:

"Bring Him thy sorrows, bring Him thy tears,
Bring Him thy heartaches, bring Him thy fears.
Go tell Him plainly just how you feel.
Jesus will pardon, Jesus will heal."

You may object that David did not know Jesus, but he anticipated His coming and in what is sheer prophecy as well as poetry he spelt it out for us, e.g. in Psalm 22. How significant, too, that immediately before Gethsemane Jesus and the disciples sang a hymn.

The identifying mark of God's approval, however, is seen in that David never stayed in depression. Grumbles gave way to giving of thanks and, by affirmations of faith and confidence, we are transported in songs from gloom to glory.

David was a man after God's own heart, but he was also a man after our own experiences, who endured what we endure, but whose temporary, heart-rending cries were not a constant attitude of heart, but rather expressive of things to be cast as burdens upon the Lord, so that he emerged into a place of worship and victory where he gloried in the God of his salvation.

A man after God's own heart is essentially a man of jubilant song. Here is a pattern for the Christian—compare Ephesians 5:18, 19: "Be filled with the Spirit; speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord."

now earnestly, violently, to break up the fallow ground, then bow your heart before the Lord so that He can show you the weeds which must be removed, sow the Word of God in your life, so that you can do and be what God desires, and open your heart to the blessed showers of the Holy Spirit. Your life will become like a watered garden in which the Lord can find perpetual pleasure and satisfaction. This, indeed, will be revival!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Looking unto Jesus

Hebrews 12 : 2

by F. Lavender

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

WHILE thinking about some aspects of the Christian life I have reflected on a matter which has greatly troubled me, viz. that so many Christians seem to have their lives out of focus. They focus their lives on other Christians and, because of this, they are missing the mark. They blame other Christians for their own spiritual failure. Another believer did or said something which offended them so they have withdrawn from Christian service or have even left the church and have become very bitter.

Humanly speaking, we are all spiritual failures. Which of us would ever achieve spiritual success apart from the grace of our God? To blame other imperfect folk for our own failure is, therefore, clearly absurd; to expect perfection from others when we are ourselves imperfect is foolish and can be hypocritical. If we would avoid stumbling and lead consistent Christian lives we must focus our attention upon the Lord Jesus Christ.

There are many reasons why we should obey the exhortation of our text: "Looking unto Jesus."

He has never failed in His mission. Even as He hung in agony on the cross, He cried "Finished!"; He had accomplished His God-given task in the face of death and hell and all the principalities of evil.

He has never let down anyone who has trusted Him, so that even the weakest, most timid believer can hear Him say: "It is I; be not afraid."

He has power to enable us to stand. No matter what may be the problems of our characters or temperaments, He can hold us up.

If we love Him and concentrate our lives on the doing of His will, He has promised to cause all things to work together for our good—even the insults, injuries and hurts which men inflict upon us.

It is the intention of God to make us to become like the Lord Jesus. All that He allows to touch our lives has this supreme end in view: we shall be brought with joy into the presence of His eternal glory, bearing before all heaven the likeness of His beloved Son.

For these reasons we should look away to Jesus, who will keep us steadfast, and who will hold us up when the sins or failures of others, or of ourselves, could make us stumble.

After the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, Peter became too interested in the Lord's plans for John. The Lord responded very tersely: "What business is that of yours? You just concentrate on following Me yourself!" Peter had been shown a similar lesson previously, for when he had his eyes on Jesus he walked on the water, but when he looked round he began to sink. If we look at others and their faults and failures we will despair and sink, but if we look to Jesus we shall live triumphantly. To be obsessed with the imperfections of others will destroy our joy, but to be obsessed with the perfection of our glorious Saviour will bring peace and joy.

To put it personally, if I focus on human failure I shall become bitter and cynical, but if I focus on my wonderful Saviour I shall become more like Him.

H. C. PHILLIPS RETIRES

(see front cover photo)

The beautiful address, designed and drawn by Ron A. Gull, depicts Emmanuel Press, the Phillips' home and the tall palm tree—almost a landmark now. The address reads:

In gratitude to Almighty God we, the Directors of Emmanuel Press, record our heartfelt thanks for the faithful labours of His servant, Hubert C. Phillips, a pioneer in the cause of Christian Literature Evangelism in Africa. During thirty-four years as founder Chairman of Emmanuel Press our brother's example has always been one of humble endeavour in the cause of Christ. With warm esteem for a brother beloved we present this illuminated address on his retirement.

(Signed) David Newington, R. J. Skinner, Ingrid Chawner, Ronald A. Gull, W. F. Mullan.

Psalm 92 : 12, 14 : "But the godly shall flourish like palm trees and grow tall . . . even in old age they will still produce fruit."

Elim news

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand

Pastor : M. J. Frith

An outreach of evangelism in depth was a great time of blessing. A campaign conducted by the Spirit-filled Canterbury Director of Open-air Campaigners, David Salisbury, centred round a children's effort. Five meetings were held, the highest attendance being just under 400. The closing meeting, attended by parents, was affected by heavy rain shortly before starting time, but it was still a good climax for the children. During the week a number of them were counselled for salvation and we were encouraged both by their sincerity and by their understanding of the step they had taken.

The evangelist took special training classes on evangelism in preparation for weekend visitation work. The homes of the children who came to the crusade, but who did not normally attend Sunday school, were all visited. Reception by the parents was encouraging and the gospel was freely discussed with many. A good number promised that their children would start attending Sunday school, but we are disappointed that few have done so.

Two special evangelistic services concluded the venture, when two teenage girls accepted the Lord. We are now looking to the Lord for more decisions and for results from future revisitation.

M. J. FRITH.

BIRMINGHAM, Stirchley

Pastor : J. B. Coleman

The baptismal service held at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Selly Oak, Birmingham, for the friends of the Stirchley assembly gave me great joy. After returning to Birmingham, and after training for the teaching profession, Mr. Coleman was invited to take the oversight of the work at Stirchley. Since then the work has grown and now they get more in attendance than my own assembly. One prays that the Lord will undertake concerning a building of their own, but rejoices in what He is doing. It was grand that Mr. Coleman could baptise the candidates, for one remembers his very serious illness of some time ago. The Selly Oak male voice choir sang several times and Pastor Alan Caple also sang. One regrets that we shall hear his voice only on records very shortly, a sentiment re-echoed by several at the service.

Pastor D. W. Cartwright, in his home assembly, ministered on "water baptism" in a lucid yet lively manner. To me the crowning note was to know that the first candidate through the waters came out with the Pentecostal experience—baptised in water and in the Spirit. What a joyous combination, and truly Scriptural!

The weekend continued with members being brought into the Selly Oak fellowship and with Selly Oak friends going through the waters of baptism on the Sunday evening.

KEN SMITH.

KEYNSHAM

Pastor : D. W. R. Morton

Acts 2 : 17 was the text for the Sunday evening sermon at our recent baptismal service, the third in three months. Seventy-six people crowded into the little church to witness nine young people follow the Lord through the waters of baptism. As the candidates were immersed a wonderful sense of the presence of God swept through the meeting. Young people began praising the Lord as they came up out of the water. One young man gave a spontaneous testimony, proclaiming his love for Christ as he stood in the water.

Following this, a further five teenagers stood to their feet in the congregation, indicating their desire to be baptised immediately. After changing into the wet baptismal clothes of the previous candidates they too followed the Lord through the waters—a total of fourteen young people, ten of whom were young men. God had poured out His Spirit and they caught the vision.

Three hours later one of these young men spent three hours in prayer and was baptised in the Holy Ghost, speaking with other tongues as the Spirit gave him utterance.

"This is the Lord's doing and it is marvellous in our eyes."

ELIM MINISTERS' WIVES' RETREAT

By Gladys M. Gorton

THE first Elim Ministers' Wives' Retreat at Swanwick proved to be more than we anticipated. It was a great success. We plan the second one for March 26th-28th, 1973 (D.V.). Please book the date!

Mrs. Eileen Glass, in her address, quoted from the women's column which I wrote in the autumn, 1957. The title I gave to it was "An opportune tribute." It appeared in the conference number.

Extracts from two letters of appreciation for the Ministers' Wives' Retreat read :

"I feel I must write a short note to thank you for organising the Ministers' Wives' Retreat. It was a real help and blessing and since being home I've really felt the benefit of those two days. It's most encouraging to meet others who share the same experiences and to be able to talk freely. The time spent together in His presence has made Him so much more real and precious . . . those two days away have helped me to draw closer to Him. . . ."—MRS. JACOBS.

"I'm sure I've benefited through the discussion periods and the fellowship as well as my own particular blessing. [Mrs. Baker received the baptism in the Holy Spirit.] It was helpful to realise that all the pastors' wives had experienced the same kind of situation and feelings. My husband was delighted with the news about my baptism—though it wasn't really a surprise, as he had noticed the subject for discussion that evening and decided to have a day of prayer and fasting for me."—MRS. BAKER.

Mrs. Sheila Fry writes :

The leader, Mrs. Gorton, was a spiritual help and inspiration to those present and esteemed highly by us all.

The first session commenced after introductions were made on Monday evening, the discussion being on "Matters relating to the ministry." This was followed by prayer and God wonderfully poured out His Spirit upon us. On Tuesday morning Mrs. B. Green gave a thought-provoking message on "The pastor's wife." We realised afresh the importance of our ministry. Mrs. Glass delivered a second message on "The pastor's wife in relationship to her children," which proved to be interesting, humorous and constructive. In the afternoon Mrs. Sherwood spoke on "Outreach," giving an interesting account of her work among the drug addicts in Los Angeles. Mrs. Baker gave some useful thoughts on what is involved in the ministry among women and Mrs. Glass spoke on "Visitation."

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Gorton gave a message on "The work of the Holy Spirit," emphasising the need for obedience to the moving of the Holy Spirit. In the prayer time which followed one received the baptism of the Holy Spirit and we all received a fresh anointing. On Wednesday morning, our final meeting, Mrs. Gorton spoke on "Public ministry." Everyone agreed that the "Retreat" was worth while and we all were spiritually uplifted.

BOOK REVIEW

Like as of Fire. Published by Puritan Press Ltd.

Price 50p, postage and packing 5p extra.

Like as of Fire is a collection of sermons by a cross-section of Pentecostal preachers. Most of the sermons are on Pentecost and allied themes. Donald Gee has an interesting contribution on atmosphere. "The Ninth Day," by Don Mal-lough, is particularly encouraging to those who have been seeking the baptism in the Holy Spirit for a long time without receiving it. Among the contributors are three of our own distinguished ministers. P. S. Brewster has a challenging sermon on "Christ, the King of truth," the sermon by Douglas B. Gray entitled "None other name" was broadcast by the B.B.C., and Alexander Tee sounds a solemn warning in "The disaster of a diverted life." To quote Ian MacPherson in the preface: "Here is evangelical theology with nothing added but what Sangster called 'the plus of the Spirit.'" GORDON WRIGHT.

Coverdale House Publishers Limited inform us that, as they have already announced, the following prices are now operating :

Living Bible, paper: £1, postage and packing 6p extra ;

Living Bible, cloth: £3, postage and packing 25p extra.

This is the paraphrase by Dr. Kenneth Taylor (not Thompson as we inadvertently said in a recent review).

In addition, the prices of the reprints of the following titles are now :

Nine o'clock in the Morning: price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra ;

I talked with Spirits: price 35p, postage and packing 2½p extra.

Jesus People Come Alive is still available at the remarkably low price of 35p, postage and packing 5p extra.

He mends bicycles and broken hearts

PASTOR Ayubu, leader of the Elim work in Tanga town and district, tells this story.

Pita, one of our recent converts, has just had a great experience with God. His wife gave birth to twins, who died. Her relations gathered money and came to take her to the diviners so that the cause of the children's death would be known and the offended ancestral spirit or demon would be placated. Pita's wife was grieved when Pita would not let her go. Now she would never have another child. Pita came to me in great distress. "Pastor," he said, "they—my wife and her relatives—are putting great pressure on me. I shall have to seek demon aid for my wife."

I said "No, listen to the promise of God." I then read to him from the Book of Genesis. "Be fruitful and multiply!" I said. "This is God's promise to you. God will give you another child. Will not your wife listen to you if you pray with her?"

"Yes, she will," answered Pita. "But she will not come to church."

I replied, "We will pray here, and when you get home you can pray with your wife. Do you believe God?"

"Yes, Pastor," he replied.

"Did not the man in the Bible say to Yesu, 'Say the word and my child shall be healed'? I believe that if we pray God will do wonders."

We prayed and Pita went home. When he arrived he called his wife and said to her, "Pastor and I have prayed that God will heal you and give you a child at once. Now you and I will pray together." His wife knelt obediently beside him. Pita put his Bible on her head and asked for a child in the name of Yesu. Two months later Pita came to tell me the joyful news and said, "Now I know that God can do anything."

Pastor Ayubu and family outside our Tanga church.

Pita's wife told the church that she certainly believed in such a God as we had, a God to love, not like the fearful spirit-gods. She gladly came to church with Pita to present their child to the Lord.

Recently I took Pita with me when evangelising with a group of men. As we were returning in the dark, Pita's bicycle sustained an unrepairable puncture. We discussed the problem and tried every means of repairing it, but we could find no way of doing so. I said to them all, "Let us pray about it."

"Yes," said Pita, "I believe that prayer can accomplish anything." We bowed our heads to pray.

"Pita," I said, "pray for your bicycle, and we will pray also."

"You, God," said Pita, "what sort of a God are you? We have come out preaching your Word and now the bicycle has a puncture. Why don't You heal it?" Pita then pumped up the tyre and we all rode home rejoicing.

Pastor Ayubu [Job] was one of the first converts at Msolwa. I soon sent him away for training. After serving in the more distant outstations among the Wakweli, he went to Tanga to help the missionaries, from whom he took over complete supervision on their departure. He is now a member of the Mission Executive.

David—Shepherd, Singer, Sovereign

by J. Osman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

His strength

(Psalms 18 : 1 ; 27 : 1)

DAVID carolled blithely in these and many other verses, revealing that the source of his strength was the Lord. One recalls his youthful exploits with the bear and the lion which he slew while tending the flock and the tremendous daring and inspired courage shown in saving Israel and slaying Goliath.

In another instance he showed physical courage and spiritual stamina at a time when everything seemed to be conspiring to depress him and knock all the fight out of him. All of us have faced experiences when it seems that God must have forgotten us. Jacob cried on one occasion: "All these things are against me." He thought that Joseph was dead, that Simeon was a captive and that Benjamin was to be taken away too. It seemed too much to bear.

David was on the run from Saul (1 Samuel 30). By the mercy of God, he had been prevented from fighting with the Philistines against his own kith and kin, for they remembered his exploits and the song that had been sung in his honour: "Saul slew his thousands and David his tens of thousands," and they were afraid that he might deal treacherously with them. David returned to his headquarters at Ziklag with his 600 men. To their dismay and consternation they found that the Amalekites had taken advantage of their absence and had invaded the city, razed it by fire and taken everyone captive. Can you imagine the feelings of David and his men when, instead of having a welcoming party, they stood in the deserted, smouldering ruins of their homes with not a soul to greet them, and they only able to guess what might have happened to their loved ones?

They were swept by a sense of desolation that matched the desolation of the scene that met their gaze. Strong men broke down and wept aloud and unashamedly until they exhausted themselves. In their sorrow the men sought a scapegoat, someone on whom they could wreak their anger and vent their indignation, and most unfairly they blamed David and spoke of stoning him. Surely all things and all people were against him at this time! One could hardly have blamed him if he had become thoroughly discouraged and had felt forsaken and defeated. Chappell says: "A discouraged man is in a large measure a defeated and useless man. How many folk fail in the battle of life not from lack of ability, or from lack of opportunity, or even from lack of eagerness to succeed, but from lack of courage!" Courage demands inner resources. It is infinitely easier to faint than to pray as Jesus exhorted us to do.

How did our "man after God's own heart" react to such circumstances? He had been dismissed by the Philistines, he was a fugitive from Saul, his headquarters was a smoking pile of rubble, his family had been captured and his imagination probably worked overtime on what they might be enduring, his own men had turned on him and he was threatened with death at their hands. He could have cried that everything and everyone was against him! What was the use of going on? Here is the short sentence that sums up what must surely have delighted the heart of God: "But David encouraged himself in the Lord his God."

If you feel ready to throw it all up, life is a burden, your problems are mounting daily, you almost fear to open your letters in the morning because of what they might contain, unalleviated gloom seems to be your portion and there seems to be no end to it all, please take a look at David and share his experience. It will put a new spring into your step and a new song into your mouth!

How proud I felt of my wife in our early married life when the war was on and Swansea was suffering frequent air-raids! When the sirens sounded our neighbours gathered in our house, for they felt safer there than anywhere else because my wife acted with such composure, offered a prayer to God for safe keeping and, by her example of encouraging herself in the Lord, communicated something of her ability to calm the inner qualms of fear and to depend on Him for strength. "What time I am afraid I will trust the Lord."

How does one encourage oneself in the Lord? It is not achieved by pretending that the problem does not exist or by adopting some false philosophy, or by stooping to the escapist's way of leaving a back door open. The brand of thinking that proclaims "You'll die if you worry, you'll die if you don't, so why worry at all?" is not for the Christian. "Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you" is more in line with our way of thinking. Remember God's promises, claim His provision, recount His previous help in trouble, above all offer a fervent prayer that not only contains a petition for deliverance but also asks for guidance and praises in faith for the outcome. When you have learned to encourage yourself in this way you will be able to help others who are facing problems and ordeals. Too many folk find it easy to discourage others and far too few have a ministry of encouragement.

This must be one of the functions of the "helps" mentioned in the list of ministries and gifts in 1 Corinthians 12:28. Our strength, like David's, must be in the Lord, and if it is so, in times of stress we too will not fail but will be able, like true people of God, to encourage ourselves in the Lord our God.

This was not a false building up of hopes or some psychological boost that David gave himself; the end of the recorded story shows that the Amalekites were tracked down and defeated. "David recovered all that the Amalekites had carried away . . . and there was nothing lacking to them, neither small nor great, neither sons nor daughters, neither spoil, nor anything that they had taken to them: David recovered all" (1 Samuel 30:18). There was so much spoil that they were able to send presents to all their friends and the list of recipients occupies six verses—Hallelujah! What a deliverance!

"God is able to turn the curse into a blessing."

United Convention

St. Christopher's Hall, Haslemere, Surrey, was filled on Good Friday for the first local united Elim and Assemblies of God Easter convention. The theme was "Jesus the Way, the Truth, the Life." The convener was R. D. Taylor, pastor of the Haslemere assembly.

The afternoon meeting began with chorus singing led by J. A. Hamilton, pastor of Guildford Elim Church, followed by the opening prayer by Pastor Golding (Farnham assembly).

Terry Cheeseman, director of Teen Challenge, told of his work among young people and especially of the wonderful opportunities he and his team experienced in school assembly halls and in rehabilitation centres as they witnessed to the power of Jesus Christ to change lives.

The main speaker was G. Wesley Gilpin, Principal of Elim Bible College, Capel, who preached a challenging, thought-inspiring sermon on Galatians 1:4.

The evening meeting began with choruses led by M. J. Tilley, pastor of Aldershot Elim Church, followed by a testimony from Mr. Gilpin.

Terry Cheeseman brought the final message on Joseph of Arimathea, a secret disciple who had to come to a personal moment of decision.

The sick were prayed for, and the anointing of the Holy Spirit was felt throughout both services.

Singing items were provided by the Woking assembly and the Haslemere young people.

Book review

My Call to the Ministry. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott. Price 30p, postage and packing 6p extra.

This is a collection of personal accounts of the call of God to the ministry by some well-known preachers. Some are stimulating and give sound advice to potential ministers. There is a background to some which will seem alien to Pentecostal people. The emphasis is on training and preparation, and though none claims to have had voice or vision each affirms God's call.

"If only ministers would stop giving their people their opinion, and give them God's Word, things might be better than they are," writes Rev. G. B. Duncan, M.A. Perhaps the secret of all spiritual destiny lies in the words repeated by Rev. F. Houghton as he walked a mile to his home. "Lord, I am Thine!" This book is rather "churchy," but it is useful.

THE multitude of words written and spoken in our day adds to the confusion of our world. Have you ever turned the knob of a radio, especially late in the evening? Sounds pour out from places far apart in tongues of great variety.

Politicians use words as Moslem women use veils. They hide reality behind verbiage. One of the reasons why they tend to be almost despised by so many is just this: they often neither say what they mean nor mean what they say. Advertising men use words as teenage lads hang mirrors on scooters. They dress up noise and inconvenience as if they were all-demanding and all-absorbing. Words certainly play a large part in the commerce and the social life of today.

We are greatly struck by the verse in 1 Corinthians 2:4: "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." The words were Paul's and recalling the evocative commencement of the Corinthian church serves to confirm the accuracy of his comment.

It is a highly provocative statement, however. Speech and preaching in the demonstration of the Spirit provide a thoughtful, challenging sidelight on our contributions in these respects. There is no suggestion of "Here are a few thoughts which occurred to me . . ."; "When I was in . . . I . . . I . . ." is nowhere to be hinted at. "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God," added the apostle in the next verse as his reason for his powerful preaching.

Demonstration has become an unfortunate word and we read of a new breakout of it in the U.S.A. as a result of the recent escalation of the war in Vietnam. Modern demonstrations are protests, however, but Paul was speaking of a showing forth of the power of the Spirit.

As we come towards Whitsuntide we reflect on how much we need such a revelation of power now: preaching which grips, startles, changes.

Paul's sense of priority must surely have done much for his ministry, for he said: "For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified" (v. 2). Other preachers please copy!

"The Lord working with them"

AT 6 p.m. I went to preach at a service, after which I rushed home to pray for my son Roy, who had headache and fever. I was told on my way to the meeting that these are the symptoms of chicken pox. Many had contracted it in our area. I had to say good-bye to my wife and the children as she tucked them into bed, for I was leaving again that night at 9 o'clock to travel 350 miles by bus to Theni.

I arrived at Madurai the next morning at 8 o'clock. It was a night passed in fitful dozes in dozens of awkward positions as I was sitting beside a man of rather big proportions, because of which he took up part of my seat too!

At Madurai I was met by one of our past students and we went to a hotel for a quick breakfast before we caught another bus at 8.45 a.m. that would take us through the cool of the morning into the heat of the forenoon to arrive at Theni at 11.15 a.m.

Why did I make this long journey, leaving my little lad sick? What was so important about this place of about 30,000 people, predominantly Hindus? One of our pastors with one of his elders and an evangelist had held a week's crusade there and God had mightily blessed. I had been called to dedicate a big house that has been rented for worship for those who had been saved, thus adding one more Maranatha Full Gospel Church to the fellowship. Praise the Lord!

REPORT OF THE CRUSADE

By Pastor Joseph Balachandran

GOD gave us a great burden for souls at Theni, an important business centre in the district of Madurai, about twenty-three miles east of our church at Ussalamputti. We started by printing 1,000 cards requesting prayer for a crusade that we were planning to have there and we sent them to all those who we thought would pray with us. Then we began to pray fervently as a church and at least once a month from last September we gathered in the church and fasted and prayed. We prepared for the publishing of the crusade by printing 1,000 wall posters, 10,000 handbills and 5,000 hymn sheets.

This was the first time that we had conducted such a big meeting, so it was a real step of faith to believe God for all the expenses that would be involved. It was wonderful how God supplied all the needed money through different sources, but mostly through the local people.

As the day drew near to start the meetings we could feel the powers of darkness closing in to try to discourage and defeat us, but God gave us the assurance that the victory was ours. So we gathered to dedicate the ground, Professor D. Chellappa, one of our elders, officiating.

On the following day the crusade started with a great air of expectation. About 3,000 people gathered in the ground. One could sense the presence of God. At the close of the service many came forward to surrender to our Lord.

By the close of the eight-day crusade hundreds had responded to the Gospel and many had been healed by the power of God from different diseases and sicknesses. Many came to the platform to testify of what God had done for them. Here are four of the many such testimonies:

Mr. Sernaran Varesansu: paralysed in one leg and one arm—able to use both again.

P. Velusamy, aged 10: completely deaf and unable to bend two fingers; his hearing was restored and the use of his fingers too.

Pamarsehum, aged 30: deaf and dumb—was completely healed.

Palanisamy, aged 10: lost his sight as the result of smallpox at the age of four; was able to see again.

Because of the many healings doctors from the nearby hospital came and examined some of those who claimed healing and were satisfied that something wonderful had happened to them.

We were able to give water baptism to a number of those who confessed Christ as their Saviour and many received the baptism in the Holy Ghost.

Pastor John H. Prentice dedicated the new Maranatha Gospel Church to the glory of God.

The Fruit of the Spirit

Galatians 5 : 16-26

Part 1

IN Galatians 5 the apostle contrasts life in the flesh with life in the Spirit. They are seen to be as different as day and night and as diverse as the life of a fish from the life of a bird. The world of the flesh is ugly, noisy and violent. Every word used by Paul to describe it paints a separate picture each of which impresses on us the total selfishness and unrestrained vice of the worldly man. It is a scene that revolts us and causes us to lift our hands in horror, but Paul has not exaggerated. His picture is accurate; the works of the flesh (vv. 19-21) are just the same in our day as in his.

Life in the Spirit is seen to be the complete opposite; it is beautiful, quiet and undemonstrative. In the process of growing fruit makes no noise and no fuss. The man living in the Spirit produces a meek, sweet nature that has both power and potential. The words used to describe the characteristics of life in the Spirit (vv. 22, 23) have a gentle ring to them, yet they are sturdy and they demand strength of character and resolute effort to realise their application. Though he may be meek, the spiritual man is not weak. The Fruit of the Spirit grows like the spring flower which silently, but nevertheless forcefully, pushes its way through the soil.

The two realms are in constant opposition to each other (v. 17). To display the Fruit of the Spirit in one's life is to forfeit the popularity of the worldly man, who follows earthly pursuits. The spiritual Christian, whose desire is to walk in the Spirit and to serve God, can expect only enmity and scorn from a world that is completely alien to his experience. He has put the flesh to death (v. 24). His former corrupt nature has been nailed to the cross of Christ. He is a new man with a new nature whose yearning is that the things of the Spirit might come to fruition in his life.

Like the Gifts of the Spirit (1 Corinthians 12 : 8-10), the Fruit of the Spirit is a ninefold list, but there are several differences between the two.

There is the distinction between gifts and fruit. A Gift of the Spirit is given to the believer freely at the pleasure of the Spirit—"as He will." Not every man receives the same Gift, but all nine are distributed throughout the Church (1 Corinthians 12 : 11). The Fruit of the Spirit is not given—it is to be produced. With God's help, the Spirit-filled believer seeks to allow these Christlike qualities to develop in his life.

The Gifts of the Spirit are to empower and to edify the Church; the Fruit is mainly to give character to the individual believer. Galatians 5 : 22, 23, a portrait of the truly Spirit-filled man, reflects the very image of Christ whose perfect manner of life convicted men of their own sinfulness. It radiates the loveliness of One who is "distinguished among ten thousand" (Song of Solomon 5 : 10, R.S.V.) ! It makes us cry—

O Thou Spirit Divine,

All my nature refine,

'Til the beauty of Jesus be seen in me !

For each of the Gifts of the Spirit the Devil has his counterfeit. Evil spirits can fake such blessed Gifts as speaking with tongues and healing the sick, but they would have difficulty in distorting such godly virtues as love, peace and joy. Every believer should covet the Gifts and cultivate the Fruit.

The Galatian list refers to Fruit in the singular, not to "fruits." Some translators and commentators prefer the word "harvest." Both words show the integral nature of the nine Fruits in the life and character of the believer. All nine must be present in his life, otherwise his character is not complete. The instruments of an orchestra rely on each other to give expression to a particular overture, and each Fruit of the Spirit depends on the others for expression in the believer's life. A single flower may impress, but a beautiful bouquet attracts greater attention and gains more admiration.

Jesus said, "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit" (Matthew 7 : 17). Fruit is a sign of health and life and the Fruit of the Spirit is an indication of our spirituality. If we are not living and walking in the Spirit (Galatians 5 : 25), these virtues will be absent and our relationship with God and man will be affected, for the Fruit of the Spirit has both a Godward and a manward aspect. Love is both Godward and manward, as is peace. Joy and faith (or faithfulness) are to do with our relationship to God. Long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness and temperance refer to our dealings with man. How important it is, therefore, that we not only produce the Fruit, but daily give attention to its growth.

Paul declares that the law cannot condemn those who manifest these virtues as they are fulfilling the law in that they do nothing which it forbids (v. 23). The purpose of the law was to restrict the lawless and disobedient (1 Timothy

1 : 9), but men filled with the Spirit need no legal restraints.

God expects a high standard of those whom He fills with His Spirit. May He not be disappointed with us !

Part 1 : Big Bear's decision

Words and drawing

by Sheila Price

FOR many years the Zoto Indians had lived in the mountains. They looked to their chief, Big Bear, for help and guidance, and from him they learned the laws and ways of the land. Big Bear was a great and mighty leader of his tribe, and proudly wore the head-dress of chief—red, green and yellow eagle feathers that reached all the way down his back.

Big Bear was an old man now and he spent most of his time sitting outside his wigwam telling the Indian children of his battles and adventures of long ago. The story he most liked to tell them was how he came to know and to love the Lord Jesus.

"Many moons ago," Big Bear would say, "I was sailing down the forest river in my canoe when it struck a rock. My canoe capsized and I was thrown into the river. Captain Makepeace of the Cavalry was riding by with his men, and when he saw me he ordered his men to help me. I was grateful to Captain Makepeace for saving my life and we became good friends. From the captain I learned of how Jesus was a Friend to Indians as well as to the white man. That is why we Zoto Indians have been at peace with the white man. They have told me so much of Jesus and I love telling you all the Bible stories I have learned."

"We like to hear you tell us Bible stories !" said one of the little Indian children.

"I will tell you another story later," Big Bear said.

Big Bear went inside his wigwam and sat down. He knew that he would not be able to lead his tribe for much longer. He was too old and too weak to walk the mountains in search of food. He knew what he must do. He must elect a new leader for the Zoto Indians. He very much wanted to see his son, Little Bear, become chief. He decided to put Little Bear to the test to see if he was strong and brave enough to become a mighty warrior.

"Tomorrow we shall see," said Big Bear.

This is the victory

A report on his visit to Ghana by Elim Missionary Society Secretary Leslie Wigglesworth

I SAW people overcome a dreadful disappointment by maintaining faith in Christ and by turning a rout into victory. It was the occasion of the great Church of Pentecost convention in Ghana, where over 30,000 people were expected for a four-day period of fellowship.

All preparations were completed. A huge canopy of palm fronds had been erected over bamboo framework and stout planks placed on concrete blocks were in position to receive the crowds. The townsfolk had stocked up with food anticipating an invasion of Christians from all parts of Ghana.

Ministers and elders of the churches had met for the annual conference and this was drawing to a close prior to the convention, when the blow fell. These men were keyed up with expectancy and many of their members were already on the way from far distant corners of Ghana. Our times of ministry with them had been wonderfully blessed and the grace of God had been evident in their discussions. Then the frustrating disappointment came. The police withdrew permission to hold the huge meetings.

Cholera was suspected in the town and first the medical authority, then the police came in like an icy blast to insist on the immediate closure of the convention. Men who had worked in the hot sun for days could not speak their emotions. Already lorry loads of folk were being deposited in the convention grounds and thousands of people were beginning to receive the dulling news that they must turn round and go home. We tried to encourage them, passing from group to group. Our own disappointment was great, but there had already been profitable fellowship and ministry with the conference of ministers which was compensation for the long journey.

Now came the reckoning as the ministers called for a special inquiry into the need for the cancellation of such an important event. Before long the searching and probing began to turn inwards and instead of blaming the authorities outright big men of God examined their hearts and the whole work of God to find out why they had been led into this wilderness. There was no sparing in the diagnosis. Leaders and laymen alike came in for true spiritual scrutiny. Grace with humility were and animals ready for the daily markets which would supply the visitors with food. The public address system and a co-ordinated system of interpretation into five languages was erected and planned to the last detail. The whole area was exercised in the effort to reach a sure knowledge of God's will, and in the end the whole company was groaning before the Lord, unburdening the load in the Spirit. It was tremendously moving.

Then after a time of wrestling and accepting the challenge of this situation the striving turned to the release of praise as one after another voiced the joy of victory. This was a move of faith and the change which came over the ministers was exciting. They all determined to return to their charges with a note of victory and not defeat. Behind the scenes there was a bill of over £2,000 to meet, but God had spoken and the whole Spirit of overcoming swept through the ranks like a deluge. It was triumphant faith in action.

It has been my privilege to visit many churches with David Mills since our return from the convention and God has supercharged the fellowships, so that instead of the spirit of heaviness a garment of praise has enveloped the people—praise the Lord! We shall report more of the visit later.

“Crusade made me walk again,” says pensioner

A SEVENTY-YEAR-OLD pensioner, who has suffered from arthritis for many years and has hardly been able to bend his legs, claims to have been cured by the evangelistic crusade which has come to South Shields.

He is Mr. Cecil Young, who says that a visit to the crusade in Bolingbroke Hall has done for him what over thirty years of medical treatment, including operations, therapy, injections and tablets, has failed to do.

He described what had happened to him when he visited the crusade: “As I went in I was given a healing card and asked to write on it what my complaint was. Then I was told if I wanted to be cured I had to go down to the front. The minister read my card and said prayers over me.

“Then he said ‘Move your knee.’ Before this I could not get it halfway up, but now I just kicked it up. Then he said ‘Run,’ and I ran around like a two-year-old. I ran up and down. I could hardly believe it. I was elated.”

Mr. Young said that the trouble with his leg began before the last war when he broke a toe while at sea as a ship's cook. It never mended properly, and as a result he walked incorrectly and developed arthritis.

“I had three or four operations on my foot, injections in the knee and therapy, but they just could not cure it. My doctor told me I would just have to live with it and make the best of it, because there was nothing that could be done.”

Mr. Young said he has been taking pain-killing tablets for many years. “In fact the last time I went to the doctor he doubled the prescription because they were not doing any good, but there is no point in taking them now.”

He said that it is almost fifteen years since he was last able to kneel down, and last night he was back at Bolingbroke Hall running up and down again and showing how he had been cured.

He puts his cure down to faith and said: “If you have faith and you think that God will do it, He will do it.”

Rev. Alexander Tee, the leader of the crusade, described Mr. Young's cure as “really exciting.”

It was Mr. Tee who prayed over Mr. Young, and he said: “He came in limping and went out running. It was exciting to see the smile of joy on his face.”

Ron Jones recording outside the garden tomb.

Number five in a series of "Thought for the Day" broadcasts by Ron Jones over B.B.C. Radio Bristol was recorded in the garden of the Garden Tomb in Jerusalem. The recording was made at the close of a Sunday morning service. In the background the birds were singing and people were rejoicing.

I HAVE just celebrated the death and resurrection of Jesus. There's nothing unique about that ; millions of people did that at Easter.

What makes my celebration different is that I am standing at the entrance of the Garden Tomb in the heart of Jerusalem, the place where the terrible yet magnificent drama of the first Easter took place. To my right is the spot where Christ was put to death on the cross. The Bible calls it the place of a skull and it looks just like that, a veritable symbol of death. "There they crucified Him," declared John in his Gospel. He had not done anything wrong. I wonder who they were.

There were the Scribes and Pharisees, the church leaders if you like, and the Bible says that they did it because of their vicious envy. There is still a fair bit of envy that goes to church.

There were ordinary folk too. They shouted, "Crucify Him." We still crucify Him by our twentieth-century self-indulgence and the ease with which we ignore the other fellow's desperate need, by rejecting Him and His way of life.

... Where Jesus walked

So Jesus Christ died and was buried, here in this very garden. What a tragedy it would all seem if that were the end of it all.

Even now, there is life all around me in this garden. The birds are singing, the flowers are blooming and men and women are rejoicing, for the stone has been moved from before the sepulchre and Jesus Christ is alive. He is risen. Nearly 2,000 years ago Mary Magdalene came to this very garden to pay her last respects to a dead Jesus, to honour the memory of a good Man. Her eyes were still wet from weeping, her heart was heavy with grief. She could not see why such a good Person had to die. She tenderly placed her little wreath of remembrance and then it happened : "Mary" ! There was no mistaking that voice ; it was He all right. She had come to pay her respects to a dead Jesus, but she met a risen Saviour and just meeting Him made all the difference.

Almost twenty centuries have gone, but people still meet Him, not just in a special spot here in Jerusalem, but in Clifton, Downend, Fishponds, Southmead—all over Bristol and everywhere else, and Jesus Christ is changing their lives, for He is our contemporary Jesus.

When my eldest daughter, Glenys, was no more than four years of age she told her little friend of Jesus. "Jesus was so very good, but wicked men deaded Him." There was sadness in her young voice, but after a short pause she declared with delight, "But you know, He didn't stay deaded !" Her grammar was hopeless, but the message was dynamic. The Son of God came to earth, faced the cross, and through it conquered death, hell and the grave, and this very day He is with us, giving us the invitation to share in His victory.

Divine pruning

OVER the fence in the garden next door is a large bush which last summer bore lovely pink roses. It is in full leaf now, but so far has not been pruned. I look at it with dismay because it is getting leggy, has too many weak shoots and branches which criss-cross and are growing inwards. I am no expert at horticulture, but I learned in Northern Ireland that roses must be pruned by St. Patrick's Day, and remembering with nostalgic pleasure the glorious McCredy's and Dixon's rose gardens, both world-famous rose growers, I admit that Ulster folk know a thing or two about these very popular plants! Roses definitely need to be pruned every spring, but, looking at some which have been attended to, I saw with amazement that the Salisbury Council gardeners had drastically pruned the rose trees in the city gardens and plots, some to within four inches of the ground.

In most gardening manuals extensive coverage is given to the subject of pruning, whether it be of trees, bushes or flowering shrubs, and the whole exercise is designed to make the plant more beautiful, more shapely, more productive of flower or fruit and more vigorous in growth. With roses, whether easy or severe pruning is practised, it is essential that all dead, diseased and old growth be removed. When working on fruit trees and flowering shrubs the gardener must have expert knowledge of the fruiting and flowering habits of each type of tree and shrub. They vary considerably, for some produce flowers on old shoots and some on new ones.

It is a case of "spare the knife and spoil the plant." How wise and apt are the words of the Lord Jesus when teaching His disciples (John 15). In a land geared mainly to agriculture, His followers would readily grasp what the Lord was meaning in vv. 1-3: "I am the True Vine and

My Father is the Vinedresser. Any branch in Me that does not bear fruit—that stops bearing—He cuts away [trims off, takes away]. And He cleanses and repeatedly prunes every branch that continues to bear fruit, to make it bear more and richer and more excellent fruit. You are cleansed and pruned already because of the Word which I have given you—the teachings I have discussed with you" (Amplified Bible).

It is very comforting to accept wholeheartedly that God the Father is the great gardener and He wields the pruning knife and carefully and wisely tends and trims the vine. Surely this indicates that I, as a believer, can safely trust my life to His control. He will shape and cut and train me to be fruitful and beautiful for His glory. We may shrink from the pruning process, for the cutting edge of the knife may hurt and penetrate deeply, but He who prunes does so in love and in order to produce ample fruit in our lives.

I have often heard fellow believers bemoan the fact that unexpected trials and undeserved difficulties dog their paths, and seem inexplicable and disastrous, yet to produce spiritual growth, total abiding in Christ and all the lovely fruit of the Spirit, God has to allow adversity in our lives. He must eliminate all that is unfruitful, dead, un-Christlike, from our characters and this is often very painful.

Are you abiding in the Vine, drawing your life from Him? Are you fully surrendered to the discipline of wise pruning by the masterly skill of God? If this is so you will bear fruit to the glory of God.

"You have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you—I have appointed you, I have planted you—that you might go and bear fruit and keep on bearing; that your fruit may be lasting [that it may remain, abide]" (v. 16, Amplified Bible).

Church reports

DUNDEE

Pastor : H. B. McGowan

"On the confession of your faith I baptise you . . ."—as the thrilling words rang out the congregation of the Dundee church watched yet another dear one follow the Lord through the waters of baptism. The candidates were a girl student, a young man, a young married woman (formerly a Roman Catholic) and Paul McGowan, aged fifteen, the pastor's son.

Prior to immersion each gave a clear, definite testimony as to why they wished to follow the Lord in this fashion. It was abundantly plain that baptism was not a mere religious ritual but an event of great, joyful significance in their Christian experiences.

Pastor McGowan preached a powerful sermon on "Armageddon." The spirit of conviction fell upon the meeting and a young man and a young married woman yielded their lives to Christ. It was a night for rejoicing in the Lord.

BARBARA CANT.

BOURNEMOUTH (Winton)

Pastor : G. N. Backhouse

The Winton Sisterhood held their anniversary on March 16th. Owing to an accident the speaker, Miss Maud Backhouse, was unable to be with us and at very short notice Mrs. Kennedy, of Southampton, stepped into the gap. Members of the Sisterhood sang two items and Mrs. Bailey rendered a solo. About 200 ladies stayed to an excellent tea. In the evening we were pleased to have Pastor J. C. Kennedy as our speaker, and Pastor T. P. Mullen was the soloist, bringing to a close a very happy day.

On the following Sunday evening the Sisterhood again took the platform, the members singing two items and Mrs. Ballard being the soloist. Miss Ruth Bailey gave the closing message.

We praise God for the blessing received during these special services.

Worldliness and separation

Romans chapter 12

OUR bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 3:16,17). Man is made up of three parts: the physical—the body, world-conscious; the personality—the soul, self-conscious; the spirit, God-conscious.

It is necessary to get things in the right order. Christians are not body-controlled or personality-controlled but Spirit-controlled. Then the three parts work together in perfect harmony.

God's laws are sensible (Leviticus 13:46). Old Testament laws were very strict. The Israelites had to wash in running water. We know now how sensible this was, for even in our hospitals we do just this. Those with contagious diseases had their place outside the camp, an early form of isolation.

The Bible laws are about not worrying, forgiveness of sin, giving to others, the law of love, loving our enemies, etc. These laws are just as practical to the body as to the soul and spirit.

As a young man, John D. Rockefeller sen, was strong and husky. When he entered business he drove himself hard. At thirty-three he made his first million dollars. By consecrating every waking moment to his work he controlled, at forty-three, the biggest business in the world. When he was fifty-three he was the world's only billionaire and the richest man on earth, but he had bartered his happiness and health. He developed alopecia. He looked like a mummy. His weekly income was 1,000,000 dollars, but his digestion was so bad that he could eat only crackers and milk. Ida Tarbell wrote of him: "He had an awful age in his face. He was the oldest man that I have ever seen."

It was generally agreed that he would not live for another year. Newspaper writers had his obituary written and ready in the files. Then he made a startling discovery. He would not be able to take even one of his dimes with him. John D. did some thinking. In the long sleepless nights for the first time in his life he recognised that money was not to be hoarded but to be shared. He lost no time in transforming his money into blessings to others. We can thank John D. every time our lives are saved by an injection of penicillin because his contributions aided the discovery.

Rockefeller at fifty-three started to practise one of God's eternal laws (Luke 6:38), and he reaped its promised benefits, for he lived until he was ninety-eight!

"Medical science recognises that emotions such as fear, sorrow, envy, resentment and hatred are responsible for the majority of our sicknesses. Estimates vary from sixty per cent to nearly 100 per cent. Emotional stress can cause high blood pressure, toxic goitre, migraine, arthritis, apoplexy, heart trouble, gastro-intestinal ulcers, and other serious diseases too numerous to mention. Doctors can prescribe medicine for the symptoms of these diseases, but we cannot do much for the underlying causes—emotional turmoil. It is lamentable that peace does not come in capsules" (Dr. S. I. McMillen, M.D.). How important it is that we should obey God's laws, because they have as their basis our ultimate good, the good of body, personality and Spirit!

Dedication includes the whole being: the body—energy, money habits; the soul—talents, thinking, friends; the spirit—worship, control, love.

There are some questions that as Christians we should always be asking: not "Where should I go?" but "Why am I going?"; not "What should I do?" but "How and what motives?"; not only "Is this right?" but "How much time?"

Sometimes what is right for one is wrong for another. The way in which God leads your friend may not be the way in which He will lead you.

How do we get our motives right? If we were wholeheartedly given over to God then often the questions like "What should I do?" "Should I go here?" "Should I stay away from that?" would never arise. Even "Should I buy this or that?" would often be resolved, for our money, time and talents would be involved in His service.

If you want to be a well-adjusted person, spiritually, personality-wise and in your body then "Be not conformed to this world: but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" (Romans 12:2). "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report . . . think on these things" (Philippians 4:8).

Notes
by
J. R. Brown

Monday, May 15th

1 Samuel 13: 1-23

"The Lord hath sought Him a man" (v. 4).

The events recorded in chapters 11 and 12 happened in the first year of Saul's reign. Saul is called "a young man" (9: 2); now Jonathan, Saul's son, is a fully fledged warrior (13: 2, 3), hence some twenty years must have passed in silence since the events of chapter 12. Saul formed a small standing army, while the rest of the people were dismissed until needed—an important development. He made his first and greatest mistake. Success went to his head. Humility gave place to pride, rebellion replaced patience, and he offered sacrifice, which was the exclusive function of priests. This act was a sign of Saul's self-importance. There can be no room for self in the Spirit-filled life.

Tuesday, May 16th

1 Samuel 14: 1-15

"The Lord hath delivered them into our hand" (v. 10).

Unknown to others, Jonathan and his armour-bearer engaged in one of the most gallant actions that history records. The place where Jonathan crossed into the enemy camp is still recognisable from the two conical hills on each side. "Bozez" means shining, because the sun shone that side, and "Senah" means acacia and the valley still has acacia trees. Wisely, Jonathan would not embark on such a seemingly foolish adventure unless God was with him; accordingly he sought for a sign (v. 10). The success of the dangerous scheme was aided by the panic that struck the enemy and by the shock of the earthquake (v. 15). One with God is a majority. If He be for us, who can be against us?

Wednesday, May 17th

1 Samuel 14: 16-30

"Saul talked unto the priest" (v. 19).

When Jonathan's absence was discovered Saul inquired of the Lord. The original indicates: "Bring hither the ephod" (R.V., margin). Saul called Ahiah to consult the Urim and Thummim (Exodus 28: 30; 1 Samuel 28: 6), but characteristically impatience caused him not to wait for the answer. Saul considered that the season for consultation with God was past and that the time for prompt action had arrived. Time spent waiting on God is never wasted. Sometimes our hurried activities for God are prompted by the work of man rather than by the moving of the Spirit. Saul made his second mistake in announcing a foolish, rash oath, a demand which weakened and hindered Israel (vv. 24-30).

Thursday, May 18th

1 Samuel 14: 31-52

"Sin not against the Lord" (v. 34).

When the period of the oath had expired a greater transgression was committed, because in their desperate condition the people broke the Mosaic law by eating meat with the blood (Leviticus 17: 10-14). They were conscientious in keeping the king's order for fear of the curse (1 Samuel 14: 24), but they had no scruple in defying God's command. Rashly, Saul was about to put his own son to death because of Jonathan's transgression, albeit in ignorance and involving no guilt (v. 44), but the more enlightened conscience of the army prevented Saul's tarnishing the glory of the day by shedding the blood of the man whom God had used in victory. When our wisdom is from God our actions and witness will be wise.

Friday, May 19th

1 Samuel 15: 1-16

"He is turned back from following me" (v. 11).

After the warning of 13: 13, 14 had produced no repentance, Saul was given a final test. He was specially warned to heed verse 1 and to obey verse 3, but without result. This chapter is the connecting link between Saul's history and David's. Amalek, sentenced long ago for wickedness toward Israel (Numbers 24: 20, Deuteronomy 25: 17-19) was to be utterly destroyed without reservation or exception. By partial compliance with, but wilful violation of God's command, Saul showed his selfish, arbitrary nature, his love of despotic power and his utter unfitness to perform the duties of the king of Israel. Only in sincerity and utter obedience can we know the blessing of God.

Saturday, May 20th

1 Samuel 15: 17-35

"To obey is better than sacrifice" (v. 22).

When Saul was modest and humble (v. 17), God exalted him to the throne; now he arrogantly set aside God's conditions (vv. 18, 19). Saul was either blinded by delusive self-love, or he was an artful hypocrite. His statement brought a stern rebuke from Samuel (vv. 22, 23). Although he confessed his sin, Saul's words do not appear to have been sincere; he blamed the people and was too eager to stand with them instead of on his own feet before God (vv. 24, 25). The accidental rending of Samuel's garment remarkably symbolised the rending of Saul's kingdom. True religion in the heart is better than an outward show of formal ceremonies, for God looks within.

Sunday, May 21st

John 14: 15-31

"We will . . . make our abode with Him" (v. 23).

Love issues in obedience to the Word and fellowship with God (v. 15), whereby we receive the indwelling power of the Spirit. This portion reveals the prayer of the Son (v. 16), the promise of the Father (v. 24), and the person and power of the Holy Spirit (v. 26). The prayer seems to have been designed to teach that the proper temple for the indwelling Spirit is a heart filled with love. "Comforter," or "Advocate" means "one called to the side of," i.e. one who strengthens, not only by consolation, but by revealing the nature and work of Jesus. The function of the Spirit is to convince

THE NEW ENGLISH BIBLE ON GOD'S OFFER TO CAIN

by J. T. Bradley

SECRETARY-GENERAL

NEW translations of the Bible are always fascinating if only that they so often pull us up with a jerk at some well-known passage that may have lost its power to grip us simply because we have become so familiar with it.

Even when translations are found on investigation to be mistranslations or even wrong translations, the investigation only brings out more forcibly the true meaning of the word or text under consideration. Such is the case with the New English Bible's rendering of the story of Cain and Abel. Here the translation, or, at least, what is an attempt at a paraphrase, completely hides the facts that the way of salvation was known to the first family, and that the One who was eventually to come to save was as well known to them as was the one who had deceived them.

The Authorised Version of God's conversation with Cain after his offering had been rejected reads, "Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen? If thou doest well shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door. And unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him." The N.E.B. reads, "If you do well you are accepted; if not, sin is a demon crouching at the door. It shall be eager for you and you will be restored by it." That the translators were confused by this passage is seen in their footnote which gives as an alternative to, "you will be mastered by it," "but you must master it."

There is no reference whatever to a demon in the passage as it stands in Hebrew, but the translators realised that some living entity was involved; it "crouched at the door," or, it "lay at the door," presumably of Cain's dwelling. Both versions agree and express the idea in quite strong language, particularly the N.E.B., that the desire of this living entity would be towards Cain.

Sin is not a living entity, though sin is closely involved here; hence, because the word for sin is used, the N.E.B. translators personified it as a demon. We are glad to have this admission by the translators of the N.E.B. that a living entity "crouching at the door" is involved here.

We are also glad to have the admission by the same translators that the desire of this living entity would be towards Cain, in the words, "it shall be eager for you," or as the Authorised Version has it "his desire shall be unto you."

Then, out of the confusion of the last clause of the N.E.B.: "and you will be mastered by it"—quite clearly this is a guess to fit in with their interpretation of the passage—or their alternative translation in their footnote: "but you must master it," our Authorised Version may be given full marks for "and you will rule over him," though the word "rule," having today the connotation of governorship, may be considered too strong. The idea would seem to be: "and you may do with it as you wish."

It is hard to imagine that the translators had not taken into consideration the fact that the word translated sin here is translated scores of times elsewhere "sin offering." One wonders why so obvious a translation was not accepted.

If it was considered and was rejected, it would seem to be only on the ground that so clear a foreshadowing of redemption was not acceptable to them.

The marvel of this story is brought out as we read God saying to Cain, "Why art thou wroth . . . if thou doest well shalt thou not be accepted?" That is God saying, "Come now and let us reason together." "And if thou doest not well," on returning home there will be a sin offering, a lamb or a kid, crouching at your door: "My lamb," provided by Me, "He will follow you around wherever you go," or, as the Bible puts it "His desire shall be unto thee"; and Cain, you can do with Him as you wish; accept Him and offer Him, or you can reject Him.

The story is complete. Redemption was revealed to the first family; a foreshadowing of the revelation to the whole human family that God's Lamb has been provided and may now be accepted or rejected.

(16:8), to witness (15:26) and to teach (16:13). "Abode" (v. 23) is literally "home, dwelling place." Father, Son and Spirit dwell in us, their home. Pentecost is not just a feast, it is a daily experience of God's presence in us.

"Ye shall receive power"

by A. Cecil Jarvis

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, BARNSELY

IT is evident that the Early Church was dynamic, virile, explosive, aggressive, expanding. The solid Jericho walls of opposition fell before the Apostles. The swirling Red Sea waters of difficulties fled before the invading forces of the newly formed Church. Satan was as powerless as King Canute before the tide of Holy Ghost power. Jewish persecution, Roman indifference, Grecian scorn and even Satanic onslaught failed to prevent the ever-onward movement. Imprisonment, flogging, stocks, martyrdom could not halt the march. The very enemies of the Church had to confess: "These . . . have turned the world upside down" (though they were turning the world the right way up!). They caused trade riots, rocked the comfortable thinking of the Athenian philosophers, shocked the Jewish religionists. While many of their number were of the rank and file, doctors, philosophers, business people, government and city officials, army officers and the like were drawn into their ranks. Why? How was it that in so short a time the whole Roman empire was permeated by the influence of Christianity?

The answer is in the fulfilment of the promise of the Lord Jesus: "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Thus from a small band of frightened people hiding behind barred doors in Jerusalem there emerged a force that is still shaking the world: people filled with the Holy Spirit proclaiming and demonstrating the glorious full Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Power is exciting; it can be formidable. In the dim, unrevealed ages of the past, Satan sought to grasp the place of power from the Almighty. Is not that desire inherent in fallen man? Men seek power through wealth, force, politics. They often seek to wield authority over fellow men because of the intoxication of position and the elation of lording it over others. By contrast, the secret of the power of the Church of Christ is the Spirit of God working in the midst, not for political power but for the spiritual kingdom of God, the Holy Spirit filling believers with His power. The power is supernatural, as its source is in God. The dynamic of the early believers was this supernatural power which enabled them to do the impossible through the strength of the Almighty. The lame walked, blind eyes were opened, the demon-possessed were liberated, prison doors were flung open, the dead were brought back to life and thousands upon thousands were converted. Though there were no church buildings as we know them, companies of saints gathered in groups in towns and cities throughout the Roman empire.

The Acts of the Apostles is a thrilling record of the acts of the Holy Spirit. Evidence of the miraculous abounds. People must have gasped at what took place before their very eyes. Even so, it takes more than a physical miracle performed by the Holy Spirit to bring a man to Christ. It can be a mistake to pray only for miracles, thinking that these in themselves will bring men to salvation. There is real danger in seeking the sensational without the spiritual, as the seven sons of Sceva found to their cost when they sought to exorcise an evil spirit. They became the laughing stock of the locality when the demon declared, "Paul I know, Jesus I know, but who are you?" and then, through the possessed man, beat them up! "Ye shall receive power . . . and be witnesses unto Me" was the promise of the Lord. Thus miracles, wonderful as they are, are the servants of the witness to Christ, a confirmation of the Word, as expressly stated by our Lord in Mark 16.

What is so outstanding about the record of the Acts is not only the supernatural healings, but the power of the Spirit manifest in their witnessing. Youthful Stephen, apprehended because of the jealousy of the local religious Jews, was put on trial for blasphemy. The fifty-three verses recording his defence in Acts 7 are power-packed with Holy Ghost dynamic. Such power is irresistible. Prosecution and bench alike were "cut to the heart." Similarly, on the Day of Pentecost, the multitude was convicted of sin. When Paul reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment with Governor Felix it was not a philosophical discourse or even the declaration of Christian truth that made the ruler tremble, but the power of the Holy Spirit applying that truth. Writing to the Thessalonian believers later Paul declared: "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost" (1 Thessalonians 1:5).

David Brainerd despaired of reaching the hearts of the Indians, but, as he pleaded with God, the Spirit made his words a hammer, breaking down stolid indifference with Divine conviction. Only the Spirit of God could make the tears wash grooves down the grimy faces of the Kingswood miners as Wesley preached. Only the Spirit of God could cause the members of the Church of Jonathan Edwards to try to climb the pillars of the church to escape the flames of hell that seemed to engulf them as he read his sermon by candle-light.

That such men had power with God and with men none can deny. Miracles are an essential, God-given part of Pentecostal ministry, and we need to see more of that power working, but miracles will cease when the Church has finished her work on earth. The power manifested through the conviction and conversion of souls results in an eternally lasting work.

Well may we seek the source of such power. It is recorded of Jacob after he spent a night in conflict with God: "As a prince hast thou power with God and with men" (Genesis 32:28). This crisis in the life of the Patriarch sets forth a principle. The secret of his power is revealed in the change of name from Jacob to Israel. "Jacob" denotes a cunning, scheming, selfish man. "Israel" is made up "Isra"—ruled and "El"—God; thus the meaning of the word is: "Ruled by God." Jacob tarried all night in prayer and prayer did not just change things—it changed him! From the self-centred, self-controlled, self-contained Jacob, he became subject to God, submissive, controlled. As such, he had power with God and with men, for the one follows the other.

Dispensations change but principles remain. To know the power of God in our lives today necessitates seeking as did Jacob, tarrying as did the first disciples. It means the surrender of the old life and the acceptance of the new life which has no room for the personal ambitions of John and James, or the self-sufficiency of Peter manifested in the earlier days of their discipleship. Would we know power with men? Then let us tarry "until we be endued with power from on high." Nothing else will penetrate the indifference of this plastic age. No other force will bring conviction of sin in this age oblivious of its iniquities. No other power can challenge this day when it seems that all the forces of hell are let loose to destroy men.

In speaking of the Church collectively remember that the Church consists of individuals. It follows that each member of the Early Church knew this dynamic power of God personally. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost and spoke with other tongues. "All" included not only the apostles, but the rank and file, the women as well as the men. In Acts 4:31 it is recorded again: "they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and spake the word of God with boldness."

There are times when we succumb to the temptation into which Gideon fell. He felt secure and clever threshing corn by the wine-press. No Moabite oppressor would expect to find him doing this there. He would have enough to eat for himself, though his country was hungry and needy. To justify himself when God challenged him, he asked "Where be all the miracles which our fathers told us of?" It is easy to ask questions like this in times of spiritual dearth, to thresh enough corn for ourselves in our hiding-places and complain that things are not what they were. In reply to Gideon came the challenge that he was to be the deliverer. The Spirit of God came upon him (Judges 6:34) and he wrought a mighty deliverance in Israel.

Are we questioning where the power is today? Do not blame others—accept God's challenge for you. The Spirit of God will come upon all who will surrender and then dare to act in His name. Let every believer at this Whitsuntide seek a new infilling of the Holy Spirit. With every member of Elim filled anew we would burst through the seams of our ideas and limitations and see the miracle-working God demonstrating His power with signs and wonders, and, above all, His power to change sinners to saints, bring life to the dead and turn the world the right way up in our generation.

LONGTON

Pastor : F. J. Day

It was a privilege to have the fellowship and ministry of the word from Pastors L. W. Green and J. Tetchner during our Easter convention and a great joy to feel the presence of the Lord.

Many gathered from far and near to remember the death and resurrection of Jesus. Pastor Green encouraged our hearts with the wonderful care of our Lord and helped three people into the experience of the baptism in the Holy Spirit, for which we praise the Lord. Pastor Tetchner spoke of the need for dedicated Christians to stand for the Lord.

On Monday we were greatly moved by the singing of our friend Peter Bakewell, of Nottingham, who in his rousing, exhilarating manner stirred the hearts of all when he sang "I am a soldier."

Our convention reached its climax on Monday evening when our minister led the congregation in the hymn "All to Jesus I surrender." We praise God for His goodness and blessing throughout the weekend.

Pastor : G. R. Knight

Last autumn it was decided to commence regular youth meetings under the title of "Teens and Twenties." The attendance has been most encouraging and the young folk eagerly anticipate these services.

In March a special youth weekend was arranged and Pastor Keith Lannon was the guest speaker. On Saturday evening a film entitled "Flipside," high-lighting the emptiness of life without Christ, was shown, followed by a coffee bar and a brief message from the guest speaker. The R.A.F. Cadet Band, St. Athan, and musical groups from Gloucester also participated. The Sunday proved to be a day of rich blessing as the Scriptures came alive. We shall not soon forget Mr. Lannon's challenging messages. Items by local youth and by a party of young friends from Caerphilly drew this blessed weekend to a close. As the gospel appeal was made ten responded and six were counselled in the coffee bar.

The Saturday and Sunday evening services were ably convened by Mr. Graham Weston.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA Pastor : A. Nicolson

A Junior Crusader Youth Club was started to provide a weeknight activity for young people. On the first day of the venture colourful invitation cards were distributed at local schools. The response was extremely encouraging, ninety children attending the first meeting. On the following week over 100 were present.

Pastor Nicolson, assisted by an enthusiastic team of workers, presents a fast-moving programme. The meeting, which lasts for one hour, always commences with the club chorus, "I've got joy." It is followed by Bible word-games, flannelgraphs and a variety of quizzes. Awards for attendance and refreshments once a month are further incentives.

On the evening the writer was present the Presbytery Youth Commissioner, Pastor W. R. West, gave an interesting talk. Pastor Nicolson's well-devised quiz games were obviously very popular and maintained the interest of the youngsters.

We thank God that this worth-while work has been established and pray that the boys and girls will come to know Christ as their Saviour.

BLACKPOOL, Marton Pastor : R. Clarke

Recently we held our third anniversary services to commemorate the opening of our new church.

These meetings were well supported. Friends from neighbouring churches along with their ministers were present. The rich blessing of the Lord rested upon these meetings.

Our speaker was Pastor John Seaman from our Wigan assembly, whose ministry we thoroughly enjoyed. Musical items were provided by our own choir, by Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Booker and by "Their Master's Voice," a young people's gospel group from Fleetwood.

At the end of each meeting Pastor Seaman conducted waiting meetings for those seeking the baptism in the Holy Ghost. Seven received and spoke in other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. Many others who had already received were mightily blessed.

NORTH OF THE BORDER

Members of the London Crusader Choir formed part of a fifty-voice male voice choir from London on the occasion of their visit to Glasgow in connection with the fortieth anniversary services in that city. Pastor D. B. Gray was guest conductor throughout the weekend. On Sunday morning Mr. Gray and a section of the choir enjoyed rich fellowship and ministry at our Paisley church. Record crowds attended the Saturday festival, which included stirring testimonies and inspiring praise from a united chorus of some 200 men.

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ERDINGTON,

OPPORTUNITIES to continue the work of interviewing have given me more experiences. One is grateful for the appreciation one receives for writing of them.

This was particularly true of my visit to Chelmsford for the Easter convention, for they specifically requested that I should relate my experiences on the Saturday night, which I did, seeking to encourage the friends on personal witnessing. I was able to advise some on how to witness in their particular field of business. One witty member asked me if an undertaker would witness by dropping a tract in the coffin. I pointed out that it was too late for the one in the coffin, but he could always give a suitable tract to each mourner, as I do at every funeral I conduct. I know of one Christian undertaker who witnesses to the bereaved in this way.

It was great to be back in the Royal Albert Hall for Easter Monday and especially good to listen to our own Elim ministers. How I would have loved to have preached my Easter Sunday night's message to the crowd that had gathered! I wonder if other Elim preachers feel the same way. With a message like ours, we re-echo the words of Wesley: "Oh that the world might taste and see the riches of His grace"!

I heard after the Sunday night service at Chelmsford that one man who responded had never been to church in his life before, which I thought was incredible.

I was touched by the love and prayers for Ken Tween in that assembly. He was seriously ill with a blood complaint. He conducted the choir over Easter, until he was rushed into hospital on the Sunday afternoon. It was a joy to see the radiance of his face. His brother, a press photographer, took me round familiar scenes at the local newspaper office. When he offered to take a photograph of me, I reminded him that it was more than justice I needed—it was mercy!

I returned home to conduct a survey among executives of The Birmingham Mail and the B.B.C. and reminded both bodies of Elim's existence in Birmingham, with special mention of the Bingley Hall rallies in June. I find that Elim churches are much more widely known in the Birmingham area than in Lancashire. The Jeffreys's campaign between the wars is still remembered by the older generation. It must have been a mighty move and we long for something on

Part 2 : Little Bear is put to the test

NEXT day the braves and squaws gathered outside Big Bear's wigwam. When they saw the sun rise over the mountains they beat on their drums as a signal to their chief that it was time to begin. Big Bear came out of his wigwam leading his son by his hand. "Well, Little Bear," he said. "You are a good son and have learned well. Now it is up to you to show yourself worthy. Remember all I have taught you and you will not fail."

Little Bear's first test was to chop down a tree by himself. When he had done this he had to cut off the largest branch and sail on this down the swirling river. Chopping down the tree wasn't too hard, though it was tiring work, but when it came to sailing down the river Little Bear was very nervous. The river was flowing fast and he had difficulty in keeping his balance, but he did not fall off. The Indians were delighted. "Well done, Little Bear!" they shouted.

All through the long, hot day Little Bear did all the tasks and tests that the Indians put before him. He was glad that he had been able to pass them all, for some were very difficult. Many times he felt like giving up, but he kept going. Little Bear knew that if he failed any of the tests he had failed for all time. There would be no second chance for him.

It was getting very dark in the mountains now and there was just one more test left for Little Bear to do, the test that he feared most of all.

Christ's blueprint for His Church

by E. J. LIPTON

E. John Lipton entered the teaching profession in 1947 after almost six years in the Royal Army Medical Corps. He received his personal Pentecost fifteen years ago at P. G. Parker's Guest House in Devon. Joining the local Assemblies of God church in Dover, he became the pastor three years later. During the twelve years of his pastorate a new church building has been erected free of debt.

NESTLING in the foothills of snowcapped Mount Hermon, amid surroundings of great natural beauty, Cæsarea Philippi has been immortalised as the scene of Peter's momentous declaration of the Messiahship of Jesus: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (see Matthew 16: 13-18). In His reply, the Master uttered the Divine charter for the true Church for all time. Obscured for centuries by the swirling mists of erroneous ecclesiastical dogma, these glorious words of Christ are acquiring new significance and relevance as the mighty winds of a new, Holy Ghost visitation are sweeping the globe.

Lofty in its spiritual grandeur as Mount Hermon itself, this Divine utterance towers above the great events transpiring both in Christendom and in the world at large: "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Sole foundation

A clarification of the play upon two similar Greek words brings out the precise significance of Christ's words: "Peter," Greek petros, means a sling or a boundary stone that can be moved;

"rock," Greek petra, indicates a crag or mighty outcrop of the earth's rock. Professor Blaiklock paraphrases the verse thus: "Peter, you are a rock easily moved, but your words are a crag, a granite mount, and on its solidity My Church shall stand." Thirty years later, when writing his First Letter, Peter declared that the Church's foundation is Christ: that living Stone unto whom we have come in repentance, and in whom we, as lesser living stones, are built into a spiritual house, founded exclusively and eternally upon that Chief Corner Stone, Jesus Christ (1 Peter 2: 4-7). Paul, to whom was entrusted the revelation of this mystical building, the Church, declared: "For other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 3: 11). Nowhere in Scripture can we find any support for the misguided claims made on behalf of Peter or his supposed successors invested with alleged Papal authority.

Spiritual fusion

When He said to Peter: "I will build My church," Christ categorically affirmed that His was to be the sole prerogative of fusing together those endlessly diverse "living stones" quarried out of the masses of fallen humanity. His mystical oneness with the Father was to be the measure of the true Church's unity. In Him alone "the whole structure is joined together, and grows into a holy temple in the Lord." This vital fusion takes place only as we are members, not of a carnal organisation but of a supernatural organism. As there was "neither hammer nor axe, nor any tool of iron heard" while Solomon's temple was being built, so Christ's spiritual Temple is being built silently, surely and solely by Him—built for a habitation of God through the Spirit.

Never have the words of Jesus to Peter been more apposite than now in the context of the contemporary movement to weld together a so-called world-wide ecumenical church.

Passing, as Paul does, so easily from the metaphor of the Church as a building to that of a body, the exclusive nature of Christ's Headship over the Church is even more clearly demonstrated. From the moment of conception, every stage of embryonic growth and development is miraculously predetermined. The wonders of cell mitosis and genetic control as affecting the growing organism have been revealed to us by modern medical science. "Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and knit me together with bones and sinews," declared Job (Job 10 : 11, R.S.V.), while David asserts graphically : "Thou didst knit me together in my mother's womb" (Psalm 139 : 13, R.S.V.).

Any interference with, or impairment of, the wonderful pre-natal development of the foetus results only in a tragically malformed, subnormal or stunted organism. No ecclesiastical hierarchy, however exalted or powerful, will ever be allowed to abrogate to itself the exclusive function of the one Head of the Church. "The Lord added to the Church" was the supernatural activity which determined the true growth of the Early Church. We are only too happy that this should be universally recognised in our Full Gospel churches !

Special function

Memorably summarised in 1 Corinthians 12, Paul clearly viewed this mystical Body as being "tempered together by God." As with any natural organism, so with the Body of Christ : it can only function efficiently and effectively as the organic unity of the various parts is maintained. Special offices and ministries have been set in this Body by the Holy Spirit in order that it might function according to the predetermined pattern of the Head of the Church. In addition to the vital ministry gifts listed in Ephesians 4, there are the nine Gifts of the Spirit tabulated in 1 Corinthians 12. Here is no artificially created distinction between clergy and laity. The supernatural physiology of this Body is that of a mutually enriching, mightily enfolding and marvellously expanding function of Divinely-ordained, powerfully-operating ministries. Beset by cruel, Satanic foes, her pathway slippery with the blood of thousands of martyrs, nothing could impede the triumphant, onward march of the Early Church : "So mightily grew the Word of God and prevailed." As the last great double effusion of the Spirit in the early and the latter rain seems to be overspreading our tortured, travailing world, we can be assured that His Church is fulfilling His own special function for her, as she prepares for the speedy return of her absent Lord.

Sublime future

Are the forces of evil at work on an unprecedented scale ? Are we tempted to cry with the Psalmist : "Hath God forgotten to be gracious ? Hath He in anger shut up His tender mercies ?" ? Then let us hear once again these stirring words of Christ concerning His invincible Church : "THE GATES OF HELL SHALL NOT PREVAIL AGAINST IT" ! The Church dormant is becoming the Church militant and, ere long, it will be the Church triumphant. Then John's vision of a redeemed, raptured, radiant Church will be gloriously fulfilled.

'Tis the church triumphant singing,
Worthy the Lamb.

Then, in spite of the centuries of devilish schemes and strategies implicit in our Lord's words, on that blissful day of the long-awaited consummation His Church will be presented to Him, glorious, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing. As Paul teaches in Ephesians, this is supremely the motivating purpose underlying Christ's relationship to the Church : "that He might sanctify and cleanse it." Hence, the wondrous future of those who are, by the grace of God, part of this Church has an immediate as well as an ultimate implication. One of the cleansing agents He is using in our lives is the laver of the Word. In his exposition of Ephesians 5 : 26, Professor W. Barclay refers to a marriage custom prevalent among the ancient Greeks. In a stream sacred to the local goddess, the bride-to-be would ceremonially bathe her person, thereby ensuring that she was, according to their belief, free from all impurity. So in reality, we who are part of the Bride of Christ can know daily, progressively, that deep inner cleansing by the laver of the Word, as we allow the Holy Spirit to apply it to our hearts.

To those assured from the Word of God concerning the Church's glorious future, no earthly, grandiloquent schemes of man for an imposing but imposed world-wide church can have any attraction. One day, we know that these our vile bodies shall be changed : "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed" ! Sing it ! Shout it ! Live in daily anticipation of that thrilling cry : "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh."

BOLTON, South Shields, Weston-super-Mare and Blackpool are places about which reports have appeared or will appear because of crusades conducted there by John G. Cooper, Alexander Tee, Ron Jones and Laurence E. Lambert. We are delighted to publish these accounts and we rejoice in the wonderful way in which God has undertaken and blessed. We shall all pray for the new church at South Shields and for its minister, Pastor A. P. Johnston. News is not to hand as to details, but it is intended to open a church at Weston-super-Mare and a follow-up hall has been arranged.

We would like to do all we can to press home the urgency of evangelism. These crusades consist of one to strengthen the local church conducted by a visiting evangelist, two pioneer crusades, and one in his own church by one whom we may describe as the "pastor-evangelist." Outreach at these various levels is good. It cannot be said too often that we must fight on all fronts. No one area is deserving of all our attention and "fire power." For all ages, in all places, at all times, under all conditions—these are the challenges behind Christ's call: "all the world . . . every creature."

Some have challenged the expression "Evangelism is our life blood," but whatever the niceties of the usage of language in this respect there is a deep underlying truth. The daunting and at the same time glorious fact is that we have to add considerably to our ranks to stay where we are—daunting because apparent gains can turn out to be but replacements, but glorious since fresh folk thus receive the new birth. Every church needs to have expansion as its desire and aim even to sustain its witness at its present numerical strength and what is true locally is right when applied in principle to the movement at large.

Our vision should be more than this, of course. We must really advance. Our spirit must be that of Paul when he wrote: "And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved" (2 Corinthians 12:15). Our country needs Christ as never before. We need a mighty move forward in the power of the Holy Spirit. Thank you for all your prayer and financial support of our evangelistic efforts. Let us go farther. We must. The time is short.

Book review

The Pentecostals, by Walter J. Hollenweger. Published by S.C.M. Press Ltd., at £6.75.

"To my friends and teachers in the Pentecostal Movement who taught me to love the Bible and to my teachers and friends in the Presbyterian Church who taught me to understand it." So run the dedicatory lines of this book: they may be taken to indicate the writer's approach to his subject. His treatment of the supposed contradiction between 2 Samuel 24:1 and 1 Chronicles 21:1, for example, apparently reflects his Presbyterian understanding of the Bible (pp. 302-304). British Pentecostals will be surprised to read the following: "with the Pentecostal Movement there is a minority, small indeed, but not to be underestimated, which has become weary of these fundamentalist cries. Among them is Donald Gee, though he was once theologically a fundamentalist." As far as we who knew D. Gee to the day of his death are aware he lived and died theologically a fundamentalist.

The professor is at pains to set forth the Elim Pentecostal Church as an example, par excellence apparently, of the charismatic versus legalistic dichotomy theory, setting forth George Jeffreys as the charismatic leader, inhibited by constitutional legalism. To those of us in the Elim Pentecostal Church who saw the issues at stake from the inside from 1926 onwards how different is the reality.

The number of Pentecostals in the world in the 1890s would not exceed, we think, some few thousands at most. Today the Pentecostals are numbered in millions—estimated at between 20,000,000 and 30,000,000 throughout the world. Taking into account the Pentecostals who have died during this period, we realise the colossal nature of this twentieth-century move of the Holy Spirit. This vast movement is covered by Professor Hollenweger in some 240 pages. Of the remainder of the book some 230 pages are given to Pentecostal belief and practice and there are also some 120 pages of references and bibliography. In the very nature of the case the treatment of such a wide subject in so small a compass must be but sketchy.

The massive quotation of sources may give the impression of thorough research. Regarding the professor's treatment of British Pentecost—forty-two pages—we may comment that if it is any indication of his treatment of world Pentecost the book is an inadequate account of what Pentecostalism is and does.

The blurb states that Professor Hollenweger "constantly refers to their own writings and compares them with the accounts of opponents or of neutral observers." History books demonstrate that historians should know not only the writings, but also the writers and their points of view.

Professor Hollenweger concludes his first paragraph on British Pentecostals, page 176, "It should be stressed that there has been no room to provide an exhaustive account of the three examples," his reference to the "three largest . . . groups." The sketchy account that is substituted for "exhaustive accounts" presents a completely unrealistic picture of the rise and present state of British Pentecostalism. The question arises, is this true of the whole book?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Walker,

It was a great delight to me personally to see the photograph of Mr. and Mrs. S. Crawford, of the Brookeborough assembly in Northern Ireland. I would like to salute them in this brief letter and wish them God's richest blessing in the days to come.

Brookeborough was my second church in Elim, around January 1941. I was there for about a year and a half and I look back on my stay there as both enjoyable and profitable for me as a rather immature pastor. I found in brother and sister Crawford a real "father and mother in Israel" and their home was one where the presence and love of God were always in evidence. Indeed it was by their fireside that God graciously granted to me "the promise of the Father" around the midnight hour one winter's evening. I made known to brother Sam my own weakness and lack of power and, during a time of prayer together, I received the wonderful coming upon of the Spirit. Thank God for such faithful saints of God and may God bless the work at Brookeborough!

Yours very sincerely,

W. J. MAYBIN.

The Fruit of the Spirit

Galatians 5 : 22, 23

by William McCandless

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LISBURN, NORTHERN IRELAND

Part 2

THE use of fruit as a metaphor is very common in the Bible. In John 15 it is the evidence of the believer abiding in Christ, whereas in Galatians 5 it is the evidence of the Spirit abiding in the believer.

Love. Towering above the ninefold list is love. Without love the Gifts of the Spirit are meaningless and defective (1 Corinthians 13) and the Fruit of the Spirit is non-existent, for love embraces all other virtues. Love is not just an emotion; it is an exercise of the mind and will. It means doing to others as you would have them do to you and carries the thought of seeking the very best even for our enemies. The carnal man finds this impossible but, with personal endeavour and the help of God, the Christian is able to fulfil the law (Galatians 5 : 14). The baptism in the Holy Spirit means nothing if it is not balanced in the believer by love for God and his fellow men.

Joy. This is joy in God alone. It cannot be occasioned by the pleasures of the world or by one's own achievements; it is the deep and unspeakable "joy of the Lord." Whatever the circumstances, the believer finds his delight in the things of God. As Paul says: "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Romans 14 : 17).

Peace. When our lives have been taken over by the Lord Jesus we are under new management. We are like a country that has had a change of government. Under the old regime the country had been at war, but under the new an era of tranquillity and peace has been ushered in. The new governor has the interests of the people at heart and his beneficence assures the people that their times are safe in his hands. Our hearts are assured that God is on the throne and, despite circumstances which may suggest the contrary, we have peace of mind and heart, which pertains to our relationship with man as well as with God.

Longsuffering. Although we have wronged Him, offended Him and sinned against Him repeatedly, the Lord has been longsuffering and patient with us. His patience is such that He tolerated our sinning, endured our reproaches and refused to cast us off. We must demonstrate this same forbearance and forgiveness. The opportunity to take revenge should be dismissed and the opportunity to forgive should be grasped. Think again of that Pauline eulogy of love—"love suffereth long" (1 Corinthians 13 : 4).

Gentleness. "Kindness" is a better rendering of this word; it means "a helpful disposition." By kindness Paul commended himself to the Corinthians as a minister of God (2 Corinthians 6 : 6). We commend ourselves to the world not only by our preaching but by our practice. Our concern for men should reveal itself socially as well as evangelically; Christian help extends beyond the soul to the whole man. The believer ought always to be willing to help his neighbour purely for Christ's sake and not for selfish reasons of reward. A helping hand is sometimes more effective than a multitude of words.

Goodness. Goodness is a virtue that can be exploited. Unscrupulous people will often take advantage of someone who is good, but this is not true of the goodness which is produced by walking in the Spirit. This quality is strong, solid and takes firm action when required. A Christian who displays this spiritual attitude knows when to be kind and when to rebuke and correct. Barnabas was "a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 11 : 24). The same should be said of all men who are full of the Holy Ghost.

Faith. Many versions translate this as "faithfulness" or "fidelity." Reliability is an asset which few possess. We can depend on God, but can He depend on us? We should be trustworthy as far as God and men are concerned. Our word should be our bond and our testimonies should prove that we can be trusted. The spiritual man should be "stedfast" and "unmoveable" (1 Corinthians 15:58), not "tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine" (Ephesians 4:14).

Meekness. Christ was characterised by His meekness. He was humble and considerate. In inviting all to take His yoke, He said: "for I am meek and lowly in heart" (Matthew 11:29). We are to be like Christ, just like Paul when he appealed to the Corinthians "by the meekness and gentleness of Christ" (2 Corinthians 10:1). This virtue demonstrates obedience to God and consideration for one's neighbour. It will surely show that we are His!

Temperance. The quality spoken of here is self-control, to know how to regulate one's desires and emotions. The same word is used of the athlete in 1 Corinthians 9:25. Like him, the Christian must live a disciplined life in order to be fit for the race and to obtain the prize. In every department of our lives, Christ must be Master and we must yield to His influence no matter how costly that may be.

It is the responsibility of every Pentecostal Christian to cultivate the Fruit of the Spirit in his life. Pentecost provides power for service, but it also stands for holiness of character.

Holy Spirit, dwell with me!

I myself would holy be;

Separate from sin, I would Choose and cherish all things good,

And, whatever I can be,

Give to Him who gave me Thee.

AN OUTLINE

ABIDING CERTAINTIES

1 John 5

"He that hath an experience is not at the mercy of him who hath but an argument."

Note the "we knows" of the New Testament. "Know" indicates knowledge based on experience.

1. The certainty of the new birth (1 John 3:14).
2. The certainty of His keeping power (1 John 5:18; N.E.B. or Living Letters).
3. The certainty of immortality (2 Corinthians 5:1).
4. The certainty of ultimate Christlikeness (1 John 3:2).
5. The certainty of God's care and superintendence over our lives (Romans 8:28).

AN INCIDENT

THE TRUE SAINTS

Two Roman Catholic nuns came to the house of Pastor H. Ironside, of the Moody Church, Chicago, soliciting alms. He invited them in and began to ask them if they had ever seen a saint. They had never seen a saint. (There are no living saints in the Roman Catholic Church, only dead ones, hence their puzzlement.) But would they like to see a saint? Of course, they were most eager to see one. Whereupon Mr. Ironside, pointing to himself, told them that he was "Saint Harry" and opened his Bible to prove it to them! (Told by Dr. G. Barnhouse at Keswick.)

AN ILLUSTRATION

IS THE FIRE BURNING?

Sir Edwin Landseer once painted a fire burning in a domestic grate. The fire glowed with so strange and marvellous a radiance that, when the painting was exhibited in the Royal Academy, scores of visitors came from near and far to behold the picture. The artist sold it for a handsome price. After a few years the purchaser had to summon the artist: "Please come and relight your fire; it has gone out." Landseer had used a very brilliant but fugitive pigment and the glow of the colour had faded.

"The fire shall ever be burning . . . it shall never go out" (Leviticus 6:13).

CHILDREN'S CORNER (continued)

The Indians blindfolded him so that he should not see where he was going and led him many miles across the mountain until they came to a small clearing. Here they removed the blindfold. They took away Little Bear's bow and arrows and left him alone, without food or protection. Here Little Bear must stay until morning. He was afraid. He wondered whether or not he was brave enough to stick it out.

David—Shepherd, Singer, Sovereign

by J. Osman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

Sorrow

DAVID plumbed the depths of sorrow on many an occasion. It never fails to bring a lump to my throat when I read of his lament over the death of his rebellious son, Absalom: "O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" (2 Samuel 18:33).

Grief was not only his portion when Absalom had been slain, nor yet when the infant son of Bathsheba died, however, for David sorrowed when the news was brought to him that his worst enemy, Saul, was dead and the way was cleared for him to take over the throne (2 Samuel 1).

Saul and Jonathan had been slain and an Amalekite came to David's camp to tell the good(?) news. He adorned himself with the trappings of mourning, but it seems evident that there was no grief in his heart. Apparently he was expecting to receive something by way of commendation or reward. When questioned, he told how he had stood on Saul and slain him after Saul had failed in his hara-kiri attempt and, to prove the truth of his story, he had brought Saul's crown and bracelet. Having delivered his speech, he no doubt felt proud of himself and awaited the inevitable award.

The distress

He must have been astonished at the reaction of David to his words, for, instead of pleasure and delight, there was evident distress. His astonishment did not last long. David tore his clothes, mourned, wept and fasted all day, and, in the evening, sent for the young Amalekite and said, "How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the Lord's anointed?" Then he ordered his immediate execution.

The difference

Why was David so angry with the Amalekite? Because he believed it was God's prerogative to deal with His own anointed! On two previous occasions he had had Saul in his power (1 Samuel 24:4-6; 26:9-11). Saul had his faults but to David he was the anointed of God and David would not take it upon himself to slay him. Some would say that these occasions were obviously appointed by God for David's benefit. He was urged: "Behold this day of which the Lord said unto thee, Behold I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand." David's replies are characteristic of a man after God's own heart. He rejoined, "Who can stretch his hand against the Lord's anointed and be guiltless?" David said furthermore "As the Lord liveth, the Lord shall smite him; or his day shall come to die; or he shall descend into battle and perish. The Lord forbid that I should stretch forth mine hand against the Lord's anointed."

Here is the difference between worldliness and spirituality, between being man's man or God's man. If David's affections had been centred on things on earth, he would have rejoiced at Saul's downfall. So many who are of a different calibre would have mouthed their clichés: "God is not sleeping. I knew He would vindicate me. Saul got what was coming to him. He was not the only one who was anointed by God; I am anointed, too!" But David's heart was set on higher things.

He saw the dishonour and the damage that would be done to the testimony. Instead of rejoicing at the death of Saul he lamented: "The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: how are the mighty fallen! Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph" (2 Samuel 1:19, 20). Such sentiments are to be admired.

How helpful it would be if Christians realised that some things are not for wholesale distribution. Family matters should be kept in the family. To our loss, many things have been told in Gath and the worldlings have rejoiced to the embarrassment of the Church and the denigration of the testimony. Christian, do not seek sympathy from the world when you feel that you have been wrongly used by a fellow Christian. Do not blab about the failings of the Church and the faults of your brothers in Christ and especially do not criticise your minister in a destructive, backbiting fashion. Many have used the carnal weapon of the tongue in unholy and often unjustified criticism of the anointed servant of God. It would be impossible to estimate how much damage has been done to the cause, how much dishonour to Christ, and how much despair to pastors' hearts because of idle talk and gossip that has ruined a church's reputation. The fiends of hell have rejoiced at the discomfiture that has been provoked.

There was nothing small or narrowminded about David. He had lost an enemy and gained a kingdom, but his heart ached at the realisation of what might have been.

The distinctions

David's deportment at this time is an example, his magnanimity beyond reproach. He could say even in his mourning "Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives." He could have spoken of Saul's evil spirit, his revengefulness and murderous intentions. It takes a man after God's own heart to forget the terrible damage that Saul sought to inflict upon him and at his death to remember only the good. These distinctive marks of God's stamp the man; he sorrowed when others might have rejoiced; he was prepared to forget the bad and remember the possibilities for good.

What is your reaction when an enemy is brought low? Some may have suffered by the words or actions of God's people. In my experience this is the hardest kind of persecution to bear—the unkindest cut of all. It is true that God will vindicate, but remember His word says: "Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth: lest the Lord see it, and it displease Him, and He turn away His wrath from him" (Proverbs 24 : 17, 18).

God, in the person of great David's greater Son, measures up to His own standards and, knowing that shortly He was to be crucified by the blood-hungry Jerusalem mob, when He beheld the city He wept over it, because He saw the reproach and tribulation that would soon overtake it and the prospect of what might have been (Luke 19 : 41-44).

Life is so short. May God give us grace towards those who despitely use us, to love our enemies and to react as Christ would have us do in any parallel circumstances.

From T. H. Stevenson

THE propagation of the Scriptures throughout the world is a vital task performed by the United Bible Societies and by many missionary societies, including the important work of the Wycliffe Bible Translators as they translate Scriptures and put into written form languages hitherto expressed only orally.

Another area of particular interest is the ever-increasing number of translations in English, now the world's most universal language. I have seventeen different versions of the Bible or New Testament—only a modest number! All tastes and moods seem catered for today, but one can quickly narrow down to the most profitable and to the most popular versions, which may be two different things, when many seem more interested in simplification than inspiration.

I write when within a few days I celebrate forty-five years since my conversion and forty years of ministry, coincident with an early retirement from pastoral responsibility. I can affirm from experience that I have not found the equal of the Authorised Version, even though it was that of King James, for in practice it has carried more authority than any other.

I have beside me a serious book, Which Bible?, compiled and chiefly written by David Ottis Fuller, D.D., an intelligent argument for the Authorised Version as the "Received Text" against the Revised Version and its many subsequent derivatives. By striking contrast, I also have by me a report of what must be the very latest version: Mark 71, described as a rephrasing, which is going much farther than the many progressive paraphrases available. It is the work of two Methodist ministers, J. K. Lawton and Philip Spence. It is aimed at hippies, youth groups, and the Jesus movement. The Daily Telegraph instances Jesus mentioned as a revolutionary from a "notorious ghetto," "who fed the 5,000 on sandwiches, potato crisps and chocolate." The "twelve comrades" included a fish farmer, a customs official, and a member of the Communist Party. Pete, Jim, Andy, Phil, Bill, Tom, Tim are some of them. Jesus is shot and escapes from a funeral home rather than being crucified and raised from the dead. Jesus teaches: "It is easier to get a jumbo jet into a church than to get a rich man into heaven." "Do you buy an electric bulb to sit on it or put it in a biscuit tin? Surely it's to go into a lamp holder and be connected to the electric power." The publisher, Galliard, of Great Yarmouth, intimates that this has been widely welcomed by the clergy and has "a lot of laughs in it," which says little for the translation or for the clergy.

Prayer and Praise

by F. H. Coleman

THE following answer to prayer comes from Mrs. Dorothy Bull, one of our missionaries to Tanzania. If you prayed for Sarai you will rejoice in God's wonderful answer.

"Sarai underwent tremendous persecution from her tribe for years because of her stand for Jesus. Her husband continually beat her for going to church and for refusing to show the awful accustomed hospitality to her husband's male visitors and because she refused all witchcraft. Her son became ill and she was blamed then and later when she refused to seek witchcraft for him. He got better with the help of modern drugs. Later Sarai became very ill and was bound and dragged by women to the witch-doctor, but she refused his witchcraft. The usual beating followed then and again when her husband brought the witch-doctor, with the same negative results.

"Incensed, her husband returned her to her father, accusing her of disobedience. She was cast off and lost her children, her goats and her sheep. For weeks we all prayed, hearing that she was ill far off in the bush about 110 miles away.

"Prayer was wonderfully answered. Not only did Sarai recover, but her faith was as strong as ever. During her time of stress she led four Masai women to Christ and they are attending the meetings regularly. Her father allowed her to go to church with them—an answer to prayer. Tribal elders decided that she had a right to stand by spiritual convictions—amazing to anyone who knows this fierce, drunken tribe. Finally her husband invited her to return. She is now back with him and her children enjoying fellowship in our Msata church. Her livestock have also been returned."

Above you see six answers to prayer. Thank you for praying for this brave Christian woman!

“For there shall arise false Christs”

(Matthew 24 : 24)

WE stood by a cross on Good Friday last and it was a strangely moving experience. A witness to Calvary and all it means was arranged in the form of a vigil in the market square in Salisbury. Throughout the day groups from all the churches gathered round a simple wooden cross and there read the relevant Scriptures, prayed, sang and distributed tracts.

During the hour of vigil taken by Elim folk I crossed the square to hand gospel tracts to three teenage girls wearing long flowing dresses and was pleased when they asked immediately about our witness. I told them about the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus and of salvation through His name and they said, “Yes, we believe in Jesus and He has come back to earth in the form of a fourteen-year-old Indian boy and belief in him has changed us and God is in us now.” These intelligent, educated young folk were enthusiastic and very convincing. Their spokeswoman, a most attractive girl, was positively radiant. According to her, people need a tangible reminder that Jesus is alive today and the record of the Bible is not enough. “It’s only a book and not everyone will or can read it,” she added. They told me that they had been to an Indian temple in London and had a wonderful experience there. God was real and all the desire for luxury and self-pleasing had gone and love and peace now filled their hearts and dominated all their thinking and actions. Reincarnation was a source of comfort, hell was only in the mind, and as this “Divine manifestation of God” had been given, heaven was already here to be enjoyed. They pleaded with me to visit the London temple and see for myself the reality and fervour there.

Strangely enough while I was holding this conversation an Anglican curate, Pentecostal in experience, had joined our group around the cross and began earnestly to pray for a group of college students who were being influenced by a false religion. His concern was such that he later told the group of believers that forty students had left Salisbury and gone to London to spend the Easter weekend at the Indian temple to receive the laying on of hands and anointing to receive peace, and to spend time in meditation. He had discovered that this very same cult about which the girls were telling me was capturing the interest of many students and he pleaded for more prayer and effective Christian challenge in our colleges.

I believe that the Devil is making a desperate and determined bid for the souls of youth today. He knows that in a world filled with violence, hatred and fear they are sometimes bewildered and afraid, often cynical and even despairing. They have tried pleasure, sex, drink, drugs, personal freedom and adventure, and yet are conscious of an aching void in life. The Devil, with great cunning, seeks to deceive and to offer an enticing form of mystical religion which appeals to the longing for God, for love and for peace. Apparently the profound questions of life after death, sin, suffering and personal responsibility are dealt with satisfactorily and the whole concept of the Christian gospel is by-passed. The girls with whom I talked were strangely silent when I spoke of Jesus as the only Saviour, Jesus mighty to take our sins away, Jesus the only way to God. The Devil ever seeks to belittle the work of redemption by our Lord's death and resurrection. If you come across any of these mystical religions which sadly have crept into our land and seem so beguiling to those disappointed by orthodox Christianity, speak out boldly and lovingly and make sure by your own life and testimony that our Saviour is presented in all His winsomeness and love. The girls in the square said, “We are so happy; we are changed. But go to the cathedral; it’s half empty and the worshippers look miserable and it’s all so dreary.” What an indictment! In answer we must present a joyful, positive expression of the faith which was once delivered to the saints.

the same scale, for this city needs a real move of God once more. Though a number of interdenominational evangelistic enterprises are being held in Birmingham this year, one cries for something greater to happen. I was invited to send a selection of my "slants" to the B.B.C. for consideration and we would like the ELIM EVANGEL to have honourable mention in that quarter.

Another survey—for the Central Office of Information on attitudes to crime prevention—was most revealing, one which any prospective burglar would have relished, for it asked concerning the safety measures people took to keep their cars and property secure. In spite of its very personal nature I had only one refusal.

In Eastern countries the husband purchased a wife by gifts or services—a dowry. Saul set a seemingly impossible task for David, knowing that insufficient wealth was available to David for Michal's hand in marriage (v. 23). Once again, however, the deceitfulness of Saul was defeated by David's devotion to the Lord (vv. 28-30). How often has the Lord undertaken for us in like manner as we have trusted Him!

Crusades and Crusaders

Written from the South Shields pioneer crusade

by Alexander Tee

ELIM CRUSADERS do not merely wear badges bearing these two lovely words; they are actively engaged in the most exhilarating "holy war" that has ever been fought! The battle is the Lord's and the enemy is the world, the flesh and the Devil!

The founder of the Salvation Army had a motto for his early soldiers: "All at it—always at it." There is so much work to be done and so few are consistently dedicated to the task.

Training

To be at our best for God we must have more than a sincere desire. We must get to know the Bible and how best to approach the problem of winning and keeping young people. Two splendid Bible correspondence courses are available from Elim Bible College, Capel, Surrey. Two others, entitled School for Youth Workers and School for Soul-winners, are obtainable from E.Y.M., P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

If we want to be at our best for God, training is essential. Perhaps God wants you in our Bible college to train for the part-time or full-time ministry. God is looking for young men to dedicate themselves and their futures to Him.

What is the point of pioneer crusades which bring many to Christ if there are not sufficient pastors to feed and to lead the new converts? Perhaps God will use this page to bring home the call to some young men. I believe that our country is ripe for revival.

Truth

The message proclaimed by the Elim Pentecostal Church is one to be proud of. Thousands of people in many denominations are now being awakened to the reality of the baptism in the Holy Spirit as well as to the other fundamental truths which we hold dear. Only yesterday I spoke to a member of the Christian Brethren, a lecturer at the marine college here. He is one among many who are wide open to Pentecostal truth as we know it. It is the responsibility of every Elim Crusader to present Pentecostal truth with the noble, honourable backing of the fruit of the Holy Spirit.

"Never let your zeal flag" is how Moffatt translates a verse in Romans 12. Let your splendid enthusiasm for evangelism shine like a polished sword. Pay more than lip service to evangelism. Get involved in winning souls in one sphere or another. With commendable consistency be a real Crusader in the ranks of Elim!

Talent

Perhaps God has graciously endowed you with a lovely voice. Are you a talented pianist or organist? We are often in great need of musicians. Are you a typist? Could you help by using your machine at home to type invitations to crusades? We are always in need of helpers in this field. Could you give two weeks at your own expense to give out literature? If you can help our crusades in any way write to me at Elim Headquarters, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

Doors of opportunity are opening all over the country and on this, my last Youth Page as Elim's National Youth Director, I appeal to every Crusader to get thoroughly involved in soul-winning. May I also ask for your prayers and support as I commence full-time crusading for our Lord and Saviour?

"The Spirit of the Lord came upon David" (v. 13).

The declared purpose of God to transfer the kingdom of Israel from Saul to another was not an angry threat, but an immutable decree (15:28). Saul was vindictive and Samuel's mission was dangerous, so it was necessary to conceal the primary object and announce the secondary one (v. 5). The anointing gave David a sense of destiny. He would receive from Samuel careful training as the coming sovereign. God's statement is remarkable and intimates a difference between David and the former king. Despite his good looks, Eliab was not chosen, nor were the other six. David was God's man and the anointing sealed God's choice.

Remember that God sees us as we are inwardly.

"The Lord is with him" (v. 18).

Saul degenerated, David was regenerated. The sad statement (v. 14) intimates Saul's trouble, his gloomy reflections, the loss of his throne, jealousy and morbid melancholy, so music was suggested (v. 16). Anointed music can bring great blessing and peace; who better to play than David? God's providence was seen in that the future king thus came to be acquainted with the manners of the court and into association with Saul. The strange turn of events (v. 21) reminds us of Romans 8:28. David was appointed to an honourable position that would stand him in good stead.

The Lord's anointing is our appointing to His will.

"I defy the armies of Israel" (v. 10).

The Philistine invasion and challenge must have happened several years after their defeat at Michmash (chapter 14). The valley (Hebrew—"ravine") illustrates the spiritual separation of Israelite from Philistine—the Christian from the world. Goliath was between nine and ten feet tall, his coat of mail weighed about 157lb., his target (javelin) was so large as to be carried between the shoulders and the iron head of his spear weighed 19lb. Against this formidable opposition, Israel quaked (v. 11).

There are giants in our pathway and there will be challenges in our lives, but the outcome depends on whether we view these through the eyes of man as insurmountable, or through the eyes of God as insignificant interferences.

teers, were supplied with provisions by friends at home (vv. 17, 18). On hearing Goliath's challenge, David's answer was not proud boasting, but a statement of sincere faith in God (Romans 8:31). Undeterred, David approached Saul with such a confident witness to God's deliverance that Saul was awed. There was no point, after he had experienced God's blessing and deliverance, in attempting to battle in another's armour. David could only fight in the way that God had taught him and with tried and proved weapons, even though they seemed ridiculous.

The battle is the Lord's and our weapons are not the world's, but God's. They have proved mighty in destroying evil (2 Corinthians 10:4).

"I come . . . in the name of the Lord" (v. 45).

Goliath's disdain for David was understandable considering the two men and their respective armour. Compare the contempt and cursings of Goliath's abusive harangue with the simple statement of David's faith in God. Hesitation in spiritual battles can foster doubt and further defeat, so David ran to battle (v. 48). Up went the stone, down went Goliath, off came his head, for David's sling with God's blessing was more powerful than the proud Goliath and his weapons. Goliath lost his head through unbelief, David kept his head through faith in God. The victory encouraged Israel and battle commenced to their gain.

Keep on with faith in God; your triumph will encourage others.

Saturday, May 27th

"The Lord was with him" (v. 14).

Saul's knowledge and experience of God were waning and, though he did not recognise David, God knew this shepherd warrior and David knew God. 18:1-4 reveals the beginning of the noblest, purest friendship ever known among men, apart from Christ's. The giving of Jonathan's robe (Hebrew—"military dress") was a public mark of honour to David. Jonathan was heir to the throne, yet he had learned that God had ordained David to be king and his humble effacement of himself from the succession and his unselfish devotion to David form one of the most gracious stories of friendship in history.

May we manifest the Spirit of Christ through God's love in us (1 John 4:17).

Sunday, May 28th

"Saul was . . . afraid of David" (v. 29).

As David's popularity increased, so Saul's malevolence against David increased. Saul's daughter was offered to David, but only as a snare and, though he was bound to this promise, the fickle monarch broke his pledge when the marriage was about to be celebrated, an indignity calculated to wound deeply and to provoke resentment in David.

The Baptism in the Holy Spirit

By Adrian L. Hawkes

As used at Elim Youth Camp, Fraisthorpe, Bridlington

What is it ?

IT was promised: Joel 2:28, 29; Acts 1:5, 8; 2:38, 39; Luke 24:49.

It is called many different things: "baptised" (Acts 1:5); "filled" (Acts 2:4, 38); "the Holy Ghost fell," "the gift," "poured out" (Acts 10:44-46); "came on them" (Acts 19:2-6); "gift" (Hebrews 2:4); "promise of the Father," "endued with power from high" (Luke 24:49).

"Baptism" means "to be immersed," as with water baptism.

The baptism in the Holy Spirit bestows power to serve God. It opens the door to the nine gifts of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 12), thus giving the opportunity of miracles to every believer. It enables us to go (Mark 16:15)!

It does not necessarily make us good (1 Corinthians 13:1-3) and it is possible to perform miracles and not to have or to show love (Matthew 7:22, 23). The baptism is for our profit (1 Corinthians 12:4-10), for power (Acts 1:5-8), for power in action, boldness and freedom of speech (Acts 2), and for power, boldness and signs (Acts 4: 29-31).

The great necessity for every believer is to be baptised in the Holy Spirit (Acts 1:4, 5, 8; Luke 24:48, 49). R. A. Torrey wrote: "The disciples were rarely fitted for the work by experience and by association with Himself and by long training at His own hands. But the further preparation of the baptism with the Holy Spirit was so all-essential that they must not move without it. There was apparently imperative need that something be done at once. The whole world was perishing and they alone knew the truth. Nevertheless, Jesus strictly charged them 'Wait!' What a testimony to the all-importance of the baptism with the Holy Spirit as a preparation for work that shall be acceptable to Christ!"

How do I receive it ?

Does everyone receive the baptism on conversion? No, it follows conversion (Acts 19:2-6) and is a separate experience (Acts 8:12-14). In Acts 9:7-20 we see Paul's conversion, then Paul's baptism. Note Paul at Ephesus (Acts 19:1, 2).

It works like this: conversion=LIFE; the baptism in the Holy Spirit =POWER. A Christian even without this power is to be reckoned with, for he has real life. He is more dynamic than the dead people who surround him, those without life, who are not converted. The Holy Spirit baptism adds power to that abundant life, power to live the life to the fullest degree.

How are we to be filled with the Holy Spirit? We have to hear about Him (Acts 19:2-6). We must repent and be baptised (Acts 2:38). We are baptised by faith (Acts 10:44; Galatians 3:2). It needs obedience (Acts 5:32). We have to ASK (Acts 8:15, 16).

"Be filled with the Holy Spirit" implies more than a single experience; it indicates "be being filled," a daily experience.

Why are some not filled ?

Surprisingly, many are afraid that a loving heavenly Father will give them something that will frighten them! The Bible says that perfect love casts out fear and our heavenly Father loves us with perfect love! Some were not baptised because they had not heard that there was such a thing (Acts 19:2-6), like some today. Many are not baptised because they do not think that the baptism is for today (Acts 2:39). People are not baptised because the Church has greatly neglected this subject. Some are not baptised because they do not see that it is for them personally. Some say, "If God wants me to have this He will give it to me"—as if God ever forced anything on us (Acts 8:15, 16)! We are to ask in faith, believing, to knock and to seek and we shall find.

Then there is prejudice. In Holy War, John Bunyan pictured Mañsoul as a rebellious city. To guard Eargate to prevent any message from Emmanuel entering, Diabolos, the usurper, placed Mr. Prejudice and sixty deaf men in charge. Mr. Prejudice would not hear and the sixty could not hear. We must not follow such an example!

Some find speaking in tongues a problem. What are its uses? It is a sign (Mark 16:17; Acts 2:4), for the unbeliever (1 Corinthians 14:22); to speak to God (1 Corinthians 14:2, 14); to edify (1 Corinthians 14: 4); to enable us to worship God in the Spirit (compare John 4:24); and for the edification of others when used as a gift in conjunction with interpretation (1 Corinthians 14:28).

Critics declare: "The gift of tongues is surely the least gift. I'm doing what Paul says and seeking the best gift—love!" C. J. E. Kingston writes: "Even granting—and I do not—it to be the least of gifts, still it remains a gift and as such should not be despised. Supposing a wealthy friend presented on one's birthday a cheque for £1,000; on the next anniversary a parcel containing a half-crown book was the sole reminder of his esteem. Would one refuse the comparatively insignificant because it was the least of one's friend's gifts? Assuredly not; one would not offend an earthly friend. How much less the heavenly Friend?"

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The transformed wilderness

Isaiah 35

by F. Lavender

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

ISAIAH used two words that vividly described the wilderness of which he wrote: “parched” and “thirsty” (v. 7). These words bring a picture of barrenness and desolation.

They describe so much of our national and personal life, for, while we are certainly materially prosperous compared with many other nations, having a great deal of luxury and pleasure, yet, in the most important sphere—the spiritual, eternal realm of our relationship with God—we see a barren, desolate wilderness.

The soul of man cries out for the living God, though he may not correctly interpret the symptoms. He cannot be satisfied by “things” and many find that increasing prosperity and possessions bring only mounting dissatisfaction and disillusion.

In verses 1, 2 and 7 Isaiah wrote of the transforming of the wilderness, the physical transformation of Israel, something which is taking place to a limited degree in our own day. His words also have a spiritual application. Out of the present discontented upheavals of our prosperous nation I believe that we will witness a national transformation as many troubled souls, living now in a materialistic wilderness, are marvellously changed as they respond to the grace of God. The parched ground will become a pool, the thirsty land pools of water. Men and women who are spiritually barren will produce fruit unto the Lord!

Isaiah went even further in the exactness of his description of the coming transformation, for, in verses 5 and 6, he showed that the very place of desolation, sickness and misery will become the place of miracles, as though God will make impossibility the channel of His glory. Isaiah’s miracle-working God is our miracle-working God and He will make the hardness of our present situation the vessel of His power. We shall not speak of the miracles He used to do, but of the wonders He is doing. By the miracles He works, our church and our nation will know that He is God. Once more the preaching of the message will be accompanied by signs and wonders. These things I verily believe.

Isaiah shows in verse 10 that the wilderness will become a place of salvation. Apart from the transforming touch of the Almighty, it would be a place of death and destruction. The desire of the Lord is that men should be saved, not destroyed, so He will cause the desert to become a place in which His ransomed ones will walk with utter satisfaction. As our barren nation experiences the reviving work of the Lord, men will find salvation by turning to Christ. I believe that even nationally we will be saved from disaster for a while, but this salvation will not come from clever politicians and economists. It will come by men and women drinking deeply from the wells of salvation in Christ and then sharing their spiritual treasure with others.

The wilderness will become a place of rejoicing (v. 10). See the words used to describe the redeemed people—“singing,” “joy,” “gladness”; can you think of any group of words less like a description of our nation today? It is constantly true, whatever the world may say about “killjoy” Christians, that indifference toward God destroys joy in the heart. The present so-called freedom and permissiveness have brought only frustration and bitterness, the slavery of body and mind. Revival, the quickening of desire toward God, reverses the situation and brings true freedom, joy and fulfilment. You and I, by turning our hearts and faith towards the Lord and doing His will, can help to prepare the way for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit and for the transforming of the wilderness.

Crusade News

SOUTH SHIELDS

A small section of the 300-strong queue waiting for the opening. Some of them waited for over an hour to be sure of getting in.

Photograph : "The Shields Gazette."

Thank you, one and all, for praying for us during this pioneer crusade. During the Sunderland crusade I went to this town and found that the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was for sale. The church was too big for our purpose, but the minor hall comfortably seats 250 and was very suitable. There are twelve lovely classrooms at the rear. During the very week that we went to the town, a firm moved out of the section of the building we wanted. By a miracle we were granted the whole of the desired area for only one-third of the rent the previous people paid.

The public hall is only four minutes walk from the empty church and here again we were fortunate, as two clubs which have a booking all the year round on certain nights were willing for us to have two weeks for our crusade without any interruption.

Sunday night congregations varied from 350 to over 400. Some of the weeknights we had as many as 300. The smallest weeknight attendance was 170. Over 325 men and women signed decision literature, though many more than this actually raised their hands at the close of the meetings.

Cripple healed

The case of Mr. Cecil Young reached the local news reporters and soon his story was in the press. One blind eye was opened and a woman was instantly healed of deafness and has not used her hearing aid since. Many others have reported how God intervened on their behalf. A young teenager has been healed of hay fever.

The amount of work preparing the church building has been tremendous and the team deserve credit for the way they have toiled. There are two other empty churches in the north-east which would make splendid homes for new converts in large areas of population. We would value your prayers for guidance. God is moving and we too must move forward in His name!

OVERLEAF : WESTON-SUPER-MARE CRUSADE REPORT

CRUSADE AT WESTON-SUPER-MARE

The response to the opening weekend of the revival and divine healing crusade at Weston-super-Mare Town Hall was described by Rev. Ron Jones, crusade leader, as "very encouraging."

Mr. Jones said that many people had attended the opening meetings and attendances throughout the week had been maintained.

The crusade began with a musical festival. This featured gospel singers Margaret Wall and George Phelps, Len Magee, a folk singer, and a young people's choir of sixty voices.

When the crusade continued on Sunday evening with a special meeting timed to start after the close of services in the town's churches, there was another large attendance, and those present were introduced to those assisting Mr. Jones in the crusade.

One of them, Mr. Magee, who was addicted to drugs until a few years ago, is now training at the Elim Bible College, and soon will be taking up a full-time appointment in the ministry.

Taking part in some of the meetings has been Jill Coombes, a Weston girl who works in the town's library and is well known throughout a wide area as a gospel singer.

The Weston Mercury.

The meetings are even more encouraging this week than last. On Saturday night the Town Hall was packed and there were twenty-one decisions. Sunday again saw excellent numbers and another seven decisions. On Monday night we were on the 200 mark—nearly as many as last Monday—and there were another twelve decisions.

Church reports

SALFORD

Pastor: A. Lambie

The sixth anniversary of Pastor Lambie's ministry at Salford was marked by special weekend services. The visiting speaker was Pastor J. McAvoy, whose anointed ministry brought blessing and encouragement at the well-attended services. Musical items were presented by visiting singers. One delightful item was the vocal with guitar accompaniment of Mrs. Richards by her two small daughters. Presentations to mark the occasion were made to the pastor and to his wife by the church secretary, the ladies' fellowship secretary and the Crusader secretary, along with sincere words of appreciation.

There has been marked progress during the past year or two in the fellowship here numerically, materially and spiritually, under our pastor's ministry and leadership.

Personal evangelism in the area around the church, which he has inspired, has resulted in recent months in a number of personal commitments to the Saviour being made both in the homes and in the church. New converts have recently been baptised, received into membership and experienced the infilling of the Holy Spirit.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA

Pastor: A. Nicolson

At our Sisterhood anniversary rally over 120 ladies from a number of neighbouring churches gathered. Our special speaker was our own Sisterhood president, Mrs. Nicolson, the wife of our recently appointed minister. Our president's message was on the Second Coming of Christ, comforting, encouraging and stirring us to greater consecration and service until Jesus comes. Two beautiful Gospel solos were sung to us by Mrs. Thomas, wife of Pastor A. P. Thomas, of Colchester. Mrs. Scott blessed us with her elocution as she reminded us of the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Our tea-table fellowship was grand, as 116 sisters enjoyed a ham salad, jelly, fruit and cake, prepared by our own workers.

It was encouraging to see several sisters present who had been introduced to the Sisterhood by means of house-to-house visitation, encouraged to come to the Sunday evening services, where salvation entered their hearts, and who were rejoicing in the Lord.

Our president, a former missionary, greatly encourages us as we try to raise finance for the projects of E.W.M.A. to help maintain our own church's missionary in Rhodesia, Miss Catherine Picken.

We give God thanks for over forty years of blessing in the Sisterhood.

(MRS.) B. JARVIS.

CHELMSFORD

Pastor : D. W. Anthony

The tremendous blessings of our Easter Convention under the anointed ministry of Pastors Dennis Robson and Ken Smith and our own choir were overshadowed by the cloud which has since broken so devastatingly upon us in the Homecall of our beloved Kenneth Tween, known to so many in the Elim and A.O.G. movements.

Although feeling extremely ill, Kenneth conducted the choir on Good Friday, but on Easter Sunday he was taken into hospital and little more than a week later he was called into the presence of the Lord.

Kenneth was appointed organist when he was fourteen years of age and was in this office until his death. He was also choirmaster, deacon, lay representative and Sunday school superintendent and his excellent ability in all these offices was dedicated to the Lord. He was the personification of Christlike humility and graciousness of spirit. During almost three years of illness, spending much time in hospital for countless tests and suffering much distress, he continued to show at all times a deep faith and trust in his Lord. He bore his sickness with the utmost patience and courage, always expressing his gratitude for our constant prayers.

We pay our tribute to Kenneth and praise God for the shining example he was to us. One of his favourite choir pieces was "Fill all my vision that all may see Thy holy image reflected in me." We truly say that this prayer was answered in his life and we anticipate with much joy when we shall be reunited with him and with the Lord whom we love. Our prayers continue for his wife and family.

LILIAN CROFT.

BISHOP AUCKLAND

Pastor : R. M. Kingsbury

Our brother George McCutcheon passed into the presence of the Lord on April 22nd. He was a real "brand from the burning." About eleven years ago I heard these words: "You will never get George saved!" One night, our pastor at that time preached a very simple sermon and George said, "Something just clicked." He did not just put up his hand; he walked out to the front boldly and knelt down. The Lord wonderfully saved him and baptised him with the Holy Ghost and power. He became our chorus leader.

On April 25th we said goodbye to George. The service was simple but very impressive as we sang his favourite hymns. The pastor said in his message that George was always cheerful. We shall never forget his good humour. He was always faithful and prayerful. Just a few weeks ago he led a chorus session despite great difficulty with his breathing. After a couple of weeks in hospital and a major operation, he recovered and came home determined to serve his Lord more than ever. After a relapse the Lord called him home. He never complained of his illness, but inquired after many others. We shall miss him, but our loss is heaven's gain. Our sympathy goes out to his wife and family, and to his loving sister and father. We pray the great Comforter, our Lord and Saviour, to give them the strength they need.

(MRS.) M. BROWN.

BURTON-ON-TRENT

Pastor : R. Morrell

The visit of Pastor J. Woodhead for four days was a time of blessing. His inspired messages thrilled us. He still looks as young as when he pioneered here in 1950! We praise God for the preaching of the Gospel in such a forceful way that it caused a response. Some eight souls came to know Jesus as Saviour. We are grateful for this uplift and are looking for great things yet to come.

David—Shepherd, Singer, Sovereign

by J. Osman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

SERVICE

2 Samuel 6

DAVID was a great servant of the Lord (2 Samuel 7 : 19-21 and many places in the Psalms). A man after God's own heart will of necessity be a servant of God and one of David's outstanding desires was for God to have His rightful place in his own life and in the life of the community. This is clearly seen in the account of David's adventures with the Ark.

The Ark of God had been taken by the Philistines and after several adventures it found a home in the house of Abinadab in Kirjath-jearim, where it remained for twenty years. In 2 Samuel 6 we read of David's desire to restore the Ark to Jerusalem, where he prepared a tent for it. An attempt was made to do this, but though the motive was good the method was wrong (Numbers 18 : 3 ; 4 : 15, etc.). Death was threatened to anyone who transgressed by carrying or even touching any holy thing. It was the privilege of the sons of Kohath of the tribe of Levi to attend to the Ark, which was borne upon their shoulders on special, gold-covered staves, which passed through the special rings built into the Ark.

We may similarly err by using methods that appeal to men, while being careless about the commands of God's Holy Word. Preaching is a bore to some, who like the music, the life, the worship, the attitudes that go with Pentecostalism, but it still pleases God by the foolishness of preaching to save those who believe, wherever, whenever and however that preaching is carried out. Uzzah paid with his life for his carelessness and disregard of the explicit instructions God had given.

The Ark was carried into the house of Obed-Edom, where it stayed for three months and proved to be a source of great blessing.

News of this blessing caused David's fear and uncertainty to vanish and once more the Ark, the symbol of God's presence, now borne correctly on the Kohathite shoulders, was brought up from the home of Obed-Edom. This was a great day and the Ark was carried with gladness which led to expressive emotionalism in sincere service, plus ardent adoration and whole-hearted worship. Musicians were appointed, a choir was trained, sacrifices were made ready and a feast was prepared (1 Chronicles 15 and 16). David was uplifted, thrilled and stirred, so much so that, with out restraint, he danced with all his might before the Ark that day.

Certain standards of behaviour are to be expected of certain professions. Kings and others who are constantly in the public eye have to regulate their behaviour to avoid giving offence wherever possible, but this was a day of days and called for great rejoicing. I pity those poverty-stricken souls whose spirits have never been moved to tears, laughter or unspeakable joy. They have not even begun to live spiritually! God uses people who are stirred. Read the Bible if you want to prove it.

Dignity carried to an extreme can freeze, stultify and strangle worship. Some have that kind of dignity in the Lord's service where any emotional outburst is frowned upon. To go into such churches is like visiting a morgue. Inspiration is non-existent—and they call it reverence! A person visited a certain church. When asked for his opinion afterwards, he said, "Well, they have certainly got unity; they are all frozen together!" It is possible for a service to possess faultless dignity allied with black irreverence; conversely it is possible to shout your ecstasy to heaven and to be completely reverent.

There are two extremes. Many a service has been ruined by noise and ill-chosen chorus singing, when the atmosphere called for tears or stillness. Have you never read "Be still and know that I am God"? Many will have shared the experience of being jarred by the striking up of some jazzy song, when the peace of God was flooding your soul. Light-hearted singing when a soul is wrestling with God is nothing short of a calamity. It is equally calamitous for the pendulum to swing to the other extreme and for us to frown on anything savouring of expressive joy as fanatical. Is there not room for both? David's dancing was not an everyday occurrence; as far as we know this was a solitary occasion, but it was an unforgettable experience!

It did not please everybody; it never does. David returned home to bless his house, to communicate to his loved one a share of some of his own soul's spiritual blessing, but he was met with cold criticism. His wife, Michal, had seen him and had despised him in her heart. She sarcastically took him to task for his demonstrativeness. How does a man after God's own heart react in such circumstances—apologise? Make excuses? He shows no shame. He makes no apology. He does not promise never to do it again. His blunt statement reads: "It was before the Lord."

A man after God's own heart will serve the Lord with all his might and will never be ashamed of what he has done sincerely and honourably before the Lord.

Note that Michal, the cold critic, was barren until the day of her death. This was part of her punishment for her wrong attitude. Is this the reason why some churches are barren—no atmosphere, no converts, no warmth, no blessing? Psalm 89:15 says: "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of Thy countenance."

Part 3. The final test

Words and drawing by SHEILA PRICE

LITTLE BEAR was cold and scared. He was afraid of the wild beasts that roamed the land. What would he do if one attacked him? He had no weapons with which to protect himself. He wanted to run back to the safety and warmth of his father's wigwam, but he did not know the way. Besides, he did not want the others to laugh at him and call him a coward. He did not want to be a failure. He wanted to show them that he was brave and strong. He wanted to wear that wonderful head-dress. He wanted to be leader of the Zoto Indians!

Little Bear sat on a big rock, on the look-out for any wild animal that might come near him. He started singing a chorus to himself, one that his father had taught all the Indian children.

*Daniel on the mountain, praying unto God,
Israel in the valley, fighting very hard;*

When his eyes were downward, Satan's men prevailed,

*When his eyes were upward, Israel never failed.
So, keep on looking upward—to victory!*

Little Bear sang the chorus over and over, wishing that he was brave like Daniel. He tried his best to keep his eyes open, but he was so tired after his long, busy day that he finally curled up on the rock and went to sleep.

All night long he slept in the mountains. In the morning he yawned, stretched, and looked around him. For a moment he thought that he was still in his father's wigwam, but then he realised that he was all alone. He rubbed his eyes, sat up, and realised that he was unharmed! There was not a scratch on him. Not one wild animal was in sight. He had slept in safety all through the long, dark night.

Little Bear was hungry. He knew that he had to find his own way back to the settlement, where the others would be waiting for him. As he was looking around, wondering which direction he should take, he saw a movement in the ferns. Whatever could it be?

WE are indebted to the Lord's Day Observance Society for drawing attention to the passing of the Sunday Theatre (No. 2) Bill by the House of Commons towards the end of last month. The Speaker described the methods taken as "unusual and inconvenient as hon. Members have had no warning." The Lord's Day Observance Society points out that the Bill was passed when there was a minimum attendance at the House of Commons and right at the very end of business.

It is not surprising that agnostics and the like have publicly welcomed the passing of this Bill. It is in common with the pressure which is being exerted by a vociferous minority. They will press on for the abolition of what they call obsolete Sunday regulations governing sport, trade and licensing laws.

All this is part and parcel of the avowed and energetic attempts by humanists, agnostics and non-believers of all kinds to undermine the Christian stand on so many things. It is high time that the Church as a whole rose in strength to rebut the anti-God propaganda which is circulating all too freely. It is our opinion that the mass media, especially radio and television, appear to do all they can to support these people with avant garde views.

Many of the standards which we have tended to take for granted have already been eroded. We may well have to lay again the foundations of good Christian conduct and principles. Now is the time, as has not been the case perhaps for several generations, that our Sunday schools and youth departments must not only be provided with Christian fellowship and various activities of a somewhat light nature; they must be taught Christian ethics and Bible standards must be proclaimed by precept and example.

We thank God for many fine Christian young people who are taking a definite stand. It is encouraging to observe that there is something of a reversion to fundamentalist belief among many young people. For this we rejoice, but we deem it necessary to point out that those who are against Christian truth and standards are ever busily active. We need to take our stand and to pray and to proclaim positive Christian truth.

EIGHTH BRAZILIAN ELIM CONFERENCE

Report by HENRY JEFFERY

The eighth annual conference of Elim churches in Brazil was held in the city of Londrina ("Little London") in the interior of the state of Paraná. Twenty-seven delegates, representatives of the cross-section of Brazilian churches, attended. Men from different backgrounds and cultures were joined by a common faith in Christ and a knowledge that important business had to be done. Together they determined to find an answer to the need for an efficient organisational structure that would be governed by the moving of the Holy Spirit.

The first thing that impressed me was the determination of the delegates. We were meeting friends and enjoying social fellowship, but the majority were intent on the task before them. Certain structural changes had to be recommended representing reorganisation at leadership level and their desire was to be in harmony with God. This reorganisation could only be accomplished by the Holy Spirit in giving guidance and wisdom. Prayer was made every morning at seven before any business was enacted. In each session the moving of God's Spirit was evident. Wisdom flowed from one delegate after another and this carried the whole body of men along the course directed by God.

The second strong impression received was the maturity of the delegates. There were divergent views, but in the full, free discussion there was a wonderful freedom from bitterness. The effects of the voting will be seen in the future and hopefully the result will be a more efficient, effective operation of the various departments. We were strengthened and inspired as we saw God moving among His people.

STUDENTS' PENTECOSTAL FELLOWSHIP DAY CONFERENCE

"Educated for whom?" was the theme of the Students' Pentecostal Fellowship day conference held in Sheffield. It was repeatedly emphasised that the Christian's prime loyalty to Christ can be maintained in today's academic and professional worlds. Dr. Stephen Crisp, a senior scientific officer at the Department of Trade and Industry, suggested ways in which Genesis 1 can be interpreted in the light of scientific evidence. Clifford Baxendale, a teacher and artist, explained how he related his Pentecostal experience to art. The afternoon session was devoted to Christian vocation. Muriel Shelbourne, teacher, pastor's wife and former missionary, gave practical advice based on her own experience of finding God's will. Jack Hibbert, also a teacher, emphasised the great influence that a Pentecostal teacher can have. The chairman was Andrew Parfitt, general secretary of the S.P.F. Each talk was followed by profitable, lively discussion.

Over forty young people, mainly students and teachers, attended the conference.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

After reading the letter about the resignation of four Bristol University students as union officers I thought I would share with you the outcome of their resignation.

As was said, a very large number of students condemned the giving of union funds to the I.R.A., and so the four officers concerned (including the vice-president) resigned. But this is not where it ends, for in the re-election for their posts a Christian was voted into the office of vice-president, and I can but quote the scripture, Romans 8 : 28.

I would also like to encourage the writer of the letter by saying that we at Bristol have a thriving Christian fellowship, and have been richly blessed by the Lord over the past few months with many students making professions of faith.

Here's hoping that many students will turn to our Lord in these latter days.

Yours in our Lord,

KEITH GARDNER,
Missionary secretary,
Bristol University Christian Union.

1. "All my springs are in Thee"

Mark 16 : 9-20

IT was Jesus who started all the furore about speaking with tongues. We must emphasise this, because many are treating tongues as something new: a modern miracle; a twentieth-century phenomenon. Speaking with tongues is taking place today on a wider scale than perhaps ever before, but this is only a revival of interest, not the beginning of it.

Experimentally, the springs of this matter are found in the New Testament Church. Doctrinally, the original spring is found in the teaching of Jesus. The river which sprang from these two sources has continued through all this age and is now reaching flood level. In many places this river has broken banks raised by religious tradition and theological prejudice and tongues are being heard in new places, but they did not originate in these new areas; they have just reached them.

We turn to the initial statement about tongues given some nineteen centuries ago by Jesus (Mark 16 : 9-20).

Authentic

Doubts have been raised concerning its authenticity as original Scripture, based mainly on external considerations. This portion is not found in some ancient New Testament manuscripts; in others it is. Internal evidence, however, is conclusive for the retention of this passage as genuine and original. The Mary Magdalene episode of vv. 9-11 is paralleled in John 20 : 14-18. The country journey of two disciples (vv. 12, 13) is detailed in the Emmaus road story of Luke 24. The great commission of vv. 14-16 agrees in principle with Matthew 28 : 19, 20. Acts 2 : 4 ; 9 : 17 ; 10 : 46 ; 16 : 18 ; 28 : 3 confirm vv. 17, 18 as a true prediction. Luke 24 and Acts 1 agree with the Ascension record of v. 19, while v. 20 is but a summary of the whole book of Acts.

In the light of this overwhelming evidence—if we allow the Bible to speak in its own defence—it is sad and strange to find evangelicals aligning themselves with liberals in questioning the veracity of these verses. We can only wonder if they find some of the portion an embarrassment to honest exposition and thus they simply try to explain it all away on purely technical, external grounds.

It is a basic rule that true exposition always interprets a statement in its own context. Therefore, before coming to the specific statement about tongues, we must build the true background of vv. 15-18.

The Person who speaks

It cannot be stressed too strongly that the risen Lord is the Speaker of the words recorded here. He is clearly identified as such as v. 15 opens, while the remainder is set forth as His actual words. This imparts the highest possible authority and should make us approach with humility. Moreover, the words are given in the same type of language as the rest of His teaching; if we cannot understand Jesus here it is unlikely that we will be able to follow His teaching elsewhere. God is speaking in the Person of His resurrected Son, who is invested with all authority and who speaks with His usual clarity. The reason for any lack of understanding must be due to closed minds which are unwilling to admit these words of truth.

The period in view

There is no direct reference to time, nor is any termination explicitly stated. By implication, the permanency of all in this passage may be validated by the accepted continuance of some. The preaching of the Gospel, believing unto salvation, baptism of those who believe, and the right to use Christ's name in prayer, are all accepted by the vast majority of evangelical Christians as co-existent with this present age. As no division is made by Jesus between these four things and the other five, it is logical to accept the abiding nature of all until the end of this Gospel age. Indeed it would seem that Jesus made this very clear in the assertion that the signs were to follow those who believe. If we may still believe on Christ then these verses in their entirety are relevant to us.

The people concerned

The identification is clear-cut: "them that bet of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

lieve." The context shows that this is not an intellectual acceptance of the historicity of Christ and His Gospel, but a saving faith in Christ which will lead to obedience in baptism and to using Christ's name in prayer. The promise is addressed to those of faith and is universal in the context of believing people. There is no ecclesiastical exclusivism, for no group is mentioned either in terms of spiritual achievement or ecclesiastical office. Nor is there any national exclusivism; to allege that this is for the Jews only is without warrant and imposes a restriction not made by Christ. Faith is a common denominator of all true Christians and these signs belong to all such. It must be said, however, that speaking in tongues as meant by Jesus belongs only to those who believe, i.e. to those who confess to be justified through faith in Christ alone, and to no others.

The purpose involved

Some things are expressly categorised as signs; they have a value in themselves, but they signify something greater, beyond themselves. It would seem that the signs are to point to a living Christ, indeed the association of the name of Jesus with the signs draws attention to this very fact. Therefore these miracles should not be sought for their beneficial value to men alone, but also for their evidential worth as a witness to Jesus Christ.

The specific sign of tongues

What new tongues are not. They are not "new tongues" in a moral sense. Some interpret these as equivalent of the Psalmist's "new song, even praise unto our God," and apply it to the change of conversation as when a blasphemer becomes a worshipper or the mocker a defender of the Gospel. We accept that such a change follows regeneration; we reject it as the meaning here. Jesus is teaching about miracles not manner of life, supernatural signs not sanctification.

They are not "new tongues" in an educational sense either. Some allege that they point to a necessary corollary of the great commission, that of learning foreign languages in order to preach the Gospel in all the world. Again we agree with the necessity of such procedure in missionary outreach, but we reject it as the meaning of "new tongues." Jesus at this point has advanced beyond the preaching of the Gospel to signs which follow those who believe that Gospel. Tongues here is not an educational subject, but a supernatural sign. In both cases the context will not admit the alleged meanings.

The meaning of the words. "Tongues" puzzles some, but this can be easily explained by the change in usage of words since the Authorised Version was published in A.D. 1611. "Tongues" was the common word then where we now use "languages." Strong's Concordance bears out this meaning of the Greek word by stating: "The tongue, by implication a language, especially one naturally unacquired." Some modern translations say the same, e.g. Amplified, Weymouth and Moffatt use "languages." "New" is translated by Moffatt as "foreign." That this is a valid adjective can be confirmed by reference to Acts 2:4-11. The words mean "foreign languages" and in this light the latter part of Strong's definition above is very illuminating—a language not acquired by natural means.

The miracle of new tongues. The miracle is not in the activity of speaking, but in the mode and content of the utterance. The sign means a person speaking in a language which they have never learned and which their mind does not understand, yet their utterance is a definite language, coherent and intelligible to anyone who knows it. The mind involved in the utterance is that of the omniscient God; the mouth which gives the utterance is that of the believer. In a supernatural way there is a link-up between the mind of God and the believer, so that the latter's intellect is not contravened, but superseded: they speak in a language in relation to which their intellect is non-operative. The language, unknown to the believer, is known and understood by God who enables him to speak it. Such an interpretation of a genuine utterance in new tongues raises it to a very high level, but no other interpretation does justice to this initial statement by our Lord Himself.

Easter in Guyana

by J. H. MacINNES

IF you were to ask any of the children in Guyana what Easter means to them, they would immediately answer "Kites!" Easter Monday is national kite flying day and it is not confined to children; for young, old, rich, poor, educated, illiterate, all take part. What a sight along the coast outside Georgetown—thousands of kites of all sizes, shapes and colours, from little ones of twelve inches proudly held by toddlers to large ones of ten feet proudly held by big, strapping men.

About a week or so before Easter children and adults purchase kite paper, coloured tissue and cellophane paper, get thin strips of wood and paste, which is usually thick starch made from rice, and set to work in earnest. They purchase rolls of kite string. Tails are made from anything—big brother's shirt, big sister's old dress, or mum's cast-off bedspread. Perhaps daddy's tie would do for the end of the tail!

I remember when one boy's kite got entangled in a neighbour's tree. The boy told the neighbour that his kite was up in the tree. He did not want the kite, which was broken, but he did want his father's tie at the end of the tail.

They do not resurrect last year's kite; it must be completely new. Kites can be bought at street corners. There is a gay variety to choose from and the enterprising vendors do a roaring trade.

On Easter Monday there is an exodus, at dawn or even earlier, from Georgetown and its environs up to the sea wall (a kind of dyke built by the Dutch to keep out the Atlantic waters). As the sun rises seemingly out of the muddy ocean, so the kites rise up into the sky. Preachers in the United Kingdom use the illustration of the buds on the trees as a picture of the resurrection; we in Guyana use the kites rising on the dawn of an Easter Monday.

Many take with them snacks, including hot cross buns and hard-boiled Easter eggs (no chocolate eggs are allowed into the country), and remain until the afternoon. By then, with the running about and the scorching tropical sun, they return home tired and weary, with torn kites, many with no kites at all. The remains are in trees or lodged in some irretrievable height. All say: "A wonderful day!"

To many Guyanese Easter spells P-I-C-N-I-C-S. Good Friday and Easter Monday are two of the three national holidays allocated to the Christians, Christmas being the third. Each of the three main religious groups, Hindus and Moslems being the others, has been allocated three national holidays. The government also has three days of national holidays, making twelve national holidays in Guyana annually.

Guyanese are early risers, so they are up before dawn to cook special meals to take with them. The favourite is curried chicken, beef, mutton, or pork along with some rhoti or dhol pourri. It is useless taking sandwiches with the outdoor temperature as high as 135° F. and more; they would soon be unfit for human consumption. A good dinner has to be prepared. A picnic means hard work in preparation for the mums, but somehow they think only of the enjoyment of the day. Dancing is popular at night when juke boxes blaze away their music (how can it be called music?). It goes on through the night until 2 or 4 a.m., making it very hard on folk who want to enjoy a good hard-earned night's rest.

What does Easter mean to the nominal Church member or nominal Christian? Years ago a new black frock or white dress for the ladies on Good Friday was a must, but this custom is not so rigidly adhered to now, although many still keep it up. Some sincere born-again Christians still come to church in mourning—both sexes.

Throughout the week known as "Holy Week," in Elim we have a wonderful week of services. At the same time this year, convention services were held in all our Elim assemblies—Agricola, Bourda, Dennis Street, Ithaca, La Penitence and Success—with special topics and speakers in each place. At our main assembly in Bourda we had a short film each night on the same topic as the preached Word, the film lasting between ten and fifteen minutes. This year, in all our convention services, only two expatriates—my son, Ian, and myself—took part. We had record attendances.

On Good Friday we also had a special service with the lepers in Mahaica, when all gathered around the Lord's Table. This year our Good Friday offerings went to the work in Ithaca. The people marched out and placed their gifts on the open Bible.

In Bourda the special offering was $273.47 (£55 approximately); even the lepers in Mahaica gave $15 (£3) towards the building at Ithaca. There is a wonderful family feeling here in Elim, with the stronger assemblies helping the weaker. Over Easter they gave $587.89 (£120 approximately) for Ithaca. Six of the young converted Hindus from Success along with brother Trotman from Dennis Street church have been doing manual labour at Ithaca, Elim's farthest outstation, during the day and preaching at night.

It was wonderful to see our Sunday school children with buckets, tins, anything that could hold them, removing the loads of sand and stone from the road and carrying them into Elim's compound.

The Easter Sunday night service is always conducted by the Sunday school children. Again we had a full house, and the young folk did well.

At Easter there were also one house to bless and two weddings, one on Easter Saturday at 6 p.m. and the other on Easter Monday at 6 a.m.

On Thursday night the Women's Bible Class had their Easter programme, entitled "Christ is risen, the tomb is empty." Much practice had been put into this and it was a tremendous success. Our sister Agnes, the Sisterhood president, is to be congratulated with the other sisters on the Bible class committee. Sister De Roy, who acted as Barabbas, got up from a sick bed. She stepped on some rusty tin and tetanus set in. The leg was twice the size of normal, but she was determined to do her part—and she did well. ☺

Youth progress at Newquay

We are rejoicing at the blessing of God on our youth work. During the past seven months we have seen growth in Sunshine Corner, Cadets, and especially in Junior Crusaders. Approximately 90-100 children have been reached midweeks and the double-deck bus hired for the purpose has regularly been filled to capacity. The children have also collected a record number of Green Shield stamps for the "Mini-buses for missionaries" scheme. To round off the winter's work we held a sausage sizzle on the beach, and strains of choruses sung to guitar accompaniment filled the air.

Then came Holiday Bible Club, for which sixty children enrolled. Attendance averaged forty-five per day. Members gladly co-operated in every way to form a team of helpers who ably supported the teaching staff. We were thankful to see the Holy Spirit working in the deepening grasp and experience of spiritual truths developing in the children's lives.

For the Gospel service designated "Parents' and guest night" on the Sunday following the club, we produced a filmstrip of the club activities. So many parents and relatives came that extra seating had to be brought into the church to accommodate them all.

Following this service refreshments were served and parents and friends viewed the display of handcrafts and other work done by the children. Many parents expressed appreciation of our efforts with their children and new links were forged. God blessed from beginning to end and one teenager received Christ as Saviour on this happy occasion.

Britain awake!

by F. J. DAY

A NEWSPAPER reporter present at the evening service in the Elim Pentecostal Church, Longton, Stoke-on-Trent, reported the following in the Sentinel :

“ ‘ Britain is sliding into Communism faster than is generally realised.’ Those words of warning came from Mr. Noel Doubleday, general secretary of Gateway Fellowship, an evangelistic organisation, when he briefly introduced the main speaker of the evening—Siberian-born evangelist Earl Poysti—at Elim Pentecostal Church, Dresden. Mr. Doubleday recalled a confession made by a Scottish converted Communist, who declared that when he worked for the party in Scotland his task was to keep a black book of keen Christians who could be marked out for persecution if ever Communists gained authority. ‘ Many Christians may have their names in the Lamb’s Book of Life, but they are also in their Book of Death,’ he asserted. ‘ Who is to say that Christians active in their churches are not marked men and women all over the country? For Communists are out to rule the world with their pernicious tyranny.’ ”

“ Father-of-ten Mr. Poysti gave a long but interesting account of how Christians had to live in the Soviet Union amid intolerance and persecution. Mr. Poysti, now an American citizen, is engaged in a regular Christian radio ministry to Russia’s 235,000,000 people.

“ ‘ Despite all attempts to ridicule and denounce the Christian faith, there is a hunger for the loving, liberating Word of God,’ Mr. Poysti told a packed congregation. They are hungry for Bibles and one man offered the equivalent of 200 dollars for just one page of the gospel.’ ”

“ He told of the miraculous power of the Holy Spirit in aiding those in dire trouble and said that conversions and revivals were reported in areas where the gospel of love had never before been heard or witnessed.

“ When Russian customs men opened cases which contained Bibles that were hidden, prayers were offered to the ‘ God who gave sight to the blind that he would make the eyes of those who saw not to notice, and little miracles were ten a penny.’ ”

“ ‘ Those who by their indifference and hostility to the Christian faith are doing what they can to put out the light of the gospel in this country would do well to take heed. There may come a time when it will be too late and they will be bound in the chains of tyranny and no longer free.’ ”

Awake

So much for the report. Did Paul foresee the danger when he wrote to the Ephesian church, “ Wherefore He saith, awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light ” ? Was a deep sleep already coming over the Church ?

Some years ago a young lady caught up with the world of lustful pleasures was often found stupefied with alcohol, lying among the grave-stones of the parish church, wet with dew. I have often wondered how such a lovely, brilliant young lady could fall into such a terrible condition, yet she had fallen a victim to the snares of evil. Paul’s words present the same picture. He goes on to say, “ Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess ; but be filled with the Spirit.” Christians can be so stupefied with the wine of material things that they become insensitive to spiritual things.

Arise

Sleepers cannot save people in peril. We need to be alive to the need, to have the light of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ which is “ the power of God unto salvation.”

Sleepers cannot save a nation. They must be alive to be defenders of the faith. Jesus said to Peter concerning the Church, “ and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.” We have nothing to fear from Communism, but we must lift up the standard of the cross, of holiness, of love.

Sleepers cannot uphold the banner or help the needy brethren who are persecuted and imprisoned. Men everywhere are required to “ pray and not to faint.”

*The need of the world is Jesus,
To satisfy its longing soul !*

Jesus said, “ I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me.”

Amazing Grace

I HAD a trip to Birmingham this spring and spent a pleasant morning looking round the shops with a friend. Rather surprisingly we heard the sound of bagpipes issuing from a music shop. Pushing through the crowds, we saw a gay display of tartan in the window and pictures of the military band of the Royal Scots and its pipers together with all the usual advertising inducements to buy the record of "Amazing grace." It was certainly selling like the proverbial hot cakes. The shop was full of eager buyers and people just standing and listening as the strains of the old hymn came over the air played almost plaintively by the pipes.

There is no doubt that one either likes or loathes the music of the bagpipes and as I am one of the former, being conditioned by my many years in Scotland, I bought a record.

Strangely enough I have only one hymn book which contains this hymn set to this lovely old Scottish tune, the song book of the American Assemblies of God, which my husband brought back with him in 1949. The glorious words were penned long ago by John Newton. It was popular in evangelical circles in 1949 and now the first record made by Judy Collins proved a "top of the pops," to be followed by the fantastic success of this latest disc. It seems an all-time favourite. Already at the time of writing 130,000 people have purchased this record.

I am glad that a simple, noble hymn tune with such tender words of Christian faith is so popular, but I have a question mark in my mind and heart. Do the words have any real meaning for the average teenager and for all those who slavishly follow the pop scene? There is a very significant passage of Scripture in Ezekiel 33:30-33. God was speaking to His prophet Ezekiel and warning him of the careless attitude of the people of his day to the message of the Almighty. How penetrating is God's perception! He saw through the apparent willingness to hear the teaching of the prophet. It was all an empty charade, a sad deception, and the unbelieving, disobedient people regarded Ezekiel as a source of pleasing entertainment. His burning words of warning and coming judgment had as much effect as a popular love song. The words translated in the Authorised Version, "Thou art unto them as a very lovely song," in the original Hebrew mean "You are to them like a passionate love lyric." God concluded, "They hear thy words, but they do them not."

There never has been such a craze for music as there is today—music in factories, in supermarkets, in long-distance coaches, in the home as a background to housework and leisure. Young people carry their transistors everywhere they go. Very often the music is just a soothing sound, an opiate; the words mean very little. Is this how the Christian message, the gospel, the amazing grace of God is regarded—just a love song, a change from the usual catchy tunes, the folk music and the westerns? God forbid! We who firmly believe in the truth of the Gospel message must witness, pray and sing with renewed earnestness and, like Ezekiel, declare the Word of the Lord.

The prophet spoke to a captive people and God made him a watchman to Israel. He knew the bitterness of discouragement, but the hand of the Lord was strong on him and so he persevered. We face a captive people, too, bound by sin, unbelief, sorrow and even despair. Though they may not heed God's message, we must continue to speak and to warn and to pray that this amazing grace may yet reach them that in truthfulness they may yet sing:

*I once was lost, but now I'm found,
Was blind, but now I see.*

Pastor Alexander Tee

I believe I write on behalf of the whole Elim Youth Movement when I express to Pastor Alexander Tee the deep appreciation of us all for his faithful, fearless leadership as National Youth Director. His ministry in this office spans ten years. The spirit of evangelism has permeated the ranks of our youth departments through the example of Mr. Tee. He has spent himself in the task of building up Sunday schools, Sunshine Corners and Crusaders in the only way the Bible prescribes—by evangelistic outreach. He has held tenaciously to what he believes to be the truth of holiness and has left a distinctive witness to the importance of the baptism of the Holy Ghost. During his term as National Youth Director he was elected to the honoured position of President of the Elim Pentecostal Church—a token of the respect and regard in which he is held. Mr. Tee is now taking up a ministry of full-time evangelism.

Join the Revolution !

by Eldin R. Corsie

NATIONAL YOUTH DIRECTOR

Eldin R. Corsie.

REVOLUTION—this word has dark, sinister overtones! Nevertheless, it describes what I believe to be the answer to a sex-saturated, violence-orientated, drug-peddling society. There must be a change; we cannot sit in our comfortable pews and merely soak in the weekly sermons. Our business is to spill out into the streets and highways and win the lost for Christ. We must witness to win!

No method of communication is as effective as the God-created one of speaking. The world is now prepared to listen. Young people are ready to demonstrate their faith by dynamic, spiritual revolution. There is an upsurge in religion among the young which has probably not been paralleled for centuries. The spotlight has been on rock operas such as Jesus Christ Superstar and Godspell. The saintly John Newton would turn over in his grave if he knew that his hymn "Amazing Grace" appeared at the top of the charts—or would he? The name of Jesus has hit the headlines.

In America the Jesus movement is escalating. Top rock bands have been converted and are now singing for Christ. Jesus People centres have sprung up everywhere in every State of the Union, including many in Hawaii, and even in Utah in Salt Lake City, in houses, halls, inns, churches—anywhere where they can meet for Bible study, prayers and fellowship, and from which they go out to witness. Tens of thousands of young people are being converted. Now this movement is in Britain. Young folk have flocked to the meetings of Arthur Blessitt—a leader in the Jesus Movement. It is bound to make an impact here. Can Elim youth capture the zeal and revolutionary spirit of this movement?

Then there is the emergence of the Festival of Light. I have had the privilege of serving on the council of this movement and have observed the dedication and sense of mission that this group has generated. The crowds who turned out in Trafalgar Square and Hyde Park on September 25th last bore testimony to the concern that exists in the hearts of Christian people for a return to Biblical standards. The national newspapers seemed impressed that the majority were young people prepared to be militant in the demonstration of their faith. The occasion provided a fillip to those who felt that the world was against them and that the Church was on the losing side because it was a minority which did not, in the main, care about the state of society.

One of the great dangers in the Church is that we are afraid to express our views unless we are first sure that everybody agrees. On that basis slavery would never have been abolished by Christians. We are thankful that Wilberforce and others fought the campaign, which was very long and very bitter and divided Christians deeply.

The revolution of which I write includes the removal of both moral and environmental pollution. One of the most significant marks of this spiritual revolution is the penetration of the Pentecostal message into all the major historic denominations. The blessing has appeared in many unusual places. The programmes of college Christian unions are not now complete without prominence being given to the subject of the baptism in the Holy Ghost.

Young people are hungry for the fulness of the Spirit. This is our moment of opportunity. God is on the march in this spiritual revolution. Are we prepared to move with God, away from our interesting, entertaining youth programmes to the cold, cruel streets of our town or city, fearlessly witnessing to the glory of the gospel? If we are Crusaders we must crusade, and this will inevitably include spiritual revolution. Will you join the revolution NOW?

Monday, May 29th

1 Samuel 19: 1-24

"Is Saul also among the prophets?" (v. 24).

Saul now openly declared his intention to kill David. Before speaking to his father Jonathan waited until the morning when Saul's temper would have cooled. Jonathan's remonstrations revealed his fidelity to his father and to David. Temporary reconciliation was the result. David fled for his life once again (v. 10). Michal's love for David was proved by word and deed (vv. 11-17). Samuel was in retirement in Ramah superintending the school of the prophets. Hearing that David was with Samuel, Saul decided to go after David himself determined to kill him, but the Spirit of Him who can change hearts came upon Saul and he prophesied. In making the wrath of man to praise Him, God preserved the lives of the prophets, frustrated the purpose of Saul and saved David's life.

Tuesday, May 30th

1 Samuel 20: 1-23

"What have I done?" (v. 1).

This ageless question was wrung from David as it has been from multitudes down through the years. Evil seeks to persecute and to cause suffering by trial to the godly (2 Timothy 3:12; John 16:33). Despite the danger Samuel probably advised David to return to the court while there was hope of reconciliation with Saul. Jonathan thought that his father would not hide his intentions from him, but David comprehended Saul's malevolence and so openly revealed all (vv. 2, 3). There was no jealousy or rivalry in Jonathan's heart as he renewed the covenant with David (vv. 16, 17). The words in verse 23 reveal the solemn nature of the covenant, for God sees and knows all things (Genesis 31:49, 53).

Wednesday, May 31st

1 Samuel 20: 24-42

"The Lord be between thee and me" (v. 42).

Jonathan proved Saul's intentions towards David. Saul even turned on his own son (v. 30—literally "brandished his spear"). After the agreed signal had been given (vv. 21, 22) Jonathan sought a farewell meeting with David by the stone Ezel ("stone of departure"), where David, respecting the king's son and heir, fell on his face to the ground. Jonathan nobly assured David of his friendship and of his desire for God's peace. Now commenced the long period of trial and persecution of David as Jonathan returned to the city to fulfil his very difficult filial duties in the crisis precipitated by his father.

Thursday, June 1st

1 Samuel 21: 1-15

"Why art thou alone?" (v. 1).

David fled for comfort, counsel and the supply of necessities to Nob in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, a city of the priests (22:19; Isaiah 10:32). Ahimelech, the high priest, a good man, was a great-grandson of Eli (14:3; 22:11, 20). Through fear David lied to Ahimelech, possibly excusing himself on the ground of saving his life, though in the sight of God, circumstances do not change the character of sin. The act of partaking of the bread (vv. 3-6) was referred to by Jesus (Matthew 12:3). David's peril was revealed by the desperate flight to Achish and the feigned madness, but in his hour of need David learned that whoever trusts God will never be alone and will be strengthened.

Friday, June 2nd

1 Samuel 22: 1-19

"Get thee into . . . Judah" (v. 5).

A few miles south-west of Bethlehem is the valley of Elah, where rows of enormous caves are still to be seen. To the cave Adullam came a motley crowd, poor material for an army. It is a tribute to David's personality and genius that he forged them into a force of 400 men, later increased to 600 (23:13). Because the king of Moab was an enemy of Saul (14:47) and David was the great-grandson of Ruth, a Moabitess, he had less anxiety in seeking asylum in Moab, but he was warned to return to Judah. It was sound advice for David to appear publicly among his own tribe as one conscious of innocence and trusting in God. David's earlier deceit (21:2) had disastrous consequences (vv. 16-19).

Saturday, June 3rd

1 Samuel 22: 20-23; 23: 1-14

"David inquired of the Lord" (23:2).

Though he had caused disaster, David confessed his fears and because he firmly trusted in the accomplishment of the Divine promise guaranteed protection to Abiathar. God delights to honour faith and fulfil His word. Though he had a band of men with him David was not presumptuous, but sought the mind of God relating to battle with the Philistines (vv. 2, 4). Reckoning without God's knowledge, Saul was convinced that David was now his victim, unwilling to be convinced that the special protection of Divine providence shielded David from him. Saul's foolish statement (23:7) highlighted his blindness to God's rejection of the king himself.

Sunday, June 4th

1 Samuel 23: 15-29

"Thou shalt be king over Israel" (v. 17).

David fled to the wild, rocky tract between the mountains of Judah and the Dead Sea. Here occurred the last meeting between Jonathan and David. It brightened their lives during a very dark time. To the end Jonathan was full of faith and reconciled to the Divine will that David should be king. What a victory over natural feelings and lower considerations must Jonathan's faith have won (v. 17)! Renewing their covenant, David and Jonathan parted, never to meet again on earth. Saul pursued David, false hopes filling his heart, but in the providence of God he was called away to another more pressing campaign (v. 27, 28).

A Christian's prayer

*Lord, let me feel Thy touch on my soul
Though in Thy hand it lies crushed and still;
Thus shall I know Thy powerful control,
Broken and bleeding shall I know Thy will.*

BREAK me, O Lord, and let me not resist the crushing of Thy hand, for if I am in Thine hand then am I crushed by the power of love, which crushes only to make anew, to melt, to mould, that it might fill with love itself and power so great that unless the vessel were moulded by Thy love it could not contain the power that would be poured into its depths that it might know the fulfilment of life.

So, break me, Lord, and melt me in the Refiner's fire that the darts of hell may not deter Thy purpose in the vessel that has been refined in the hot glow of love. Then mould me, Lord, and in Thy hands even I shall be a vessel full of love, power, purity, twice made, but made the second time a purpose to fulfil—to have the Christ-life poured within and so to give out not one drop misted by impurity, but shining clear and radiant, that it may be refreshing to the souls around.

O Lord, keep always before my eyes the vision of Thy purpose in my life that, when I feel the crushing of Thy hand, I may be rested in my soul, knowing that only Love Himself can crush with hand so gentle and with that same hand pour in the oil of healing, making strong that which it hath crushed.

"He woundeth, and His hands make whole" (Job 5:18).

5. Sacrifice

by J. Osman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

IN 2 Samuel 24:10-25; 1 Chronicles 21 is the account of David numbering the people, the punishment he received and the sequel as to how David sacrificed when the hand of the Lord was stayed.

Numbering the people may seem of small account to us, but the outcome shows that it was no light thing in the sight of God. A surface reading of the context does not make clear why David erred, but it was wrong and sinful. The numbering was never completed because Joab refused to number Levi and Benjamin and because God intervened.

Gad the prophet came to David with a choice of three things by way of punishment: seven years of famine; three months of defeat and retreat before their enemies; three days of pestilence in the land. He was presented with a terrible choice! What would you have done? Would you want it long drawn out or short and sharp? David said: "I am in a great strait: let us now fall into the hand of the Lord" (2 Samuel 24:14).

"It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Hebrews 10:31). I read of one Christian who was plagued by this verse, for the Devil can use isolated Scriptures to destroy the peace of mind of God's people. He even had the audacity to quote Scripture to Christ. Ultimately this Christian brother resisted the Devil by saying: "I would prefer to fall into His hand rather than yours."

David followed his choice with these words, which are beyond dispute: "For His mercies are great: and let me not fall into the hand of man" (2 Samuel 24:14).

God sent a pestilence and in three days 70,000 men of war died. The numbering of the people was for the purpose of assessing the number who could take up arms, hence it was an attempt to discover the strength of the nation (1 Chronicles 21:5). This was pride, presumption, an insult to God. Hitherto the strength of Israel had not been measured by numbers, but by the strength of the Lord their God. God had put to flight the hosts of Midian, who were like grasshoppers for multitude. He whittled down Gideon's men from 32,000 to 300 and they won the battle with the queerest array of armaments that any army has ever used.

We can be guilty of gauging our strength in numerical terms. We number our congregations and assess our strength thereby. God forgive us! It is good to see crowds and we are aware of the psychological effect that numbers have upon both preacher and congregation. I am delighted when the numbers are up and we strive to this end, for the more who come so the more hear the gospel. I would to God that we were all crowded to capacity, but the Psalmist said, "Blessed is the man whose strength is in Thee" (Psalm 84 : 5). Take heart, little flock, for you are as strong as the Rock that shelters you! Be dauntless and encourage yourselves in the Lord, for the Lord can give the increase. Be on your guard against discouragement and the temptation to blame the pastor or some problem for your lack of success. James Salter used to say that the shepherd does not produce the lambs; it is the flock that increases itself. Any good ewe will present the shepherd with at least one lamb a year.

The pestilence stopped and the Angel of the Lord stayed his hand at the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. God ordered David to offer sacrifice at this place. Ornan and his sons were busily engaged in threshing wheat and it seemed unlikely that Ornan would part with his threshing-floor at harvest-time, when he needed it the most, but, when David and his retinue presented themselves at Ornan's house, they found him ready to co-operate to an unexpected extent. He offered the threshing floor as a gift and he invited David to help himself to the oxen for sacrifices, to chop up as many of the threshing instruments as necessary for firewood, and to use the wheat for the meat offering. He was so anxious to help that he entirely disregarded his own need: "Take it . . . I give it all" (1 Chronicles 21 : 23).

Many of us would afterwards have given a testimony something like this: "When I arrived at Ornan's threshing-floor I found that God had undertaken in a remarkable way and moved upon Ornan's heart to a degree that I never anticipated. He offered me everything that I needed without charge. I snapped up his offer immediately and praised God for paving the way for me. This was surely the Lord's doing and it was marvellous in my eyes."

You would be quite wrong to imagine that this was David's reaction. He graciously declined the offer and, with sublime principle, this man after God's own heart declared: "Nay; but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing." Can such a principle be bettered?

David was not prepared to take the easy way, to have a religion that cost him nothing. Had he accepted, he would have been offering Ornan's sacrifice and not his own.

Our Christianity should cost us something. Indeed there is a price to pay for everything. Our salvation was costly (Philippians 2 : 5-8). Is the spirit of sacrificial giving a thing of the past? One leading evangelist said recently that he was disturbed by the lack of willingness of Christians to become involved in efforts to reach the lost. Few will give up time after the meetings to act as counsellors or advisers. Involvement means sacrifice.

I believe it was Mrs. Booth who was once challenged when she overheard her children playing at Noah's ark. After the ark had come to rest upon Mount Ararat they decided to offer sacrifice as Noah had done. Much rummaging among the toy animals was rewarded at last, "Here's the very thing!" exclaimed one child, holding up a lamb with a leg missing. "It isn't much good so God can have it." "Is this what you do?" asked a still small voice in the mother's heart.

In Malachi's day the spirit of sacrifice had vanished from Israel. Folk were withholding their best from God. They brought sick, blind and lame animals for sacrifice. Not only this, they found it a boring procedure that wearied them. The response was: "But cursed be the deceiver, which hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing: for I am a great King, saith the Lord of hosts, and My name is dreadful among the heathen" (Malachi 1 : 14).

God wants and deserves the best. Do you give to God what costs you the least? If so, may God stir your heart to give sacrificially of time, talent and tithe. We are put to shame so often by those whom we call heathen. In her devotion to her idols an Indian woman was compelled to sacrifice one of her twin boys by throwing him into the river. One twin was thin and sickly, the other robust and healthy. She sacrificed the healthy boy, saying, "Nothing but the best is good enough for my god."

The man after God's own heart is prepared to make sacrifices that are sacrificial.

BRADFORD

Pastor : D. J. Green

After a brief Communion service, about 150 people said goodbye to Southend Hall, Bradford, and forty years of evangelism in the old building had come to an end. Over forty cars lined up to take the people on a procession through the crowded city to the beautiful new building standing on the main road which leads to the M1. Hundreds more had gathered to share in the great event and extra seats were used. The extension hall had to be opened to accommodate the crowd.

The door was opened by Secretary-General J. T. Bradley, who spoke in the service. Administrative Secretary J. C. Smyth spoke in the evening rally.

The building has been purpose-built to enable the all-age Christian education programme to function every Sunday and a full-time day nursery for thirty children to run each weekday. The design is attractive and the layout efficient. The church dominates a prominent corner on the busy road.

In the opening service tribute was paid to all who had worked so hard to keep the cost to a minimum. Greetings were read from many old friends of the church. Congratulations were given by many, including the Lord Mayor and the Right Honourable Ben Ford, M.P.

During the first week the local minister conducted a crusade and over twenty people decided for the Lord.

BLACKPOOL (Jubilee Temple)

Pastor : L. E. Lambert

The crusade commenced with over 200 in attendance and thirty recorded decisions for Christ. Since then over 200 have intimated their need of a Saviour and scores have praised God for touches of healing upon their bodies, including one lady who claims that God has healed her of cancer of the stomach.

The Saturday night rallies have been heavenly. Over 400 attended the first and were thrilled at the singing of the Liverpool Christian Chorale, comprising sixty voices. An even greater number—approximately 450—came to the second, when the Selly Oak Male Voice Choir ministered in song. A group of over thirty Anglicans from Warrington also assisted the meeting in which over forty souls came to Christ.

The midweek meetings have been averaging just above the 100 mark, great interest being shown in the Wednesday afternoon Divine healing services.

Towards the end of the crusade two meetings were held on the Sunday at 6.30 and 8. Numbers were approximately eighty-five and 100 respectively.

Thanks are recorded to the Presbytery and to the local Assembly of God for support. The musical team have served the crusade well : Pastor P. G. Parsons on the instruments and Kelvin Thomas and Pastor W. Hunter with their anointed voices. The crusade leader, Pastor L. E. Lambert, has thrilled the congregation with the presentation of Jesus. To Him be the glory !

CLACTON-ON-SEA Pastor : H. Burton-Haynes

"Happiness" was the theme of our services when we were celebrating the fortieth year of ministry by our pastor. A special service was called by the deacons on the Saturday afternoon, when all the Clacton Elim family gathered together to share in lovely fellowship with our pastor and his wife. Many surprises awaited them.

The service started with that lovely hymn, "O happy day." Each deacon paid tribute to the pastor. As a quintet sang "Come, Thou Fount of every blessing," two of our children, Lois and Eunice Nation, presented to Mrs. Burton-Haynes a lovely bouquet. Our treasurer presented a cheque to Pastor Burton-Haynes. The secretary, after giving his tribute, presented to Pastor and Mrs. Burton-Haynes a leather-bound book suitably inscribed in gold lettering, "Down Memory Lane." The book contained hundreds of signatures of people from all parts of the British Isles. These included ministers and members from many churches where Pastor Burton-Haynes had served as pastor, and many names of old friends from before and at the beginning of his ministry for God. Dozens of letters of congratulations, some from overseas, were described by one of our deacons. After this service guests and our Clacton people were asked to go into the hall next door, where a beautiful horseshoe-style tea table was all set out. There was a splendid anniversary cake, a gift by two of our members. Pastor and Mrs. Burton-Haynes gave profuse thanks and were delighted with all the arrangements.

On Saturday evening we had a thanksgiving service, when visitors from the Eastern Presbytery churches and from as far away as Croydon, Letchworth and Bournemouth and friends and ministers of local churches were present. Our guest speaker, who shared in all our services during the weekend, was Pastor G. W. Gilpin, Principal of Elim Bible College. On Saturday evening he was supported by the Chelmsford choir. Sunday's services were well supported and the messages from Pastor Gilpin were enjoyed by all. Testimonies were given by converts of Pastor

Burton-Haynes, and our church choir and the deacons' quintet supported in song. So once again we can say "Hitherto has the Lord helped us."

CREWE

Pastor : M. C. Epton

One of the first tasks of a manual nature which our pastor set himself and the brethren of our assembly in the new year was the completion of our baptistry, which had been in different stages of construction for over four years. After tests to prove that the baptistry was watertight, a group of our young folk helped in painting the interior and the brethren purchased, connected and tested a heater. We praise God because there were no hitches in our preparations for our first baptismal service.

During the meeting the Lord richly honoured us with His blessing as five candidates—two Sunday school teachers and three pupils—followed the Lord through the waters.

J. D. TALBOT.

SOUTHPORT

Pastor : L. N. Knipe

"The Prize-winners" may sound like the title of a new television series, but for sixty to seventy children in Southport it was the theme for a week of activity and excitement. They met night after night to take part in quizzes and sing-songs, watch filmstrips, and make items ranging from small toy frogs to more mundane dishcloths. Our church was the centre of a mission led by Peter Lee, a full-time worker among children, who, winning the respect and admiration of the children, showed in a light-hearted and interesting way how they could be prize-winners, and live life fully by becoming followers of Jesus Christ. Throughout, the children were encouraged to participate in and to enjoy the programme. From 6.30 to 7.15 there were quizzes, songs and a film-strip in serial form giving an up-to-date version of Pilgrim's Progress.

After refreshments the children followed up what they had learned by drawing, decoding messages, and sticking papers into their own scrap books. The final part of each evening was devoted to making wastepaper bins, oven gloves, letter racks and mobiles which were given to a missionary home in Halsall and to a local children's hospital.

On the last evening many of the parents came to see what their children had been doing and to enjoy a hot supper while the children displayed their handiwork.

SOUTH SHIELDS Pastor: A. P. Johnston

From a seventy-year-old man who "went in limping and left running" to a woman who claimed that her blind eye had opened—such are the divine healings recorded in a fortnight's evangelistic crusade, that the sponsor, Elim Pentecostal Church, is to set up a permanent home in South Shields.

Alexander Tee, leader of the crusade which has packed the Bolingbroke Hall each night, Preparing the new church.

confirmed that his church had taken a lease on St. Paul's church hall and adjoining classrooms in Westoe Road, with a view to becoming permanently established in the town.

Delighted by the large attendances and the enthusiasm of his South Shields congregations, Alexander Tee, A. P. Johnston, Daryl Richardson, D. G. Woodfield and local helpers move the pulpit into the new church.

Mr. Alexander Tee said: "Success has far exceeded our expectations.

"On Sunday we had to bring nearly 100 extra chairs over from Sunderland to meet the needs. There is no doubt that a warm and friendly spirit exists among the people of this area."

He said that there had been a number of remarkable healing cases within the last few nights—from one specifically mentioned in the Gazette, to "a number of arthritis cases and a woman who claimed that her blind eye had been opened."

A sixty-five-year-old South Shields woman has been cured of deafness after a visit to the evangelistic crusade—fifteen years after a visit to a similar campaign in Newcastle enabled her to walk.

Mrs. Isabella Raine, of West Way, is sure that a heart ailment, which is threatening her with a complex operation, will also clear up.

At her home yesterday she described that visit. "I went into the service and I was wearing the hearing aid. I was asked to fill in a card, but there is so much wrong with me I did not know where to start. Mr. Tee asked me 'What is your illness?' and I told him I am a very sick woman."

Mrs. Raine has worn a powerful hearing aid for the past eleven years, but after a visit to the crusade she has been able to discard it, and now hears as well as anybody of her age.

"I said 'I can hear you perfectly' and he walked back and back and I could still hear him. It was so exciting," she said.

Mrs. Raine returned to the crusade to show her medical card, and found that one of the ministers with Mr. Tee was the man whom she had met fifteen years ago when she was enabled to walk freely again.

The Gift of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

2. At the beginning

Acts 2

THE statement by Jesus about tongues (Mark 16) was prophetic. In Acts 2 we have the first historical record of other tongues. Between the prediction and its first fulfilment there elapsed a period of some seven weeks. In the Old Testament feasts there was the Passover, followed by the firstfruits, which marked the beginning of a week of weeks, i.e. seven sevens of days. On the fiftieth day came the feast of weeks (Leviticus 23 : 4-21). These are fulfilled in Christ "our Passover"; His resurrection is "the firstfruits of them that slept"; and the outpouring of the Spirit came on the day of Pentecost ("pente" = fifty, i.e. the fiftieth day). This particular day always fell on the first day of the week (Leviticus 23 : 15), so on this Pentecost Sunday, at about 9 a.m., the disciples were waiting upon God.

Chapter and verse divisions in the Bible were made by men for the sake of convenience. Some of them are very artificial and break a sequence of thought. Acts 2 : 1-4 belong closely to chapter 1 and must be taken in its light.

The geographical location. The "place" and "house" have often been taken to mean the "upper room" of 1 : 13. The terms used are inconclusive and other evidence favours a more public place, probably somewhere in the temple area (Luke 24 : 53). The hearing of the voices, a large crowd gathering, the visibility of the speakers to the hearers, seem to indicate a much more public place than an upper room in a private house. The upper room is mentioned as the lodging place of the eleven in Jerusalem where others probably gathered too, but so far as public worship was concerned the disciples still seemed to resort to the temple (2 : 46 ; 3 : 1).

The Divine manifestation. Two things came "from heaven," i.e. from God : one was audible to the ear—a sound like "a rushing mighty wind"; the other was visible to the eye—"cloven tongues like as of fire." The presence of God was demonstrated in a way both heard and seen and, in describing such indescribable things, Luke could only use natural phenomena to give us some idea of what it was like.

The participants' identification. This is one point where chapter 1 is indispensable, for 2 : 1-4 contains only indefinite pronouns. Some maintain that "they" and "them" refers to "the eleven apostles" of 1 : 26. This overlooks that 1 : 26 is only a record of an action taken by about 120 disciples (1 : 15). "They" of 1 : 26 clearly means the whole company of disciples, therefore the pronouns of 2 : 1-4 point back to the whole group and not only the apostolic section within it.

The speaking with tongues

(vv. 4-13)

"Tongues" in verse 4 is the same word as used by Jesus in Mark 16. They are being spoken by "them that believe." Thus the situation is exactly as predicted by Christ.

The cause stated. "As the Spirit gave them utterance" clearly establishes the supernatural nature and Divine origin of the tongues. Indeed it would be difficult to be more explicit than : "they began to speak . . . as the Spirit gave them utterance." There is a direct link between the Spirit of God and the sounds being uttered by the disciples. The organs used are human ; the sounds uttered have been given by the Spirit. Thus the yielded disciples became vehicles for a miracle wrought by the Holy Spirit in the oral realm.

The languages identified. Tongues were not being used here as a crowd-drawing gimmick, yet a crowd was drawn. It was very cosmopolitan in character, composed of Jews of every nation. It is noteworthy that mention of "Jews" is made only with reference to this gathering crowd ; there is no such identification mark used of the saints. Most of these Jews were probably in Jerusalem for the Jewish feast of Pentecost, a "feast of weeks" as it is sometimes called. They recognised some of the languages spoken as their native tongues. "Tongues" (v. 11) is the same as in v. 4. "Language" (v. 6) and "tongue" (v. 8) are translations of a different word: dialektos, from which we get "dialect," which refers to native, local peculiarities of language. The meaning is that the disciples were speaking in foreign languages as fluently as if they were their native tongues, a very difficult thing to do. This fluency of utterance must have been very impressive as the Jews drew special attention to it. How many languages were represented in the crowd is uncertain. Neither does it state that these were the only languages being spoken. The disciples were speaking in languages which their hearers did not think they could know (vv. 7, 8). The utterances were fluent and the languages clearly recognisable by foreigners.

The content declared. What were the disciples saying when they spoke in tongues? The answer was given by those not prejudiced in favour of the speakers, for the crowd were still unbelieving Jews, yet they testified of having heard "the wonderful works of God." From Jews this could only mean the mighty acts of God recorded in the Old Testament. They would have recognised no other as such.

The form used. The testimony of the Jews raises a further question. In what way did the disciples present "the wonderful works of God"? Some affirm that it was in evangelistic fashion to the unbelieving Jews. We reject this for several reasons.

There is no suggestion anywhere in the New Testament that "tongues" were given as a means of preaching the gospel. "Tongues" are declared to be a "sign to them that believe not" (1 Corinthians 14 : 22), but are never said to be an evangelistic message to such. The disciples were speaking in tongues before any crowd gathered at all. It is clear that the message which brought many to Christ was contained in the sermon by Peter. The preaching of Peter obviously did not regard the crowd as having already heard an evangelistic message via other tongues. Of the sermon "there is no suggestion that Peter's address was spoken in a tongue unknown to himself" (F. F. Bruce, New London Commentary on Acts, p. 67). Some argue that Peter's reference to "prophecy" (vv. 17, 18) favours the "preaching" interpretation. In answer we point out that while the utterances were unknown to the speakers they were known to many hearers. Thus to the latter they were prophetic, having a Divine origin and Scriptural content, but prophetic utterances were often more of worship than of preaching (Luke 1 : 41-45, 67-79). In the absence of any evidence of preaching to men we must conclude that the utterances were Godward and in the form of worship. Support for this view is found in a later reference where those who spoke in tongues were said to "magnify God" (10 : 46). This was the view held by Dr. Campbell Morgan. "That phrase ('the wonderful works of God') is a very arresting one; and is found in only one other place in the New Testament, the Magnificat of Mary. They were not preaching the Gospel in our sense of that great phrase. But in the full consciousness created by the fulness of the Spirit, with all their being stirred to its depths by the inrush of this life of God through Christ, they were uttering words of ecstatic joy as they celebrated the mighty works of God. Such was the phenomenon in itself" (Great Chapters of the Bible, p. 226).

"THE best ever" was the comment freely heard at the end of our 1972 conference. The weather was indifferent, but somehow it did not seem to matter. Ministry was of a high standard. Meetings were packed and enthusiastic. Souls were saved, bodies were healed and there were those who were filled with the Holy Spirit. The Lord's presence and blessing were wonderful to experience. I met two members from one church who were radiant because both had received their personal Pentecost. Another lady demonstrated how God had granted her a touch of healing in that she could move her limbs freely whereas she had found increasing stiffness present before prayer.

A feature was the large attendances at the morning ministry commencing at 7.45 a.m. You just felt you did not want to miss anything.

The preaching and teaching of Denis G. Clark and R. W. Taitinger were deeply appreciated. Our own ministers also served us and the Lord in splendid fashion by their powerful ministry.

The Thursday morning Communion service was graced by the presence of four well-known brethren representing the Evangelical Alliance: Dr. J. M. Laird (their President), Rev. John Stott (President-elect), Rev. John Bird and Mr. Gordon Landreth (Secretary). They visited us from the conference on evangelism being held at the same time at Morecambe.

As readers will know, the pastor of Kensington Temple, London, Eldin R. Corsie, was elected as National Youth Director in succession to Alexander Tee, who is launching out on full-time evangelism. Both brethren are well known and loved. Your prayers are requested that God will mightily use them in their new opportunities of service.

John Lancaster, who has been pastor of our Eastbourne church for nearly fifteen years, was elected President-elect. It was a happy coincidence that he was the preacher at the Thursday morning Communion service. May God richly bless his ministry. He was one of the guest preachers last week at the Assemblies of God conference at Minehead.

Many went home from the conference feeling that there was most definitely a spirit of great expectancy abroad. God is moving in power in many places. May we soon be singing "Coming this way . . . a mighty revival"!

The Presidential Address given at the Conference at Blackpool by T. W. Walker

We—and the Holy Ghost

“And we are His witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost” (Acts 5 : 32).

THE Bible shows that numerical strength is little related to eventual blessing. Zechariah 4 shows that it is not by might, nor by power, but by the Spirit of the Lord. This brings us to that mystical thing we call “atmosphere.” We can hardly define it, no more than we can “blessing” or “glory,” but, like the others, we know when it is there—and when it is not! It is of supreme importance that the whole atmosphere of our meetings, ministry and movement shall be one of faith, hope, expectancy.

Church history shows that revival often comes as a result of many “unknowns” seeking God. Seldom is the commencement of revival as spontaneous as it appears. Revival is of God, but it often seems to arrive when there have been a steady, devoted, sacrificial series of events on the part of many unseen, unsung believers. “Start the work in me” is more wonderfully real than we sometimes expect.

The present situation in our land is all too terribly well known to us. The general moral decline, the often degrading influence of the mass media, the rapid changes, the restlessness, the spread of false cults, black magic and spiritism, the militance of humanism and the revolt against government and authority are too plain for comfort. We are dealing with the old enemies—Satan and sin. In these last of the last days the adversary appears to be rampantly active. We are seeing the exceeding sinfulness of sin and we weep at its effects, not least on children and youth.

In the religious realm we see the rapid advance of the “unity at any price” brigade. Irrespective of doctrine, forgetful of the blood of the martyrs, they paper over the cracks with the august findings of their interminable conferences. We assert that the trend and the terminus can be found in Rome. True unity can only be Bible-based, dependent on the one atonement of the blood of Christ, proclaiming the risen Lord in the power of the Holy Spirit.

Among sections of young people may be observed strange polarisations. Some turn to false Christs, others to a genuine old-time Bible faith. Some adopt semi-evangelical labels and jargon with no heart experience. Many, thank God, are looking to Jesus as their Leader, and, we trust, as their Saviour.

The sometimes disturbing charismatic outpouring is also very much with us. You can hardly turn to any Christian magazine without finding references either pro or anti, either naïve or deeply learned. The experience of speaking with tongues may be being given undue emphasis. This experience with too many has apparently made no difference to liberal and heretical doctrines. Some believe that we must wait with patience for God to bring light to those who have been steeped in traditional darkness. We would feel happier, however, if the present phenomena resulted in more stress on outreach and less on personal happenings.

As we take stock of the situation what has the Bible to say? We affirm that we regard the Book as God-breathed, our Alpha and Omega of faith and practice. Its commands still apply, for the Church now as well as in the Acts of the Apostles.

What was really behind the work of the Church? By joining Matthew 28 : 19, 20; Mark 16 : 15-20; Luke 24 : 46-49; Acts 1 : 8 we discover our first principles. A global view is demanded; it is “all nations,” “all the world,”

“every creature.” Making disciples is the task, by teaching, baptising those who respond in faith, a task which has the glorious encouragement of “the Lord working with them, and confirming His Word with signs following.” It is a going forth to preach, a witness to the risen Christ, to personal Bible knowledge and experience and to the Bible, in the power of the Holy Spirit.

How did it work in the beginning? It was a pagan, antagonistic, unknowing world then, so if the Church spread in those conditions there is surely much for us to learn.

Take the Day of Pentecost. There was the cataclysmic charismatic event. There were ordinary men filled with the Holy Ghost. There was a revolutionised Peter declaring the Word and witnessing to the risen Christ. Conviction of the Spirit ensued, 3,000 were saved and continued in the faith and the Word adds: “And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.”

Recall the events when the man was healed at the beautiful gate (Acts 3, 4). Peter preached the risen Christ and the Scripture and declared salvation. Despite the arrest of the apostles, the number of the men saved was about 5,000. The return to the company, the prayer, the renewed outpouring, the boldness, the fellowship, the sacrifice, the witness to the resurrection, all followed.

The dread caused by the deaths of Ananias and Sapphira seemed to add fuel to the revival flames (Acts 8). Mighty signs and wonders were multiplied. People feared to join the elect as to the natural, but multitudes were none the less saved. Even the passing of Peter’s shadow brought healing. The whole area was moved as many were brought and were healed. The imprisonment of the apostles only served to produce miraculous release from prison and there went Peter again witnessing to the resurrection, declaring the Word, challenging.

They appointed administrators, deacons, only to see more revival still, resulting in the conversion of a great company of the priests and Deacon Stephen doing a good job as an anointed evangelist. His martyrdom only succeeded in bringing a persecution which, far from destroying the Church, caused it to multiply and to spread as mighty miracles were done and hundreds were saved in the outpouring at Samaria. To keep things in proportion the potential behind one convert was highlighted as the human instrument, Philip, was whisked away to win one important man from Africa. Philip’s ministry thereafter continued unabated.

The new birth of the arch enemy, Saul, caused a new, erudite voice to be added to the ever-growing group preaching the risen Christ (Acts 9). He had to leave Jerusalem because of threats, but in all Judæa, Galilee and Samaria, the churches were multiplied. Peter was used to bring healing to Æneas and to Dorcas and once more many were saved. He took the Gospel, howbeit with some reluctance, to Cornelius (Acts 10) and made the first breach in the walls of the Gentile world. The resultant conference in Jerusalem opened wide the door and before long first Barnabas, then he and Paul, were trekking here and there and nearly everywhere. The Bible gives such comments as “almost the whole city,” for example, at Antioch in Pisidia, when some Jews and many Gentiles were saved. A multitude believed at Iconium. Lystra, Pisidia, Perga, Attalia saw and

ELIM CONFERENCE

More pictures and detailed heard the wonderful works of God. Paul, now joined by Silas, on a mission intended to confirm the churches, found them "increasing in number daily." Indecision was solved by a Divine visitation and the Gospel was brought to Europe. Thessalonica, Berea, Athens, Corinth, Ephesus felt the impact of Holy Ghost preaching, some in but days, others, like Ephesus, over months, even years. With some, like Athens, response seemed small. With others, like Ephesus, results seemed few at first, for only twelve were baptised in the Holy Spirit in the beginning, but the eventual awakening was one of the most moving recorded in Scripture.

Note the sublime simplicity of it all. They simply did what they had been told to do—to go everywhere, to everybody, to witness in the power of the Holy Spirit on the authority of the Word that Jesus was alive. Their evangelistic drive, their sense of urgency stemmed from these simple sublimities. The power of the Holy Spirit, the miracles, the conversions, their plain, direct Scripture teaching, their repeated testifying can all be traced to God confirming His Word, for Christ had said, "These signs shall follow them that believe." Is God able to meet the need of this hour? Do you really believe that Jesus is the same today?

Our experience, our heritage must bring a positive response. What then are to be our attitudes? We need a renewed sense of vocation, privilege and authority. "We are His witnesses . . . and so also is the Holy Ghost."

We must maintain first principles, like prayer, tithing, the baptism in the Holy Spirit and fervent, pointed Gospel and Bible teaching.

We must watch modern trends, adopt and adapt those that are prayerfully useful, discard what is merely the gadfly of a passing moment and be slow to discard the old and well-tried until the new is tested and proved.

We must awake to the untapped resources of so-called "lay" ministry. More of our brethren must accept the sacrifice and challenge of what we call "honorary pastorates." Why do we find that people move to new places and settle in non-Pentecostal churches? Why do not they feel that almost overburdening compulsion like Paul, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel"?

Our every enterprise—local church, presbyteries, headquarters, college, music, literature, sisterhoods, youth, Sunday school, overseas work—must be God-glorifying and soul-saving in object and objective.

We must recognise that some things will seem to fail, some altogether, some for a time, but true evangelism is everything, everybody, all the time.

We must give the risen Lord, the inspired Word and the preaching of both in the power of the Holy Spirit over-riding pre-eminence and we must be prepared to give more time for the Holy Spirit to work.

We must evangelise for the glory of God and for its own sake. Did we never open another church, we must still preach the full Gospel.

Our past and our inheritance cause us to rejoice and to give thanks, but if the Lord tarry there is a great future for us in the moving of the power of God. These are the days of the latter rain. "Ask ye of the Lord rain in the time of the latter rain" (Zechariah 10:1) "We—and Holy Ghost" is the slogan!

Part 4—Little Bear is made chief

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

LITTLE BEAR blinked his eyes. He could not believe what he saw, for walking towards him was his father! All through the long, dark night Big Bear had been close by, hidden from sight. While Little Bear slept his father remained awake on the lookout for any wild animal that might have harmed his son. Big Bear had stayed behind the rocks all night, armed with a bow and arrow and a supply of food, ready to give comfort and protection if Little Bear had been unable to face the night alone.

Big Bear ran to his son and hugged him, "Well done, my son!" he said. "You have been very brave. You have passed the hardest test of all. Come, we must return to the settlement to make you chief!"

When they reached the settlement a great cheer went up for Little Bear. The Indians ran to him, welcoming their brave new leader.

They all sat in a circle outside Big Bear's wigwam and ate the food that had been prepared by the squaws. When they had all eaten, Big Bear removed his head-dress and placed it on his son's head. How happy Little Bear was at that moment. What an honour it was to be made chief and to wear the long eagle feathers. Big Bear gave his son a new bow and arrows that he had made specially for him. Then Big Bear led his son over to a new wigwam that had been made by the other Indians. This was Little Bear's very own wigwam, a new wigwam for a new chief!

At last Little Bear was leader of a fine tribe of Indians, mighty warriors like himself. He called his braves and squaws together around his new wigwam. "I have something very important to tell you all," he said.

"I wonder what Little Bear has to say to us," whispered the Indians.

PRAYER and PRAISE

By F. H. COLEMAN

THIS week it is our pleasure to quote another answer to prayer, kindly sent from the Midlands.

"In late January 1959, I was going to a hospital about four miles from my home every night to visit my wife who was seriously ill. The weather was very bad. The roads were covered with snow and ice and I had great difficulty in getting there night after night. To make matters worse we had fog, which lasted for three whole days, though it cleared a little in the daytime. On the third afternoon, at about four o'clock, down it came again. Visibility was only about four yards. I felt fearful about making my journey after finishing my work.

"I was working in my workshop at the time using a circular saw. As I worked I said to myself, 'It only needs a wind to come and it will blow it all away.' So I prayed, 'Lord, send a wind.' A few seconds afterwards I had to go outside to my timber shed and as I went into the yard it was as though someone said 'Stand still and I will show you something.' I stood still and there came a very slight wind as though someone had passed by me. The longer I stood the stronger the wind became. Within a few minutes visibility was a good mile. I went back into my workshop and one of my employees said that he had never seen a fog clear so quickly in all his life. I felt too full to answer him. God had been very close to me and the words of the hymn came to me:

*God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform.*

"It was an experience that I shall never forget and one of the many that come before me when doubts and fears arise."

Thank you, dear brother, for sharing that wonderful answer to prayer with us.

If you wish to send us your answer to prayer we will gladly consider it for publication. Send it to: The Editor, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

FROM T. H. STEVENSON

"LIKE the national habit of not going to church on Sundays"—the phrase has remained with me though I cannot recollect the secular article in which I read the words some days ago. Forgetting the subject but remembering the illustration is not, however, unique. Many sermons have been put in this category!

We long to see a national desire to attend church services rather than merely a national habit, though even the habit as such is good even for the committed Christian. Our Lord "as His custom was, went into the synagogue on the sabbath day." The day after I read the quoted phrase was Sunday, my first Sunday free from ministerial duties. I found myself attending church three times and being in three strikingly contrasting churches added to the interest. In the small village where I was staying I attended the 9.30 a.m. service, and as there had been an earlier Communion service, the attendance of sixty or more, besides the children's choir, would seem better than the national average, not least of the Anglican Church. Incidentally, the vicar in his address, referring to the Anglican as being the Established Church, regretted that it seemed more concerned about its status than its responsibility. There was no invitation for visiting Christians to partake of the Communion, though I had had an earlier conversation with the vicar. Having been confirmed at twelve years of age in the Scottish Episcopal Church I would still have the right to have this privilege if I had wished to assert it. The new or alternative form of service was used and, without even the Magnificat, there remained only the Creed that I was familiar with, but as this was sung I was lost even there. I confess I did, as always, appreciate the large part of the service in which the congregation unitedly participate in audible responses and this was enriched for me by a gentleman behind me with his distinct responses and excellent singing.

From there I went several miles to a "young" Elim Pentecostal Church for the Communion service. The attendance was at least equal to the Anglican Church. I was immediately at home in this new church in a new town—Crawley. New towns, whose populations have been uprooted from traditional backgrounds, are not the easiest places in which to pioneer, but here were numerous young men and women—almost the major part of the congregation—freely taking part in the time of open worship. With a minister who also follows a full-time secular occupation, here was a most encouraging witness for Elim.

In the evening I went to the only other meeting place in the village, the Evangelical Church. With seventeen present, the congregation was above average. The preacher was sincere and capable. The service certainly lacked life, though the faithful congregation were evidently sound. Many sound believers must remember Paul's full exhortation: "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." I admired the definite testimony in black and white above the pulpit and on the six window pelmets, the affirmations of Christ in John's Gospel: "I am the way, the truth and the life," "I am the resurrection and the life," "I am the light of the world," "I am the good shepherd," "I am the door," "I am the bread of life," "I am the true vine." Locally known as the "tin chapel," the little church contrasted greatly with the twelfth-century historic Anglican church and both contrasted with the new, attractive Elim church with its ample, modern facilities. If one thought only of the buildings rather than seemingly judging the respective merits of the services, I would consider that an attractive modern building would more likely do something to revive even the habit of going to church on Sundays.

The Spiritual Railway

ON a memorial stone at Ely erected to the memory of "Messrs. Pickering and Edger who died December 24th, 1845" appear the following lines.

*The Line to heaven by Christ was made.
With heavenly truth the rails are laid.
From earth to heaven the Line extends
To life eternal where it ends.
Repentance is the station then
Where passengers are taken in.
No fee for them is there to pay,
For Jesus is Himself the Way.
God's Word is the first engineer ;
It points the way to heaven so dear.
Through tunnels dark and dreary here.
It does the way to glory steer.
God's love the fire, His truth the steam,
Which drives the engine and the train.
All you who would to glory ride
Must come to Christ, in Him abide
In First and Second and Third Class,
Repentance, Faith and Holiness.
You must the way to glory gain
Or you with Christ will not remain.
Come then poor sinners, now's the time
At any station on the Line.
If you'll repent and turn from sin
The train will stop and take you in.*

I have done quite a lot of travelling by British Rail in the last few months and I confess quite freely that the delight I knew as a child when taking a train journey is still with me. I find rail travel on the whole pleasurable, comfortable and entertaining. Thus the poem I have shared with you caught my fancy. Though it is not great poetry, it expresses the way of salvation clearly and must have been a silent witness thereto for over 100 years. I wonder if the Sunday school choruses "Join the gospel express" and "We're travelling to the mansion on the Happy Day express" owe their inspiration to the verses on the memorial stone.

In its heyday the railway was a great, exciting enterprise. We all learned at school of the success of George Stephenson in producing and putting a locomotive on the Stockton to Darlington line in 1825. It must have been an amazing spectacle—an engine actually drawing a train of thirty-eight carriages laden with goods and passengers at a speed of twelve miles per hour! Stephenson's invention and engineering achievements cost him hard work, study and perseverance. There was serious opposition and the subsequent construction of railways in Britain and throughout the world meant hardship, toil and loss of life in opening a new, quick form of transport. Can we ever forget the design and execution of God's great plan to convey us from earth to heaven and the toil and the supreme sacrifice of the Lord Jesus in forging the way?

In this century the car and the 'plane have superseded the train. We sometimes despise the humble railway, though the British Rail work to rule protest showed thousands of commuters how necessary their daily train service is. How typical of life this is! "We never miss the water until the well runs dry." We never recognise the worth of old established amenities until they are withdrawn. Isn't it the same with the Gospel Train? Most of us have a church on our doorstep and a Bible on the shelf. We know someone with a living faith in the Lord Jesus. Yet some of us take all these things for granted. There is coming a day when they will all be withdrawn far more drastically than the railwaymen withdrew their services—and what then? Jesus is coming again and, at His coming, the day of grace will end, the Gospel witness will cease, the line to heaven will exist no more and it will be too late to consider catching the next "Glory Train." in the words of the old negro spiritual, be in time and "get on board"!

I took Assembly at School

by Stephen Clarke

ELIM CRUSADER, ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

ONE of the things that I have learned in my Christian life is that every Christian should take every opportunity to witness for Christ.

A few weeks ago in morning assembly for the upper school the teacher in charge read a passage from the Bible and gave the worldly interpretation (if one can say that) of it. After the French lesson I went to him and told him the meaning of the passage. At that, he said that I should get up and give it to the class. He also asked me to take an assembly, so I agreed. I was to go up to his room on the following Monday, which I did. He asked me what I was going to do and I explained that I wanted to talk about Jesus and my own personal experience. He asked me to what denomination I belonged. I explained that I belonged to the Pentecostal movement, but, more important, that I belonged to Christ, and for a few minutes I personally witnessed to the teacher.

The date was fixed when I was to take the assembly — the following Wednesday. The assembly began at 9.15 a.m. and I spoke about Jesus and about my own personal experience. I said that I had tried the best education system in Britain and that I had a very good home, but in neither of them could I find real satisfaction. When I turned to Christ I found the ANSWER and now I had "joy unspeakable." For a minute or two it was as if I was utterly under the control of the Holy Spirit and I gave the Gospel to them. I witnessed to about 150 boys in the upper school and ten masters. I do not want any glory or praise at all, for all I want is to see lives won for the Lord Jesus Christ and His name to be glorified for ever.

Eldin R. Corsie,
The National Youth Director,

Stephen is fifteen, and recently received the baptism in the Holy Spirit in the prayer meeting. He regularly seeks to witness at school, from door-to-door, and in the church.

KENNETH SMITH, Minister.

WE'RE GLAD WE'RE SAVED

by Yvonne Sawley, aged twelve years, scholar at the Court Farm branch Sunday school and Girls' Guild of Elim Pentecostal Church, Erdington, Birmingham.

We're glad we're some of those who're saved

And love the Lord Jesus,
You know we're not regretting it,
So come and join with us.
You'd like the life, we're sure you would,
So let the Saviour in.
Come, join our church, have fellowship
With those who're saved from sin.
You'll come here every Sunday night,
On Monday to Girls' Guild,
Wednesday, Crusaders, praise the Lord,
Your heart with joy is filled.
Tuesday and Thursday others meet
To read God's Word and pray.
Let JESUS in, He'll save from sin.
Give Him your life today!

Tune: I'd like to teach the world to sing.

THE FAMILY ALTAR

Scripture
Union
Portions

Notes
by

J. R. Brown

Monday, June 5th

1 Samuel 24: 1-22

"I have not sinned against thee" (v. 11).

If Saul had had 30,000 men instead of 3,000 he still would not have been able to accomplish the defeat of the Divine purpose for David. The remarkable coincidence (v. 3) caused David's men to claim Divine providence for killing Saul, but David wisely left that judgment to Him who reigns supreme. "Touch not the Lord's anointed" was David's maxim. Much harm can be done to the cause of Christ by speaking or judging unwisely. David showed Saul the tokens which demonstrated that he had no evil design against him, thus heaping coals of fire upon the king's head and rendering good for evil.

Tuesday, June 6th

1 Samuel 25: 1-13

"Give, I pray thee" (v. 8).

Samuel left behind him a reputation that ranks him among the greatest of Scripture personages. No greater man had died since Moses and the nation mourned equally for both (v. 1; Deuteronomy 34:8). David's request (v. 8) was only what any Arab sheikh might make even today, for protecting another's flocks. Shearing time was an occasion for hospitality and good will among owners of flocks. Nabal ("fool") was true to his name. He insulted David's messengers and heaped contempt on David, therefore violating established practice. David prepared to chastise Nabal in a manner that even a fool would recognise. Men look on the good we accomplish rather than listening to the words we speak.

Wednesday, June 7th

1 Samuel 25: 14-31

"Hear the words of Thine handmaid" (v. 24).

Abigail was as tactful and attractive as her husband was foolish and repulsive. The prudent address (v. 23-31) of Nabal's wife saved him and his family from utter destruction. Her action of dismounting in the presence of a superior was the highest token of respect that could be given and her language made the fullest amends for the disrespect shown by her husband, as well as paying respect to David's claims and character. The contrast is so marked between the evil of Nabal and Abigail's graciousness that one is reminded of Proverbs 15:1.

If we are filled with Christ our lives will be full of grace (Romans 5:15).

Thursday, June 8th

1 Samuel 25: 32-44

"A feast in his house" (v. 36).

Nabal, though of a most niggardly disposition, prepared festivities on a scale of sumptuous liberality and proceeded to get paralytically drunk. Somewhat sobered in the morning, Nabal was told of his danger and, in keeping with his character "exploded," causing such a shock to his system that, after lingering for ten days, he died, surely a judgment upon him. David's conduct shows that the customs of the Eastern nations were imitated by the great men of Israel (vv. 39-43). Saul, continuing his campaign against David, sought to degrade him further by giving his wife to another. Though having been warned by God and by circumstances, he blindly rushed on against God. We should glorify God not only in spirit, but in the consecration of our bodies to Him.

Friday, June 9th

1 Samuel 26: 1-25

"Destroy him not" (v. 9).

The Ziphites seemed to think that it was impossible for David to escape, so Saul was informed. Oh the blindness of those who do not want to see! With great boldness David sought Saul's camp, the night stratagem showing the activity and heroic enterprises of his mind. David's magnanimity soared above the notions of Abishai, whose vehemence was apparent from his request (vv. 8, 9). Though Saul had sunk to a low pitch of degradation, this was no reason for David to imitate him in wrong-doing. God and God alone would deal with Saul in retributive providence. Moses was another who took the law into his own hands and suffered much (Exodus 2:11-15). God always knows best and will direct our paths in His will.

Saturday, June 10th

1 Samuel 27: 1-12

"So shall I escape" (v. 1).

Somewhere along life's journey many saints have experienced times of doubt or lapses of faith. David was no exception. He commenced a journey of unbelief that was wrong in every aspect. It removed him from the place at which the Divine oracle intimated that he should remain (22:5), it imperilled him by his rushing into an idolatrous land, and it withdrew his counsel and aid to God's people. David's indiscriminate slaughter and deceit (vv. 8-10) give an unfavourable view of his history at this time, though we cannot judge him by New Testament standards of morality. Achish accepted David's word for his own nefarious purposes. The reasoning of man's intelligence is not necessarily at the level of Divine directives.

Sunday, June 11th

1 Samuel 28: 1-14

"Saul . . . was afraid" (v. 5).

Saul's heart filled with dread at the sight of the powerful Philistine army (v. 5), a contrast to the brave warrior of previous days. God had departed from him and, in desperation, he turned to witchcraft and dabbling in evil spirits, things God expressly forbids (Leviticus 19:31; 26:6; Deuteronomy 18:10, 11; Acts 16:16-18). God, who alone keeps the soul of the departed, intervened and sent Samuel to confound the necromancer and to pronounce sentence on Saul, who had for so long disregarded the prophet's warnings.

Let us keep close to God and follow in His ways.

"By grace are ye saved through faith"

(Ephesians 2 : 8)

by H. Burton-Haynes

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Clacton-on-Sea

IN talking things over with my fellow man, I am often confronted with the view that to try your best to keep the Ten Commandments is all that God requires of any man and that if you do this you will be saved. What are the Ten Commandments ? That they represent the Divine standard for man is only too true, but man in his fallen state, a sinner by nature and by choice, cannot fulfil this perfect standard of righteousness. God says that the sinner is "without strength." We can no more approximate to that Divine standard by our own unaided efforts than we can hoist ourselves from the ground by means of our shoe-laces.

When our Lord was crucified He hung for six long hours beneath the scorching blaze of the midday sun. On either side of Him were thieves writhing in agony on their crosses. One turned to Him and asked to be remembered in the Saviour's kingdom. This malefactor knew that he was suffering the just reward of his deeds, but he had perceived the grace and the glory of the Man upon the central cross. How did the Saviour answer him ? Did He offer him salvation by works ? Did He say : "Work with your hands and try to merit salvation !" ? Such an answer would have been a mockery, for those guilty hands were nailed to the cross and were therefore powerless to effect salvation. Did He instruct him to try to walk in the ways of righteousness ? Crucified feet cannot walk anywhere !

If Jesus had preached a Gospel of "do" to that dying malefactor, He would have filled his heart with dark despair. Instead, our loving Lord recognised the cry of true faith and, in response, gave him the blessed words of assurance : "Today shalt thou be with Me in paradise."

Horatius Bonar has written : "It is to the cross that God is pointing man's eye . . . this is the foundation-stone of God's religion. He Himself has laid it and who shall try to shake, or slight, or supersede it ? Religion is true only in proportion as it bases itself on this."

Nothing in my hand I bring,
Simply to Thy cross I cling.

The glorious message of the gospel of the grace of God is that our Lord Jesus Christ was "delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification." When we face the issues of life and death, our own efforts to fulfil the Divine standard of righteousness as revealed in the Ten Commandments bring us little consolation—they have been fitful, occasional, spasmodic. Our acceptance with God and our comfort in life lie in that solitary cross of Christ where He died for our sins according to the Scriptures. Ask the Lord Jesus Christ to save you and He will respond immediately to your cry of faith and repentance.

A lesson from a critic

The critic stood with scornful eye
Before a picture on the wall ;
"You call this art ? Now see that fly,
It is not natural at all,
It has too many legs ; its head is far too large.
Whoever saw a fly like that, so limp and dead
And wings that look as if they—pshaw !"
And with a gesture of disgust
He waved his hand, when lo, the fly
Flew from the picture. "Oh ! some dust,"
The critic said, "was on my eye."

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

David—Shepherd, Singer, Sovereign

by J. Osman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
SPRINGBOURNE, BOURNEMOUTH

Sin

2 Samuel 11 ; 12 : 1-13 ; Psalm 51

THE Bible is realistic. In its pages we read of men of like passions as ourselves, men subject to temptation, who sometimes succumbed to Satan's snares, men who, like us, were prone to wander, who were subjected to stress, strain and pressures. The biographies of many Christians highlight the good traits of their characters and gloss over or omit entirely the uncomplimentary side. One is left so often with the impression that they were just too good to live. Such accounts can discourage young believers by the perfection of portrayal. In the Bible the real men are shown, however ; whether Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David or Solomon, their faults, sins, backslidings are baldly stated. There is no glossing over the sins even of a man after God's own heart. Even the best of men are at best only men, but we make petty idols of them, only to discover that they often have feet of clay.

Descent into sin

Many remember David for his sin when other incidents are forgotten. It started so innocently in the cool of the evening. There was no thought of sin, only peace and leisure. It is surely a time to beware when all is well. We are so vulnerable when our guard is down.

Suddenly the deceiver struck, and in three verses (2 Samuel 11 : 2, 3, 4) we have clearly stated the steps into sin : David saw ; David sent and inquired ; David took.

Step one was unavoidable initially. We are not always entirely responsible for what we see, but we are responsible if we keep looking. We may be condemned by the things which we allow ourselves to see. What we allow on television, for example, can be the first step towards sin.

Step two was where the poison really began to work. To toy in the mind with the sweet pictures that are conjured up in the imagination by the senses is asking for trouble, for it is here that sin is really created. Jesus said that to look on a woman lustfully is tantamount to committing adultery.

Step three was the inevitable outcome, but sin did not end there. It is not always possible to forecast the results of one act of sin, as David discovered. The forbidden sweetness turned sour. Bathsheba informed David as to her condition. He was now faced with a problem. Uriah, her husband, was at the battlefield and could not possibly be the father of the child. With great cunning he sent for Uriah to report on the progress of the battle and then sent him home for the night, but Uriah, one of David's mighty men, refused the comforts of home while his comrades were slogging it out at the front, so he slept in the comparative discomfort of the servants' quarters. In his quandary David got Uriah drunk, hoping that he would forget his noble ideas, but still Uriah would not go home or be moved from his high ideals. One sin so often leads to another. The death of Uriah was the only solution to the problem.

It now needed Joab's co-operation and David planned the death of Uriah with him. This explains in part the hold that Joab had over David for the rest of his life. When news was finally brought to David from the battlefield this was added : "Thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also." It seemed now the conclusion of the whole matter, and David must have sighed with relief, but he was now branded as an adulterer and a murderer.

Discovery of sin

"But the thing that David had done displeased the Lord." No one, but no one, gets away with it like that. Christians who sin beware ! God, for their own sakes, will not allow an easy passage for sinners : consider Exodus 34 : 6, 7 : "The Lord God, merciful and gracious . . . forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty."

So God sent Nathan the prophet to David. I have the utmost admiration for Nathan, who, like John the Baptist before Herod, put the will of God before personal safety. Nathan's God-given parable was masterly in its exposure of David's sin. He told of two men in David's city, one poor, the other rich. The rich man had flocks and herds in abundance, but the poor man had only one little ewe lamb, the household pet. When a visit was expected at the home of the rich man, instead of taking from his abundance he swooped on the poor man's lamb, killed it and prepared a sumptuous meal for his guest, leaving the poor man bereft of his pet and in tears for his loss.

David's anger mounted as the story was told. His face became suffused with rage and, rising to his feet, he declared stormily that the man responsible would die, because he showed no pity. Nathan said to David: "Thou art the man." All David's indignation and pent-up anger had to turn to his own heart as the stabbing forefinger of Nathan condemned him. Perhaps the interpretation that followed was unnecessary, but David had to hear it through, every word condemning him as his sin and its consequences were laid bare. Truly "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper," and David was told that he would not escape. Prophecies uttered by Nathan were literally fulfilled in Amnon, Absalom, Ahithophel (Bathsheba's grandfather) and Adonijah.

Can you imagine David's feelings at this moment? We need to look to our hearts when waxing indignant about the misdemeanours of others, lest traces of the same be found in us.

What would a man after God's own heart do in these circumstances?

Deliverance from sin

"And David said unto Nathan, I have sinned against the Lord." This was no easygoing repentance. Read Psalm 51. David's confession of sin did not trip lightly off his lips and then that was over and done with. "The way of transgressors is hard." Do not imagine that one day David decided to write a psalm and with a facile pen composed the words of Psalm 51; it was the product of the tears of David's soul. Anguished prayers rose to his lips from the inner torture of his heart during the sleepless hours of night. The regrets for a past that could not be altered, the sense of guilt that could scarcely be purged, the remorse for the consequences of his sin that could not be avoided although the sin could be forgiven, the fears, groans and heartache of a wretched conscience were all there. Here was repentance that was better than sacrifices of lambs and bullocks, "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise."

It is remarkable that David could have gone so long, i.e. approximately a whole year, with this barrier between him and God. No wonder his joy had gone! The heavens were as brass and he had lost out completely with God. How is it with your soul? What has brought you to this barren place in your experience? It could be some sin, not as blatant and awful as David's but that something that you know about that is a hindrance, a wrong friendship, a private sin, a critical spirit, a lie, an unforgiving heart. You are not speaking to someone? How then can you speak to God? Come clean, friend! This is what a man after God's own heart does: no excuses, no apologies for himself, no attempt at self-justification, but—"I have sinned." There are many Christians who need to get right with God.

*I know a fount where sins are washed away,
I know a place where night is turned to day;
Burdens are lifted, blind eyes made to see.
There is wonder-working power in the blood of Calvary.*

Church report

ALDERSHOT

Pastor: M. J. Tilley

At a recent Pentecostal rally we welcomed Pastor C. J. E. Kingston as the speaker. Our premises were full to capacity and all present were challenged by his ministry. The new pastor of our neighbour church at Guildford, J. A. Hamilton, testified to God's guidance in his life. Other pastors took part and our youth group sang.

Thanks to some car-owning brethren, it has been possible to bring some ladies from an old people's home to some of our Gospel services. They have appreciated this fellowship, especially one who was converted in a Pentecostal church many years ago.

We have been encouraged by visiting Christian friends from different parts of the Elim family. God has honoured the faithful witness of some of our folk by bringing in unsaved men.

During a second visit by Pastor and Mrs. Kingston the Gospel was preached very plainly, and we were overjoyed to have a number of inquirers after the service.

Conference, 1972

THE OPENING WEEKEND

Reporter: R. GRIFFITHS
PASTOR OF HEREFORD ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH

THE conference opened on the Saturday evening with the induction of the President, T. W. Walker. A great crowd assembled in the Princes Theatre. As the retiring President, A. A. Biddle, led us in the opening hymn his obvious spirit of expectancy was injected into the hearts of those gathered. The Secretary-General, J. T. Bradley, pleaded with God to "send the fire" upon our conference and the congregation sang "Still stir up Thy gift in me."

After reviewing his year of office, A. A. Biddle inducted T. W. Walker to the Presidency of our Elim movement and presented him with a Bible. Mr. Biddle spoke of the loyalty and faithfulness of Mr. Walker. Mrs. Walker and two of their daughters shared in his honour. The wife of our President read a portion of Scripture with conviction.

Singing items were beautifully rendered by The Bradford Folk Four, Pastor and Mrs. J. Osman and W. Ll. Bell.

The Presidential address was timely and brought a challenge for us to be co-operative with the Holy Spirit: "We . . . and the Holy Ghost" (Acts 5:32). "We must know this," said our President, "literally, actually and factually." You will have read notes of the address in last week's EVANGEL.

The message in song, "Let me burn out for Thee, dear Lord," gripped us, enabling us to respond to the Word of God. Pastor H. W. Greenway concluded this great service in prayer.

At 9.30 p.m. in the Embassy Ballroom, Pastor A. A. Biddle conducted an informal meeting entitled "Introductions." It was an inspiring time. The chorus, "He took the chains from my heart and set me free" resulted in great blessing.

In the pre-breakfast ministry meeting on Sunday morning, Pastor B. R. J. Garrard reminded us of the mercies of the Lord which are new every morning. He told us that every day is a fresh start, a new opportunity for service, for obedience, for doing something for God.

Later we gathered in a wonderful atmosphere of worship around the Lord's Table. The President prayed that we might know the Lord specially, newly, wonderfully. The message preached by Dr. R. W. Taitinger, from Canada, was entitled "This hour has seven days." It was packed with valuable lessons reminding us that times of crisis can be opportunities for the Lord to perfect His will and plan in our lives. The service concluded with the hymn "We shall see His lovely face."

The boys and girls assembled for a happy and instructive Sunday school under the leadership of Pastor R. Hughes.

Owing to the inclement weather an indoor "open-air" meeting was held in the Embassy Ballroom,

Mr. S. Kelly, former professional footballer, testifies. He is a member of the Beersbridge Road, Belfast, church.

convened by Pastor R. B. Chapman. This proved to be most profitable. Special prayer was made for

T. Partington addressing the indoor "open-air meeting."

Ireland; the President asked the Lord for Divine intervention, help and guidance.

The Sunday evening evangelistic service was convened by the President. Ministry in song by Christine Walker, Len Magee and the newly-formed conference choir brought much blessing to the meeting. The testimony of Mrs. D. Ayling concerning her miraculous deliverance in Belfast moved us deeply, thus provoking further prayer for Ireland.

The Gospel message was preached by Pastor J. M. Cuthbert. He showed us that Christ died for us according to the Scriptures. At least one decision for the Lord was registered.

A great day concluded with the singing of the hymn "My faith looks up to Thee, Thou Lamb of Calvary, Saviour Divine."

MONDAY

Reporter: F. J. DAY

PASTOR OF LONGTON ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH

THE chill air of the morning vibrates with the chorus "He touched me" over the tannoy system. Delegates and friends are making their way to the Princes Theatre for devotions. The theme of the conference is already evident in conversation and smiling faces. The theatre once more becomes the sanctuary where the Lord meets with His people. Under the leadership of our Administrative Secretary, J. C. Smyth, and with the song, "Day by day and with each passing moment," sung by Pastor and Mrs. E. R. Corsie, our hearts are in tune with heaven. The Word of God is brought forcefully to us by the Holy Spirit as Pastor E. F. Cole preaches from John 7:37. This was chosen of God to challenge hungry and thirsty hearts. "Do you believe God?" he asks. "Do you believe Jesus can fill us with the living water He promised if we come to Him?" Then, in the pleading words of the Saviour, he challenges "Do you believe Me?" Our faith is challenged. We most certainly need a prayer and faith focus if we want the blessing of God upon us!

At the youth viewpoint and embraced in the theme of our conference is the casting out of devils. Pastor A. R. T. Whittall takes up the Scriptures. Speaking of his own experiences he points out the dangers: "It is needful to have a word from the Lord before attempting to cast out evil spirits." One feels that this is a specialised ministry. He shows that evil spirits can be found in both religious and non-religious communities. He cites the Jews and the Syrophenician woman whom Jesus met. Questions and fears are expressed. God is still delivering! It is a profitable discussion.

At the Bible study Denis G. Clark announces that he is to speak from Isaiah 5:1,2. He wastes no time in carrying the thoughts of the people into the garden of the Lord of which they are part. Forthrightness and wit sanctified by the Spirit make the Word live, challenge and give hope. Everyone is provoked to self-examination. The need for digging and pruning makes us think over our experiences.

The ministerial session, like all the business sessions, commences with prayer, praise and song. In a relaxed atmosphere the business for the day is quickly passed into the minutes of the journal. It is good to record that nine young men are accepted into the ministry but there is a need for many more in view of the campaigns envisaged.

At the evening rally the Princes Theatre is quickly full with people and praise. H. W. Greenway soon has the folk giving praise to the Lord. Prayer time reveals a concern for our nation and prayer is made for revival. "O Holy Ghost revival comes from Thee" we sing—and mean. A trio from Edmonton, Canada, are a feature. These talented young ladies are using their vacation to serve the Lord in the United Kingdom. The conference choir sings under the baton of D. B. Gray. George Canty—and there is only one George Canty—takes up the subject: The Manifesto of Pentecost. Our brother is anointed to declare the fulness of his heart. History and humour are here, but the potential of the Pentecostal experience is made clear to all.

G. Canty giving his fiery message.

The healing service is conducted by F. A. Hodge, himself recently delivered from a serious illness. He soon inspires faith in our risen Lord. One lady walks in front of the platform. She declares that she has not walked alone for six years. Many testify of receiving healing. The day ends with people returning to their chalets rejoicing in its blessings.

TUESDAY

Reporter: KEN SMITH

PASTOR OF ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM, ELIM
PENTECOSTAL CHURCH

THE day commenced with devotions led by Pastor J. Lancaster. Dr. R. W. Taitinger spoke on fasting.

The devotions opening the business session were conducted by the Superintendent of the Irish churches, Pastor A. Wilson. Mention was made by the President that this was the first conference that Pastor P. S. Brewster had missed. He was travelling to New Zealand with Mrs. Brewster for the fiftieth anniversary of the establishing of the Pentecostal witness in that land through the visit of Smith Wigglesworth. Revs. R. W. Taitinger, A. Birchall, Denis Clark and Charles Yates, a former Elim minister, were given opportunity to attend the business sessions, as were the male students of our Bible college.

Brian Vidamour was appointed to superintend the scrutineers, who included, as the President wittily remarked, two Browns, and two named Stuart and Stewart! Greetings from the Assemblies of God Executive Conference were read. Their General Secretary, A. F. Missen, missed the Sunday services because of car trouble. It was good to receive into our fellowship churches at Evesham, Otley, Maghera, Peterborough, Stirchley (Birmingham) and Sunderland. I noted an exact balance between those opened through individual initiative and those through pioneer evangelistic campaigns. "It is going to be a big church, for we are all young families!" exclaimed the minister of one of the churches.

We were all touched when the President asked Pastor F. A. Hodge, who himself was recently seriously ill, to pray for the son of Pastor John Cave, of Peterborough. We commend him to your prayers. My wife enjoyed the get-together of the ministers' wives that Mrs. Walker had arranged.

The young people are very well catered for. Glyn L. Taylor dealt with speaking in tongues in the youth forum. My own boy enjoyed "Uncle" Francis Lamming in the morning and the games organised by Mike Sherwood in the afternoon. There is something for all at an Elim conference! There was a touch of the romantic in the venue of the sisters' meeting—"The Smugglers' Bar"!

David G. Holmes, in the light of his experiences

Two of the conference speakers: Denis G. Clark and R. W. Taitinger.

at Sunderland, had much to say concerning the follow-up of pioneer campaigns. Much will come up at the evangelistic conference in the autumn at Birmingham. Pastor R. B. Chapman gave details of the evangelistic efforts during the past year, some producing a good nucleus for a church, others not so. A special acclamation for Pastor L. E. Lambert for his work at Blackpool Jubilee Temple showed our appreciation. Alexander Tee spoke for us all when he claimed: "We want Elim to go forward." He had much to say about evangelism. I liked the frank way Wynne Lewis spoke of his campaign at Maesteg and the difficulties there. I liked the way that Mr. C. J. Pendrill, a prominent layman, expressed his appreciation and ours to the Executive Council, the Evangelistic Committee and the evangelists for their unceasing service for the Lord through Elim. Ron Jones spoke of the "very evident moving of the Spirit of God."

The results of the vote for the Executive Council brought no change.

Alexander Tee, obviously not well, gave the youth report, his final report as National Youth Director. The manner in which we were able to join in prayer for him with Pastors Ray Hunston and F. G. Evans showed the spiritual tone of the business sessions. He was glad to report the highest number of Sunday school children in our ranks. The youth camp at Mundesley and the Bingley Hall, Birmingham, rally, both united efforts with the Assemblies of God, were outlined.

Pastor L. Wigglesworth presented the missionary report, mentioning The Church of Pentecost in West Africa, the success of the Green Shield stamp collections, and the offer of air seats from time to time for our missionaries. Special mention was made of the forty-six years' service of Pastor and Mrs. H. C. Phillips in Africa, a fine record indeed. The opportunities among the immigrants in the United Kingdom were discussed.

Pastor G. W. Gilpin gave the Elim Bible College report. Someone said of a lecturer at another college "He lectures in Greek"; the President quipped, "That would make him hard to understand!"

The Elim Eventide Home report by Pastor J. T. Bradley, the Grenehurst Press report by Pastor Gordon Wright, and the radio and music report by Pastor D. B. Gray followed. Pastor T. W. Walker gave the Publications Board report. I found that comments about his editorial referring to the miners' strike proved that his articles are read. I trust that he continues to be intelligible and provocative, for controversy of the right sort in the EVANGEL gives it more life!

Voting for Headquarters officers concluded the day's business. The results were announced on the following day.

The evening rally was convened by Pastor G. W. Gilpin and students from Elim Bible College ministered in song and testified acceptably. The need for compassion in Christian service was very eloquently presented by the preacher, Dr. R. W. Taitinger. The day closed with an informal service conducted by the students and with a film. Indeed there was something for everybody, including you. Why not come next year?

WEDNESDAY

Reporter: G. N. BACKHOUSE

PASTOR OF WINTON ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH

"I WILL praise Him" was the opening hymn at the 7.45 a.m. devotion service, at which A. D. Bull from Tanzania was the speaker. The convener, R. B. Chapman, called for praise and worship from the many who gathered. The Holy Spirit's power was evident and many lifted up heart and voice in thanks and praise. A solo from C. J. Pendrill reminded us of individual consecration: "Only one life to offer." A. D. Bull now told of the mighty power of God over the power of Satan. Africa is a country where many are demon-possessed. He quoted Ephesians 2:12. Africa needs Jesus. His name and His blood are able to bring deliverance to those who are possessed by demons.

The representative session commenced at 10.15. After a hymn, F. H. Coleman read God's Word, prayed for blessing and remembered those who needed a touch of healing.

The first business of the day was the announcement of the voting for Headquarters officers. There was only one change. E. R. Corsie was elected as our National Youth Director in place of A. Tee who is to be a full-time evangelist. E. R. Corsie thanked the conference for the confidence they had placed in him and told us that he would remain at Kensington Temple, London, and conduct activities from the office there. Thanks were expressed to A. Tee for his wonderful work as National Youth Director. May God use him mightily in the evangelistic work he now is going to undertake.

After lunch came the conference photograph, a very happy occasion of getting together for a record of the visit.

Frank Tyers (Cardiff) led in prayer as we began the afternoon session, remembering the women's rally also being held. Voting on the conference committees took place. While the ballot papers were being collected our President reported that a waitress had found the Saviour and a waiter had returned to the Lord through the witness of folk in the dining hall. A loud "Hallelujah" was heard. Our Missionary Secretary reported a recent visit to Ghana where much blessing is being experienced. G. L. W. Ladow, a member of the Missionary Council, is to visit Ghana in the near future. We wish him every blessing.

The accounts were presented by J. C. Smyth. What a terrific amount of work is accomplished by our Administrative Secretary and how well he knows and does his job.

Next year's conference is to be held at the same venue in May. Watch for the date and book early. This year's attendance eclipsed other years. A report concerning an Elim Pentecostal school was given and a discussion on the Elim Ministers' Retirement Fund brought our afternoon session to a close.

J. Osman preaching the Gospel.

The evening evangelistic rally was chaired by David Ayling. "I stand amazed in the presence of Jesus" was sung with fervour. Wynne Lewis led in prayer and read God's Word. We were delighted to see W. L. Bell at the piano accompanying the singing. Douglas Gray introduced him and told how they first met at Barking nearly fifty years ago at a campaign being held by Stephen Jeffreys. Brother Bell sang a great favourite "Prophets, priests and martyrs" which captivated the great congregation. At testimony time a young man of Catholic background declared how he was saved at the recent Peterborough crusade.

Two former Elim students now in charge of churches received awards for theses recently written: Maldwyn Jones and Bernard Wall. The Principal of the college introduced them, and the book awards were presented by the President.

The mixed conference choir sang two pieces about that lovely name, Jesus, under the leadership of D. B. Gray.

It was fitting at this time to learn from our Field Superintendent, R. B. Chapman, of the launching out of Alexander Tee as Elim's full-time evangelist.

Mr. Bell sang a message to the backslider: "You are a million miles from the gates of peace when you're one little step from God."

Pastor J. Osman preached on "Ye must be born again." The great sign following the preaching of the Word is a changed life. A fearless gospel message was presented with pleading passion and power. Many were born again. The thrill of seeing souls come to Jesus is unexplainable. Truly signs followed the preaching of the Word. David Ayling announced the closing hymn, "Amazing Grace." The offering for evangelism was over £304.

More signs followed for in the prayer service over twenty received the baptism in the Holy Ghost in Bible fashion.

The youth coffee bar service saw a packed company listening to youth satisfied with Jesus and many young people decided for Christ.

YOU will find detailed reports of our conference in this issue. We are pleased to tell you that some of our ministers report that they are already being asked about the 1973 conference! This is encouraging indeed and we take it to be yet another indication of the feeling among many of us that God is moving among us in power and blessing.

There is something very wonderful about spending a whole week in the company of fellow-believers. Our task is to witness to God's dying, undying love to a dying world, but it is good to come "apart and rest awhile." The congenial fellowship, the schedule of meetings and spiritual activities, the inspiring music and song, the frequent opportunities for prayer, the testimonies, the challenging preaching, all these and more contribute to a marvellous privilege for the Lord's people.

As you read the reports you may well be wandering happily down Memory Lane. On the other hand, you may not have been to an Elim Conference yet. Some of our churches have found it highly convenient to arrange coach parties and some are already planning and saving weekly for the next conference. If we can help you in any way please write to: The Conference Secretary, Elim Headquarters, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham. We would like to hear of your plans.

"Bingley"—the BIG one!—proclaims the notice on page 18. The very mention of Bingley Hall, Birmingham, provokes memories for the older generation. Principal George Jeffreys's campaign there was an epoch-making event. We are told that many in Britain's second largest city who have no obvious church connection remember the sensational news carried by the press during the crusade. Now the youth movements of Elim and Assemblies of God are to use the same hall on June 24th. Please read the details on page 18 and kindly observe that admission is by inexpensively-priced ticket only. It would be marvellous if a great revival broke out in that same hall. We pray that it will be so.

Conference, 1972

THURSDAY

Reporter: MALDWYN JONES

PASTOR OF EASTLEIGH ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH

WE make no apology for preaching the old story of the Gospel of Christ. This was made clear by the singing of the first hymn of the morning devotions, "Grace is free."

Pastor J. T. Bradley had just read the phrase from Psalm 27: "The Lord is my light" when the lights in the theatre went out. Thank God, the light of His glorious Gospel remains constant. The President and the Missionary Secretary reminded us of this when they sang the duet, "He loves, He saves, He keeps, He satisfies."

Denis G. Clark gave a fine exposition of the glorified Christ as described by the Apostle John in Revelation 1. We noted the anointing of the Holy Spirit upon our brother as he ministered. I list a number of the choice phrases: "We must go beyond the cross"; "We must see not only the crucified Christ and the risen Christ, but the ascended Christ as well"; "To see the ascended Lord is to recognise His authority as the Head of the Church."

The Princes Theatre was filled to capacity for the great Communion service at 11 a.m. This followed the Elim Church Incorporated Conference which was chaired by the President. During the Communion service we remembered with deep affection those ministers who have gone to be with the Lord during this past year: Pastors F. D. Byatt, H. Toft, W. G. Turney, S. H. Rawlings and Miss G. M. Garton. We then paid tribute to those ministers who have recently retired: Pastors R. D. Bradley, J. C. N. Eaton, our revered brother Samuel Gorman, H. C. Phillips, F. J. Slemming, T. H. Stevenson and J. A. Wright. We were honoured by the visit of distinguished visitors from the Strategy for Evangelism Conference being held at Morecambe: Dr. J. M. Laird, Revs. J. R. W. Stott and J. Bird, and Mr. Gordon Landreth.

The Vice-President, Pastor John Lancaster, gave an inspired message on the transcendent glory of Christ. He reminded us of the awe-inspiring holiness and purity of our Saviour contrasted with the terrible sin of man. Thank God "There's a way back to God from the dark paths of sin." We were told: "There is an immediacy about God when He is approached by a penitent heart." With a sense of extreme gratitude to God for His undying love, we remembered again the great sacrifice of His Son.

"O Church of God" was an appropriate hymn with which to commence the missionary rally. Despite its many faults, the great Church universal is still the most wonderful, glorious body in the world. Harold Womersley from the Congo Evangelistic Mission led us to the Lord in prayer. Pastor and Mrs. David Kilpatrick from Markethill, Northern Ireland, are soon to go to serve the Lord in Africa. His request "Brethren pray for us" is sure to draw an affirmative answer from the Elim family. We will also remember Margaret Kilpatrick's resolution: "Thy blessed will Divine, with joy I make it mine."

W. L. J. Bell, whose solos brought great blessing.

Pastor Henry Jeffery brought us greetings from the eighth Elim Conference in Brazil. The statistics quoted reminded us of the awful power of Satan. Of a population of 95,000,000, 35,000,000 of the Brazilian people are black magic Catholics. Miss Mary Fisher, from our Caerphilly church, now studying at London Bible College, is to go to Rhodesia next year. Her phrase: "I just want to work for God" sums up the desire of every true Christian.

After we were introduced to Pastor and Mrs. A. D. Bull, Mrs. G. M. Gorton, President of E.W.M.A., reminded us of the work done by the women of Elim for the missionary society. In six years £23,000 has been collected, £5,400 was collected last year. We thank God for the untiring efforts of our sisters. Brenda Griffiths, whose husband is studying at London University, thanked the ladies of Elim for providing equipment. Pastor A. D. Bull then gave a passionate appeal for dedicated workers to go out into the mission field. This great rally came to a close as Pastor Leslie Wigglesworth commended the work to God in prayer.

The whole world is our mission field, but where better to begin than at home? This Scriptural principle was put into action in the coffee bar held in the Smugglers' Cove conducted by Pastor David G. Woodfield from Newcastle. Musical items were given by Elim Bible College students and the Bradford Folk Four. We rejoiced as young people eagerly came to find the way of salvation. We pray that the work which has been commenced in their hearts will bring forth much fruit for the glory of God.

Conference, 1972

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Reporter: D. A. LAMBELLE
PASTOR OF NEWQUAY ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH

THE stalls were being cleared and dismantled. The conference really was coming to an end, but there was still a full day's programme, beginning with the morning ministry of Pastor W. G. Mullan (Belfast) on the lost sheep. He spoke of the shepherd's concern and compulsion, plus the comfort of the saved and the cheerfulness of heaven, Helen Penney sang "There's a name above all others."

Youth Viewpoint, after breakfast, was conducted by Pastor D. W. Cartwright (Rowley Regis), who spoke on the laying of hands on the sick. He stressed the need to believe God's Word and what it says, rather than building up our own ideas or pictures about it. The spoken ministry, i.e. preaching, is incomplete; it needs the service ministry also, the laying on of hands. Questions were asked and answers given which showed appreciation and interest.

The Bible study, given by Denis Clark, was fully attended. As people listened, they drank in the Word—all one and three-quarter hours of it! Before launching into the main study he gave five main things in our handling of the Bible: our need to hear; we must read the whole in context; we must study to show ourselves approved of God; we must memorise it; we must meditate on it. Then came the final study on Isaiah 5:1,2, dealing with the Tower and the Winepress.

The conference session dealt with a variety of subjects, including financial matters. Mr. Spurling urged ministers to preach tithing, otherwise people lost an experiential blessing. Mr. Pendrill added that tithing made good common sense and good spiritual sense, plus the blessing which attended it. Other items dealt with our constitution and with divorce. The business was just fitted in before we made our way for evening dinner.

The convention service featured the Elim Youth Movement and was jointly conducted by Pastors Alexander Tee, retiring National Youth Director, and Eldin R. Corsie, newly elected in succession. A quartet from our Graham Street, Birmingham, church sang. The boys and girls went to the platform with Francis Lamming and workers, who led them in singing the choruses they had learned so well. The children then went off to their own meeting, while we enjoyed the Carlisle tambourinists. Testimonies followed from Sharon Ward and Timothy Smith, before the Graham Street young people, who had specially travelled up for this service, sang.

Dr. R. W. Taitinger spoke on the Jesus people and the Jesus revolution, giving us the background of the despair and hopelessness brought about by the causes young people espouse. He explained the generation gap, often experienced in the Church, too, but challenged us that, in Pentecostal people, the Holy Spirit should create concern and an ability to communicate even to our teenagers. At the end of the service all the young people—a quarter of the congregation—gathered at the front to be commended to God in dedication. How we felt the presence of God—a tremendous climax to the week!

In the late night special an informal time of fellowship was led by Pastor W. R. Jones (Bristol). W. Ll. Bell sang "They call it being saved" and "My, didn't it rain" as only he can. Three of Pastor L. E. Lambert's daughters sang. There were a trio from Elim Bible College and a testimony from

A happy conference group—Denis G. Clark, J. Osman, J. Lancaster and H. W. Greenway.

Brian, also from the college. Sheila from Newcastle sang before our Vice-President, Pastor J. Lancaster, gave the epilogue.

At the morning ministry service on Saturday Pastor A. C. Jarvis brought a most suitable message. Pastor G. A. Wright was in the chair. The President closed the conference with prayer.

Part 5. The greatest leader

Words and drawing by SHEILA PRICE

"I AM proud to be your new chief," Little Bear said. "I will help you and guide you in all the laws and ways of the land, just as my father did before me, but I want you all to know that, though I have proved myself to be a mighty warrior, there is Another who is mightier than I."

"What does he mean?" the Indians asked each other. "Who can be greater than Little Bear? Tell us who he is!" they asked their new chief.

"His name is Jesus," answered Little Bear. "He is the greatest Leader of all. Before I became your chief you gave me certain tests so that I might prove myself true and worthy. Well, Jesus tests us, too, so that we may prove ourselves worthy of His love. Sometimes we do not want to do these tests, perhaps because we are afraid of being laughed at. I was afraid out there on the mountains, too, but I stuck it out. I thought I was alone, but my father was there all the time, protecting me. Our heavenly Father is here all the time protecting us. Just like my father, He is out of sight, but near all the time, helping us, guiding us and shielding us from harm and danger. I wanted so much to become a mighty warrior, but better still I want to become a mighty warrior for Jesus."

"We would like to be mighty warriors for Jesus, too," said the Indians. "But tell us, chief, how can we get to such a place?"

"If we love Jesus, serve Him and tell others about Him, if we try in His strength not to be selfish and unkind, then we will be true Christian warriors. We Zoto Indians know that we must obey the laws and ways of the land, but, more importantly, we must obey the laws of Jesus and follow His ways. Let us learn of Jesus together!" the chief concluded.

BOOK REVIEWS

Simon and Sarah Colouring Book, published by Scripture Union. Price 10p, postage and packing 3p extra.

The "Simon and Sarah" series is like a breath of fresh air when it comes to children's colouring books. They are a sensible size and would properly fit into a child's bookshelf. The sketches are excellent. For a child with artistic imagination this series could be very useful. I suspect that a few parents may want to turn their hand to the old pencils again!

This series is informative in a practical way; the child has an opportunity to learn Scripturally as well as educationally.

I wondered how I might get the best idea of the appeal this book would have, so I showed it to my two eldest children. They started to fight for it, so I thought that I had better keep it for myself. I must finish here as I am extremely busy. Now where did I put those colouring pencils?

RON WILLIAMS.

The Christian Family, by Larry Christenson. Published by Fountain Trust. Price: paperback 50p, postage and packing 8p extra; hardback £1.10, postage and packing 10p extra.

David Wilkerson in his foreword declares "Here is a book that I have been waiting for." This excellent volume should certainly be read by every Christian, whether married or unmarried. In outspoken manner and with full Scripture backing, the author faces all aspects of the domestic scene and makes clear what is the Divine order in the sacred realm of the home.

Marital breakdown has become a sad feature of our day and much of the cause lies in the evident deviation from the pattern of relationship that God has laid down in His Word. This book can help to restore the correct order.

Much is said today about juvenile delinquency, but, when faced with the clear statements of domestic responsibility as portrayed by Christenson, one is forced to wonder if the root of the trouble is parental delinquency.

Be sure to add this book to your library; it is the book you have been waiting for, too. It can act as a corrective for the past, a guide for the present and an inspiration for the future.

The Gift of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

3. As at the beginning

Acts 10 and 19

OUR main purpose in these two further portions in which tongues are recorded as historical facts is to show their harmony with what has gone before: the original statement by Christ and the initial event of Acts 2.

Acts 10 : Some general considerations

The people concerned were definitely Gentiles. This refutes the allegation that the sign-gifts, which included tongues, were just the temporary provision of a gracious God to sign-seeking Jews. It has been argued that these Gentiles were ignorant of the Gospel. Peter preached it, they believed, then God gave them the Holy Spirit and the gift of tongues to prove their salvation to the Jews. Such an argument would not invalidate our basic premise laid down by Jesus—that tongues is a gift from God for believers—but it overlooks some pertinent facts.

The apostle's sermon. According to 11:15 Peter had just begun to speak when the Spirit came upon the hearers and they commenced to speak with tongues, therefore the impartation of knowledge by his preaching was very limited. God intervened and Peter got no further than his introduction! Whatever standing these people had, it cannot be claimed that they reached it through Peter's preaching.

The Gentiles' knowledge. Peter states that his congregation already knew some truth concerning Christ (v. 36). They were not in total ignorance of the Gospel. The extent of their knowledge cannot be defined precisely, but we must not consider them as if all Christians of that time necessarily possessed full New Testament knowledge. To do so would impose a framework which had not yet come into existence. The New Testament contains a progressive revelation and its development was still in progress at that time.

The centurion's status. Cornelius is the only one of this Gentile group of whom we have any detailed information. He assumed the role of spokesman and thus we may take him as representative, typical of the group for whom he spoke. Was he a regenerate person, a true believer? First we must remember that true faith may exist in spite of limited knowledge (Luke 7:2-10; Matthew 15:21-28). In addition, certain facts are recorded of him which are conclusive as to his regenerate condition. He was "devout" (v. 2, translated "godly" in 2 Peter 2:9). This word is different from "devout" in Acts 2:5, where it is used of unbelieving Jews and denotes worshipful devotion. He "feared God" (vv. 2, 22), the absence of which is a hallmark of the ungodly. He was liberal, giving "much alms" (v. 2) and he "prayed to God alway" (v. 2). It is significant that the latter two were accepted and remembered before God (v. 4), which could not be said of the works of unregenerate men. His immediate obedience is also remarkable (vv. 7, 33). Moreover, the message to Peter ("What God hath cleansed, that call thou not common," v. 15) surely indicated that he was to meet those whom God had cleansed and who were no longer "common or unclean," though Gentiles. Peter's first words in vv. 34, 35 also showed his acknowledgment of Cornelius as one accepted of God and truly righteous before the Holy Spirit fell on the congregation. Mention of "saved" in Peter's account (11:14) must be interpreted in the light of the foregoing, and also that "saved" and its cognates have a variety of meanings in the New Testament, e.g. Matthew 16:25; 1 Timothy 4:16; Romans 8:24; 1 Peter 4:18. In view of his limited knowledge, Cornelius was a believer of such calibre as to put many Christians to shame today.

The Gift of Tongues

It is obvious that the believing Jews were not astonished at the outpouring of the Spirit or its accompaniment—speaking with tongues. Their surprise was related solely to the fact that such things were granted by God to Gentiles just as to Jews (10 : 45, 46 ; 11 : 15, 17).

The concept of the believing Jews as to what was taking place in the speaking with tongues is clearly stated : God was being magnified (v. 46). Irrespective of their prejudice against Gentiles, they knew that believing people, speaking in tongues under the anointing of the Holy Spirit, could only be magnifying God. The importance of this approach to tongues is increased by the fact that no suggestion was made of the Jews understanding the languages being uttered, as had happened in Acts 2. Ignorant, therefore, though they were of the precise content of the tongues, they had no doubt as to the form of worship. Their hitherto biased minds now accepted Gentiles as equal fellow believers, the experience as genuinely of the Spirit, and the tongues as authentic and God-glorifying. Pentecostals would say to many evangelicals today : "Go thou and do likewise."

Acts 19 : Some general considerations

The beginnings. Paul paid a brief visit to Ephesus and left Priscilla and Aquila there. Apollos, an Egyptian Jew, came also. He not only expounded the Old Testament up to the baptism of John, but, after instruction, he was able also to prove the messiahship of Jesus (Acts 18 : 19-28).

The disciples. When Paul returned to Ephesus he made contact with a group of "disciples" (v. 1). Some argue that they were only disciples of John. The Bible places no such qualification on their discipleship, moreover the private ministry of Aquila and Priscilla, and the public ministry of Apollos, had advanced to a Christ-centred message. John's ministry had also pointed forward to Christ and a person could not be a true disciple of John without knowing something of Christ and believing on Him.

The questions. Much disputing has revolved around the tense of the first question in v. 2 : "since" or "when" (R.V.). This has obscured a more important and indisputable fact, namely that Paul accepted that these persons had already believed, that they were men of faith and therefore justified. As the tense factor does not affect the tongues-gift, we will not discuss it. The vital fact is that these persons were believers. Their ignorance about the Spirit would seem to be complete if we take only the Authorised Version form of v. 2, but this degree of ignorance is doubtful.

The Old Testament, of which they would probably know something, taught about the Spirit of God. John's message also had truth in it about the Holy Spirit. The Revised Version rendering : "Whether the Holy Spirit was given," would seem much better. Thus the point of ignorance was whether the Spirit was given in the way John foretold in relation to the Messiah, but there was no question as to the existence of the Spirit. Consideration of John 7 : 39 will show a similar situation and meaning there also.

The question of their baptism. Were they baptised twice? I believe not. First, they were believers and had been baptised as such though "unto John's baptism," Paul (v. 4) declared that their faith was "on Christ Jesus" though under John's ministry. If we read v. 5 without "this," which is italicised and has no corresponding Greek word, and omit the comma which follows, it shows that their baptism under John was "in the name of the Lord Jesus," therefore John's true disciples were believers and their baptism was valid as in the name of Christ. To make John's baptism invalid through inferiority would cast doubts on the baptism of Jesus and some of His disciples, who were baptised only once and that under John.

Whether these men were Jews or Gentiles is an open question, though the former is most likely. That Paul made no difference between such is clear from v. 10.

The Gift of Tongues

When Paul was satisfied that he was dealing with genuine believers he laid his hands on them and "the Holy Ghost came on them ; and they spake with tongues" (v. 6).

"Tongues" is the same word as in Mark 16 : 17 ; Acts 2 : 4 ; 10 : 46, therefore this scene is an exact fulfilment of the prediction by Christ. It is also in perfect harmony with the other Acts records of speaking with tongues. The people are believers. They speak in languages unknown to their own intellect. The miracle involved is due to the direct operation of the Holy Spirit.

Some will argue that Acts was a transitional period, but most will agree that we live in the same era. Therefore we should expect God to grant the same gifts today as then, unless God clearly reveals otherwise in His Word. In the absence of any such directive, we would assert that God's will for the same Church today is unchanged. If a change has taken place we must

Singing from the heart

ON my page last week I wrote about the sadness I felt that popular sacred songs and hymns are sung and played by non-Christians who pay little heed to the meaning of the words, yet who am I to condemn this practice? Human nature being so frail, I discover that we who call ourselves "born-again" believers are guilty of a similar misdemeanour.

Sometimes in our corporate worship we are carried away by a catchy tune, the pleasing rhythm and the sheer joy of singing. When singing a well-known hymn we sing almost mechanically and can be thinking of all and everything while we sing. There is a danger, too, that the lighter type of hymns can fill our repertoire and the great doctrinal hymns of our faith be neglected. I am always grateful that, being raised a Methodist, I learned to love the magnificent hymns of Charles Wesley. To this day I find blessing and strength from reading them.

I do not know what to say about the newly produced hymn book for schools as I have not examined it, but judging by some of its songs sung on television, though the sentiments may be admirable from ethical and humanitarian points of view, they are hardly conducive to worship. They are too "way out" for me. I turn happily to the simpler songs which are a direct product of the world-wide outpouring of the Holy Spirit and are mainly words of Scripture allied to tunes given under the inspiration of God's Spirit.

My main contention is that whatever type of hymn or chorus we sing we must mean the words and sing them with sincerity. Otherwise we are no better than the non-worshipper who lightheartedly listens to sacred song in the pop idiom.

A rather extreme example of such insensitivity occurred while I was in Ghana. Opposite the Elim mission house was a large African compound with eight or nine families living there, including a generous sprinkling of children. Their games, songs and household activities were a source of constant interest to me. One little group of adorable four-to-six-year-olds danced and sang in a most delightful and comical way and especially if they noticed that I was watching from our balcony. They all attended our Sunday school and though none of them was able to speak English they had learned some of our choruses. They would have a little service, as many children do, just a make-believe affair, then jump up, march out of the compound across the roadway outside the mission still singing and clapping and then, emulating the womenfolk, they would form a circle and dance, shuffle or jig around. What did they sing? "I surrender all, I surrender all, all to Thee, my blessed Saviour, I surrender all" over and over again, laughing, singing, skipping, one little bow-legged fellow, a born comedian, leading the rest.

One could not condemn these children; they were entirely innocent in their play and cheerful singing. They had heard the adults singing the chorus in our services in the little chapel across the road. It appealed to them and the English words were easy to remember, but they conveyed no meaning at all, as none of them could understand what was being sung. Regrettably we are sometimes guilty of singing our hymns and choruses insincerely and carelessly, understanding the words, familiar with the sentiment, yet never really earnest in our worship. Familiarity makes a hymn commonplace and we sing all too glibly at times. Remembering the children, dare we who know and understand the full import of the words sing "I surrender all" unless we really mean it? What of Frances Ridley Havergal's hymn of consecration? Surely it is a hollow sham unless we are deeply in earnest when singing "Take my life

The President (T. W. Walker):

J. R. Brown

Monday, June 12th 1 Samuel 28 : 15-25

"Because thou obeyedst not" (v. 18).

There is intense pathos in Saul's utter dejection, for Samuel's words were the knell of doom. The tidings that Israel was delivered into the Philistines' hands and that Saul and his sons would be slain the next day were too much for Saul. Exhausted by long abstinence from food, overwhelmed by mental distress and driven to despair, cold sweat broke on his anxious brow and he sank helpless to the ground (v. 20). There was a touching kindness in the scene that followed and physically, at least, Saul was revived, only to depart to await the awful doom that nothing could prevent from overtaking him.

Our faithfulness to God is proved by our deeds, not by our words only (John 14:15).

Tuesday, June 13th 1 Samuel 29 : 1-11

"Wherefore now return . . . in peace" (v. 7).

The objection of the Philistine lords to David's presence in their battle with the Israelites was understandable, yet it was a happy circumstance in the overruling providence of God to rescue David from a dangerous dilemma. David, in his gratefulness to Achish for protection and hospitality, was prepared to back the Philistines against Israel, his desire being precipitated by the attitude of Saul. Two wrongs do not make a right, however, and the command given to Achish for David's return (v. 9) was both wise and providential for Israel's monarch-elect.

It is far better to be guided by the Spirit of God than to be swayed by circumstances.

Wednesday, June 14th 1 Samuel 30 : 1-15

"David inquired at the Lord" (v. 8).

While the strength of the Philistine forces was being poured out of the country, Amalekite marauders seized the opportunity to invade the southern region, David's town and possessions suffering their ravages (vv. 1, 2). Distressed, and the object of the men's fury, David sought the Lord. Under the pressure of so unexpected a calamity, the spirits of any other leader guided by ordinary motives would have sunk, but David encouraged (literally "strengthened") himself in the Lord, David's faith supplied him with inward resources of comfort and energy that allowed him to see beyond the destruction around him and to pursue the destroyers in the will of God.

We draw upon the strength of the Lord when we seek Him in faith.

Thursday, June 15th 1 Samuel 30 : 16-31

"And David recovered all" (v. 18).

Despite the weariness of the long march from Ziklag, David's men pursued and slew the Amalekites (v. 17). David's possessions were now greater than before, due to the spoil that was gained and divided among them. This unexpected accession of spoil nearly caused a quarrel through the cupidity of some. Serious consequences could have ensued, but were prevented by the prudence of the leader in establishing a rule regarding spoil (vv. 22-25; Numbers 31:27; Joshua 22:8). Out of a grateful heart, David sent liberally to the leaders of Judah (v. 26).

Freely we have received from God; let us give likewise.

Friday, June 16th 1 Samuel 31 : 1-13

"So Saul died" (v. 6).

The closing chapter of this Book is a picture of a disastrous failure, Saul died on the battlefield by his own hand. Later, his mutilated body was displayed for all to see and to mock. Advantages and opportunities in youth never guarantee success in manhood; one must always be true to God. Saul's undoing was a combination of half-hearted obedience and total disobedience. He was a victim of pride and jealousy. The ruins of Bethshan, the temple of Ashtaroah and a temple of Dagon whence Saul's body was taken (v. 10) were uncovered in the stratum of 1,000 B.C. by the University Museum of Pennsylvania in 1921-30.

Unbelief brings bondage and misery; trust in God lifts us into victory.

Saturday, June 17th Hebrews 1 : 1-14

"He hath . . . a more excellent name" (v. 4).

The grand opening statement (vv. 1-4) indicates the theme of Hebrews, viz. the absolute supremacy and sufficiency of Christ. Christians have what is better in every way. "Better," the keyword, occurs thirteen times. Note the continuity between Old Testament revelation and the new revelation in Christ (vv. 1, 2); the first prepares, the second consummates (10:8,9). This Book has been called "The fifth Gospel"; the four describe Christ's ministry on earth, Hebrews tells of His ministry in heaven. There are eight successive statements about Christ (vv. 2-4). This final revelation of God is not only in the incarnation of the Son, but in the Son as the fulfiller of the work of atonement for sin (1 John 4:9, 10). We are left in no doubt as to Christ's deity. Here are revelation (Hebrews 1:2), salvation (v. 3) and aspiration (v. 6).

Sunday, June 18th Hebrews 2 : 1-9

"Therefore . . . give . . . heed" (v. 1).

The writer introduces the first of his characteristic solemn warnings. "Let them slip" means "drift past out of reach." The revelation places on all who hear a supreme obligation to give heed and to obey. To Jewish minds, angels are of great im-

Three Brides for three 'Grooms

HOW long did you wait to get married ? The three couples before me in the Msolwa church had fourteen children between them. "If any person knows of any just cause or impediment why these two should not be joined together in holy matrimony, I charge you to declare it now or for ever be silent," I said. There was complete silence. "Praise God! I said. "Amen" chorused the congregation. For fifteen years we had waited for holy matrimony (ndoa takatifu) among the Wakweli people. Every attempt of the young converts to marry before God had been prevented by the elders. Now some of those elders were seated in the church; they had ceased their threats and curses, their spell-making and vetoes.

"Who has ndoa takatifu?" I asked. "The Jews had it, but lost it because of the hardness of their hearts. Islam never had it, Mohammed, their prophet, had many wives. In your tribe it is impossible because of tribal customs and the power of the elders. Europeans had it because the European tribal customs were founded in Christianity, but now as the Europeans turn away from Christianity they become as the heathen and as the Moslem. Who then can have ndoa takatifu? Those of every tribe and tongue who are in Yesu Kristo, He who makes all things new!"

Without Yesu the 'grooms had no claim to anything holy. All three had been involved in witchcraft. Joseph, son of a lion man (ability to turn into a lion), was well versed in exorcism. Eliya, who had a familiar spirit, was powerful in cursing. Emanueli, a specialist in love philtres, was expert in obtaining spells from the spirit world of darkness. The brides, bought some years before, costing £10-£15 each, had a wholly heathen background. I well remembered one such being brought before the church. She had assented to being the wife of a fellow tribesman, but she was fearful of being taken into the presence of a European. I said to her, "You do not understand anything of your husband's faith, but like Ruth [here I told her the story of Ruth the Moabite] you can say that your God shall be my God." "Yes, Bwana," she fearfully replied, hiding her face.

As the three couples stood smiling before me I remembered much of their history, the battles that they had fought for the faith. To each one in turn I said, "Will you take this one to be your partner until death do you part?" "I will" they said. Finally I presented each couple to the congregation as man and wife. Ndoa takatifu had come to the Wakweli, a prize that had been earnestly sought. Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder!

portance and are superior to men, but the writer indicates that man, though "for a little while" (R.V. margin) lower than angels, will have dominion over angels in God's ultimate purpose (Psalm 8; 1 Corinthians 6:3). We see the significance of Christ's exaltation as man: "we see Jesus [His unqualified human name] . . . crowned" (Hebrews 2:9). The consummation of salvation at the coming of Christ is the glorious hope of every Christian (1 John 3:2).

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Life's Chorus

by Michael W. Carr

Psalm 1

THE Psalms are not merely word melodies, but sparks from the anvil of life. Sledgehammer trials had moulded David, the author of so many, into a vessel meet for God's treasure. A richness of personal experience emerges that answers the unspoken questions in our lives. The unsettled issues of eternity and the meaningful matters of time unfold in these catalogues of praise. Should Satan depress, the flesh discourage and friends disown, then David faced them all, had slain, conquered and ridden in triumph over his foes. See, then, how he opens up and displays his own testimony, to our encouragement and victory.

The godly man does not walk, stand or sit, but lays himself within the heartbeat of a loving God and finds this better than 10,000 laughs with wicked men, for these are they who turn their worthless scorn upon the priceless law of heaven and undercost the value of a rugged cross, exchanging life's full span of thankful praise for hollow jests that mock Golgotha's crimson stream. This "sounding brass" from godless men is but the swelling of an empty cloud that runs before the sifting breeze of truth. The ransomed heart in prostrate trust discards the shallowness of earthly praise and covets not the friendship of unthankful men. The fear of God has touched his heart with wisdom's reverential care, has taught his seeking soul to dwell inside a fissured rock and view the scene of prattling men like slowly shifting sand. Their vain advice dissuades pursuing souls, but faith secures above all earthly ties a fellowship with Christ which abhors the contagion of worldly-minded men and does not listen to pretentious speech that taunts the smitten Lord. Faith turns an upward ear to catch the whisper wrapped in a loving smile and sees that the golden prospect of an earthly pilgrimage is spread with Divine delight as God Himself steps out to tread a coupled path that leads to perfect peace.

Amid the technological turmoil and mournful mechanism of this industrial age laughter is rare, but the musical ring of this happy man is a symphony of praise to God, for his "delight is in the law." Even within the Church black morbidity from sanctimonious men blights the brightest day, but who can stay the cheerful chuckle of a holy life? To live according to the "law and the testimony" can bring some men into bondage—they try too hard! The harpist describes this blissful man as like unto a tree, and when did you last see a tree work? It quietly puts down and grows up a sturdy multiplication of strength over numerous seasons. It stands tall with towering toughness above the adverse currents of life, king of the plant realm. Sad sinners are like brittle reeds soon snapped before the driving wind, but a tree simply shakes its emerald crown and rustles a song through the heavens. Similarly, there is nothing to compare with the rippling joy of a ransomed soul when the gusts of God are blowing through the life. By rooting deep at the water's edge a tree blooms with fruitful freshness, for it is not only "planted," but fixed by "rivers of water." If "his delight is in the law," then the believer's dependence must be on the Spirit.

This glowing growing shall "never wither." The man who rests in God and rejoices in His testimonies takes on conformity to the "tree of life," whereas the rootless man will tumble like "rolling thistledown upon the mountains of the Lord" when He comes with His judgment. "The way of the ungodly shall perish," but the righteous man will see the salvation of the Lord in the morning of eternity. All shall crumble and crash, but through the dissolution of time a new era will dawn that will outlast the confines of man's measure. Limitless association with a God of love will be nothing less than prosperity, the central promise of the psalm.

The man who lays himself on God laughs—and lasts!

Church reports

BOURNEMOUTH, Winton

Pastor : G. N. Backhouse

At Easter the great truths of Christ's life, death and resurrection were emphasised by Pastor T. H. Stevenson, the special speaker for the weekend. He brought before us the glorious hope of Christ's coming again. His ministry at all the services upheld and glorified our risen Lord and was a means of blessing.

At a recent Sunday evening meeting Pastor A. D. Bull, who is home on furlough from Tanzania, told of the great work that is going on there. It was very encouraging to hear of Africans whose lives have been transformed by the grace of God and who are preaching the gospel to their own people and taking responsibility for the church in Tanzania.

(MRS.) D. F. KEMP.

BIRMINGHAM, Selly Oak

It was a momentous day when the Selly Oak church said farewell to their minister, his wife and family, who had accepted a call to a church in Canada. Tribute must be paid to the members who put on a wonderful tea for nearly 300 people.

R. J. Morrison, the District Superintendent, convening the service, set the tone for the evening with the chorus, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me." God's blessing rested on the musical items by the Second Advent Group and by Mrs. Sue Williams. Prayer was led by S. J. Brown, the Winson Green pastor. Mr. Morrison reviewed the work at Selly Oak from the presbytery point of view. It was grand to hear tributes by letter from Ron Jones, with whom Mr. Caple had worked on campaigns, from the secretary of the Hadley church (Mr. Caple's first church), and from Barnsley read by a brother from there who had been converted through Mr. Caple's ministry. Mr. Bullivant, the church treasurer, declared that he felt that the church was in revival blessing. He presented a cheque to Mr. Caple, who told how God had blessed at Selly Oak. Three and a half years ago two communion trays were in use for eighty communicants at the most. Now five trays are needed as over 200 break bread. The offerings were averaging £50, they are now £150-£170. The house next to the church was purchased for future extensions. The branch church at Stirchley was put into the charge of the writer. The church building itself had been extended to accommodate the increasing numbers attending the services.

It was a joy to see and hear Paul Epton and the people from the Cannock church, which was founded through a campaign conducted by Mr. Caple.

Mrs. Caple was presented with a beautiful watch by the ladies of the E.W.M.A., while Philip and Andrew received Bibles from Mr. J. Stroud, the Sunday school superintendent.

Basing his thoughts on "living epistles," Pastor H. W. Greenway showed how we were sending letters to Canada. "Epistole" means "something sent on a mission."

J. B. COLEMAN.

PONTARDULAIS

Pastor : G. J. Feasey

Having launched out on a year of evangelism, we have already seen the hand of God in progress in every department of our church. We recently had the joy of witnessing four converts going through the waters of baptism. The church was full. An impressive message was preached by the pastor.

We were pleased to see a large congregation in this Sunday gospel service.

We are looking forward to greater things from a great God as our summer crusade draws near.

RYDE

Pastor : I. R. Hall

At our annual Easter Convention we enjoyed the blessing of the Lord under the excellent ministry of Eldin R. Corsie, of Kensington Temple, London. The convention opened with a Communion service on the Thursday. Singing was provided by a group from the Newport, Isle of Wight, Salvation Army corps. Our pastor convened this meeting. The conveners of the other meetings were Mr. P. Rowe and Mr. H. Feasey, the church treasurer and secretary respectively. Mr. Corsie's ample talents were fully utilised in that as well as accompanying the congregational singing at the piano he ministered in song. God's presence was very evident in each meeting.

At the Tuesday prayer meeting following the convention numerous testimonies to blessing received were given and much appreciation was expressed for Mr. Corsie's inspiring ministry.

SHEILA C. HALL.

BALLYMENA

Pastor : A. D. Sandford

Amid feverish excitement the photographer arrived. After he completed his task the children settled down to tea. This was the beginning of the annual Sunday school social. The feast over, the time came for the children to share their talents with parents and friends, who by now had packed the church. The subject for demonstration was: "The treasure hunt." With much imagination we were taken on board the good ship "Discovery" to Treasure Island, where ultimately the treasure was found. We realised that treasures of the kingdom are not hidden in man-made chests, but are found in God's precious Word. On the following Sunday awards were presented to every child by Mrs. Sandford.

We continue to return thanks to God for His blessing upon the youth activities and for the joy of seeing many of the senior scholars attending the regular Sunday services. Many of them have received their personal Pentecost.

WOOLWICH

Pastor : L. Jones

The celebration of the twenty-seventh anniversary of our Sunday school was an enthusiastic, if a little incoherent, presentation of "Coins in Bible days." "Uncle Mick" and "Uncle Bob" visited us for the day on loan from the Elim Bible College and fifty to sixty children were enthralled by the testimonies and stories inter-persed with graphic visual aids. Even when the pictures disappeared in a blaze of glorious colour and application time arrived, the children sat quietly and attentively. Several responded to the appeal.

MAUREEN WOODWARD.

What a thrilling day we had when Mrs. M. M. Ladlow spoke at our sisterhood anniversary. The anointing of the Holy Spirit was upon the meeting from the start. The meeting was convened by Mrs. Lyndon Jones.

In the afternoon we had a testimony from the Bexleyheath Women's Meeting, and a duet from Joyce and Barbara. Our choir sang, then Mrs. Ladlow spoke simply and sincerely on Hannah.

In the evening, after we had enjoyed the tea and fellowship with other sisters, the choir sang. A sister from Bexleyheath gave a stirring testimony. Mrs. Ladlow, dressed in the beautiful Ghanaian dress which the sisters in Ghana had presented to her, brought greetings to us from Ghana and told how the sisters had given beads from their wedding necklaces and bracelets so as to make one necklace for her to keep in remembrance of them. She showed how E.W.M.A. helps the missionaries. Mrs. Ladlow gave us a little insight of the work they did in the Crobo tribe while David and Margaret Mills were on furlough.

We had a testimony from Rosemary Mawutsa from Inyanga North, Rhodesia, who explained that she did not think that she needed to give her heart to Christ until she heard a young African pastor speaking at a meeting. She felt that he was speaking just to her, so she went to the front and gave her heart and life to Christ.

The final blessing came when David Tattersall came to tell us that his wife for whom we had been praying had just had a baby daughter, Rachel.

(MRS.) A. SMITH.

WORCESTER

Pastor : B. R. J. Garrard

A large congregation gathered for the final service of Pastor and Mrs. T. H. Stevenson. After forty years in the Elim ministry, the last six and a half years at Worcester, Pastor Stevenson has given up pastoral work on medical advice.

Representing Elim headquarters, Pastor J. T. Bradley spoke in appreciation of the faithful work of Pastor Stevenson in building up the movement in his various pastorates. He recalled Pastor Stevenson's ministry began with an association with the late Principal George Jeffreys and that in 1961 he served the movement as its president. There is no retirement in the service of the Lord and it is expected that the pen of our brother will be even more active now than in the past.

Our elder, Mr. Lewis, presented Pastor Stevenson with a car radio and a cheque on behalf of the church members. Mrs. Stevenson was presented with a bouquet.

We trust that the Lord will grant them both a happy and rewarding retirement.

A congregation of 200 welcomed Pastor Brian Garrard to the pastorate of the Worcester church. The induction service was conducted by Pastor R. J. Morrison, Superintendent of the Birmingham Presbytery, and the address was given by Pastor S. J. Brown.

Pastor Garrard is no stranger to the church as fourteen years ago he was with us for a few months as assistant minister. The church members welcomed him back with great pleasure, this time as pastor. A warm welcome was also given to Mrs. Garrard and baby Jonathan. Mrs. Garrard was presented with a bouquet and a teddy bear for Jonathan.

Members from Winson Green and High Wycombe churches attended the service, after which a time of fellowship was enjoyed during the partaking of refreshments.

The church is looking forward to a time of great blessing under the ministry of our new pastor.

New Zealand Pentecostal Jubilee

by P. S. BREWSTER

EN ROUTE for New Zealand I met some ministers in South Africa and had a splendid time discussing world Pentecostal news and the magazine. On board the ship Ocean Monarch, formerly The Empress of Britain, I conducted Bible classes on evangelism and had 180 in attendance. They were wonderful experiences. There were many inquiries and a hunger for the Holy Spirit as I told them of Joel's prophecy and that God was now pouring out His Holy Spirit upon all flesh.

Fifty years ago Smith Wigglesworth pioneered the Pentecostal message in New Zealand and all the Pentecostal movements are joining together to celebrate their jubilee. I have been invited to be the guest speaker. When I arrive in New Zealand I shall be given a civic welcome and the Prime Minister and members of the local council will be present. We shall have our first evangelistic rally in a concert hall seating 2,000 people. From then on I have three meetings per day: a seminar for ecumenical ministers in the morning, a forum in the university in the afternoon and a public rally at night. We are continuing through the main cities and towns of New Zealand and Australia. I shall also conduct meetings in our own Elim churches for Pastor G. T. S. Dunk.

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ★ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ★ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ★ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ★ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ★ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ★ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it. We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church. With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

The Gift of Tongues

4. "Now concerning Spiritual Gifts" (1 Corinthians 12)

PAUL'S first Letter to the Corinthians was mainly corrective. Corinth, a problem church, yet provided an opportunity which called forth this lengthy, valuable letter dealing with local church difficulties which are with us still. Divisions, discipline, doctrinal error (for example, on the resurrection of the body) and a proper approach to the Lord's Table complement a large section on Spiritual Gifts.

He deals especially with three of those Gifts—tongues, interpretation of tongues, and prophecy. We are concentrating on tongues and its companion Gift, interpretation of tongues, but we recognise that these are some Gifts among many and must be kept in a proper perspective.

Doctrinal teaching added to historical records

When any matter is included in both the historical books and the doctrinal books of the New Testament, this is a strong indication of the permanence of that particular thing. The Gift of tongues is one such. The sound "as of a rushing mighty wind" and the "cloven tongues like as of fire" (Acts 2:2, 3) are not mentioned in any Epistle. Such silence indicates the temporary, unique nature of those manifestations, amazing though they were, and definitely of God. When Paul takes up the question of tongues and deals with it in a doctrinal treatise, he clearly envisages this Gift as an abiding feature of church life. The experience of believers in Acts may not only be taken in general as providing the norm for us still; it becomes indisputably so when reinforced by epistolary teaching.

The question of identity

Some will admit the above principle, but challenge its application to tongues. They question or deny the assumption that Paul is writing about the same thing as Mark and Luke mainly on two grounds. They describe tongues in Acts as known languages (for example, 2:4-8), while those in 1 Corinthians are clearly stated by Paul to be "unknown" (for example, 14:4). They add that in Acts no interpreter is needed or even envisaged at any point whereas in 1 Corinthians such a person is absolutely necessary or else the tongues-speaker is to remain silent (14:28).

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

Apart from one place (1 Corinthians 14:21), Paul uses the same word as Mark and Luke, translated as "tongues." This is suggestive though not conclusive of similarity. Speaking with tongues is found in the context predicted in Mark 16 and recorded by Luke in Acts 2, 10, 19, that is among "them that believe," for the Corinthian church was composed of saints in Christ (1:2) who had been justified by faith (6:11). So harmony is found on this point. The seeming discrepancy between known and "unknown" tongues may also be resolved even when we allow "unknown" to stand in 1 Corinthians 14. The italics used indicate that there is no corresponding word in the Greek text in each of the five places where it is used in the Authorised Version, viz. vv. 2, 4, 14, 19, 27. The value of "unknown" is thus greatly reduced.

To the argument that "unknown" represents an obvious fact if not a Greek word we further reply. There is no suggestion in Acts 10 and 19 that the tongues were known by anyone present, therefore the translators could have inserted "unknown" there also. The tongues in Acts 2 were known only by one section of the cosmopolitan crowd which gathered, who clearly did not expect the tongues to be known by the speakers (vv. 7-13), therefore the tongues in Acts 2 were known to the foreign hearers, but were "unknown" to the native disciples speaking them. In 1 Corinthians 14 the emphasis is upon the speaker, for example vv. 2, 13, and thus it harmonises with the Acts record to describe them as "unknown."

The absence of an interpreter in Acts 2 and the necessity for one in 1 Corinthians arises from the two types of congregation involved. In Acts 2 it was cosmopolitan in character with a wide variety of languages naturally represented. When the disciples spoke in other tongues their utterances were understood without a third party being needed to interpret. The congregation could thus learn directly what was being said and realise the "sign" nature of the miracle as followers of Christ declared "the wonderful works of God" in languages unknown to them. The Corinthian congregation was a local church gathering with no such cosmopolitan elements and where linguistic understanding would be limited, as in any local church. For the church to be edified they needed to understand. As they could not understand naturally, there arose the necessity of a further supernatural gift—interpretation of tongues. By this the understanding of the church was made fruitful and the church as a whole edified.

Provision was made even in the Corinthian situation for tongues without an interpreter, the only restriction imposed being that the person should speak to himself and to God. He was not to participate in the public worship of the church (1 Corinthians 14:28). The interpreter is thus only necessary in a local church congregational context and not in personal devotions within the church.

The vital test of all utterances

1 Corinthians 12:1-3

Paul's stated purpose is to dispel ignorance about Spiritual Gifts. He reminds them of their former state when they worshipped dumb idols, but they have been brought to the God who speaks by His Spirit. To test any utterance claimed to be "by the Spirit of God" he lays down two fundamental criteria: Jesus of Nazareth will never be accursed, but will always be acknowledged as Lord—that is, Deity. When any utterance does not meet these two requirements it must be rejected as spurious, proceeding not from the Spirit of God but from either a carnal, human source or a Satanic origin. This principle can be applied to tongues as understood by a foreign hearer or interpreted in the church. Where no interpretation obtains, other criteria may be used, for example the spiritual calibre and moral character of the speaker together with normal doctrinal confession concerning Christ.

The single source of all the Gifts

vv. 4-7

There is a diversity of Gifts available to members of the Body of Christ, but there is only one Bestower: the Holy Spirit. When received and used, Gifts will bring varying ministries into operation, yet they are all exercised under the authority of the same Lord. The true exercise of those Gifts in ministry will be energised by the same God. Thus the Godhead, in each of its three persons, is the one source for bestowal, exercise and energising of all Gifts. Any such manifestation has in view the profit of those who perceive it.

The practical diversity of Spiritual Gifts

In vv. 8-10 we have a list of what Paul had in mind when he wrote about Spiritual Gifts. They cover a wide field and must be classified as supernatural Gifts, not natural gifts possessed normally by men. Spiritual Gifts are bestowed directly by the Holy Spirit, whose will is sovereign in determining the Gift bestowed on the individual (v. 11). The usefulness and necessity of such a variety of Gifts is illustrated from the physical body (vv. 12-26). There is a great diversity of function in bodily organs and members, but this was ordained by God, who made the members interdependent for the well-being of the body as a whole. The specific application of this principle is made in vv. 27, 28. Christians, viewed in a community sense as a church, are the body of Christ, with individuals corresponding to the members of the body. The Spirit grants Gifts to individuals in order that they may minister in co-operation with others to edify the whole church. In distributing Gifts God caters for the full growth of the whole body. Thus no one Gift will be bestowed upon all, nor will any one person possess all gifts (vv. 29, 30). Individuals will receive Gifts from God, who will thus set them to function within the church.

Coveting the best Gifts

v. 31

To covet means to set one's heart upon. Which Gifts are best for us and on which we should set our hearts will be determined by many factors, such as the will of God for our personal lives, the office we hold in the church, or the sphere of service in which we work for God. The Gifts in themselves are not of equal value. Interpretation of tongues is not as valuable as the Gift of tongues, but is dependent upon it for exercise in the church. Paul makes it clear that, in the church, tongues is not as important as the Gift of prophecy (14:5). Any evaluation of the Gifts must take many factors into consideration.

The Gift of tongues belongs inseparably to the foregoing survey of the chapter. It is mentioned specifically three times and the principles stated, with the illustration used, belong to this Gift just as to any other. Our next step will be to consider tongues in the context of what is stated in chapter 12 relative to all Spiritual Gifts.

THE Christian life should be one of progress and development. The Bible abounds with exhortations like "Run with patience," "Grow in grace," "Press toward the mark," and a host of others. We have been brought up, many of us, on the wise maxim that there is no standing still spiritually—it is either forwards or backwards.

There is a balancing aspect of this, however. John, the beloved apostle, expressed it in demanding terms in 1 John 2:24: "Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father."

Paul was very careful in his tremendous chapter on pressing toward the mark to include the adjunct: "Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing" (Philippians 3:16).

These sage commands do not smack of nostalgia, but of the wonder that the knowledge, experience, challenge, revelation—the whole sheer glory of the knowledge of God in Christ gained over the full period of one's testimony—is a living, present reality.

If you are, as they say, middle-aged (which really ought to be thirty-five!), you may have been asked how old you would like to be. You may well have answered "I would like to be twenty-one again, provided I still knew all that I know now."

In the spiritual realm, what we are is compounded of all the ingredients which have gone to make up all our experience. Said John, "Let that therefore abide in you," in other words it should be "a living bright reality."

As John went on to write of eternal life and of the anointing, we soon see that we are receiving from him encouragement as well as the means of overcoming false teachers, especially those who would deny the vital truth of the Deity of the Lord Jesus Christ.

All that God has done for us and has been to us should glow brightly in our lives now and spur us on to the new knowledge, revelation, usefulness and experience that God certainly has for us.

FIELD SUPERINTENDENT'S NOTES

An appreciation. It would seem appropriate that a word of appreciation should be expressed to our retired President, A. A. Biddle. He has given of his best over the past year in itineraries, on many committees and wherever his presence has been required, even to the mission field. Thanks, too, are due to the Portsmouth church, which has backed him in every way possible. Now our expressions of good will are extended to our new President, T. W. Walker. May God bless him richly in his year of office which commenced so splendidly at our recent conference.

Family affairs. Since writing my last notes our fellowship has suffered severe loss by the sudden home-call of Pastor H. Toft, whose splendid character will be sorely missed from our ranks. Babies have arrived at the homes of Pastor and Mrs. I. S. Rickard, Pastor and Mrs. P. T. Niblett, and Pastor and Mrs. A. W. Leavesley.

New churches. Great joy came to me when I was privileged recently to open the new church in South Shields following the campaign held by A. B. Tee and party. The well-renovated hall was previously attached to the Presbyterian Church, which is now closed. It was packed to capacity for the occasion, Pastor A. P. Johnston is now in charge and finding encouragement as he works hard to establish the congregation. Weston-super-Mare also has an Elim Pentecostal Church now, following a campaign by W. R. Jones and team. The congregation is worshipping in temporary hired accommodation and J. B. D. Ritchie, a young man newly graduated from Elim Bible College, has been appointed to the pastorate. Pray for these new works.

Fresh appointments. F. A. Hodge has moved to Brighton (The Lanes), J. J. B. Hounsborne to West-cliff, J. McBurney to Dagenham, B. R. J. Garrard to Worcester, E. T. Carter to Grimsby, B. H. Tween to Finchley, W. G. Blackler to Thornton

Heath, P. J. Thompsett to Merriott, M. A. Drew to Stowmarket and G. Fearn to Darlington.

Please continue to pray for our friends in Ulster. Constant danger surrounds them. At conference we heard of the gracious undertaking hand of God towards some of our ministers' wives.

No individual can take credit for what has transpired over the years. "My glory will I not give to another" (Isaiah 42:8). "This is the Lord's doing; it is marvellous in our eyes" (Psalm 118:23). We humbly give thanks for all His leading, guidance, power and blessing. In His providence and love He preserved us, piloted us through the rough seas and held us together when Satan would have separated us. When we have failed Him, he has pardoned and restored us and caused His face to shine upon us. The most we can claim is: "We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty" (Luke 17:10).

It all began in 1928, when a group of young people who had found Christ were denied evangelical preachers in the local village chapel. We virtually found ourselves on the street. Times were hard, pocket money for those well on in their 'teens was between 6d. and 1/-. What could we do? It was suggested that we went into the town, but there was no real evangelical activity there that we knew of. I said: "Do not let us do anything rash! Let us pray. God has a way; He can make a way for us." While I was praying, a disused mill at the bottom of the village came forcibly to mind. God spoke and I knew that was it.

A little while previous to this I had started up a little business. My entire stock barely made a show in the window; by this time I had never made more than 28/- profit in a week. They were days of slump and depression. I inquired the terms for the old mill and was offered it at a weekly rental of 7/-. It was a lot of money, but I well remember kneeling in my small one-roomed shop and asking the Lord to give me 7/- extra profit that week. I said that if He did I would take it as a seal and would trust Him to continue to provide the money through my business. I promised that as long as I lived in the village I would see that there was a place where the Gospel was faithfully preached. I got my 7/- that week and rented the building in faith, but when I took my best friend to view the property he flatly refused to have anything to do with it and counselled me "Never start here." My friend said "no," but God had said "yes," and we pressed on.

We started by cleaning up one end of the building, which had been partitioned off by some squatters. I begged some soap boxes from the local grocer, pulled down some planks of wood from another part of the building and wrapped them in brown paper. Our seating problem was solved! A sixpenny roll of wallpaper pinned on to the wall kept the grime from our Sunday best. The Christian Herald supplied a free hymnal and we opened in late August with no lighting or heating. We were a farce to the village, who openly made fun of us as we passed down the road. We mustered about thirty to our first service and God honoured our faith. We had fourteen decisions on the first night. When daylight faded out, candles were brought in from nearby houses.

Numbers grew and we moved into the larger section of the building. Our pulpit was made of orange boxes. We had almost every conceivable contraption for seating, but the Lord blessed. All this time we had squatters on the ground floor beneath. Often smoke would rise through the floorboards with a strong smell of cooking kippers while we were breaking bread.

About that time electricity came to the village. A public school was the first to have it. I approached the headmaster when I was told that they were taking out their gas fittings. After he had questioned me about our doctrines he allowed us to purchase six big arc lamps for 10/-. Then there was the problem of fitting them. Not a single plumber could be found who would take on the work, such was the stigma, but eventually a young man came over from Halifax to help us. Tip-up chairs came next. I made an offer of £10 to a cinema manager for all his chairs and got them for my cheek. We beat out the dust and installed them on our uneven, creaking floor. We were feeling smart and much more comfortable.

After the first flush of blessing there followed a quiet period. Then we began to pray, "Lord, do a new thing!"—and He did! A man with a broken back received in a pit accident was instantaneously healed in his house and he walked, to the amazement of the people, who queued up from 9.30 p.m. until after 2 a.m. to see him. The next day he headed a little procession down the village to the meeting and people lined the roadsides to watch him. As a result crowds flocked to our meetings.

I was only twenty-one years of age at this time. When we began to have Pentecostal manifestations a little extravagance crept in, and through inexperience and ignorance of these things the whole work almost collapsed and many left us, but the Lord helped us. We survived, but found it much harder to build up this time.

It was then that my late colleague George Truswell came to help and gradually he was persuaded to stay with us. It became a co-pastorate. His strong lead and sound Bible teaching, backed by his previous experience in campaign work, brought strength to the cause and he remained with us until his passing. He was a tower of strength.

After about four years in the old mill, which was to some of us the very gate of heaven to our souls, we were approached by the local vicar. The old Church of England Sunday school and parochial hall was for sale. This building was the first day school and church combined, where pupils brought one penny per week with their own slate for tuition. We procured it for the tremendous sum of £250. Some thought this was such an overwhelming sum that a stipulation was made that unless we could raise in loans and gifts the whole sum interest-free from our own members we were to take it as not being God's will. When the promise forms were returned to me gifts and loans amounted to £230. This was very good, seeing that all our members were very poor, but it was not good enough for the timid. It did not give us God's sanction. I went to the meeting with a very heavy heart. We were sunk for £20.

As we opened the meeting brother Cook, a grand, godly senior member, raised his hand and said, "Before we start can I alter my paper? I feel that I have done wrong. I still have £20 more which I have kept back. Will you add that on?" He did not know the situation, but God did and He moved him to act just in time.

We got the building, converted it to meet our needs, and moved in. It was officially opened by Pastor Jowitt, of Leeds, who had always shown a great interest in the work and gave much helpful advice to this inexperienced young man.

The old plush seats were re-covered in rexine and fixed in the new building. We did the painting and decorating ourselves to keep expenses to a minimum and by so doing we managed to clear all our debts in approximately three years.

The work pressed on and for many years kept at a steady congregation of about forty to fifty. Then about ten years ago the Lord began to move and numbers were added until now they are about double that number. Souls have been saved and bodies healed and believers baptised in the Holy Spirit. There has been expansion in all departments. The Sunday school was bursting at the seams and began to cry out for more space, and in 1966 we launched a scheme to build a minor hall adjacent to the old building. When we gave out the contract in the March we had less than

THE NEGLECTED JEWEL

Gustaf Gilman, a Chicago lapidary, was at work in his shop when John Mihok, a labourer, entered. Drawing out of his packet a rough red stone, he handed it to Gilman, saying, "I want you to cut and polish this." "Wherever did you get it?" gasped the lapidary, his eyes almost popping out of his head. "My father picked it up in Hungary fifty years ago," replied Mihok. "He thought it was a pretty pebble. When I landed in this country I found it in my trunk. It has been lying around the house ever since. One night I dreamed it was a diamond and worth a lot of money, but it's not a diamond—it's red." "No, it's a pigeon's blood ruby," said Gilman. "What might it be worth?" asked Mihok. "I'd say anything from 100,000 to 250,000 dollars," Gilman replied. Mihok leaned against the counter! This flawless ruby cut to a lovely stone of twenty-three and nine-tenths carats and it is believed to be the largest in the world. "Lying around the house," he said—just like some Bibles!

THAT BLESSED HOPE

(Titus 2:13; 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18)

A shout,
A trumpet note,

A glorious presence in the azure sky!
A gasp,
A thrill of joy,
And we are with Him in the twinkling of an eye!

A glance,
An upward look,
Caught up to be with Christ for evermore!
The dead alive,
The living glorified,
Fulfilled are all His promises that came before!

His face!
His joy supreme!
Our soul's fond rapture only at His feet!
Blameless!
Without a spot!
So shall we enter into heaven's joy complete!

£900 in hand. The people refused to have a building fund, saying that the money would come in through the ordinary offerings. Our target was £4,000 and I was worried as to how I should meet the builders on completion if the money was not there. I saw my bank manager and he promised me a private loan if it should be needed, but on October 29th, 1966, when the building was opened, praise the Lord, the money was there!

In 1969 God gave us a most remarkable miracle in a crusade conducted by Alexander Tee. That testimony has appeared in the EVANGEL.

It would take a very interesting book to tell the full story of storm and sunshine over nearly forty-four years, but these are some of the experiences and happenings which might encourage some to launch out on God. He will not repeat the Wrenthorpe story, but He can give a greater and more thrilling story for you to tell in some future day should He tarry.

This story is His story and is written for His glory alone. We give thanks for the privilege of living these forty-four years to witness all His wondrous doings.

Billy's good deed

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"It's very boring being an owl," sighed Billy.

"Are you bored then?" asked Mrs. Owl.

"Yes, I am, mother," said Billy. "Every night I sit here in the tree. I have no one to talk to and no one to play with. Everyone else is asleep. Why can't owls sleep at night like everyone else?"

"Well," said Mrs. Owl, "I expect God wants us to watch over the forest. God has given us better eyes than other creatures so that we can see in the dark. It makes the other animals feel safer, knowing that while they sleep we are watching over them. Stay here while I go and look for something to eat."

Billy sighed, "This is going to be another long, boring night. Nothing much goes on in this forest."

He heard a noise. Someone was crying! Billy looked over and saw a little bird on the ground below. He flew down and asked "Whatever is the matter, little bird?" "Oh," sobbed the bird, "I've fallen from my nest and hurt my wing and I can't get back up to my nest and I'm so afraid of the dark!"

"Now don't you worry," said Billy. "We'll soon get you up to your nest. Just climb on my back."

The little bird climbed on to Billy's back and, with his one good wing, he held tightly to Billy's scarf. Billy fluttered his wings and in a few seconds the little bird was back in the tree once more. "Thank you so much for helping me, Billy," he said.

"Now," said Billy "you just go to sleep and have a nice long rest. In the morning your wing will be much better and another thing, little bird—never be afraid of the dark."

"Oh, but I am, Billy."

"There is no need to be," said Billy. "We owls keep awake while you are sleeping and we see that no harm comes to you."

"But who watches over you when you are asleep, Billy?"

"Jesus," said Billy. "He watches over us all, birds, animals, boys, girls, men and women. Jesus never sleeps. He watches over us every minute and keeps us safe from harm."

"Goodnight," said the little bird.

"Sleep tight," said Billy.

FROM T. H. STEVENSON

IN a very early part of my ministry, when I was assistant minister of a very large Elim congregation, a prominent minister of the Church of the Nazarene was invited to preach in our church. He preached quite purposely on the subject of the baptism of the Holy Spirit, strongly interpreting their view of the second blessing of entire sanctification. I was rather surprised, not at his views, of which I was well aware, but that he took advantage of our pulpit to propound a doctrine on which we held a marked difference of conviction.

A little later I mentioned the incident to a leading Pentecostalist, who surprised me more by expressing agreement with the visiting preacher's taking his opportunity.

That was long ago, but I still consider that courtesy in the pulpit is more purposeful than collision. We were a young church and many were left in confusion.

This came back to me because when I was invited to preach at an evangelical church on a Sunday night I had no thought of purposely preaching an emphatic doctrine of Pentecost. To be truthful, someone requested me to give a sermon that they had heard me preach some weeks before. When the day came I realised that it was Whit Sunday. Though I had no notes, I felt that I must preach from Acts 2. I remember preaching this message on only one occasion: at an Elim Conference Communion service eleven years ago. I trust that I delivered the sermon with blessing.

Pentecost is wide in dimension. I preached directly and, I believe, with direction from the Lord, not by discretion or diplomacy, but without dwelling upon the phenomenon of tongues. I introduced the message with the first words of the crowd, "What meaneth this?" and with their words, "What shall we do?" when Peter had briefly explained the meaning of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and more fully applied the message. Peter's address literally fulfilled Christ's words in Acts 1:8. His message began: "Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth." Jesus, "a man approved of God among you"; "delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God"; "whom God hath raised up"; "by the right hand of God" (continued on page 17)

PRAYER and PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

"And when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour" (Revelation 8:1).

SILENCE in heaven for half an hour is difficult to imagine. We are surrounded by noise. Some sounds, like the singing of the birds, are a joy. Other noises, like those emitted by aeroplanes and lorries, offend the nerves. Silence is almost impossible to imagine.

Silence in heaven baffles thought even more. Angels cease to praise. The living creatures and the twenty-four elders become totally quiet. In a silence like the foreboding of a coming storm or the warm stillness before an earthquake, heaven is still, waiting for what? Waiting for the prayers of the saints!

Prayer is important to the inhabitants of heaven. In times of great persecution and distress they wait for the cries of the saints upon earth. You can read all this in Revelation 8. Angels take incense and mingle it with the prayers of the saints which ascend from the earth. This speaks to me of prayer in the Holy Ghost, something of which we need more in these days. This is prayer which brings the sense of the presence of the Holy Spirit, who directs us to pray in a way we perhaps did not intend and who brings to our minds people and needs we did not dream of when we started to pray.

It was a joy to get a letter from an Elim missionary who was awakened at 5 a.m. one day with an urge to pray for me. He did so and God answered his prayer in a wonderful way.

The Christian Home

TODAY I have written three cards, one to congratulate a mother on the birth of her little daughter, another containing good wishes to a twenty-one-year-old Elim Crusader and a third to a dear sister who has been bereaved by the home-call of a beloved husband. Despite the sadness felt by the loss of a faithful Christian worker I was happy to dispatch those cards, because in each instance the people concerned are surrounded by or belong to a loving, happy Christian family. What a difference this makes to life! How blessed it is to be born into the godly atmosphere of a Christian home! What better preparation for manhood or embarking on one's career than the support of praying, devoted parents? When death enters the family there is a solace in God and the comfort of those nearest and dearest to the bereaved. I write with conviction and personal experience. I have yet to discover any superior set-up to that of a truly Christian home.

The Home Secretary, Mr. Reginald Maudling, concerned at the growing crime rate among the young, gave his recipe for a law-abiding Britain: family happiness. "I do not think the ultimate basis for law and order rests with the Government, the law or the courts," he said. "It rests on the family tradition and system. If the moral authority of parents is weakened, as in many ways it has been, the guidance they give their children diminishes." So I read in the Daily Express and when I consider the growth of crime, the soaring rate of divorce, of abortions and of the incidence of battered babies, for up to 600 children a year die because they have been beaten and ill-treated by their parents, I am bound to advocate Christian homes as absolutely essential.

The family is the basic unit of society and good, happy homes are a must, for then we shall breed happy, contented, law-abiding citizens and our streets, our communities, our cities and our country will benefit enormously. I am not suggesting that Utopia or a perfect society will emerge, but in view of today's disastrous trends I know that a return to Bible standards cannot fail to bring an improvement.

The Scriptures give us an overall picture of God's wise guide-lines for family life:

1. Parents who pray for and welcome their children as gifts from God.
2. Parents who train their children in Christian ways of belief and conduct.
3. Parents who create a loving, dependable basis for life and by example display a living faith in God and His Word.
4. Parents who rate contentment higher than wealth, godliness superior to success and fame, and character building more important than indulgence.

I am old-fashioned enough to deplore the silly, sloppy attitude of today—parents who allow free expression and let it run riot, lazy parents who say weakly, "I let my child choose his own way; I don't force him to do anything." These ridiculous people should read Proverbs 29:15: "The rod and reproof give wisdom; but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." We correct our children and warn them when danger threatens and physical injury may result, but how many parents protect their children from moral danger, how many mothers pray with their little children and the teenagers who face such temptations today?

The perfect development of the Lord Jesus should be the example to inspire all parents. His was a threefold growth of body, soul and spirit (Luke 2:52).

*O happy home whose little ones are given Early to Thee, in humble faith and prayer,
To Thee, their Friend, who from the heights of heaven
Guides them and guards with more than mother's care!*

exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this which ye see and hear"; "God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ"—Peter certainly preached Christ. Jesus said of the Holy Spirit: "He shall glorify Me."

It is a good criticism of Pentecostal preaching that it is Christ-centred. I strongly believe in tongues as the described initial evidence of the Holy Spirit baptism, but to exalt the Lord Jesus Christ is the inevitable evidence.

Adolescence is not a disease

by Eldin R. Corsie, NATIONAL YOUTH DIRECTOR

FOR some diseases there is a cure; for others there is none. Between these extremes there are those, like the common cold, for which some relief is available, but for the most part they must be allowed to run their course.

Too often this is the attitude toward adolescence; it is considered to be a period to be endured in order to get on to something better. We think we can apply a spiritual "Band-Aid" or hand out a "social aspirin" and then just wait to ride out the storm.

Such an attitude is common among adults and some teens, but it is absolutely wrong. Adolescence is not a disease. It is not a period of life to be endured or to be wished away in order to get on to better times. It is exciting, challenging, created by God. He designed it to be the final step in the process of bringing a person from childhood to adulthood. If this is so, why all the consternation? Everyone has a theory about young people and how to handle their adolescent problems, including teenagers themselves. This period is closely examined, but most difficult to understand; indeed, this is the very heart of the problem—understanding of and by teenagers.

There are several important things a teenager must consider in understanding himself. He is going through years of fantastic change; one enters them a child and leaves them an adult. This means that desire for adult independence will develop, but there may be no freedom in which to exercise it. Problems develop with parents, school and church. Lack of experience compounds the difficulties.

Modern British society and technology are forcing teenagers to face another frustrating situation. Medical and nutritional sciences have developed to the place where young people mature physically at an earlier age; some experts say as much as two years earlier. Educational systems today are designed to teach advanced subjects earlier than ever before. The result is intellectual maturing at a younger age.

Compare this with the demand of the business and professional world for more and more education and you begin to see the "big picture." In a few years the necessity of a university degree may be as universally demanded as a school certificate was for your parents. Because of this, development is advanced, while expression is delayed. It is no wonder that frustrations develop.

What is the answer? It is to understand the nature and source of the conflict. There must be a willingness to work out appropriate solutions in the best interests of all involved, seasoned by the experience and counsel of others. King Solomon was right in saying: "Plans go wrong with too few counsellors; many counsellors bring success" (Proverbs 15:22), Living Psalms and Proverbs).

Here is a danger point. A recent survey showed that nearly fifty per cent of the teens interviewed never went to someone older for advice; they consulted only their peers. There are reasons for this and some may be valid, but there is a great loss in such a practice. The reason most frequently given for not consulting adults is: "They do not understand." Be careful; do not confuse understanding with agreement. Someone may understand you and your situation perfectly and still disagree.

There is Someone who understands us and our circumstances better than we ourselves—Jesus Christ. Commitment of the issues to Him will result in a change in the situation or a change in you, perhaps both.

This latter experience led Paul to write, "I have learned to be content in whatever circumstances I am" (Philippians 4:11). He learned to be content in or in spite of the circumstances. The Lord gave him victory whether or not the situation changed.

Many of the issues you face are larger than you can solve. Ask the Lord to give you the wisdom to change what can be changed and His inner peace to live above whatever cannot be changed.

The result will be an exit from the adolescent years with the full benefit God intended them to provide—a preparation for an abundant adult life in His service.

Notes
by
J. R. Brown

Monday, June 19th Hebrews 2:10-18

"I will put my trust in Him" (v. 13).

Through the incarnation, suffering and death of Christ we see God's purpose for man fulfilled by the one man, Jesus (v. 14; Galatians 3:13-16). By entering into His own glory through suffering, Christ opened the way by which "many" (Isaiah 53:12; Mark 10:45) can share His glory as sons of God and joint-heirs with Christ (Romans 3:23; 5:2; 8:17, 29, 30). To accomplish salvation for man Satan's stranglehold must be broken, so the cross and the tomb were not defeat, but the measure of glorious victory—"might destroy him" (v. 14): literally "make of no effect." Satan is not yet finally destroyed, but he and his work are subject to Christ (v. 18; Revelation 1:18; Ephesians 1:20-22).

Tuesday, June 20th Hebrews 3:1-19

"Partakers of the heavenly calling" (v. 1).

Moses was the human mediator of the Old Testament and, in a unique way, was called to be God's servant (Numbers 12:5-8). Through him Israelites traced their calling as the consecrated of God. The Christian is called and consecrated through Jesus, the Mediator of the better covenant (vv. 1-6). Note the contrast between the "heavenly calling" (v. 1) and the earthly inheritance (vv. 3-6), for Christ the Son is better than Moses the servant. "Consider" (v. 1) means "to perceive thoroughly," i.e. to fix all our gaze, our steadfast mental attention, on Jesus. By doing this we shall be "steadfast"—firm, sure (v. 14), a reference to the beginning and end (12:2). Note the warning regarding unbelief (v. 19).

Wednesday, June 21st Hebrews 4:1-13

"Let us labour therefore" (v. 11).

There is urgent reason to heed the warning, because, though the Divine promise of entering into God's rest is still open, failure to embrace it may result in loss and permanently missing God's best (v. 1). Stress is laid on the danger of the individual dropping out, so all must be on their guard (3:12, 13; 12:15). Hearing alone is not sufficient; the Word must be appropriated, digested, to become part of our lives (v. 2). Faith believes that God means what He says, leading to active association with the Word and with those who obey it. It is a weapon that requires careful handling under the authority of the Holy Spirit (v. 12; Ephesians 6:7).

Thursday, June 22nd Hebrews 4:4-16; 5:1-10

"Let us hold fast" (v. 14).

"We have"—the words are emphatic in the Greek—a great High Priest, great in essential nature, for He is truly man and God, who, in the fulfilment of His work, sits enthroned in the presence of the Father (4:14, 16; 1:3, 13; 8:1; 10:12). Because of His humanity and His earthly experience (4:15), He appreciates our limitations and provides benefits through His priestly work (4:16). We do not enter an earthly shrine, but the very presence of God. Our Lord's qualifications and work as High Priest are described in 5:1-10. Though He was God the Son, He submitted to the will of God in the face of extreme suffering and the power of death (5:8, 9), thus achieving His right to be High Priest after a new order (v. 10).

Friday, June 23rd Hebrews 5:11-14; 6:1-8

"Ye have need that one teach you" (v. 12).

The rebuke and exhortation are prompted by the writer's awareness of his readers' backward condition (5:12) and by his recognition of God's purpose for his children (6:1-3). Those who share in a God-given opportunity to receive His Word, but who deliberately reject it, will be judged. The truths concerning Christ's Melchisedec priesthood require much thought (5:11) as they are "strong meat" ("solid food") (5:12) and can only be digested by the spiritually mature (5:14). The writer is concerned that those who have begun to experience the grace of Christ should prove their genuineness by going on to the end of the true spiritual life (2 Peter 1:5-11).

Saturday, June 24th Hebrews 6:9-20

"Which hope we have" (v. 19).

After warning them against apostasy, the writer assures his readers that he is convinced that they are in no such hopeless state (v. 9). For those who remain faithful to Christ the hope of eternal salvation is absolutely sure, for it is based on the immutability of God's promises to those who trust Him (vv. 18-20). We are reminded of three aspects of the Christian life: "labour of love" (v. 10); the expectation that promises will be fulfilled (v. 11); persistent, patient faith (v. 12). The soul is the ship, the world is the sea, hope rests on faith—the anchor (v. 19) symbolising steadfast hope, which prevents the vessel being carried away, for it is secure within the veil of God (Ephesians 4:14).

Sunday, June 25th Hebrews 7:1-10

"Now consider how great this man was" (v. 4).

Genesis indicates two things about Melchisedec (Genesis 14:8): his continual abiding and his greatness, the first by its silence, the second by its statements. Melchisedec is presented as a priest in his own right, not by reason of physical descent. His birth and death are not mentioned. He typifies Christ's priestly work in resurrection, hence the memorials of sacrifice, bread and wine, and the statement "after the order of" (6:20), referring to the royal authority and unending duration of Christ's High Priesthood (7:21; Psalm 110:4). The dual office of Priest and King (Hebrews 7:1) is characteristic of the Messiah (8:1; Zechariah 6:13).

college column

by Susan Grady

DURING a three-day crusade in the Pentecostal church in Horsham, G. W. Gilpin, Principal of Elim Bible College, was the preacher. Two teenage girls indicated that they wanted salvation. I had the joy and privilege of leading one of them to the Lord. As she sat, shaking under the conviction of the Holy Spirit, I told her what Christ had done for her. With tears in her eyes and a lump in her throat, she confessed that she knew something had happened in her life for she felt a different person. That was only the beginning!

A few weeks later I received an "epistle" from her telling me of the steps that led to her salvation. The maturity of her language was astounding. She had been saved for only a few weeks and yet there was such a growth in her spiritual life that it was almost unbelievable. She said that she was seeking the baptism in the Spirit. I had hardly said anything to her about this, but she had read about it in the Word and so she wanted it. After much thought and prayer, I sent her a book entitled Pray in the Spirit, by Arthur Wallis.

During the Easter vacation I received another letter telling me that she felt as if she was on the brink of something. She found the book a great help and encouragement.

Here is an extract from her letter: "Every night I seem to get closer to God. I feel the day cannot be very far off when I shall receive the Holy Spirit. Just as the Bible has become a living book to me, I now find I look forward to prayer. I have begun to thank God constantly through the day. Last night I prayed for two hours asking God to give me the strength to witness to others. I can feel something inside trying to get out. It is like a lump in my throat, but somehow the bubble just does not burst. The best thing is that, even in depression, I am tremendously happy. I feel God as much as the air I breathe and the water I drink. I long to receive the Holy Spirit often more than life itself. I will keep on praying and believing. No words could express my 'journey into life.'"

Just one day later I received another letter, and the first two words were: "It's happened!" She added: "At first I felt terrified. I felt I was not there any longer. I could not even feel the floor I was kneeling on. A terrific power rushed through my whole body, seemingly draining every vein and artery. I felt as if I was washed anew; every worry, frustration and inward sin left me. I also felt a deep sense of release, as if I did not care about other people's opinions any longer and I was free. It seemed as if a terrific light was illuminating every part of my body and there was no darkness, no doubt, nothing carnal left. How can I thank Him enough! If I thanked Him every second it would not be adequate. I think your prayers have worked."

What a testimony—she has been saved for only a month and she has grown more than some do in ten years! I hope and pray that more similar genuine conversions will take place. Her life has been a challenge to me. I hope it has to you as well.

BOOK REVIEW

In My Father's House, by George Canty. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd. Paperback price 40p, postage and packing 6p extra.

This book is written in George Canty's inimitable way. His treatment of the eleven subjects is thought-provoking and challenging. He writes in everyday language that is often witty and humorous.

It is evident that Mr. Canty has read a wide range of books that challenge the fundamentals of our faith. He meets the challenge in a way that uncovers their weakness or their stupidity and that reveals the truth in a clear, unmistakable fashion.

I like how he shows that Pentecostals are not freaks, but people who know their God, who have a definite experience of the Holy Spirit, who have an unshakable faith in the authority of the Bible.

This is a book that pleads for a return to the authority of the Bible and to the power of the Holy Spirit.

The Seabird

By Philip E. Streeter

Galatians 5 : 16 : "Walk in the Spirit"; 5 : 18 :
"Led of the Spirit"; 5 : 25 : "Live in the Spirit."

Redemption Hymnal No. 217 : "As happy as a bird and just as free; for the Spirit has control."

I watched him, Lord,
A solitary seabird yawing and adrift,
A wild, wandering creature
Lurching effortlessly around
The powder-blue canopy of space,
Sunlight splashing over him like
Rills of golden dust.

With sudden slant of tapered wing
He dips,
Banks and veers off,
Plummeting down glistening lanes of limitless space,
Screaming with delight.
High again,
Spiralling into chill chasms of blue,
Soaring, circling,
Dodging the shooting streaks of sunlight to Slide crazily down crystal currents of air and Tumble after cloud sheep that straggle
Across overlapping skies.

Up and down silent slopes of emptiness he curves,
Tacking the bending bands of breeze,
Sobbing, whimpering,
Wheeling in wonderment,
Twisting in abandonment—
The epitome of freedom,
Then tilting toward the bristling sun
Becomes a forgotten speck.

Lord, You speak of a similar dimension—"in the Spirit,"
A realm that defies the downward tug of carnal law,
A realm where men wheel disencumbered through Highest halls of hallowedness and Curve across skies of sanctified imagination.
And, Lord, You would have me realise that this Freedom in flight
Is not spasmodic occurrence,
But spanning continuity,
Like fish swimming in limitless seas,
Birds looping in the endless air.
In You I live, move and have my being,
An infinity of Holy Spirit,
Beneath, above and round about me,
Not isolated experiences, but Immeasurable expanses to lose myself
With wild excess of joy
In Thee.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Demas the backslider

Colossians 4 : 14

by H. L. Dawson

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
EAST HAM, LONDON

DEMAS seems to have been the weak link in the long chain of Paul's acquaintances. It is not certain in which order the Epistles in which Demas is mentioned were written. We cannot be dogmatic about the sequence of these three texts, but we will take them in the most likely order.

Partner

(Philemon v. 24)

Paul links Mark, Luke and Demas in this verse (compare Colossians 4 : 14 ; 2 Timothy 4 : 10, 11). The three are in striking contrast : Mark, who left Paul and then returned to win his affection ; Luke, who clung to Paul to the end ; and Demas, the man who ran well for a while and then failed Paul.

Here Demas is seen in partnership with Paul, his companion. He is called a fellow labourer. One translation calls him "Comrade," a name which speaks of intimacy in a common cause.

Demas was then in the thick of the battle for truth ; the gospel was his delight. He joined in the forays carried out by the band of faithful servants of Christ. He was a keen witness, a loyal prayer warrior, a fellow worker in all the activities and evangelical enterprises of the apostle Paul. Demas shared the privations and hardships of those days with Paul in Rome. He also shared the friendship of that gallant company of men who loved Christ and were close to Paul.

First love burned in his heart in those days. He had a passion for souls, his heart was fired by an enthusiasm for the things of God. Jesus meant more to Demas then than anything else in the world, the Word of God was his meat and drink, prayer was his delight, Christian fellowship his craving.

Passenger

(Colossians 4 : 14)

Paul loves to put labels on the names of his acquaintances ; he calls them "beloved brother,"

"fellow worker," "servant of Christ," but as we read through the list of Paul's acquaintances in Colossians 4 it is noticeable that Paul adds no label to the name of Demas. It is as if he was afraid of giving him a commendation, as if he was a little uncertain about this man.

Had Paul, a keen student of humanity and an observer of men's spirituality, already detected something lacking in the character of Demas ? What had happened to Demas to give Paul cause for doubt ? Paul and his companions lived closely together and you cannot do this and not notice a change in a man's spiritual temperature. Backsliding starts in the heart, but soon reveals itself if only in little things.

Too many Christians are neither hot nor cold. The fires had burned low, the zeal had been blunted, the love had ebbed away and coldness had entered into his heart. Demas was not the man he used to be. Does this describe you ? Have you lost your first love ?

Pathetic

(2 Timothy 4 : 10)

There is a sadness about this verse : "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world."

Paul had seen this coming. He must have prayed for Demas and have tried to rekindle the fire in his heart, but when the love of the world enters the heart it is like trying to stop an avalanche. Preaching and praying seem to have little effect. There seem to be no brakes to stop that downward slide of the prodigal. Any stopping has to come from within his own life and the hope of this is remote.

What gripped the heart of Demas ? The love of this present world. It was not greed for silver or gold. It was not the material advantages he might gain, though these have been the cause of many going back from Christ, nor was it love of pleasure — the theatre, the stage, the games, though some have found these to be a snare. It was simply that Demas saw that the Christian way of life was fraught with danger. He could see the day approaching when Paul would be executed and, fearing for his own head, he forsook Paul. He loved this life and this world so much that he was not prepared to sacrifice them for Christ. Paul looked to the future, but Demas lived for the present. Paul was willing to die for Christ and gain heavenly reward, but Demas had no eye for eternal reward. He was earthly minded and he fled in the hour of crisis.

The God of this world blinded his eyes. He lost his vision of heaven, and in that moment of crisis he deserted his friend Paul. He had surely already deserted Christ in his heart before this, but now he showed himself in his true light, Demas the pathetic, who seemingly allowed the world to rob him of an inheritance in heaven.

We are not certain what happened to Demas after this; perhaps, like the prodigal, he came back in repentance. What really concerns us now is our own position. What do we love most of all? What place does Christ have in our own hearts? If it comes to a choice which will we choose—Christ or the world?

Church reports

BOLTON

Pastor: J. K. Gardiner

On arrival at Bolton Pastor J. E. G. Cooper and his team were welcomed to the church by the pastor and the counsellors and, over tea, last minute details were discussed, after which we made our way to the Town Hall to take stock of the situation. On seeing the hall which had been booked our faith was put on trial by its size, but we worship and serve a God of the impossible and that night we saw a crowd of 300 in that hall.

Throughout the crusade we proved over and over again that our God is a great God. Sixty-three people of all ages gave their lives to Christ and many Christians rededicated their lives.

On the Monday of the third week we moved into the Elim church with forty in attendance. Numbers continued to grow until, on the Thursday night, the church was full. I believe that God is going to do a great work in Bolton.

May I thank Pastor and Mrs. John Seaman for the way they opened their home to Pastor and Mrs. John Cooper and myself and my wife.

CASHES GREEN

Pastor: R. J. Teague

Despite a dull day, bright singing could be heard as women from many churches gathered together for our Sisterhood rally.

Mrs. B. Burford welcomed friends to the service, which was convened by Mrs. Teague. The roll call was led by Mrs. White. Mrs. Barber gave a moving recitation and a solo was rendered by Mrs. Nind. Our pianist for the joyful occasion was Mrs. Bletstoe. All were blessed and encouraged as the guest speaker, Mrs. Crowther, gave the message. Over 100 stayed for tea.

To round the day off a prayer meeting was held when thanks was given to God for answered prayer in everything. May God bless all who helped to make this a day rich in blessing.

(MRS.) B. BURFORD.

TREALAW

Pastor: K. Lannon

"Dear Uncle Ric, last night I did pray to the Lord and I asked Him will He take all the sin out of my heart and put instead the white like you told me." This letter, written by a nine-year-old boy, was typical of many forwarded to Pastor Eric T. Carter in the guise of Uncle Ric. Our minor hall was for most of the crusade filled to capacity. The gospel was faithfully, simply declared. As a sign of their acceptance of the Saviour, Uncle Ric asked the children to write a letter explaining what they had done. We are praying and working that the eighty children who were present at the crusade will be brought into regular attendance at our Sunday school and weeknight children's meeting.

The photograph shows Pastor and Mrs. Carter distributing prizes in reward of Bible knowledge.

BELFAST— MELBOURNE STREET— TOWNSEND STREET

Report by W. G. Mullan

Elim's Mother Church—Elim's first church building proper—in Melbourne Street, Belfast, was officially closed on Saturday with a short service of thanksgiving. A capacity crowd of members and friends met for the last time in the sturdy, austere, brick building which, for nearly 100 years, had resounded to the gospel message proclaimed first by the Primitive Methodists and for fifty-three years by Elim.

It was most appropriate that Mr. George K. Gillespie, son of the late Mr. George Gillespie, who, with his brother William, invited the late Pastor George Jeffreys to Ireland in 1915 and was a founding member of the first Elim congregation, should be present and speak of those early days. Pastor W. J. Martin, an early member and later minister of the church, also recalled the early blessings.

For many it was a sad farewell, but traffic must roll on and the Belfast urban motorway must be built, necessitating the demolition of our building.

A walk of 150 yards brought the members and friends outside the lovely, contemporary church in Townsend Street, paid for by the city's estates department. The opening ceremony was performed by Mrs. Graham, the oldest active member of the congregation, who received a floral tribute from Judith Mullan, daughter of Pastor and Mrs. W. G. Mullan.

The service of dedication which followed was as simple as the earlier farewell. A dedicatory prayer by Pastor A. Wilson, Irish Superintendent, acknowledgment of gifts to the new church by the church secretary and everyone settled down in the new comfort and the smell of fresh paint to listen to Pastor John Lancaster preach from Leaving the Melbourne Street church.

Genesis 28:16 — "Surely the Lord is in this place."

Between the afternoon and evening services tea was served in the old church; the new church was open for inspection and the architect, Charles Moore, A.R.I.B.A., was warmly congratulated on his fine achievement.

Pastor Lancaster and local ministers followed up the event with a short series of ministry meetings to the encouragement and edification of all.

HASTINGS

Pastor : G. Harpin

At the Halton Baptist Church (kindly loaned) we witnessed five of our young people following the Lord through the waters of baptism. We realised afresh as we listened to their testimonies how wonderfully the Lord has been working in their lives.

There is much for which to praise the Lord. Some time ago, through the Gifts of the Spirit, He promised to add to the church and to meet our financial needs. This we have seen happen in an abundant way by people moving into the district and joining us in worship.

This encourages us to press on, and to believe for still greater things.

CHELTENHAM

Pastor : A. J. Downes

On Sunday, May 14th, the President, T. W. Walker, ministered here for the day—his first presidential engagement after the conference. At the conclusion of our morning service Pastor and Mrs. Walker presented to Pastor and Mrs. A. J. K. Magee a cheque for £50 and a flower display. There were about 110 in the congregation and there was a frequent chorus of "amens" as Pastor and Mrs. Walker put our thoughts and wishes into words.

Although officially Pastor Magee came to us as semi-retired, he could just not half do the work. Very soon our numbers grew as young people in particular professed salvation; before long we had to put in extra chairs on Sunday evenings and sometimes on Sunday mornings as well. Pastor Magee did not use a specially planned technique; it was just his infectious love of our Lord and his burning desire to communicate this to all whom he met. Using his moped, he toured the town, calling on members and all sorts of folk. If there is one lesson above all others that we have learned from Pastor and Mrs. Magee it is that we should let the love of God be shed abroad in our hearts.

How good that on this day of Mr. Magee's retirement, when Pastor Walker gave the Gospel appeal, seven young people quickly yielded; it reminded us of the response at a typical Gospel service with Pastor Magee before illness earlier this year forced him to withdraw from active pastoral work. We all trust and pray that God will bless Pastor and Mrs. Magee with many happy days of retirement.

RAY FAIERS.

GLOUCESTER

Pastor : F. Lavender

On Whit Sunday a special thanksgiving day was held to give thanks to God that the debt on the church and the church house had been cleared. We met in a spirit of praise and expectancy and God truly met with us.

It was a joy and privilege to have our President, Pastor T. W. Walker, as our speaker. In the morning he spoke of the promise given by John the Baptist in Matthew 3:11 and the fulfilment in Acts 2. The evening message will long be remembered as he spoke on the day of Pentecost being a day of beginnings. The anointing of the Spirit was upon the services and upon the musical items rendered.

In the afternoon Pastor Walker graciously presented the Sunday school prizes. A good number of parents attended and a word in season was spoken.

Another item for gladness was the dedication of our own pastor's first grandchild in the presence of his great-grandparents. We pray that the Lord will bless little Jamie Keith and that he will grow up to be a shining light for Him.

Our day of thanksgiving closed with an after-meeting when many testimonies were given to the saving, keeping and healing power of the One whom we love and serve.

(MRS.) DOROTHY NILES.

Pastor M. J. Frith, of Christchurch, New Zealand, writes :

Pastor P. S. Brewster has arrived in New Zealand. Last evening he was in Nelson with Pastor L. Covic visiting a united meeting of the Pentecostal churches. He arrives in Christchurch soon. The Lord is already moving down here, with many coming into the Pentecostal experience. He is in Christchurch for six days and will be taking two Sunday services in our church.

I was interested to hear that at the annual I.V.F. conference in Auckland most of the students attending who were not filled with the Spirit on arrival were by departure time.

The Gift of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

4. "Divers kinds of tongues"

1 Corinthians 12

OUR purpose now is to consider some of the facts true of all spiritual Gifts and therefore true of the Gift of tongues in particular, singling this Gift out because it is our special interest.

Tongues is a Gift from God

This point is emphasised in verses 4-11 where all the Gifts are mentioned. Where there is a genuine utterance in tongues, a Gift is in operation which has been created and bestowed by God. This does not mean that an alleged possession of the Gift places the person or the Gift beyond question, nor is an examination of the person or Gift any reflection on God, the person, or the Gift. The possibility of a counterfeit gift must be recognised and tests applied concerning the belief, character, and utterances of the person concerned (John 14:26; 16:14; 1 John 4:2, 3). Such a possibility should not make us destructive of all tongues utterances, but discreet in acceptance of any. A sound evangelical faith backed by a holy life and a Christ-exalting Gift, when found together, give satisfactory grounds for assuming that the Gift of tongues is truly from God. Where the first two things mentioned are absent, then the alleged Gift is open to suspicion and should be rejected as spurious, but to reject tongues which meet the requirements is to be guilty of quenching the Spirit of God who gave it. We refute the slander that a Christian who has sought God sincerely may have had a spurious Gift given him by Satanic agency. Such an idea is contrary to the concept of ideal Fatherhood as shown by God to His children (Matthew 7:11).

Tongues is a grace Gift

The italicised "gifts" of 12:1 is an anticipation of the actual use of the word in vv. 4, 9, 28, 30, 31. In each case it translates the word "charisma," literally "free gift," so translated, for example, in Romans 5:15, 16, 18. "Charismatic" is often used today as if it referred exclusively to tongues-speaking. This is much too restricted, for in Scripture the word is used of a wide variety of Gifts, including salvation Gifts as well as spiritual ones. That the Gifts are free impresses the fact that all such Gifts are not bestowed on the basis of human merit. To have received the Gift of tongues affords no ground for selfish pride or self-centred boasting, or for the adoption of a "holier-than thou" attitude. Tongues is a Gift to saints from the undeserved favour of God and no more proves them to be "better" saints than to have eternal life proves them to have been "better" sinners. Recognition of the true nature of the Gift simply makes us more appreciative of the manifold grace of God and saves us from giving tongues an evidential value which they do not possess.

Tongues is for our Profit

It is unthinkable that God would create and give any Gift which would not profit and this is clearly affirmed of tongues as of other manifestations of the Spirit (1 Corinthians 12:7). The benefits emanating from tongues are detailed in chapter 14. They profit either unbelieving people, the individual believer, or the local church. Thus to deny tongues a place robs people of a ministry by which they may gain. It may be argued that a great portion of the Christian Church has existed, continued, and grown without tongues, but this does not prove tongues to be unprofitable. A body may exist and grow without some of its organs or members, but it could develop even better with them! Tongues do not make a vital contribution to spiritual life in that their non-acceptance or non-exercise would mean cessation of all life and growth, yet there is profit for all in the use of this Gift under God.

Tongues is one Gift among many

The Corinthians seemingly set too high a value on tongues, seeking and exercising this Gift to the point of extremism in that other Gifts were discounted or ignored. This over-interest may have been due to the spectacular nature of the Gift, which would appeal to people recently saved from heathenism, or it may have sprung from the honour associated with tongues—that God was speaking through them in a supernatural manner. Paul's approach to this obsessionary attitude was not to rule out tongues, but relate them to other Gifts as being interdependent ministries for the good of the whole body. It may be asked how tongues could occupy such prominence when God bestows Gifts according to His will. The answer is that there is a human aspect to all Gifts given by God. Men must covet and seek, and God will respond even when there is a narrowness of mind on the human level which fails to realise the full scope of Divine activity, which means some degree of impoverishment through imbalance. Preoccupation with tongues alone will never bring about a mature, full-orbed development of spiritual life and experience, whether in personal or corporate life. Other Gifts have their contribution to make along with tongues to overall growth.

Tongues is an abiding Gift

If permanency is admitted of any Gifts mentioned in chapter 12, then there is a strong case for the continuance of all. If there was a fundamental difference among the Gifts as to their time-character, we are compelled to inquire whether

Paul was ignorant of it or, if not, why he failed to make the distinction. An honest appraisal of chapter 12 concludes that there is no suggestion of tongues being a temporary Gift soon to be withdrawn from the Church.

We are surprised that Paul should deal at length with tongues if this Gift was soon to be withdrawn, when the passage of time would solve any problems relative thereto by the disappearance of the Gift itself. Tongues was set in the Church by God and no indication was given of a future divorce when the Church would continue without the Gift. Tongues was to be an abiding feature of Church life, hence the need for instruction regarding its use. It smacks of spiritual snobbery for present-day churches and Christians to look on a Gift thought necessary by God and say: "I have no need of thee." God initiated tongues as a new thing in the New Testament, unsought by men. Nowhere does God say why He bestowed this Gift reserved for New Testament times. How then can we say the need for tongues is no longer with us? The true Church of believing people is an institution which cannot be overthrown while time shall last. Paul declared that tongues was set in that Church by God. Jesus declared that tongues would follow them that believe. Both are in harmony in that no cessation of tongues at an early point in Church history is even hinted at. Therefore the only conclusion possible regarding tongues as to their duration, when considered in chapter 12, is that they will be found in the Church while it remains on earth.

Tongues is therefore a supernatural Gift from God by His Spirit to be a ministry under Christ the Head of the Church. Tongues is not the only Gift, but one of many and all together are for our profit. Tongues should still be found in the Church today as an abiding Gift set in the Church by God Himself.

THERE was quite a furore recently when a man severely damaged a well-known and greatly prized piece of ecclesiastical sculpture. It was later reported that one of the officials responsible for preventing the unfortunate fellow from doing further damage was rewarded with a knighthood by the Pope.

It is sad that such a splendid work of art should be defaced, particularly if the vandalism proves to be irreparable. We understand that the effigy was of special importance and value in connection with the work of the sculptor.

We feel there is a more important point to be made, however. It is undeniable that religious foundations of various sorts throughout the world hoard vast accumulations of various kinds of wealth. These are mainly in the possession of the Roman Catholic and similar apostate churches, it is true, but the point remains that this state exists in what might loosely be called Christendom.

One's sense of values can be warped. Thousands regard some of these various objets d'art as "sacred," whatever that might mean. Of very many of them we heartily agree with the ancient king's assessment of the prized serpent of brass that had been preserved as a "sacred" relic since Moses' day. He consigned it to virtual oblivion by calling it "Nehushtan," which has been translated as "a piece of brass." How right he was! As if there was any remedial virtue at all in an object! The "excellency of the power" belongs to God.

There is more in this, though, for even in spiritual observations we have to be careful. Those familiar words from Malachi seem to take on fresh import in this context: "Will a man rob God?" The very question seemed guaranteed to produce the response he recorded, for the people said, "Wherein have we robbed Thee?" In trenchant words the Divine reply was, "In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed Me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in Mine house, and prove Me now herewith" (Malachi 3: 8-10).

There is not only locked-up wealth in ornate edifices which re-echo to the sonorous chants of choirboys and monks. It has to be said that those who know Christ as Saviour must take great care that they do not thoughtlessly denude God's work by withholding their dues.

If only everybody tithed . . .

The story of a yellow cardigan

by Olive Garbutt

ELIM MISSIONARY, PENHALONGA, RHODESIA

LAST year when I was on furlough I met a number of E.W.M.A. groups who were making knitted and other garments to be given to those in need on the various mission fields. In these days of rising transport and postal charges, their difficulty often was how to dispatch the things they made. For the same reason I was unfortunately unable to accept all that was offered to me.

In Woolwich, London, I was shown a lovely selection and told that I could choose some of the most suitable for use here at Penhalonga and take as many as I could carry.

Two little green jerseys were just made for twins, and Dorka has been very grateful for them through the long wet season when her babies suffered so much from coughs. Other woollies were distributed almost immediately, but there was one bright yellow cardigan trimmed with red that seemed to be kept back waiting for just the right person.

I was inspecting our primary school at Imbeza. Susan in grade five had written a very good English composition about her home. In it she wrote: "We are a poor family, we don't have enough clothes, but we do have enough food so we are a happy family." Susan could not possibly have guessed that I would visit her school that week or that I would pick up her book and read it. I had no knowledge of her need, nor could I have singled her out in any other way.

I thought of the winter season just beginning and a little girl shivering in class next term, and I wondered if I might have anything suitable to give her. "Where is Susan?" I asked. Susan stood and I noticed that she did not have a school uniform. I complimented her on the neat work she had done. The head teacher confirmed her story and said that she had always been a good industrious child.

At home I took out the yellow cardigan. It would be just the right size. A few days later I took it to the school as a special prize for Susan, who had done the best, neatest work in the class. It was taken out of the wrapping, held up, admired, and then tried on by the delighted child while the rest of the class clapped and cheered. Nobody was jealous, though there were others who were probably almost as much in need. Susan thanked me, her teachers who had helped her to do good work and the friends who made it. Most of all, she said that she thanked God.

A few days later a party of our Penhalonga schoolchildren had to get up early to get the 6 a.m. bus into town for a sports event. Near Imbeza some adults got on and were surprised to see so many children on the bus at that hour of the morning. A teacher in charge of the party overheard their conversation. "They are from Elim mission; it is a kind mission," she heard—and the story of the yellow cardigan was told all over again. Everyone in the bus could hear.

Who knows, it may be the means of bringing some of those folk into the house of God to hear and to believe the message of salvation through faith in Christ Jesus!

Golden Touchstone

by Basil Laws

POPE INNOCENT IV and Thomas Aquinas stood together as bags of gold were being carried into the Lateran. "You see," observed the Pope with a smile, "The day is past when the Church could say 'Silver and gold have I none!'" "Yes, Holy Father," replied Aquinas, "and the day is past when the Church could say to the lame man 'Rise and walk!'"

It is a matter for no small rejoicing that we live in a day when the pristine glories and the primitive graces of the Early Church are being revived and restored in Pentecostal power.

Though enjoying the advantage of a Christian home, Basil Laws made no clear-cut decision for Christ until he came into contact with a dedicated Christian with whom he worked in 1938. With the outbreak of hostilities, he entered the Royal Navy as a member of the sick berth staff and served in this capacity until the end of the war. He met his wife who was in nursing training in Liverpool. They prepared for missionary service in India. Mr. Law's parents had lived in India and his brothers were born there. The last year of the war was spent in Royal Navy sick quarters, Isle of Man. There had been an Assemblies of God work in the town for some years, but the meeting had broken up. Together with another serviceman he visited believers and commenced meetings which still continue.

After the war he attended the Hampstead Bible School for one year, being joined for part of this year by his wife. They proceeded to western India, where they served for ten years and found wide opportunities for service.

Returning home from a second term of service in India, they felt led to engage in caring for the aged and infirm. In June 1959 they assumed responsibility of a home for the aged and infirm in Llandaff, Cardiff, under the auspices of the City of Cardiff Corporation. Mr. and Mrs. Laws will be grateful for prayer support as they continue in this sphere of service.

Thomas Fuller, the seventeenth-century divine and historian, observed: "Men have a touchstone whereby to try gold, but gold is the touchstone whereby to try men." From time immemorial men have vainly sought the elusive pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Virgil inquired: "To what dost thou not compel the minds of mortals, accursed greed for gold?" In pursuit of this precious metal, principles have been prostituted for power, position and prestige. Our attitude to gold is ambivalent: we are attracted by its potential power, but repelled by the perverted practices which so often accompany its use. Modern disciples of the golden goddess are hardly less devoted to their avowed deity than were the ancient devotees of Diana. Dr. Billy Graham has said: "We point our fingers at the heathen and idol worshippers of old, but the only difference is that our graven images are made of gleaming chromium and steel instead of gold . . . but we worship them just the same, and feel that our lives would be impossible without them."

In the sophisticated society of this twentieth century many seek a spiritual solution to their perplexities and problems. To all such souls the Word of God is a golden touchstone of life, light and love. Job, so sorely tried, exclaimed: "When He hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold" (Job 23:10). The psalmist said: "Thy promise is well tried, and thy servant loves it" (Psalm 119:140). The Word that sifts and searches our innermost beings has been tested and tried to the uttermost bounds of man's experience on earth. By any fair criteria it has been found worthy of our complete confidence in and compliant co-operation with its precepts and promises.

Life

In the declaration of his doctrine, John designates the character of Christ in three golden words : life, light and love. These features portray fascinating facets of a pure, peerless life. Collectively they convey a faultless facsimile of the God-man who is God's golden Touchstone of truth ! With the entry of Christ into the habitat of man in human form, an entirely new order of life was exhibited—eternal life. John affirms : "It was the very life of all the ages . . . which actually became visible" (1 John 1 : 2, Phillips). As the Son expressed the Father in every exquisite detail of His life the enigma of the ages was expounded in a manner that the minds of mere mortals can comprise and comprehend. This life, despite all the restraints and restrictions inherent in the human frame, was resident in a man, "the man Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 2 : 5). This life, which was with the Father, is now with us as a vitalising force. In John Wesley's well-known words : "Best of all, God is with us !"

Light

The light generated by the Gospel has opened the door to a new world of excelling beauty and exquisite harmony. In the precise phrase "God is light" (1 John 1 : 15), God is revealed as the benevolent Author of all the blessings that light brings to men. In this expression, unique in the New Testament but ubiquitous in nature, John emphasises another essential feature of the Divine character of the Godhead. John's proximity to Christ afforded him profound, penetrating insights into the inner life of our Lord. He succinctly states : "In Him was life ; and the life was the light of men." Dr. Plummer comments : "Not light, but 'the Light,' the one true Light ; absolute Truth both intellectual and moral, free from all ignorance and stain. The Source of life is the Source of light." Life ever precedes light. Only in personal communion with Christ can the privileged communication of Divine light be experienced and enjoyed. Luther's logic is instructive : "No man can understand God or God's Word unless he has it revealed to him by the Holy Spirit. But nobody can receive anything from the Holy Spirit unless he experiences it."

Love

Paul's lyric to love is set in the very centre of his discourse on Spiritual Gifts. Paul, peerless as an apostle and teacher, here reaches the climax of his classical instruction on Christian ethics. He writes : "If I speak with the eloquence of men and angels, but have no love, I become no more than blaring brass or crashing cymbal" (1 Corinthians 13 : 1, Phillips). In compelling terms, Paul commends to his Corinthian converts a way of life in which love is both central and supreme. In the final verse of this chapter Paul not only singles out love as superior to the Gifts he has been considering but sets it forth as supreme among the graces. Alford says : "Hope will remain as anticipation certain to be fulfilled. Faith will remain as trust, entire and undoubting." We may well add love will endure for love is eternal !

Sir William Ramsay feels that these wonderful words defy final definition. He writes : "These words cannot be explained because they are so simple and so final. They stand there once and for ever, interpreting themselves, to be read and understood by all, but not to be weakened by the feeble attempts of a commentator." The New English Bible translation of this verse is helpful : "In a word, there are three things that last for ever : faith, hope, and love ; but the greatest of them all is love."

Love has been described as "the characteristic word of Christianity." In non-Biblical Greek agapan merely meant "to be content with, to esteem, to prefer." The New Testament writers invested it with an entirely new meaning and message for mankind. John selects it to signify the love of God for men—"God loved the world so much" (John 3 : 16, N.E.B.). In using "so" to underline the depths of the Divine love, John's choice of adverb is fitting. In Greek and English its meaning is basically the same. Only such a word of indefinite measurement can define the import and denote the impact of infinite love. Implicit in Christ, this love is impartial in character and imperative in its claims. With this love as his rule John reasons : "Beloved, if God has shown such love to us, we too must love one another" (1 John 4 : 11, Knox).

An eminent critic said of the effigy of the Black Prince : "It is the most magnificent tomb and statue in England." For centuries this figure has adorned Canterbury Cathedral, but only in recent times was it found to be made of pure gold. Devoted to the memory of Edward, the effigy was coated with a protective enamel and covered with the grime of the centuries. This being removed, the Black Prince, so called because he wore black armour, stood forth in all his glory, arrayed in armour of gleaming gold !

Throughout Church history the fair image of Christ has been tarnished by un-Scriptural traditions and un-Christlike traits of character.

THE PROUD PEACOCK

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

PERCY the peacock was very happy living in the zoo. He had plenty of room in which to walk around and the staff at the zoo were always kind to him, but, like all peacocks, Percy was very proud and loved to show off in front of the visitors.

At nine o'clock the keeper opened the gates to the zoo. After the visitors had paid their admission fees they began walking around, admiring the bears, elephants, lions and giraffes. When some arrived at the peacock enclosure Percy began his routine.

He got up ever so slowly and gracefully and fluffed out all his beautiful tail feathers into a big circle. He held his head as high as he could and began strutting backwards and forwards in front of the visitors. With his feathers billowing out behind him and with the crown of feathers on top of his head, Percy felt like a king! He knew that everyone watching him thought him to be the most beautiful bird they had ever seen.

Percy was proud and boastful and thought only of himself, but that won't do for us, boys and girls. Jesus tells of a proud man who went to the temple at Jerusalem. This man was a Pharisee. He, too, held his head high in the air and, with his magnificent robes billowing behind him, he strutted into the temple, but, instead of being humble and repentant before God, he boasted about himself. He told God about all the wonderful things he did, about the life he led, about how good and kind he was, thinking that God would favour him. He was much too proud to ask God to forgive his sins. He was so proud that he did not think that he had any sins to be forgiven.

A publican, who had gone to the temple also, knew that the way to find favour with God was to be humble, so he prayed "God be merciful to me, a sinner!"

Who do you think pleased God most—the Pharisee who was a show-off, or the publican who sought God's forgiveness?

GOLDEN TOUCHSTONE (continued)

Through the inspiration of the Scriptures and the illumination of the Spirit the inherent glory of Christ is effectively evidenced in the life of the believer. Close and constant contact with Christ transmutes the base metal of our fallen nature into the fine gold of the Divine nature. Every participant in this process of transforming grace and triumphant goodness may experience enrichment from the wise words of Thomas Boston : "Learn that heavenly chemistry of extracting some spiritual thing out of earthly things. To this end endeavour after a heavenly frame, which will, as recorded of the philosopher's stone, turn every metal into gold. When the soul is heavenly, it will even scrape jewels out of a dunghill."

Another Slant

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

"GIVE me one good reason why I should give you an interview!" snapped the head of a nationalised industry based in the Midlands. "Give me one good reason why you should not!" I snapped in reply over the telephone, pointing out that their concern used this form of interviewing, that what was good for them was good for others and that if they expected co-operation they must co-operate also. I got the interview and found him most charming. He received my witness and tract courteously. Persistence pays. As with the ministry of the Gospel, in interviewing one has to be "all things to all men," and in this case paying him with his own coin proved best.

Interviewing the senior talks producer at the B.B.C. proved interesting and an opportunity not only to witness, but also to mention Elim, especially the Bingley Hall rally in June.

One executive I interviewed had an enormous calendar with a suggestive photograph on the wall. I wondered what he thought after I had witnessed to him and given him a tract. I must admit that this is very, very rare among top executives, who seem to maintain a good standard. This is certainly not true on the shop floor and with middle management.

I parked my car in the car park at Graham Street as I went to interview a couple of executives in the centre of the city. On my return I found a happy gathering of Graham Street sisters enjoying a break and a cup of tea. I joined them and they later serenaded me with one of the pieces for the sisterhood weekend. I found that they were regular "Slant" readers.

I find that some top executives appear to have more time for interviews than middle-lower management. I suppose they have delegated all the work and it is the crossword in The Times, interviews, and coffee, or so it seems to me!

Replying to a member from Elim Pentecostal Church, Derby, I repeat that I consider the tract Seven reasons why you need Christ, by Y.N.C. Crusade, 50 Grays Inn Road, London, W.C.1, to be the best, though Victory Tract Club and E.T.S. also publish acceptable material. Do not use cheap-looking tracts, even if they are free! I would encourage the Derby lady to use her door-to-door work for witnessing, but to be sure to get her work done first and then a word of witness, for this gives time to sum up the one to whom one is speaking and to gain his or her friendship. I never mention my vocation until after an interview, for I feel that I must get the interview and conduct it on my merits in that field. The knowledge that I am a minister would often inhibit the one whom I am interviewing.

I think that insurance agents, salesmen, in fact anyone meeting the public, have a ready-made opportunity for witnessing, providing it is prayerfully and carefully undertaken. You represent your company, agency or firm and you are an ambassador for the Lord Jesus Christ. I always like to feel that I am tidily dressed, so that I am at ease with the one whom I interview. I have a few clean, appropriate tracts, so that I can bring them out discreetly at the right moment. I assure you that there is a right moment; only experience and the leading of the Holy Spirit will tell you when that is in each case. We are witnessing to individuals, so our approach must be tailor-made to suit each one. Witnessing to a dustman or to a doctor involves the same message, but I have found my approach may well be entirely different. I cannot emphasise this point too much, for so often I have found that well-meaning enthusiasts have "queered the pitch" by their lack of understanding and one has had a most difficult job to witness when this has happened.

Another opportunity we are seeking to exploit is the annual spring fair at the school which my son attends, in which we have had a good branch

Sunday school for well over twenty years. I approached the headmaster, requesting opportunity to have a stall at the fair. Be sure that it will have tracts, invitations to send children to the Sunday school, and a witness for our church. Opportunities are there if we have eyes to see them and the initiative to grasp them. Why not try the school near your church for a similar opening?

ROWLEY REGIS Pastor: D. W. Cartwright

We experienced a rich time of blessing at our ladies' anniversary weekend. Our visiting speaker was Mrs. Margaret Sadler from Cardiff. On the Saturday evening two solos were rendered by Mrs. Gouldingay (the daughter of the late Pastor F. D. Byatt). Mrs. C. Moore recited.

At the Communion service on Sunday morning Mrs. C. Moore sang a lovely solo and Mrs. Sadler spoke.

Our Sisterhood performed a service of song: "The places where Jesus walked" during the Gospel service. A united women's rally was held on the Monday evening and the church was almost full. Mrs. Sadler spoke and we were favoured with two duets by Mrs. Lily Moody and Miss Irene Giles, of Selly Oak.

Our pastor's wife, Mrs. Lilian Cartwright, was the convener of the weekend's meetings.

Operation Portion

"Operation Portion" was the name given to a special Scripture distribution scheme in Montevideo at vacation time. 100,000 Gospels were distributed by a team of some 150 volunteers who were recruited for the purpose. 50,000 of the Gospels were distributed in parks and squares and the other 50,000 on the beaches. The beach was divided into sectors and the different denominations involved—some eleven in all—were each responsible for a particular section. The cost of the operation was met from funds specially given in Uruguay.

invitation to the heavenly banquet is of supreme importance. God has declared this. Come to Christ, let Him take your sins away, become a child of God, fully committed to Him, live for His glory, be upright and holy, show by your deeds that you belong to Jesus—and one day you will be summoned to partake in the banquet of all banquets.

"By invitation only"

MY husband and I attended the mayoral banquet at the City Hall, Salisbury, he being invited in his capacity as President of the local Free Church Federal Council. It was an interesting, informative occasion. I was delighted with the magnificent display of flowers in the foyer and on the dining tables. The food which graced the tables left nothing to be desired, for we were plied with delicious fare for almost two hours. There were some 200 guests present including several very distinguished people as well as representatives from the city council, the cathedral, the army, the chamber of commerce and the press. The chief guest and speaker of the evening was the Right Honourable Sir Keith Joseph, M.P., Secretary for Health and Social Services. He was followed by the Hon. Mary Morrison, lady-in-waiting to the Queen and a keen worker in the field of mental health. General Sir Basil Eugster, Commander-in-chief United Kingdom Land Forces, also addressed the company. Finally the Bishop of Salisbury made a very amusing speech.

The climax of my evening, however, was rather unpleasant for, during the speeches and toasts, incense was offered to the god of tobacco—the cigar fumes were so acrid and heavy that I developed the unpleasant symptoms of hay fever and bronchial asthma. I was so distressed in my breathing that I had to spend the next thirty-six hours in bed. I paid dearly for my introduction into polite society!

How different this was from my visit to the Elim conference where, in spite of cold weather, rain, wind and also being very tired on arrival, as the week progressed I felt stronger in body and soul. The food was good, but the spiritual food was even better. The fellowship was satisfying and the joy and victory experienced in the services was a real tonic. I did not meet any titled or famous people, but I talked with some choice saints of God who shared their experiences with me. I listened eagerly to teachers of the Word, preachers of the gospel, gifted and inspired by the Holy Spirit. It was a very precious interlude for me and I felt perfectly at ease in the environment of fellow-believers and, like my dear mother, I wished I could have remained at the camp for another week.

Another occasion that will far supersede any earthly banquet or gathering of believers in fellowship and worship will be the great marriage supper of the Lamb and His bride, the Church. The Lamb refers to the Lord Jesus, the Lamb of God who takes away our sins, and the bride consists of all the one-time sinners who have been redeemed by the sacrifice of the Saviour. I must quote from The Living Bible for its paraphrase is so glorious: "Let us be glad and rejoice and honour him; for the time has come for the wedding banquet of the Lamb, and His bride has prepared herself. She is permitted to wear the cleanest and whitest and finest of linens. And the Angel dictated this sentence to me: 'Blessed are those who are invited to the wedding feast of the Lamb.' And he added, 'God Himself has stated this.'"

What a banquet, what a company and what a triumphant occasion this will be—presided over by the Lord God Almighty! I had no glamorous evening gown for the mayoral banquet as others had. My husband had no orders or decorations. We are humble folk, common five-eighths, but at that great banquet we shall be arrayed in dazzling white and shall mingle with the mighty men and women of faith, beloved of God and on display before all heaven. What a gathering that will be!

We received a personal invitation to the mayoral banquet in the form of an embossed card complete with the Salisbury crest; it was genuine and warranted a speedy reply. To any reader who is vague about the things of God, let me state firmly that to be eligible for an

Jesus is coming again

Over the hills and the valleys and softly down the plain

Can you not hear the murmur "Jesus is coming again!"?

All nature seems to praise Him in joyous,
glad refrain,

Soon every eye will see Him—for Jesus is coming again.

Yet mankind in their folly hear the warning note in vain,

Indifferent to the knowledge that Jesus is coming again.

The nations all are planning over each other to reign,

But their armies will be confounded—for
Jesus is coming again.

O reader, how He loves you—for you He once was slain!

His purpose towards you is blessing before
He comes again.

Will you then not trust Him, believe upon
His name?

Salvation's offered only until He comes again.

Do not slight His kind offer—His gracious promise claim,

And join the blood-washed millions who wait for His coming again!

To help Kikuyu expositors

The first-ever pulpit Bible to be published in an East African language was the Kikuyu Bible. Within a few weeks 316 copies had been sold and they are continuing to sell regularly.

In one village a sub-chief, on hearing that a Bible had arrived which could be read without the help of glasses, hurried to be the first person to contribute towards the purchase of a copy for the local church. A recent graduate from the University of Nairobi spent part of his first salary to buy a Bible to present to his church.

PENTECOSTAL YOUTH CAMPS

KIPLING wrote: "Who hath smelled the woodsmoke at twilight? . . . let him follow with the others, for the young man's feet are turning to the lands of known desire and proven delight."

It is not usual to smell woodsmoke at twilight at an Elim youth camp, but it is quite usual to see how the young men and young women trace the worn path to the church tent and to hear their voices as they sing praises to Him whom they know and love.

This is what makes a Pentecostal camp unique—the easy way in which the spiritual is accepted and becomes the norm. On every hand there are fellow-believers who think the same things as you and long for the same things as you. The whole atmosphere is Christian, a complete reversal from the commonplace.

It is no wonder, when one considers these facts, that it is at camp that so many people enter into that glorious state of being filled with the Holy Spirit. As a former camp commandant, I have often wondered why it is that even one's own young members find it easier to seek the Lord at camp. It may well be that the conclusions I have come to will not be appreciated by some of my readers, but nevertheless I put them forward. I trust that they will be of some help in assisting other young people into this experience.

I believe that young people find it easier to seek God at camp rather than at home because the atmosphere is naturally Christian. There is no artificial break at five o'clock from one type of life to another, no change of atmosphere from that which dominates the office, school or factory to that which pervades the Crusader meeting. The naturalness of seeking God surely must be a strong incentive to do so.

Because the atmosphere is Christian it is apparent that God is near. We all realise that God is always near and with His children, but it is one thing to know it and quite another to feel it; to feel God's presence is surely to long for more of Him.

The activity of camps seems to impress upon one the necessity of the experience of the fulness of the Spirit. So much personal work and evangelistic endeavour go on in the camp and on the beach that the need for a dynamic encounter becomes obvious. Observing other young people working for the Lord with such abandon and dedication, one begins to "catch the flame."

The ideal would be to transfer all the advantages of camp to our home environment. This is perhaps impossible, but surely it should be relatively easy to ensure a normal Christian atmosphere among ourselves, so that it is easy to talk about the things of God and thus by this very natural approach to emphasise the nearness of God. The younger generation must take upon itself the responsibility of reaching the younger generation with the gospel; how vitally necessary it is for them, therefore, to know the fulness of power.

The thrill of camp life is beyond description. If you have never attended a Pentecostal camp you have missed the most wonderful experience it is possible to know. Having been a camper you will then be a better Christian. Write NOW for details of Elim camps: National Youth Director, Kensington Temple, Kensington Park Road, Notting Hill Gate, London, W.11.

Hebrews 7: 11-19

"For the law made nothing perfect" (v. 19).

The Scriptural indication of the need for a new order (Psalm 110:4) clearly implies that the existing Levitical order could not attain true perfection (Hebrews 7:11). The striking description of Jesus—"our Lord"—corresponds to David's thoughts (Psalm 110:1). There is no doubt about the Deity of Christ. Christ's qualifications to be Priest and successfully to complete His priestly work are essential, spiritual and internal, depending on the personal possession of life which cannot be destroyed and on His ability to perfect His work of saving men, for He can bring men to God (Hebrews 7:19) and save them utterly (v. 25).

Tuesday, June 27th

Hebrews 7: 20-28

"Thou art a priest for ever" (v. 21).

Being Divinely instituted, this priesthood is "for ever." Jesus Himself is the guarantor of the new, better covenant, ensuring our permanent relationship with God. Death cannot encroach on this priesthood (v. 24). The present tense of the verbs "save" and "come unto" (literally "draw near") indicates sustained experience from continuous practice, i.e. we must make it a regular practice and habit to draw near to God. Our High Priest is towards God "holy," towards man "harmless" (R.V.—"guileless") and in Himself "undefiled." Both Priest and Offering (v. 27), His office is for evermore (v. 28).

Wednesday, June 28th

Hebrews 8: 1-13

"For all shall know Me" (v. 11).

The writer comes to the crowning truth of all that he has to say. In contrast to the Jews of the Old Testament, Christians have an outstanding High Priest who is Himself the reality, fulfilling the God-given pattern of priesthood, and whose ministry is heavenly, not earthly (vv. 1-6). It was necessary that Christ should die, for as high priests offered sacrifices to God, Christ offered Himself (7:27; 9:14; 10:10). He is permanently enthroned in the place of all power. Note the distinction between the heavenly realities and their earthly representations (vv. 2, 4, 5). Christian worship, like Christ's priestly work, is not "on earth."

Thursday, June 29th

Hebrews 9: 1-10

"The first covenant had . . . a worldly sanctuary" (v. 1).

The first covenant, with its Divinely appointed regulations of ministry and sanctuary, is described. Though the writer speaks of God's presence, His past dealings with His people and His revealed will for their lives, by symbols, he directs attention to the order of Divine service to enable men to draw near to God (vv. 6, 7). Contrast the Divinely ordained splendour of the old order of worship with its disappointing spiritual ineffectiveness; it made nothing perfect. The limitations are further demonstrated in that the gifts and sacrifices had no moral power to purge the defilement of sin, to make men fit to enjoy God's presence.

Friday, June 30th

Hebrews 9: 11-22

"But Christ being come an high priest" (v. 11).

The far-reaching consequences of Christ's sacrifice are now summarised. By the offering of Himself, Christ made a decisive "once for all" entrance into God's presence for us all, obtaining "eternal redemption" (v. 12, R.V.) and by His blood purged the conscience from the paralysing power of guilt, thus setting men free. Christ's achievements mean that He alone is Mediator of the new covenant and to those who trust in Him He guaranteed possession of the eternal inheritance (v. 15). Outstanding issues between God and His people are cleared, for the efficacy of Christ's sacrifice covers old and new covenants (Romans 3:25).

Saturday, July 1st

Hebrews 9: 23-28

"Christ was once offered" (v. 28).

Christ accomplished what was absolutely impossible for the Levitical sacrifices—He "put away sin" (v. 26). He took the burden upon Himself and removed it. Consequently the old covenant was disannulled (7:18). In contrast to this substantial reality, the old covenant sacrifices had to be continually offered and the place of their ministration was earth, but the offering of Christ was made once for all and His ministration is in a superior, heavenly sanctuary. Aaron, the Levitical high priest, stood before the ark and only saw the cloud, the symbol of God's glory (Exodus 40:34; Leviticus 16:13-15); Jesus, our High Priest, stands in the very presence of God for us (Hebrews 9:24).

Sunday, July 2nd

Hebrews 10: 1-10

"We are sanctified" (v. 10).

All that the old law could offer was but a shadow, a representation of good things yet to come. It in no way obtained for man real deliverance from the sense of guilt. Previously we have seen the oneness of Christ's sacrifice, now we see its perfection in contrast to the law sacrifices (vv. 6, 9, 14). Some Jewish Christians thought that they had lost everything—altar, priests, sacrifices—but the writer proves that they had lost only the shadow to be given the substance, Christ. They were undervaluing their privileges in Christ and the writer leads them from an elementary knowledge to a mature grasp of God's truths. Christ is Sacrifice, Saviour, Sovereign, and we are secure in Him (v. 10).

Book review

What About Horoscopes ? by Joseph Bayly. Published by Coverdale House. Price 30p, postage and packing 5p extra.

The all too topical subjects of witchcraft, extra-sensory perception, cheap horoscopes, etc., are given fair but all too brief consideration. The warning given on page 45 is invaluable to readers who may be "giving place to Satan" in their pursuit of "kicks" derived from the above practices.

While all the chapters have a basic ingredient of mysticism, it is a somewhat arduous task to find a coherent whole on the given subject of horoscopes in the twentieth century, the author concentrating at length on happenings in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and devoting a whole chapter to exhuming the witch of Endor—was it around 1056 B.C. when she was buried ?

Errors include attributing the sign of Aries to a ram, when the Hebrew taleh is singularly interpreted lamb. The sign Leo must ever be interpreted as the lion, not, as stated, as Virgo the virgin (p. 14).

Regret must be expressed that in the whole eighty-one pages there is a complete absence of any reference to correct Biblical astronomy, which illustrates the Divine plan for the redemption of the whole of creation. Josephus made the assertion that correct "reading" of the heavens commenced with the family of Seth. David records "the stars, He calleth them all by name" (Psalm 147:4), and "There is no speech or language where their voice is not heard" (Psalm 19:3). Christ likens Himself to the "Bright and Morning Star" (Revelation 22:16).

The glossary of the occult is most informative.

My Hand in His, by Lilian A. Walsh. Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 30p, postage and packing 3p extra.

Here is a book that can take away many uncertainties which may be in your mind. If there are doubts about God still speaking to an ordinary individual through His Holy Spirit, they will be dispelled as you read how God dealt with this young woman. If there are questions about the effectiveness of Scripture upon a life, then here is a stirring story which shows how heart and life were completely revolutionised by the reading of the Bible. If the position of a Catholic seems hopeless, here will be found an answer. The darkness and bondage of that religion were removed absolutely by the light and liberty of the glorious gospel. This book certainly proves that where there is a heart to search there is a hand to save.

The story of Lilian Walsh could be invaluable to many personal workers, especially those who witness among Roman Catholics.

My Call to Preach, edited by C. A. Joyce. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd. Price 30p, postage and packing 6p extra.

The purpose of such a book must be to fire the vision and stimulate spiritual hearing. Judged by this criterion, this book is interesting and helpful, but hardly more. It reminds me of the need to heed the Master's word, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest." The varied backgrounds of the contributors only highlight the intensely personal nature of the call from the Lord to preach.

Two things stand out: the call of God and concern for people are essential to preaching the Gospel; the continued relevance of preaching as the primary means of communicating the gospel.

Definitely interesting and helpful, this book is not exactly an indispensable one. It will be read by those who gain access to it.

Catholic comment

A Bible Society promoter working in the city of Buenos Aires recently met a Roman Catholic priest who said, "You Evangelical Christians carry out a great job in Bible distribution. I was ten years in Córdoba and there your people have practically filled the city with Bibles. The bishop and all the Catholic priests of the city met to consider it. We could not prohibit the reading of the Bible, for it would not be Christian so to do, and so we adopted the positive attitude and initiated a campaign. Through broadcasting and appropriate literature we tried to guide people in the reading and understanding of the Bible."

The astonishing Saviour

By Samuel Gorman

ISAIAH predicted that many people would be astonished by Jesus (52 : 14). It is generally conceded that 52 : 13-15 and chapter 53 refer to the Lord Jesus. They are a miniature portrait of Him. Attempts to explain the meaning of them apart from Jesus are futile and unconvincing, for He alone is capable of fulfilling the great truths set forth in the predictions contained in them. In the strictest sense the astonishment referred to by Isaiah related to the marred visage of Jesus and to some extent in a propitious sense : "As many were astonished at Thee ; His visage was so marred more than any man, and His form more than the sons of men." The prophet knew something of the marring of the human form by leprosy, yet he declared that the Saviour's visage would be marred more than that of any individual. In chapter 53 He detailed the propitious aspect : "He is despised and rejected of men ; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief, and we hid as it were our faces from Him . . . Surely He hath
